A Clean WATCH

Your Watch, like your house, should be thoroughly overhauled, at least, once a year.

When you consider there is less than one drop of oil used in the entire watch, it is easy to understand how the oil would dry out or thicken and the watch become inaccurate.

We do all kinds of Watch Repairing promptly and reasonably.

REPORTS PRESENTED AT BOARD OF TRADE

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, President of the Board of Trade, reported for the Board, as follows:

Reviewing the year now brought to a close ,I would say that apart from the regular meetings of the Board, as referred to in the Secretary's report that your Manufactuers' Committee, acting with a similar committee from the city council, have had numerous meetings from time to time during the year. The subject for consideration at these various meetings has invariably been the matter of bonuses, stock promotions, exemptions, etc., toward prospective manufacturers. I regret to have to say that the demands have, in almost every case, been beyond our ability to consider, in view of the fact that the conditions named scarcely ever warrant any such demands. Under such conditions you will readily understand how difficult it is to secure any degree of enthusiasm

The activity of the Board has been about equal to that of recent years. The matter of a special campaign to secure a larger and more active membership for the Board has come before you on different occasions, and is still a subject for some decided action. It has been considered from time to time, that the membership fee should be, and an effort made to increase the membership of that basis, as a reasonable fund is required, and absolutely necessary to carry on an organization.

During the yer I accompanied one deputation, at the invitation of the City Council, to interview the Government, at Ottawa, on the subject of power. I also attended a session of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario, in Toronto.

Secretary's Report.

During the past year the Board has held five meetings, viz.: 16th May, 14th November, 22nd December, 1911, 29th February and 25th March, 1912. Two other meetings were called in June and July, 1911, but were not held on account of there being o quorum.

The followig subjects were discussed at these meetings: "New Industries," "Hydro-Electric Power By-law," "Municipal By-laws," "Permanent Roadway Pavements," "Garbage," "Hotel Accommodation," Immigration into Canada," "Special Features in which Peterborough is interested.

MINISTER PRAISES ZAM-BUK

When Everything Else Had Failed.

Rev. Henry J. Munton of Blackfalds, Alta., writes: "My wife had a very bad sore foot, which it seemed impossible to get anything to heal. The sore would heal to a certain point and then fester again, and so on. I procured a box of Zam-Buk, and after persevering with this herbal balm for some time the sore was completely healed.

"We were so grateful for this cure, and Zam-Buk acted so differently to any other of the numerous remedies we had tried that I thought you ought to know of this case. I have since recommended Zam-Buk to several of my parishioners, and it always gives satisfaction."

Another instance in which Zam-Buk proved of unequalled value is told by Mr. N. L. Gerry, of Brandon, Man. He says: "I had my left foot run over by a waggon loaded with wheat. The foot was very badly crushed, and my little toe and the next toe were laid open. I aplied Zam-Buk, and only had to miss work for two days. Zam-Buk healed the wound so quickly that on the third day I was able to put on my boot and walk to my work. In a very short time my toes were quite healed, and the foot is now as sound as ever, thanks to Zam-Buk."

Just as good for chronic sores, ulcers, piles, blood poison, burns, scalds, eruptions, eczema, and all skin injuries, and diseases. 50c. box at all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, too. 25c. per tablet.

NEWMARKET RACE TRACK ENGLAND., MAY 14.— In the Newmarket handicap for a thousand sovereigns this morning, H. P. Whitney All Good, first, Lord Londonderry's Protestant Boy second, Gant's Eustapha third. Eleven started.

In Local Military Circles

The local Regiment held their weekly parade last evening and headed by the Signalling Corps, marched along George street, up Charlotte and returned to George street via Aylmer and Hunter streets, respectively. The Companies were then drilled on the parade grounds, after which the men were put through the Royal Salute, inside the Armouries.

The date of camping for the 26th Field Battery has been fixed for the 22nd day of June.

The orders for the week are as follows:

The following units of the active militia will assemble for training in camps of instruction for the number of days and at the places and on the dates herein specified.

3rd Divisional area, Barriefield, 9th Infantry Brigade, City Corps, Infantry, 14th Regiment, 15th Regiment 41st Regiment, 43rd Regiment, 57th Regiment, June 6th to June 19th.

Detail of duty for the week, ending May 20th, 1912. Captain for the week, Capt. McLean, next for duty, Capt. Watt. Subaltern for the week, Lieut. Loch, next for duty, Lieut. Hagerman.

4.—The following are taken on the strength of the regiment: A Co., W. Brown, A. Wagstaff, J. E. Hoscar, C. Sanderson; signalling section, S. Echicoben, J. D. Johnston, F. Allen.

5. Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Major Bennett and Lieut. Ackerman.

6. The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the following promotions:

A Co. To be Coroporals, provisionally, Ptes. P. Foster and W. B. Piercy. To be Lance Corporals, Pte. P. Price, H. [illegible], A. Briscoe and G. McGregor.

H. Co.—To be Sergeants, provisionally, Pts. Anderson and McKnight.

To be Corporal, provisionally, Pte. J. Ryder.

D. Walker, Bt.-Major.
Adjutant.

Keen interest is being shown in rifle parties. The new recruits are taking every advantage of the chances offered the to become efficient marksmen. A large number of the old veterans are flocking to the ranges for practise.

The bulk of the units dispatched from Eastern Canada last year, were made up from city corps and it is safe to say the great ajority of the men had never been in camp prior to their advent to the prairies. They had, however, plenty of officers and N. C. O.'s who had been, and no grievous troubles were experienced.

Let the authorities, therefore, while of course endeavouring to get as large musters of the rank and file as possible, make it imperative that officers and N. C. O.'s must attend, since without instruction of the leaders it will always be a case of "the blind leading the blind," and that can and should be avoided.

The department has shown much wisdom in the arrangement whereby pay and allowances will be issued to the city corps for training during ensuing year. Corps which do not go to camp at all can qualify for but eleven days' pay, whereas those which do go will be granted additional days' pay and allowance in accordance with their attenadnce in camp, up to a maximum of sixteen days' training.

At the conclusion of the parade, last evening, Captain Cluxton entertained the members of No. 1 Company at a smoker. Refreshments were served and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Keeps the Skin Clear and Soft

Humors of the skin are especially prevalent in the spring. There is nothing more annoying than to have irritation of the skin and disfiguring eruptions breaking out to mar the beauty of the complexion.

Internal treatments are slow and unsatisfatcory in results, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to heal up the sores and bring lasting relief. Unlike pore-clogging powders Dr. Chase's Ointment cleans out the pores of the skin and makes it soft, smooth and healthy. It is a food for the skin, and a beautifier of the greatest value.

Eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis, chafing and all forms of itching skin disease soon yield to the soothing healing influence of this well-known ointment. It is indispensable in the home where there are babies and young children.

TEN YEAR LEASE OF RED MILL THEATRE

Mr. Clayton Has Confidence in Peterborough and Purchases Fixtures

The patrons of the Red Mill will be pleased to learn that the manager, Mr. Clayton, has secured a ten year lease of the house and has purchased the fixtures and accessories. This is an evidence of Mr. Clayton's regard for Peterborough and of his confidence in the city. He worked for Mr. L. J. Applegath of Toronto six years and for himself during the past three years in Hamilton, Montreal and Peterborough. Since his coming to Peterborough, he has been impressed with the progressiveness of the city and intends to remain here. He believes Peterborough to be one of the best towns he has ever been in. Hence the reason for his securing the lease and his purchase of the fixtures.

Mr. R. W. Heafield of 264 Reid St., left the city this morning to take up a very good position on the staff of the Tudhope Motor Co. of Orillia. He takes with him the sincere wishes of his many friends for his future success. Mr. Heafield has been in Peterborough about twelve months, and during that time has become deservedly popular and has made a host of friends. He was employed at the Canadian General Electric Co. The "Canadian Engineer" of April 11th, contains a very able article, written by him, on "Material-List Method of Store-Keeping." This has been very favourably commented upon by both Canadian and American trade papers, and is written in a clear, capable and very lucid style, and shows considerable knowledge of the subject The system in question is one whereby the Engineering Department, upon the securing of an order (or contract) through its material list section, shall issue a material sheet or sheets, setting out in detail the quantities of material required. As a rule no material is ordered, or work started until the material list is issued. The material list is first sent direct to the general store-keeper, who shall be responsible for the marking thereon what is in stock and what is not. He shall then forward the material sheet to the Order Section, who shall issue orders for all material not carried as stock.

Mr. Heafield has certainly made good here. He is also an esteemed member of the St. George's Society, and if the wishes of his numerous friends count, he has a prosperous future before him.

How You May Help Local "Titanic" Fund and Get Something For Your Money as Well

The "Titanic fund" in this prosperous and beautiful city seems to flag some; in other words, it has fallen flat. Now, her eis a chance of contributing to it and getting something in return for your money. To-night Wednesday, May 15, a musical entertainment will be given at the Sons of England Hall. This entertainment which will consist of instrumental, vocal and elocutionary numbers, will be given by the members of the Saint George's Choral Society. There will be no charge for admission, but—now don't forget this—a collection will be taken. In this way any, and everybody, may help, and let this help be given, not gradgingly or of necessity, for God loveth the cheerful giver. All the proceeds will go to the fund to help the widows and orphans—and their name is legion. Don't forget the time—to-night!—and bring your friends. "Let 'em all come."

PROPOSAL TO BEAUTIFY PARK

A proposal to beautify the little triangular park at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets, was made to the Council on Monday night by Mr. Chas. Ostrom, now a resident of Indiana, who offered to pay one half of the expense of enclosing the park with a cedar hedge and of making several flower beds, the total cost not to exceed $100. Members of the Council said they thought the park would become a dust "catcher" and would not meet the end desired.

The Property committee will take up the proposal, however, and determine what action is to be done.

The Piano of the Period

New Scale Williams

The music student, the amateur and the finished musician go about the selection of a piano with a somewhat different viewpoint from the average layman. They have a more definite idea of what constitutes Real Artistic Tone Quality. They have different standards, perhaps more exacting, from which to judge tonal effects, and the fact, therefore, that hundreds of New Scale Williams Pianos have been purchased by musicians, is of special significance. It presents the verdict of a competent jury; one which the intending purchaser of a piano can well afford to take into careful consideration. It is the beautiful singing quality as well as the attractive appearance of these pianos which appeals to the artistic sense of the trained musician and music lover.

SUFFRAGETTE TRIAL BEGINS

LONDON, ENG., MAY 15.—"These defendants have deliberately planned a campaign which, if it succeeded, means nothing less than anarchy," said Attorney General Sir Rufus Isaacs, when he rose to prosecute Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, the suffragette leaders, in the old Bailey sessions, this morning, on conspiracy charges. The defendants pleaded not guilty. There was an imposing array of counsel.

Recent legislation, clothed Boards of Health with greater power; but it evidently did not increase their zeal. At a Peterborough Board of Health meeting, called for yesterday afternoon, there was present only one member, who deserves to have his name made prominent.—MR. D. H. KERNEGHAN.

King's Body Taken To Copenhagen

Special to The Examiner:

HAMBURG, GERMANY, MAY 16.—With all the honours Germany could give, the late King Frederick of Denmark, who died so tragically here, was removed to Copenhagen, the Danish capital, this morning. An unexpected feature of the mournful proceedings was the appearance of widowed Queen Louisa on the steps of the hotel before the coffin was borne out. In a few words she tearfully thanked the assembled populace for their unstinted kindness to herself and her children in the hour of their keen bereavement in a foreign country.

6 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Concession, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Her Husband Was First M. P. For West Peterboro

Mrs. Chas Perry Who Died This Morning Was Daughter of Late Dr. John Gilchrist

OF U. E. LOYALIST STOCK

The death of Mrs. Chas. Perry at the family residence, 571 Water street this morning, removed one of Peterborough's oldest residents. By her death, another of the links in the chain that bound the present generation with the generation of pioneers, has been parted. Mrs. Perry was a granddaughter of the late Dr. John Gilchrist, one of the United Empire Loyalists, who settled nearly a century ago in the southern townships of Peterborough county. Dr. Gilchrist, who was the first physician to register in Toronto, resided near Keene and was the first representative of West Peterborough as a county.

Mrs. Perry moved into Peterborough when a young girl with her parents. She was born at the family home near Keene and has thus been a resident of this locality for 86 years.

Mrs. Perry was predeceased by her husband, who was the first representative of West Peterborough after Confederation, in 1867, thirty-six years ago, and is survived by her family as follows: Mrs. F. Bliss, of Toronto, Mrs. W. Sabine of Youngstown, O., Mrs. Devine of Buffalo, Miss E. Perry and Miss Maude Perry of Peterborough, Frank Perry of Peterborough, John of Montreal, George of New York and Charles of Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Perry was probably the oldest member of the congregation of St. John's church. She was held in high esteem by a host of friends for those sterling qualities that endeared her to those whom she met.

The funeral will be held on Saturday, May 18th, at 2.30 p.m., to the Little Lake cemetery, from the family residence, 571 Water street.

A history of the Peterborough County, referring to Dr. Gilchrist, Mrs. Perry's father, states that he was noted for his skill as a physician, and for hi practical charity. In 1825 he erected a grist mill at Keene, with one run of stones. In the winter of 1829-30, he opened the first store at Keene. This he took an active part in, promoting the welfare and happiness of the pioneers of Keene.

Marriage Case Will Proceed

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MAY 16. — The Privy Council has decided that the Supreme Court of Canada has power to hear stated cases submitted to it by the Federal Parliament. This means that the argument in the famous marriage case will proceed, and the opinion of the Privy Council itself will be secured after the Supreme Court has decided. The judges of the Supreme Court, who decided on May 7 that they would not hear the Ne Temere stated case until the question of their jurisdiction was decided, will now probably order the argument to proceed, at once.

SEEDING IN WEST IS WELL ADVANCED

WINNIPEG, MAY 15.—The second crop bulletin of the Canadian Pacific company was issued yesterday. The bulletin covers the whole West, and shows that seeding is well advanced. Following is the percentage of grains sown to date in the prairie provinces:

In Manitoba, 65 to 70 per cent.
In Saskatchewan, 60 per cent.
In Alberta, about 35 per cent.

At some points in Manitoba where the ground is light and the season earlier wheat seeding is reported as completed. This includes such districts as Winkler, Plum Coulee and Altona. On some of the heavier lands (such as those of Marquette and Rosser) no more than 15 or 20 per cent. of the wheat is sown.

The winter wheat of Alberta is in splendid condition; it was probably never better since winter wheat was raised in that province. A record year is looked for.

The precipitation last week was heavy throughout the West. In Manitoba there were three days of rain, in Saskatchewan four, and in Alberta two.

North of Moose Jaw and Swift Cur reat as much as four inches of snow fell in one storm.

In Alberta the precipitation was not so heavy. As a rule rains in that province are not so heavy or continuous as in the others.

The weather is reported warmer now than it has been, and this will have the effect of bringing the crop along very fast. It will also dry up the land, and enable the farmers to wind up their seeding very quickly.

Owing to the late season, after being so continually wet, much of the land originally intended for wheat, will be sow in coarser grains.

ORGANIZATIONS ARE FLOURISHING

That the various organisations in Knox Church are on the verge of a new era in church work is evidenced by the meetings held from time to time during the past few weeks. The central thought of the pastor and his bodyguards is to get into closer touch, spiritually and morally, with the rising generation. What with the Boy Scout movement set going on Monday evening, and the combining of forces to have rambles and picnics with the Brotherhood, this end is now being achieved.

On Tuesday evening last a committee from the Brotherhood met the Central Committee of the Young People, and placed before them the proposition of joining hands and treking to the country and visiting various places of iterest in and around Peterborough, also having picnics on the Saturday afternoons during the summer. The camera is to play an important part in the outings.

The idea was favourably received, and commended, and on Mr. Williams being approached and asked to become chairman of this movement, he readily accepted, and thus is given promise of a new and interesting part of the church work of Knox congregation.

A reunion of the young people was voted on, and the date fixed was the 3rd of June. Rev. J. A. Stewart, Kew Beach, Toronto, is to be invited to address the meeting, and each class is to have an item in the programme. Cool refreshments are to be on the "menu," and a bright time is promised.

Optical Institute Talk No. 8

It Will Pay You

We frequently hear from persons far and near that they would not be without the eye-glasses which they had from the Optical Institute for several times their price. One lady remarked, I wouldn't take $50 for my glasses; another "they are worth ten times their price to me." A gentleman says "I wear mine constantly scarcely know they are on, but have perfect sight far and near. They are worth all they cost me and I want another pair in case of an accident."

The best cost a little more and require a little more time to have made up but it pays, and they are worth all you pay when they please you.

Women Do Not Want Suffrage

Ann Watkins, writing in the New York Outlook, says there are twenty-four million women in the United States, twenty-two million of whom do not want to vote. She gives numerous reasons for their lack of enthusiasm for the ballot, one particularly interesting point brought out being the laws which in New York State, safeguard women. An eminent lawyer is quoted as follows:

(1) A widow is entitled to the use for life of one-third of her husband's real estate, nor can she be deprived of this by will. The wife, on the other hand, may deprive her husband by will of all claim whatsoever to any part or fraction of her estate, real or personal.

(2) A woman may sell her real estate or personal property, without her husband's permission. A man, since his wife has a prospective claim on one-third of his real estate, cannot dispose of the whole title of his real estate without her consenting to the surrender of her claim.

(3) A woman has the right to all or any money she can earn; a man is compelled to maintain properly both his wife and her children.

(4) A man is responsible for debts contracted by his wife for necessaries—so considered in accordance with her social position. A woman is not liable for any debts contracted, save her own.

(5) Provided she secures the divorce, a woman may compel her husband to pay her alimony; the man has no claim whatever upon her property or purse under like conditions.

(6) A woman is eligible for any and every profession compatible with her physical make-up, of which she is in almost every instance permitted to be the judge.

These are probably not very different from the conditions in Ontario, and Mrs. Watkins goes on to point out that these laws, by which men have delivered themselves into the power of women, would not be fair should woman have the ballot by which to protect her own interests. "If she has the ballot, she will not be permitted to waste her husband's property, run him into debt, neglect her home and children, get a divorce whenever she feels like it, and do a hundred other things inimical to society and to him that she now can do with legal impunity." Further on in her argument the writer declares: "I believe the twenty-two million women feel, as I do, that our greatest strength lies in the accepted fields of our weakness."

DO HOPE OF FINDING BODIES

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., MAY 16:—All hope of recovering the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Stanton of Toronto, and Burwell Hescock of Cleveland, Ohio, three victims of the Niagara ice bridge tragedy of Feb. 4th, has long since vanished. For a time it was thought that perhaps the bodies of at least one or two of the victims would be found along the shore of the river this spring, but the stream has been covered many times by small craft, without success.

WHEAT NEARLY ALL SEEDED

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, MAN., MAY 16.—Ninety-five per cent of the wheat has been seeded in the three provinces. Though heavy rain has curtailed the acreage in some cases, there is twenty per cent. more under grain this year than last year.

THE MAJORITY WILL BE 45

TAFT IS NOT GOING TO QUIT

CLEVELAND, OHIO, MAY 16.—President Taft does not intend to withdraw from the Presidential race should he lose Ohio. "That's hypodermic," declared Gus Karger, Taft's publicity agent and spokesman in the Taft car, commenting on the story from Washington that Taft contemplates quitting if he was defeated in Ohio. This picturesque language was taken to mean the story was "all a pipe dream."

JEANNE TOWLER IN "THE WHITE SISTER"

All women enjoy a good love story in which the fate of the lovers hang in the balance and is spiced with a little danger—that is one of the greatest reasons for the remarkable success of "The White Sister," which is billed for one night only, Wednesday, May 22, at the Grand Opera House with the magnetic American beauty Jeanne Towler in the stellar role, and a superior cast of supporting players. "The White Sister" was dramatized from Marion Crawford's latest novel of the same name, and the action of the play occurs in Sunny Italy, the home of romance, love, poetry and music. It is an intensely human story in a religious setting and that is why it is so strongly endorsed by the church, although in its development it is amusement and entertainment of the purest quality. It is handled in an uplifting manner and carries a convincing lesson. The role of the Nun (the White Sister) makes exacting demands upon the emotional powers of the actress and it is her powerful interpretation of the role and her striking appearance in the character that has earned Jeanne Towler the reputation of being America's most beautiful, emotional actress. Nearly every character in the play is a star part and requires a company of unusual quality to do it justice. The stage pictures are realistic and handsome, while the interpolated music which permeates the play is sweet and soothing. "The White Sister" will probably crowd the theatre and undoubtedly be one of the most genuine treats of the season.

WHEAT MARKET TAKES A TUMBLE

There was a weakening tone to the New York stock market to-day. The opening was moderately strong, but in the last two or three hours the market settled down to general dullness.

C.P.R. continued its significant advance again to-day and added another point to its record. At noon the highest mark on record had been reached, when the stock listed 270. It receded to 269 1-8, however, before the close. May wheat showed a downward tendency and during the day had receded four points. The Chicago market listed May wheat at 115 1-2 at the opening and closed at 111 1-2.

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1912

A GLINT OF SUN-SHINE.

The Examiner acknowledges, with genuine appreciation, the receipt of the Weekly Sun's "Census Almanac and Handy Atlas." It is a neat, compact booklet of fifty pages, of convenient size. It is replete with useful information. The census figures of the 1911 enumeration are given, and a statement of the population of Canada at various periods. It has compact statistical tables relating to agriculture and other industries. There is information relating to railways, timber resources and production, banking and mining, manufacturing, etc., etc. One of the finest features of its fifty pages is its 21 full page, excellently clear maps—of Canada and the several provinces, and the principal countries of the world. It would be a good book to have in every household—and indeed on every office desk. Its maps are alone a great merit. We can have no better appreciation of the extent of our resources and of our great area; no better means of knowing of the habitat of our fellow Canadians than excellent maps such as the Sun's Atlas contains. We learn to know each other better and to realise the forces with which we are cooperating in building up a great nation.

THE LIBERAL SWEEP IN QUEBEC.

The Liberal victory yesterday in the Quebec elections of the Liberal government, led by Sir Lomer Gouin, was, as our French compatriots would say, eclatante. It has an important significance beyond the fact that the government majority was increased. It is an emphatic popular approval of the good administration — clean, economical and progressive — the Gouin government has given Quebec for many years. But that is not the significant point. The point is, that the result is a splendid victory over reactionary forces, and condemnation of the campaign conducted under the auspices of the combined forces of the Federal Conservative government, the Quebec Nationalists and the ultra-montaine, clerical, political alliance. The full strength, moral and material, eloquence and cash, of the Federal government operating in Quebec, was brought to bear. All the strength of the Nationalist element, working with the ultra-montane clerical element, was brought to bear; and as much of the fight put up by the Conservative-Nationalist-ultra-montane alliance, was directed against Sir Wilfrid Laurier as against Sir Lomer Gouin. It failed and was disastrously turned aside on both counts. Quebec is still loyal to Liberalism, still loyal to Laurier, the highest type of virile Canadianism. It has refused to be seduced from allegiance to either by the Nationalist cult, which, encouraged and coddled by the Conservative party, aimed to turn Quebec against Laurier, on the head of his imperial attitude in cooperating through Canadian contributions, in the defence of the empire. Neither does not coincide or Lemieux "too British" as Hon. Mr. Borden's Nationalist allies do. In taking so serious a rap against the Liberal government of Quebec the Borden government put itself on trial in Quebec. It has got its sentence. The Borden government may kill Laurier's Naval Act, but it can't get Quebec to help kill the man who led Quebec to the support of a patriotic policy involving Canada's share of contribution to the defence of the empire.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Are we to take our responsibilities seriously, or are we to let things drift? Without wealth all other things are of little account. The public health is the supreme consideration. We have appointed a Board of Health. There seems to be some reason for inquiring whether or not that was a right and necessary thing to do. Our legislators evidently thought that public health interests amounted to something. They passed laws in the promotion of its interests. They provided for local Boards of Health, to locally look after the interests of the public health; and last session they amended the law so as to give Boards of Health greater powers and make them agencies of real usefulness. The public health is considered so important that a branch of the Dominion Conservation Commission is devoted to its protection and conservation. Yet, at an important meeting of the local Board of Health, only one member put in an appearance. Why this indifference? The City Council appointed an efficient sanitary inspector to cooperate with the efficient Medical Health Officer, previously appointed. That does not relieve the members of the Board of Health of responsibility. The action of the Board in leaving everything to these two officials would be like leaving all city administration to the city clerk and city solicitor; good men, but not the men appointed by the people to do their business. It is regrettable to have to refer to the indifference of the members of the Board of Health. If they believe that their appointment was justified; if they accepted membership out of a sense of duty to the public; they should conform their actions accordingly. This is not a scold; it is a reminder. A policy or condition of drift is one of the fatal happenings to a city. The City Council has done much, or aims to do much, in the interests of public health, by the establishment of a garbage collection system. The cooperation of the Board of Health is necessary in this as in other sanitary matters. Whatever we do, don't let us drift. Better try to do something, even of we should not do it well, than do nothing; if we fail at first, we can try again. The members of the Board of Health are invited to consider the situation; to consider that their neglect of duty not only has a negative effect of evil; but it has a positively injurious effect; it innoculates the people with indifference to sanitary matters and it is important to secure all-round cooperatin to bring about desirable conditions — the working together of the City Council, the Board of Health and the general body of citizens.

TWO WAYS.

Public opinion is sometimes incomprehensible. In Manitoba, as voiced by the electors, it heartily endorsed a Conservative government that made a mess and a failure of public ownership and telephones. It is now asked to pronounce upon the merits of a Liberal Government that made a striking success of government ownership of elevators and telephones, and the probable result is that the verdict will be a strong endoresation of the government. And that, too, in spite of the man that was responsible for the bad bargains, and muddlesome administration that made them failures in the province of Manitoba. Hon. Robt. Rogers, who is chiefly responsible for having made these bad bargains, was transferred to the Federal Cabinet. He is now hard at work in his peculiar way. He is using all his influence as a Federal Cabinet Minister, and all the influence of the Conservative Government at Ottawa to bring about the defeat of government which has done what he failed to do, which has made a success of what he made a mess of. There are evidently two ways of doing things—the right way and the wrong way.

BIG FAILURE VS. BIG SUCCESS.

The administrative methods of the governments of Manitoba (Conservative), and Saskatchewan (Liberal), is thus contrasted by the Ottawa Free Press:

Both governments bought out the Bell system. In Manitoba, Hon. Robert Rogers paid at least one million dollars too much for the Bell system and thus handicapped the policy at its birth. Hon. Walter Scott, on the other hand, had an independent valuation of the Bell system made, with the result that he knew exactly what the Bell plant was worth. In Manitoba the telephone system has been operated at a srious financial loss with the result that, instead of cutting the Bell rates in two, as promised before the last election, the people of the province are compelled to pay higher rates than ever. In Saskatchewan, on the other hand, the telephone system is being operated at a profit, whilst rates are lower than ever before.

In Manitoba the telephones are administered by a commission, which is avowedly a part and parcel of the Conservative party machine. In Saskatchewan the system is opratd under a department of the civil service under the control of a responsible minister, and not even Mr. Haultain has ever brought a charge of political partisanship against it.

So much as to the telephones. Now what about the grain elevators? The Roblin-Rogers government in Manitoba rushed into a scheme of government ownership ad operation without any investigation. In Saskatchewan the Scott government proceeded with care, appointed a Royal commission to study the whole question of the grain trade of the province, with the result that a farmers' co-operative company was formed with the financial backing of the government.

In Manitoba the Roblin-Rogers government has invested over $1,000,000 in its system, having purchased or built 173 elevators at some one hundred points with an approximate capacity of 4,300,000 bushels. For the year ended August 31, 1911, the Manitoba system was operated at a loss to the government of $84,145, while the loss for the current year is estimated at 40,000. Indeed, Premier Roblin was compelled to admit in the Legislature that his policy had been a failure, and it is now announced that it will be abandoned.

I Saskatchewan, on the other hand, the co-operative system has proved to be an eminent success in every possile way. In the first year the company, with the backing of the Sco ttgovernment, erected forty elevators and purchased six existing ones, handling approximately 1,500,000 bushels of grain, and closed the year with a profit. This year it will erect between 70 and 80 new elevators and puchase some six or seven, thus bringing the number of elevators up to about 125, with a capacity of 4,000,000 bushels.

In Manitoba the government and farmers are dissatisfied; in Saskatchewan the farmers and the government are well pleased. Manitoba suffers heavy financial loss; Saskatchewan suffers no loss, whilst the farmers' company makes a profit. In Manitoba the government system is to be abandoned; in Saskatchewan the rapid growth of the system is absolutely all that could be edsired.

THE FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF ELEVATORS

There have been some exceedingly interesting developments of the elevator situation in Manitoba since the legislature sanctioned the grain storage structures being taken over by the Government. It was thought by many that the Government was doing a great thing when it went into the elevator business. It was a popular move—so popular that when it became part of the policy of the administration it helped materially to a new lease of power. Over one hundred and seventy elevators were purchased at a cost of $[illegible]. Ten more were built at a cost of $[illegible], so that the elevator investment represents a total of a million dollars, and in the two years during which they have been operated by the Government, there has been a loss of $100,000. It is now asserted that the elevator commission appointed by the Government has been a ghastly failure. Anomalies of the most extraordinary character were shown in the purchase of the elevators. For example there are cases in which, according to official reports, small and inefficient elevators have been bought at a cost of thousands of dollars more than has been paid for those of far larger build and better equipment. The system, it is alleged, has become, to a great extent, inoperative, and the facilities for handling this year's crop are described as utterly inadequate. The matter is giving great concern to the farmers, who have passed through a very troublesome year on account of the inadequacy of the facilities for getting the grain to the market.

Premier Robdlin's side of the story is that the elevators have not been patronized by the grain growers as he had a right to expect, and in a speech before the close of the Legislature there was an implication of unfulfilled pledges. But there is another aspect of the position. When the Government acquired the elevators the Grain Growers' Association submitted a draft bill governing their use, which the Government refused to accept. The Grain Growers asked for an independent and non-political Commission and were refused. They asked for representation on the Commission, and the request was denied. The elevator business is another example of the failure of publin ownerhip in Manitoba on account of too much party politics having been introduced into it.—Montreal Herald.

THIS LADY GIVES A SPLENDID REASON

Why She Would Not be Without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the House

Cando, Sask., May 15.—(Special.)—"I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house," exclaims Mrs. Jno. C. MacKenzie, of this place. And those who have heard Mrs. MacKenzie's story do not wonder that she is so emphatic.

"I was a victim for about twelve or thirteen years of Bladder and Kidney trouble," Mrs. MacKenzie says. "It grew into Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel. Doctors attended me but they did not do me any good.

"My husband had used Dodd's Kidney Pills with good results so I decided to give them a trial. Before I had finished the first box I was greatly benefitted."

THE VOICE OF JACOB BUT THE HAND OF ESAU

Mr McLachlan, C.E., and Mr. J. B. McWilliams passed through Bobcaygeon this week, on their way to explore the Trent waters. The energetic policy pursued by Mr. Burnham, M.P., has resulted in the Canals Department taking up the water supply of the Trent in a thorough manner. It will be looked into, even as far up as the little streams, and everything will be done to assist the conservation necessary for navigation, while the Conservative Commission under Dean Fernow will carry out the plans for securing more water, and, therefore, more power. The eye of the Dominion Government is upon the sources of Trent water supply, and may it keep there.

In the abstract this is good news. But it recalls a scrap of school days Virgil—Time Danaos, etism dona ferentes—"keep your eye peeled for the Greeks when they are giving you something." It also recalls a Biblical incident: "The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau." It appears in the Independent, but it contains evidence that it was written independently of the Independent—it is not its style. It was evidently inspired, if not written, by Mr. Burnham, himself. Its tone has not the virility of Mr. Sniff's style. It contains appreciation of Mr. Burnham's enterprise and energy, such as he has frequently written of himself, and which could only have origin and existence in himself—of which he has the monopoly. As to the little moonshine touch about "the energetic policy pursued by Mr. Burnham has resulted in the Department of Railways and Canals taking up the water supply of the Trent in a thorough manner," why, conservation of our northern waters has been a settled policy of the Department for years, and was being energetically carried out. Unless the Department, under the present Government had abandoned the policy, there was no need of Mr. Burnham's "energetic policy" to continue the policy. The interest of the representative should make conservation go with a mighty stride, if his energetic policy "results in conservation dams like those his "energetic policy" has inspired in Peterborough—dams that won't hold water—the new conservation scheme will be a wide-open success. If the "energetic policy" results in anything like the brilliant success of local dams that won't hold water, and wharves that won't hold together, we may expect a brilliant future for conservation in this district.

SEVERED HIS TOE

Michael Fraser, a fence builder, working for Contractor C. Milne, on the farm of Mr. David Eastwood, in North Monaghan, had the misfortune yesterday to completely sever his toe while splitting rails. He was immediately driven to Dr. Gallivan's surgery by Mr. Milne, where he had the injured foot dressed. He is progressing favourably, although he lost considerable blood.

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"Miss Waite had a small revolver. She must have shot the fellow. But why did they leave the body here to be discovered?"

"They were in a hurry to get away, and knew he wouldn't be found before morning. A six-hours' start means a good deal. They did drag him back out of sight—look here. This was where the struggle took place and here is where the man fell," tracing it out upon the ground. "The girl put up a stiff fight, too—see where they dragged her up the path. From the footprints there must have been half a dozen in the party. Get back out of the way, Sims, while I follow their trail."

It was plain enough, now they had daylight to assist them, and led around the edge of the hill. A hundred feet away they came to where horses had been standing, the trampled sod evidencing they must have been there for some considerable time. Keith and the sheriff circled out until they finally struck the trail of the party, which led forth southwest across the prairie.

"Seven horses, one being led light," said the former. "That was Scott's, probably."

"That's the whole story," replied the sheriff, staring off toward the bare horizon, "and the cusses have at least six hours the start with fresh horses." He turned around. "Well, boys, that takes 'em out of my bailiwick, I reckon. Some of the rest of you will have to run that gang down."

CHAPTER XXXII.

Dr. Fairbain has originally joined the searching party, fully as eager as Keith himself to run down the renegade Hawley, but after an hour of resultless effort, his entire thought shifted to the woman they had left alone at the hotel. He could not, as yet, fully grasp the situation, but he remained loyal to the one overpowering truth that he loved Christie Maclaire. Fairbain's nature was rough, original, yet loyal to the core. He had lived all his life long in army camps, and upon the frontier, and his code of honour was extremely simple. It never once occurred to him that Christie's profession was not of the highest, or that her life and associations in any way unfitted her for the future. To his mind she was the one and only woman. His last memory of her, as the little party of men filed out of the room, haunted him until he finally dropped out of the search, and drifted back toward the hotel.

It was a late hour, yet it was hardly likely the woman had retired. Her excitement, her interest in the pursuit would surely prevent that, moreover, he was cerain he saw a light still burning in her room, as he looked up from the black street below. Nevertheless he hesitated, uncertain of his reception. Bluff, emphatic, never afraid to face a man in his life, his heart now beat fiercely as he endeavoured to muster the necessary courage. Far down the dark street some roysterer fired a shot, and sudden fear lest he might be sought after professionally sent the doctor hurriedly within and up the stairs. He stood, just outside her door, quaking like a child, the perspiration beading his forehead, but a light streamed through the transom, and he could plainly hear movements within. At last, in a sudden spasm of courage, he knocked softly. Even in that noisy spot she heard instantly, opening the door without hesitation, and standing fully dressed within. She was no longer a discouraged, sobbing girl, but an aroused, intent woman, into whose pathetic, lonely life there had come a new hope. She appeared younger, fairer, with the light shimmering in her hair and her eyes smiling welcome.

"Oh, doctor," and her hands were thrust out towards him. "I am glad you have come. Somehow, I thought you would, and I have wanted so to talk to someone—to you."

"To me! Do you really mean that, Miss Christie?"

"Yes, I really mean that, you great bear of a man," and the girl laughed lightly, dragging him into the room, and closing the door. "Why, who else could I expect to come to-night? You were the only one really good to me. You—you acted as if you believed in me all the time—"

"I did, Christie; you bet I did," broke in the delighted doctor, every nerve tingling. "I'd 'a' cleaned out that whole gang if you'd only said so, but I reckon now it was better to let them tell all they knew. It was like like a thunderstorm clearing the atmosphere."

"Oh, it was, indeed! Now I know who I am—who I am! Isn't that simply glorious? Sit down, Dr. Fairbain, there in the big chair where I can see your face. I want to talk, talk, talk; I want to ask questions, a thousand questions; but it wouldn't do any good to ask them of you, would it? You don't know anything about my family, do you?"

"Not very much, I am afraid, only that you have got an almighty pretty half-sister," admitted the man, emphatically, "and old Waite possesses the vilest temper ever given a human being. He's no blood kin to you, though."

"No, but he is awfully good underneath, isn't he?"

"Have you known him, then, for a long while?"

"Ever since the spring of '61. I was brigaded with him all through the war, and had to cut a bullet or so out of his hide before it ended. If there was ever a fight, Willis Waite was sure to get his share. He could swear some then, but he's improved since, and I reckon now he could likely claim the championship."

"Did—did you know my mother also?" and Christie leaned forward, her eyes suddenly grown misty. "I haven't even the slightest memory of her."

The doctor's heart was tender, and he was swift to respond, reaching forth and grasping the hand nearest him. He had made love before, yet somhow this was different; he felt half afraid of this woman, and it was a new sensation altogether, and not unpleasant.

"I saw her often enough in those days, but not since. She was frequently in camp, a very sweet-faced woman; you have her eyes and hair, as I remember. Waite ought to have recognized you at first sight. By Heavens! that was what made me so infernally mad, the stubborn obstinacy of the old fool. Your mother used to come to the hospital tent, too; one of the best nurses I ever saw. I thought she was a beauty then, but she's some older by this time," he paused regretfully. 'You see, I'm no spring chicken, myself."

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

Mr. James Bick of Bobcaygeon, who leaves for British Columbia on or about the 25th of May, was made the recipient of numerous expressions of appreciation by his many friends, among them being an address presented by a number of Mr. Bick's neighbours and associates.

The address which was read by Mr. Joseph Thurston, was as follows:

Bobcaygeon, May 9, 1912.

Mr. James Bick, Bobcaygeon,—

Dear Friend,—We heard with regret some time ago that you were about to leave our midst and make for yourself a home in the extreme western province of our Dominion. During your long residence in Verulam and Bobcaygeon you and your late wife always proved to be true friends, so we have met to-night to show you in some tangible way the esteem in which you are held by us. We would therefore ask you to accept this suit case as a slight memento of our good will towards you. We would not ask you to accept it on account of its intrinsic value but on account of the spirit that prompted us to give it.

We trust that you may make many kind friends in the west and the grace of God and love may spare you many years in your new home.

Signed Jos. Thurston,
Delbert Junkin.

Accompanying the address was a handsome suit case.

Mr. Bick replied briefly and thanked his many friends for the good wishes which had been extended.

DR. BARCLAY RESIGNS AS THE CHHAIRMAN.

MONTREAL, MAY 16.—The members of the Protestant Board of School Commissioners were surprised at to-day's meeting, when Dr. Barclay tendered his resignation as chairman of the board. Dr. Barclay stated that he was leaving Montreal on June 14, for Scotland, and would be absent all summer. It was finally decided not to accept the resignation until after the meeting of the board on June 10.

The news of Dr. Barclay's resignation will come as a surprise to the reverend doctor's many friends in this city. Dr. Barclay occupies the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian church on Sunday, May 5th.

Roosevelt Confident

Special Wire to The Examiner.

GREENVILLE, OHIO, MAY 16.—Reiterating his confident claim that he will be made Republican presidential nominee on the first ballot at Chicago, Col. Theodore Roosevelt made his first speech of to-day here before several thousand persons. "Of the delegates yet to be selected," said Roosevelt, "I will receive enough to insure my nomination on the first ballot."

"HAIL THE DAY! THAT SEES HIM RISE; ALLELUIA!"

To-day is one of the great festivals of the Anglican, the Roman and the Greek churches, and this, as a general rule, is the worst kept festival of the Christian year. Our general neglect of Ascension Day tells a sad tale; it shows that our religion is tinged with selfishness. And the reason why the commemoration of this day appeals to us in so small a degree, is because we are apt to think it has, in comparison with the other great events of our Lord's life, but little to do with our personal benefit. Half unconsciously we are apt to think that our Saviour has died and has risen from the dead. Our share in His activities is, therefore, over! Our personal interest in His movements seems to have ceased.

If we neglect Ascension-tide, on the ground of its having no concern for us, we are indeed very grievously mistaken! For it is the topmost jewel in the crown of our Redemption.

Ascension-tide is our Lord's triumph. After all His suffering and sorrow and pain for us, He goes back to His Father, recovers His glory and receives His reward. Has this no interest for us? Have we no homage to lay before those wounded Feet as they ascend, glowing with the scars of Love, from the mountain in Bethany If we have not already—those of us whoare English church folk—approached His Altar, can we not at least go and praise Him, and show our gratitude and love for all that He has done for us? An opportunity is afforded at the choral evensong to be offered to-night at St. John's church at eight o'clock? For if He had not ascended into Heaven, He never could have triumphed as founder and King of His church.

Skin Disorders In The Spring

To old and young, rich and poor alike there come disfiguring, annoying, itching skin diseases. There are many theories as to the cause of skin diseases, but one thing is certain: you can cure them with Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Relief from the itching, burning sensations comes almost directly after the ointment is applied, and with a little patient treatment, the sores are healed up and entirely disappear.

Mr. John A. Creech, postmaster, Randwick, Simcoe county, Ont., writes: "I was a great sufferer from eczema or salt rheum. My hands and face were covered with itching skin eruptions and though I used many different remedies I could get no relief. Finally I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and am thankful to say that it has completely cured me. You may publish this for the benfit of others suffering as I did."

When there is not a sufficient amount of sulphur in the hair, it loses its life, color and strength, turns gray, and falls out. There are many forms of sulphur, but only one kind that is suitable for treatment of the hair and scalp, and that is the kind used in preparing WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY.

We Have the Secret, and We Give You the Benefit of It at an Exceedingly Low Price

BALDNESS CURED

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair, and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

The Mother Who Was Too Busy

By Ruth Cameron

IN a beautiful big back yard upon which one of my study windows looks, seven youngsters were having the time of their lives the other day; and the central figure of all their fun was a most wonderful tent constructed out of two shawls and a sheet. The sheet was stretched from the back piazza roof to the clothes line, the plaid shawl formed one side, and the grey shawl the other. I watched the whole construction of this affair from the moment when the gigantic idea was advanced in conclave, to the moment when tht tent was finished, and these seven youngsters trooped proudly in.

And as I watched, there suddenly came to me from across the years — as poignantly as if it were something actual like a fragrance or a strain of music —the memory of similar good times of my own, centering around similar undertakings. I remembered one glorious arduous Saturday spent in building a string telephone from my window to the window of a little box next door; and another dedicated to manufacturing an aquarium out of an old wash pail, a few water weeds, some minnows and three luckless pollywogs; and still another holiday when we built a house in the pioneer all the lted it up like a log cabin, and played woodpile, and fitong afternoon.

How I used to trot in and out of the house, excited, busy and absolutely happy! How I used to rush to the little mother for the string for the telephone, the wash pail for the aquarium ,an old blanket for the log cabin, and mercy knows what not! And how patiently she always gave them to me!

You see, she was a mother who understood.

Are you that, you mothers who are reading this?

When the conclave of the seven decided to have a tent-the other morning ,they dispersed to their separate homes in search of materials. From one home came the plaid shawl; from another came the sheet and the grey shawl; but from two homes the scouts came back empty handed. You see,in each of those homes there was a mother who did not understand, who was "too busy."

Mothers and fathers, especially mothers ,don't forget that little things like these are very big to children. Disproportionately big! A plaid shawl may mean so much fun to them, may give them more pleasure, perhaps, than some of your most expensive formal gifts. Can't you manage to have the time to find the plaid shawl?

I used to visit sometimes at a home where the children were never allowed any such liberties, where all such requests were invariably denied. The home was expensive and beautiful, but the children liked to go to other homes to play. And now that they are grown up they are never so happy as when they are away visiting.

Little things like these mean so very much to children that we must be careful how we refuse and deny, for we may be spoiling more happiness than we have an idea of.

THE "OVER-SEAS" CLUB

Unless something unforseen occurs, the organizer of The Over-Seas Club hopes to leave England for Canada at an early date. During his tour he proposes visiting all the chief organized branches of The Ocean-Seas Club in the Dominion, starting with Ottawa and Montreal, and ending at Vancouver and Victoria.

For some time it has been felt at headquarters that it was necessary in the interests of the ever-growing organization to reconvene from the headquarters' staff to visit the outlying branches with a view to greater cohesion as regards the working of the Club as a whole. The organizer hopes to be present at Ottawa on Empire Day. Communications intended for him should be addressed to Mr. B. Wrench, c.o. Mr. W. S. Maines, Montreal Star, Montreal.

Amusing Escape Of Boy Poacher

Crossed C. P. R. Bridge While Inspector is Said to Have Been Held Up

When the law thwarts the law, some one gets a chance to escape, and an amusing incident, illustrating this idea is reported from the south end of the city. Last evening a youth, after many attempts to catch a fish, was finally successful with his snare and lifted his prize from the water. This was in the vicinity of the C.P.R. bridge over the creek. The boy looked around carefully, only to see the fishing inspector approaching. According to the story he picked up the fish and started to run down the track toward the bridge over the river. As the story goes, he eluded Special Constable Pinchin, but the Fish Inspector was not so fortunate. The Constable caught him before he reached the bridge and warned him that trespassing was forbidden. The Inspector spluttered and fumed in an effort to explain the situation, but he was winded and it took time. In the meantime the youth with the fish had cleared the bridges and was a safe distance ahead of the Inspector, who was so near the exploding point that it was safe to say nothing.

Some citizens may not regard the closing of the bridge in the light of a blessing, but here is one small boy who has a good word to say in favour of it.

Progress Of Home Re-union Association

Mr. G. N. Gordon Reports for the Advisory Board of the Association at the Board of Trade

Mr. G. N. Gordon, chairman of the Imperial Home Reunion Association Advisory Committee, reported for that organization at the Board of Trade meeting Tuesday night. He outlined the aims and objects of the association.

A number of guarantors sufficient to float the scheme had been secured, so that the immediate inauguration of the project was possible. The guarantors were adequately protected from possible loss, and the conserving of these funds was sufficient to guarantee the transportation of a number of families. The main object of the association was to re-unite families, the heads of whom were already located here. The merchants of the city would be benefitted, as the money at present remitted to the Old Country for the support of these families would be circulated here.

Several applications have already been received, and in the course of a few days it is expected that some of these will be dealt with.

TO LOCATE AT COLBORNE

The Canadian Ohio Motor Car Company, Limited, Decides

A Board of Trade was organized at Colborne in January last, and at the inaugural meeting a proposition was received for the establishment of a Canadian branch of the Ohio Motor Car Company of Cincinnati. Since then a committee has investigated the proposition and reported favourably, and a company has been granted a charter. The directors are Messrs. C. F. Pratt, A. E. Schafer and H. T. Boulden of Cincinnati, and Messrs. H. I. Matthews, F. L. Webb, Robert Snetsinger and J. E. McDonald, of Colborne. A selling department has been organized for the Dominion, having show rooms at the corner of Yonge and Maitland streets, Toronto, with Mr. Frank G. Anderson in charge, and the Ohio car is now on exhibition there.

The town of Colborne will vote on a by-law granting a free site and exemption from taxation on the 20th instant, and it is expected the Canadian factory will be ready for operation next fall. A by-law granting a free site and exemption from taxation to the Orner Canning Company was carried at the last municipal election in Colborne, and the factory is now under construction, and will be ready for business this season. With the C.P.R. added to the G. T.R. and C.N.R., and the Seymour Power Company already in operation, and the probability of the new C.P.R. ferry and also the divisional point being located at Colborne, it is expected the town will soon take its place among the large manufacturing centres of Ontario.

Large Number of Fines Were Imposed For Minor Offences

"I haven't the money," pleaded Vilke Stanley when he was fined $8 and costs for trespassing on the C. P. R. railway bridge.

"Well, there is good accommodation on the hill," solaced the Court.

Stanley was allowed ten days in which to pay $4.60 into the civic treasury.

W. Seyward also found the going good on the notorious bridge. He fell into the arms of Special C. P. R. Constable Pinchin and was fined $2 and costs.

Bicyclists, Beware.

Albert Wright, F. O. Silk, Alfred Hagerman, Albert Rattle, Wm. Godfrey and James McGrath each enriched the civic coffers by $2 and costs, respectively.

Drunk and disorderly was the charge that Wm. Lavery pleaded guilty to. He was fined $3 and costs, a total of $5.75.

Another Benefit For Byersville

Street Railway Extension Will Enhance Value of Property

The extension of the Street Railway to Byersville is regarded with much satisfaction by a number of the property holders who when the line is completed will have a rapid communication to all parts of the city. It is another case of getting something from the city for nothing. Without contributing anything toward the city these property holders are within easy communication with the centre of the city, and their lots are thus made more attractive. A citizen commenting upon this fact, said:

"It will no doubt be a good thing for the company and for the residents of Byersville, but it is only another reason why this suburb should become a part of the city. I am heartily in favour of the action to secure the annexation of this section. This is another instance of their receiving an asset which they did nothing to secure. Their property is increased in value at one stroke."

Illegal Fishing Above The City

Report Says Fish Have Been Secured Near Dams

It has been stated that fishing operations in the river above the city have been rather active of late. Poachers at one of the dams not many miles up the river have secured three or four fine lunge according to one story; this section of the Otonabee apparently, having been less carefully patrolled than other sections. A number of fishermen from the city are said to have hooked some fine lunge of late, and the fish have been taken from the water with but little difficulty. One of the inspectors stated recently that the poachers who have been giving trouble during recent years have become few and the small boys have required the most watching of late. But it was not small boys who visited the easy fishing grounds above the city. While the inspectors have been watching the creek at the C. P. R. bridge and other sections adjacent, it has been comparatively easy to get a supply in the section, which it is said, has been overlooked. At one of the dams three or four lunge have been secured by one party, according to one statement.

Trying Time On The Kidneys

No wonder there is so much backache in the spring, so much fatigue and lassitude from poison-laden systems. The accumulated winter poisons must be swept from the body. The kidneys make every effort to purify the blood but the changing temperature of spring plays havoc with them. Congestion follows, the kidneys fail in their work and there are backache, headache, tired feelings and too often serious developments.

You can help the kidneys wonderfully by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. In a few hours the backache will disappear, and a little patient treatment will restore the activity of kidneys, liver and bowels and thoroughly purify the blood.

No medicine is so satisfactory as a means of removing the cause of chronic and acute indigestion, constipation and kidney and liver derangements.

ADDRESSES OF WELCOME TO NEW SECRETARY OF Y. M. C. A.

Mr. A. A. Hainsworth Guest of Honour at Large Gatherings Last Evening—City Council and Local Clergy Represented

An interesting event took place last night in the Y. M. C. A., where a meeting of welcome was held to the new Secretary of the Institution, Mr. A. A. Hainsworth. The Board of Directors was well represented, as also were the Clergy and Council of the city.

The proceedings commenced in the gymnasium, where, under the direction of their physical director, Mr. J. J. Thompson, an exhibition of that work and gymnastics was given by the Junior and Senior Leaders. The assembly then adjourned to the parlour, where many prominent citizens had already gathered. Mr. J. J. Turner occupied the chair, and in his address he said he had pleasure in welcoming Mr. Hainsworth as Secretary of the institution. There was much work to do and he had no doubt but that it would be faithfully carried out. The young men, while yet on the threshold of life, require some guiding influence, and as the Board was representative, there was no reason why there should not be an increase in the membership. He looked forward to a very successful year, and hoped that Mr. Hainsworth's inception would be mutually both useful and profitable.

Speeches of welcome were also given by Messrs. J. W. Bennett, J. J. Hartley, W. Switzer, Alderman G. N. Gordon, Revs. F. J. Sawers, and J. W. Riddiford, Alderman G. A. Gillespie, Messrs. A. McFarland and W. J. Conaal.

In reply to the various remarks, Mr. Hainsworth said he coveted the opportunity to work in conjunction with the ministers of Peterborough in the great work, and he assured them that he would give his whole heart to the uplifting and welfare of the institution. He asked their co-operation in this for if they would turn to history it would be seen that great battles were not won by the leaders, but by the rank and file, and he depended largely upon the rank and file ot asist in making the work of the istitution successful. He had, with pleasure, listened last evening to some remarks at the Board of Trade meeting, as to the future of Peterborough, and he had learned that with its great advantages that the city would probably have a population of five hundred thousand at the expiration of fifty years. In a few years the men afound him would have passed away and the boys of to-day would have in their grasp the destiny of the city and of its people. Was it then not essential that they should be assisted to lead good and useful lives, so that a promising future for the city and its inhabitants would be assured.

During the proceedings creditable vocal selections were rendered by Messrs. F. Downey and W. Miller.

After refreshments had been served in the anti room, the gathering dispersed.

THE MURRAY ST. CONGREGATION'S IMPORTANT BUSINESS MEETING

Salary of Pastor Rev. J. R. Webb has Been Increased by $300—Arrangements Made for the Allocation of Pews

OPENING SERVICES

Much important business was transacted at the meeting of Murray street Baptist church last night. The recommendation of the officers regarding the time and manner of allocating the pews of the new church was carried unanimously. No pews will be allocated until after the three Sundays of opening services when an evening will be devoted to this work. After several other matters were dealt with the pastor was asked to vacate the chair when Mr. R. Harding was voted chairman. Mr. T. F. Matthews then presented a motion that the salary of Rev. Mr. Webb be increased by the sum of three hundred dollars, to date from the first of April. This was carried without a dissenting vote. The minister then thanked the congregation for this, another manifestation of the kindness of those with whom he has now worked for over five years.

The Murray street congregation will enter their new edifice under the happiest auspices, on Sunday, May 26th, with Rev. J. L. Gilmour, D.D., as the first speaker in the new building.

To-morrow (Friday) evening, a retrospective luncheon will be held in the old building. Tea will be served at 7.30 o'clock, after which a suitable programme will be presented, including addresses by Rev. C. G. Smith, of Belleville, and others.

At this meeting greetings from those who have been members of Murray street years ago, will be read, and also a message of congratulation from Rev. John Clifford, D.D., of London, Eng., who laid the corner stone of the new church. The offering of twenty-five cents, which will be received, will be devoted to Foreign Missions.

YOUTHS DEFACE CITY PROPERTY

The names of a number of boys residing in the north end of the city, bid fair to grace the police court register. It was learned through authoritative sources to-day, that a number of the said youths have been defacing store fronts, and other property by carving their initials thereon. The police have been notified and a number of names secured. A continuance of these depredations will result in police court proceedings.

This offence, together with that of congregating on street corners are indictable, and it is the purpose of the authorities to stamp out the evil.

Red Mill Theatre Safeguards Public

Inspector of Theatres Writes the Manager an Interesting Letter

Mr. Clayton, manager of the Red Mill, received to-day a letter from the Inspector of Moving Picture Theatres, which indicates how well the law is being observed in regard to the handling of the crowds that attend the Red Mill. The remarks in a local paper about the attendances at the Red Mill have been entirely uncalled for, Mr. Clayton states, and are an indication of want of knowledge of the regulations concerning moving picture theatres. Patrons of the Red Mill will commend this letter that Mr. Clayton is providing every safeguard, and that everything pertaining to the theatre is up to the right standard:—

Toronto, May 10th, 1912.
Herb. Clayton, Esq.,
Peterborough, Ont.—

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 13th inst. to the Honourable, the Provincial Treasurer, has been referred to me for answer.

Section 1 of the Act, to regulate the means of egress from public buildings, passed on March 20th, 1911, reads that all doors must be so hinged that they may open FREELY.

In the new rules to come into operation June 1st, 1912, Section 9 provides that all passageways, etc., must be kept free and unobstructed. Section 8 of the regulations at present in use, provides the same as above mentioned section.

If your outside lobby is railed off in such a manner as to leave the full width of your exit free to the street line, and your waiting people are held within the rails in portion of your lobby, the [illegible] no objection.

It is, however, absolutely necessary that all exits must be kept free and unobstructed to the full length from the hall to the street line.

Respectfully yours,
R. C. NEWMAN,
Inspector.

HIGH PRICE PAID FOR CHEESE AT OPENING SALE ON BOARD YESTERDAY

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie Bought Entire Offering at 13 3-8c. Several Cents Increase Over Opening Price Last Year ---Board Begins 1912 With Splendid Meeting Although Make Was Rather Light---Officers Were Re-elected.

The above figures indicate the present cheese situation and explain the feeling of satisfaction with which the salesmen greeted the first meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board for 1912, held yesterday morning.

Nine hundred and fourteen cheese were boarded and were bought by Mr. George A. Gillespie, who secured first choice and took the entire offering of the factories.

At the first meeting last year 1288 cheese were boarded, and Mr. T. H. Thompson was the heavy buyer at 10¾c.

Beore the sales were opened, Mr. W. C. Switzer stated that at the annual meeting held some time ago the attendance was small and the regular business was not concluded. The election of officers was still to be held and several other matters discussed.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

After the minutes were read by Mr. E. Hawthorne, Mr. W. S. Cook was appionted chairman and called for nominations. He stated that Mr. Switzer had given good satisfaction as president, a position to which it was not easy to break in a new man.

On motion of Mr. Bullock last year's board of officers were re-appointed by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Switzer expressed his thanks for the honour conferred upon him. He would like to see the position passed around among the members. "If the members have that confidence in us I will continue as president but we want your assistance to uphold the good work the board has done."

Mr. Mann suggested that a balance of $7.28 be given the secretary in recognition of his services, but Mr. Hawthorne declined the offer. It was decided to divide $15 between the janitor of the Bank of Montreal building and the board reporters for the evening papers.

Moved by Mr. W. S. Cook, seconded by Mr. Morton, that the buyers be admitted as members of the Board upon the payment of $1.00.—Carried.

Mr. Cook stated that the Peterborough Board had the name of being the best in Canada. The election of officers should be held at the first meeting every year. He thought that the buyers might as well be admitted as members.

Mr. Bullock—Take them in. As long as the salesmen are in the majority we need not worry about them.

NO WEEKLY SALES

Regarding the question of weekly sales Mr. George A. Gilespie said that weekly sales had not been a success here. During the hot spells there might be some defects in cheese held three weeks, but most of the factories are equipped with cool curing rooms, and he thought the best plan was to continue the semimonthly sales.

Mr. Thomas Watkins, a buyer said that it was very necessary to have cool curing rooms. Factories will have to come to it. They will save money if they have them. I know two factories that are saving $500 dollars a year as a result of their cool curing rooms. There is no need of weekly boards. It is better to have your meetings every two weeks.

Mr. Kerr—Belleville ships weekly, but here in Peterborough the average cheese is not held much longer than where the weekly sales are held. The condition of the cheese here going out is second to none.

Moved by Mr. Gillespie, seconded by Mr. Kerr, that no action be taken in regard to having weekly sales.—Carried.

THE BUYERS PRESENT

The buyers present at this morning's sales were Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, T. H. Thompson, representing A. A. Ayer of Montreal, Wm. Weir of Keene, John Kerr of Belleville, representing James Alexander, Ltd., of Montreal, Thomas Watkins, W. H. Cooke of Sterling, representing Geo. Hodge and Son of Montreal, W. S. Cook, W. H. If you want to see a gorgeous display of floral splendour, go to Victoria Park and gloat over the tulip beds, never so perfectly beautiful as they are this year.

What did you think of Mr. Ritchie's splendid address to the Board of Trade? If you did, remember that its chief value lies in its being lived up to.

The sergeants mess of the 57th will meet to-night at their armoury headquarters. A full muster is requested. Every member is on the duty roster.

If the people could see the way the meat is handled in delivery importations that enter the city from Toronto, they wouldn't be pleased. It is said to be delivered from the railway station to the shops in open conveyances, unprotected by any covering—except that part used by the driver as a seat—from microbe-charged dust. The sanitary inspector can't be everywhere, but it won't be long after he reads this that an improvement will be made.

NEW LIQUOR LAW HITS HARD.

The Italians and other foreigners, who have a strong liking for the amber fluid and other liquir stimulants will receive another setback. Of late several foreigners have had the habit of getting in more than two gallons of liquor at one time. The new law that came into effect May 1 has more than doubled the penalty. The penalty used to be a fine of from $20 to $50 for the first offence of keeping liquor on the premises for sale, the fact that liquor was found on the premises more than the law allowed being sufficient avidence. The fine for the second offence was $100. Under

ARRANGING DETAILS FOR CEREMONIES OF LOCAL OPENING OF THE SEASON

Manager Templin's Team Will Make Their Peterboro' Debut Next Wednesday With St. Thomas as Their Adversaries.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED

Next Wednesday, May 22, will be a red letter day in the history of baseball in Peterborough. It will mark the local opening of the Canadian Baseball League and the debut of organized baseball in this city and arrangements are being made to open the season with the proper flourishes. There will be an automobile parade through the business section, headed by the 57th Regimental Band, and comprising the civic and parliamentary dignitaries, the officers of the local club and the members of both teams. At the grounds the players will march across the sward, headed by the band, and Mayor Bradburn and others will take part in the ceremonies attendant upon pitching the first ball.

That there will be a record crowd present for the first game here with St. Thomas goes without saying. The city is worked up over baseball and the fans will be out en masse to greet Manager Templin and his White Caps, when they return from the road. The greatest interest has been shown in the games in Hamilton, and although the White Caps lost both by close scores, the fans are satisfied with the fighting spirit they have shown and realize that they will improve consistently. The handicap they underwent during the training season, through Riverside Park being flooded, was a great one and their good work at Hamilton was surprising under the circumstances. With no suitable grounds available, no exhibition games could be arranged, and Manager Templin had no opportunity of seeing his team in action until the first game in Hamilton against a team who had had half a dozen games under their belt and were in much better shape. A few more games are needed before the White Caps strike their stride properly, but at that the team made a most favourable impression on the Kolt town critics, as will be seen from the press comments elsewhere on this page. They outbatted Lee's bunch in both games and fielded equally as well, but yet lost.

To-day's rain will delay the operations at Riverside Park but the local ball yard will be in good shape by opening day. Contractor Johnston has a big squad of carpenters at work on the new stand and is rushing the structure through in record time. It will be ready for Wednesday. The playing field is already in good condition. The skinning of the base paths has been completed and the grounds will be levelled and rolled. By Saturday this portion of the work will be completed and little will remain to be done for the opening. Peterborough will have one of the prettiest ball parks in the circuit.

PETES OUTHIT AND OUTFIELDED KOLTS BUT LOSE ANOTHER

Had an Uphill Fight at Hamilton Yesterday When Kolts Scored Four in the First Innings—"White Caps" Closed Up the Gap But Could Not Overcome the Lead

HAMILTON, MAY 15.—Hamilton took the second game of the series from Peterborough to-day 7 to 5. The weather was raw and both teams played loose ball. An error by Tully, a wild pitch by Bartlitt, and three timely bingles gave the Kolts four runs in the first and after that they were never in trouble. Baver replaced Bartlett in the second. The three flingers were hit freely. Rose's delivery was solved ten times. The feature of the game was Corns' hitting. He made the first tripple of the season and a two-bagger. Hackbush, who was let out by Guelph, was signed by Manager Templin this morning. He will likely be carried as a utility man. He hit .266 for 83 games last season. The score:

"WHITE CAPS" MADE HIT WITH HAMILTON CRITICS

Hamilton Herald: The Petes looked decidedly nifty in their new uniforms of white with blue stocking and blue and white caps. The Hamilton team also had a prettier uniform than last year, yellow and black being the colours, as they are most soothing to the eyes of a Hamiltonian. Templin chose his star southpaw, Derr, to do the heaving, and with as good support as Teed received he would have won. Derr has loads of speed and good control. Not once during the afternoon did he attempt to put one over the centre. He is an artist when it comes to cutting the corners, and sent over a bunch of heaves that for variety could not be beaten. Six bingles were all that Lee's lulus could amass, and if this Derr person continues to do such heaving he will be booked for higher company before the season closes. He pitched winning ball yesterday, and the disaster can in no way be attributed to him. He kept the bingles well scattered and pulled out of a tight corner on two occasions when it looked as though the local hired help would notch another.

Hamilton Times: Peterborough has a pretty sweet little team, and they may be depended upon to be right up in the first division, fighting all the way. The showing made by the visitors was rather a surprise to the local fans, many of whom looked forward to an easy victory yesterday. The Petes have not had the advantage of the same amount of training as the Hams, and they will improve as the season advances.

Hamilton Herald: Peterborough has a real high class ball player in Tully, the shortstop. He performs well in the difficult position and will be heard from before the season is very far advanced.

White Cap Notes

Tough luck! Hamilton were outhit and outfielded, but we lose another.

Ten hits yesterday and nine on opening day. The White Caps are smashing the ball on the nose anyway. They can't keep up that slamming long without grabbing some games.

The Templin squad have moved on to Brantford to-day for a series of three games, winding up on Saturday. They have two games at St. Thomas next week before returning home.

The Guleph Maple Leafs haven't scored a run in two games. They were beaten 5 to 0 on Tuesday and 8 to 0 yesterday.

Ottawa and St. Thomas broke even on the two game series, the Senators grabbing yesterday's fixture by 5 runs to 1.

Berlin won both games in Brantford from Amby Kane's crew. Here's hoping the White Caps do the same stunt in the series commencing to-day.

The Peterborough team have made more hits in their two games than any other team in the league. They outhit Hamilton 19 to 16, had the same number of errors and yet both games went the wrong way. Just another proof of the uncertainty of baseball.

The local fans are certainly showing a great interest in the team. The Examiner was receiving the returns of the game by innings yesterday as usual and the telephone was kept red hot by fans who wanted to know the result.

GOVERNOR FOSS REFUSES TO SAVE MINISTER'S LIFE

Richeson is Removed to Charlestown Jail, where He Will be Executed on Monday—He is Sane Say Experts.

Boston, May 17.—Rev. C. V. Richeson was taken yesterday to Charlestown jail where he will remain until shortly after midnight Sunday, when he will pay the penalty for the murder of Avis Linnell.

Richeson's last hope of escaping the death chair expired last night when Governor Foss announced that he would not refer Richeson's petition for commutation of sentence to the executive council.

The statement from the governor followed closely the filing of the reports of the special insanity commission, which declared the condemned man sane, although subject to fits of hysterical insanity. The commission found that Richeson was sane at the time of the murder and that he is sane at the present time.

The statement issued by Governor Foss shows that the alienists found that Richeson's family was afflicted very generally with insanity, and that the condemned man is himself a neurotic, a somnambulist and a neurasthenic and subject to hysterical insanity.

Before leaving the cell Richeson bade farewell to Butts, the colored prisoner who has been his cell-mate and personal attendant for more than three months. Butts, who has a dog-like affection for Richeson, broke down and cried.

Threw Intended to Kill Three.

New York, May 17.—A new mystery was added to the Harry K. Thaw case yesterday by a letter, it is said the state will use in its forthcoming attempt to keep Thaw in Matteawan Asylum.

There are five names in Thaw's handwriting, three of them with "kill" underscored after them. Stanford White's name was third. The other two names so marked were Bancroft Davis and Freddy Gebhard. The two names without sinister notation are those of Craig Wadsworth and Reginald Francklyn. The letter was written from Pittsburg in December, 1905, almost three years before Thaw shot White. Gebhard died Sept. 8, 1910.

Train Robbers' Rich Loot.

New Orleans, May 17.—Robbers who held up a Queen and Crescent express train near Hattiesburg, Miss., Wednesday, got at least $200,000, according to best information obtainable here yesterday. It is positively known that from the safe which was blown open the bandits got more than thirty packages of securities, one of which contained in excess of $50,000. One package of currency contained $140,000, according to an express messenger.

Killed in Berlin Brewery.

Berlin, May 17.—An accident occurred at the Kion Brewery yesterday afternoon, which resulted in the death of Fred Govokinski, an employe of the Linsly Canadian Refrigerating Co., which is installing an engine in the manufacturing department of the brewery.

Trestle Broke; Three Killed.

Brooks, Alta., May 17.—While a work train, consisting of nine cars and carrying twenty workmen, was passing over a trestle at the $1,000,000 irrigation dam at Bassano yesterday morning, the trestle broke, precipitating the train to the ground, forty feet below.

Harry Smith, a carpenter, was killed, and J. R. Constantine and M. F. Ogden were fatally hurt.

DEBATE IS STORMY

Welsh Disestablishment Bill Passes Second Reading

MR. LLOYD-GEORGE REPLIES

London, May 17.—The Welsh disestablishment bill passed the second reading in the House of Commons last night by a vote of 348 to 267.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lloyd-George, effectively used the charge that the noble families, whose representatives were the most strenuous opponents of the bill on the ground that it pillaged the established church, obtained their vast wealth by the spoliation of the church in the time of the Reformation.

A stormy scene followed his reference to a political leaflet in which, he said, the Duke of Devonshire charged them with "robbery of God."

"Doesn't he know," queried the Chancellor, "that the very foundations of his fortunes were laid deep in sacrilege and built on desecrated shrines and pillaged altars?"

Among the voices raised in angry protest, Lord Hugh Cecil's was the most conspicuous, to which Lloyd-George retorted:

"These charges that we are robbing the church ought not to be brought by those whose family tree is laden with the fruits of sacrilege at the Reformation. Their ancestors robbed the Catholic Church, the monasteries, the altars, the almshouses. They robbed the poor. They robbed the dead. Then when we try to recover some part of this pillaged property for the poor, their descendants accuse us of theft—they whose hands are dripping with the fat of sacrilege."

Severe Drought in West Indies.

Kingstown, St. Vincent, West Indies, May 17.—A severe drought prevails throughout the West Indies, particularly in Trinidad, where conditions in the country districts are approaching those of a water famine. Villagers are obliged to walk in some places five miles in order to obtain drinking water.

Planted Dynamite.

Salem, Mass., May 17.—John J. Breen, a prominent citizen of Lawrence, was found guilty of one of the three counts of th indictments in which he was charged with planting dynamite during the big textile strike in that city, by a jury in the Superior Court here yesterday. Sentence has not been imposed. Breen is a member of the school committee of Lawrence.

The count on which Breen was found guilty charged that he intended to injure the strikers in the conduct of their strike.

Rat Bites Kills Baby.

London, Ont., May 17.—A child named Miller died in Victoria Hospital yesterday morning as the result of bites by rats. The baby was being boarded with a family named Maslett and when they went to it Wednesday morning it was found that one of its nostrils had been eaten away, as well as part of the cheek and ears. The bed was dripping with blood, part of the nipple of the feeding bottle was also eaten. The mother of the child has been located in Berlin. An inquest has been ordered.

TO SAVE HIS PEOPLE.

Taft Would Protect Them From Machinations of Roosevelt.

Cleveland, O., May 17.—"I would not be here to bother you to-night if it did not concern the American people more than it does me to defeat Theodore Roosevelt for the Presidency."

This was the way President Taft introduced his criticism of Col. Roosevelt here last night.

"If it were a purely personal matter with me," he continued, "I would be content to abide the verdict of time and would remain in the White House silent under his misstatements and attacks upon me. But more than my own feelings in the matter is at stake. It is of supreme importance to the American people."

A Case of Theft.

Defiance, O., May 17.—When Col. Roosevelt learned of the outcome of the Republican state convention in the State of Washington, as a result of which two sets of delegates are to be sent to the national convention, he denounced the action of the supporters of President Taft there as "scandalous."

At Paulding, he said: "The most scandalous thing our opponents have recently tried and failed in is to steal from the State of Washington the delegates from that state. Wherever we held primaries in that state, we beat them. Where they were strongest we beat them two to one. Where they were not so strong we beat them about eight to one. They had no chance of any kind, and so they have endeavored to steal what they could not earn, to try by theft to get what they could not get from the people."

Montana Loyal to Taft.

Livingston, Mont., May 17.—When Montana Republicans met in the state convention yesterday the Taft forces were in control with 424 delegates against 280 for Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Can't Win, Says Taft.

Cleveland, O., May 17.—In a statement issued yesterday President Taft said that the claim of Theodore Roosevelt that he controls 552 delegates to the Republican national convention is without foundation and not borne out by the facts.

The President said that if Mr. Roosevelt were to get all the delegates yet to be chosen he could not be nominated.

CANADA CAN DECIDE

Supreme Court Has Jurisdiction in Stated Case

NO TENURE IS INCLUDED

London, May 17.—Judgment was handed down by the Privy Council yesterday in the provincial rights case, dismissing the appeal.

The action was instituted by the Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario against the Attorney-General of the Dominion to decide whether the Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to entertain a reference under section 60 of the Supreme Court Act raising questions as to the constitutional powers of the provinces, and as to the effect of provincial statutes. There were also questions pertaining to the Supreme Court Act and of the British North America Act.

The Lord Chancellor, in delivering judgment, described the case as most important. Speaking of the British North America Act, he said there could be no doubt that under this the powers distributed between the Dominion on the one hand and the provinces on the other, cover the whole area of Canada. It would be subversive of the entire scheme and policy of the act to assume that any point of internal self-government was withheld from Canada. Numerous points have arisen and may hereafter arise upon those provisions of the act which draw a dividing line between what belongs to the Dominion or to the provinces respectively.

On behalf of the province it is argued, indeed, that the Dominion Act authorizing questions to be asked of the Supreme Court is an invasion of provincial rights, but not because the power of asking such questions belongs exclusively to the provinces. The real ground is far wider. It is no less than that no legislature in Canada has the right to pass an act for asking such questions at all. This is the feature of the present appeal which makes it so grave.

It would be one thing to say under the Canadian constitution what has been done could be done only to a Provincial Legislature within its own province. It is quite a different thing to say it cannot be done at all, being, as it is, a matter affecting the internal affairs of Canada, and on the face of it regulating the functions of a court of law which are part of the ordinary machinery of the Government in all civilized countries.

What in substance their lordships are asked to do is to say that the Canadian Parliament ought not to pass laws like this because it may be embarrassing and onerous to the court and to declare this law invalid because it ought not to have been passed. Their lordships would be departing from their legitimate province if they entertained the arguments of the appellants. They would really be pronouncing upon the policy of the Canadian Parliament, which is exclusively the business of the Canadian people, and is no concern of this board.

It is sufficient to point out the mischief and inconvenience which might arise from an indiscriminate and injudicious use of the act and leave it to the consideration of those who alone are lawfully and constitutionally entitled to decide upon such a matter. The appeal is therefore dismissed.

Supreme Court Has Jurisdiction.

Ottawa, May 17.—The news that the Privy Council had upheld the right of the Federal authority to submit a stated case to the Supreme Court on legal or academic questions was received with a great deal of interest in Ottawa. This decision establishes the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to pass upon such a reference.

This decision of the Privy Council means now that there is no obstacle in the way of arguing the marriage question at this session of the Supreme Court. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick stated that the court had decided to await the decision in the companies case. Now that the Privy Council has established the competency of the court to decide it will mean that argument will be heard at this session of the court and probably this month.

Hon. C. J. Doherty stated yesterday that the decision removed obstacles to the hearing of the marriage law and companies case, both of which are of vital importance to the provinces and Dominion, and there were no obstacles to prevent their immediate hearing.

Chinese Loans.

Pekin, May 17.—The loan negotiations between the Chinese Cabinet and the bankers representing the six powers, Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, Japan and the United States, were practically concluded yesterday.

AWAITING THE BODY.

Denmark Preparing to Pay Royal Tribute to Dead King.

Copenhagen, May 17.—Preparations have been completed for an impressive reception of the body of the late King Frederick VIII. of Denmark, which will arrive here at noon on Friday aboard the royal yacht Dannebrog. King Haakon of Norway, son of the dead monarch, and other members of royal families, high Government officials and foreign diplomats will assemble at the landing place from which, after the coffin has been placed in a hearse drawn by six horses, the procession will start for the chapel of Christianborg Castle. It will pass through the principal streets, which have been draped in mourning, and which today will be lined with troops.

At the chapel a short service will be held, and the body will remain there, guarded night and day by detachments of army and navy lieutenants, until it is taken away for the funeral at Roskilde Cathedral, on May 24.

Body Leaves Hamburg.

Hamburg, Germany, May 17.—The body of the late King Frederick VIII. of Denmark, was started on its journey to Copenhagen at eight o'clock yesterday morning. A short and simple service was held in the rooms of the hotel before the casket was carried down stairs by twelve municipal employes, attired in quaint fifteenth century costumes. They were black doublets, knee breeches, white stockings, black plumed hats and swords. As the procession passed out, other officials in mediæval costumes lined up on each side of the door.

The widowed Queen Louise left the hotel on the arm of Prince Herald, her third son. Prince Gustav and the Princesses Thyra and Dagmar, the three youngest children of the late king, who had traveled with him and the queen from Nice, followed immediately after their mother. All were deeply affected.

Brantford Boy's Body Found.

Brantford, May 17.—The body of Iver Rhodes, a ten-year-old boy, missing from his home since April 8, was found here early yesterday morning in Brantford canal, a mile from the spot at the river where he was last seen fishing. It is believed the boy fell in at the canal headgates. No inquest will be held.

BY EANDALL PARRISH

Hot fires were upon his face, a slight flush showing in either cheek, and she made no effort to withdraw her imprisoned hand.

"You are just a nice age," with firm conviction. "Boys are tiresome, and I think a little grey in the hair is an improvement. Oh, you mustn't imagine I say this just to please you—I have always thought so, since—well, since I grew up. Besides, funky men generally look young, because they are so good-natured, perhaps. How old are you, Doctor?"

"It isn't the grey hairs I mind, either," he admitted hesitatingly, "but I'm too darned bald-headed. Oh, I ain't so old, for I was only thirty-five when the war broke out. I was so thin then I could hardly cast a shadow. I've changed some since," casting his eyes admiringly downward, "and got quite a figure. I was forty-three last month."

"I've been afraid you looked on me as being an old fogey!"

"I should say not," indignantly. "Why should you ever think that?"

"Well, there were so many young fellows hanging about."

"Who?"

"Oh, Keith, and Hawley, and that bunch of officers from the fort; you never had any time to give me."

She laughed again, her fingers tightening in their clasp on his hand.

"Why, how foolish; Hawley is older than you are, and I was only playing with Keith. Surely you must know that now. And as to the officers, they were just fun. You see, in my profession, one has to be awfully nice to everybody."

"But didn't you really care for Hawley?" he insisted, bluntly probing for facts.

"He—he interested me," admitted the girl, hesitatingly, her eyes darkening with sudden anger. "He lied and I believed him—I would have believed any one who came with such a story. Oh, Dr. Fairbain," and she clung to him now eagerly, "you cannot realise how hungry I have been for what he brought me. I wanted so to know the truth of my birth. Oh, I hated this life!" She flung her disengaged hand into the air, with a gesture expressive of disgust. "I was crazy to get away from it. That was what made the man look good to me—he—he promised so much. You will believe me, won't you? Oh, you must; I am going to make you. I am a singer in music-halls; I was brought up to that life from a little girl, and of course, I know what you Western men think of us as a class. Hawley showed it in his whole manner toward me, and I resented it; just for that, deep down in my heart, I hated him. I know it now, now that I really understand his purpose; but some way, when I was with him he seemed to fascinate me, to make me do just as he willed. But you have never been that way; you—you have acted as though I was somebody—somebody nice, and not just a music-hall singer. Perhaps it's just your way, and maybe, deep down you don't think I'm any better than the others do, but—but I want you to think I am, and I am going to tell you the truth, and you must believe me—I am a good girl."

"Great God! of course you are," he blurted out. "Don't you suppose I know That isn't what has been bothering me, lassie. Why, I'd 'a' fought any buck who'd 'a' sneered at you. What I wanted to know was, whether or not you really cared for nay of those duffers. Can you tell me that, Christie?"

She lifted her eyes to his face, her lips parted.

"I can answer you anything you ask."

"And you do not care for them?"

"No."

He drew his breath sharply, his round face rosy.

"Then you have got to listen to me, for I'm deadly in earnest. I'm an old, rough, bald-headed fool that don't know much about women—I never thought before I'd ever want to—but you can bet on one thing, I'm square. Anybody in this town will tell you I'm square. They'll tell you that whatever I say goes. I've never run around much with women; somehow I never smoothly liked the kind I've come up against, and maybe they didn't feel any particular interest in me. I didn't cut much shine as a ladies man, but, I reckon now, it's only because the right one hadn't happened along. She is here now, though, all right, and I know it the very first time I set eyes on her. Oh, you roped and tied me all right the first throw. Maybe I did get you and that half-sister mixed up a bit, but just the same you were the one I really wanted. Hope's all right; she's a mighty fine girl, but you are the one for me, Christie. Could you—could you care for such a duffer as I am?"

Her lips were smiling and so were her eyes, but it was a pleading smile.

"I—I don't think it would be so very hard," she admitted, "not if you really wanted me to."

"You know what I mean—that I love you—wish you to be my wife?"

"I supposed that was it—that—that you wanted me."

"Yes, and—and you will love me?"

Her head drooped slowly, so slowly he did not realise the significance of her action, until her lips touched his hand.

"I do," she said, "you are the best man in the world."

Fairbain could not move, could not seem to realise what it all meant. The outcome had been so sudden, so surprising, that all power of expression deserted him. In bewilderment he lifted her face, and looked into her eyes. Perhaps she realised—with the swife intuition of a clever woman—the man's perplexity, for instantly she led his mind to other things.

"But let us not talk of ourselves any more to-night. There is so much I wish to know; so much that ought to be done." She sprang to her feet. "Why, it is almost shameful for us to stay here, selfishly happy, while others are in such trouble. Have they discovered Hope?"

"No; we scoured the whole town and found no trace. Now they are outside on the prairie, but there can be little chance of their picking up a trail before daylight."

"And Hawley?"

"He has vanished also; without doubt they are together. What do you suppose he can want of her? How do you imagine he ever got her to go with him? She isn't that sort of a girl."

She shook her head, shivering a little.

"He must have mistaken her for me—perhaps has not even yet discovered his mistake. But what it all means, or how he gained her consent to go with him, I cannot conceive."

"There is a little light showing already," she exclaimed, pointing. "See, yonder. Oh, I trust they will find her alive, and unhurt. That man, I believe, is capable of any crime. But couldn't you be of some help? Why should you remain here with me? I am in no danger."

"You really wish me to go, Christie?"

"Not that way—not that way," and she turned impulsively, with hands outstretched. "Of course I want you here with me, but I want you to help bring Hope back."

He drew her to him, supremely happy now, every feeling of embarrassment lost in complete certainty of possession.

"And I will," he said solemnly. "Wherever they may have gone I shall follow. I am going now, dear, and when I come back you'll be glad to see me?"

"Shall I?" her eyes uplifted to his own, and swimming in tears. "I will be the happiest girl in all the world, I reckon. Oh, what a night this has been! What a wonderful night! It has given me a name, a mother, and the man I love."

He kissed her, not in passion, but in simple tenderness, and as he turned away she sank upon her knees at the window, with head bowed upon the sill. At the door he paused, and looked back, and she turned, and smiled at him. Then he went out, and she knelt there silently, gazing forth into the dawn, her eyes blurred with tears—facing a new day, and a new life.

CHAPTER XXXIII.
FOLLOWING THE TRAIL.

The withdrawal of the sheriff merely stimulated Keith to greater activity. It was clearly evident the fugitives were endeavouring with all rapidity possible to get beyond where the hand of law could reach them—their trail striking directly across the plains into the barren south-west was proof of this purpose. Yet it was scarcely likely they would proceed very far in that direction, as such a course would bring them straight into the heart of the Indian country, into greater danger than that from which they fled. Keith felt no doubt that Hawley intended making for Carson City, where he could securely hide the girl, and where he possessed friends to rally to his defence, even an influence over the officers of the law. The one thing which puzzled him most was the man's object in attempting so desperate a venture. Did he know his prisoner was Hope Waite, or did he still suppose he was running off with Christie Maclaire? Could some rumour of Waite's appeal to the courts have reached the gambler, frightened him, and caused him to attempt this desperate effort at escape? And did he bear Miss Maclaire with him, hoping thus to keep her safely concealed until he was better prepared to come out in open fight? If this was the actual state of affairs then it would account for much otherwise hard to explain. The actress would probably not have been missed, or, at least, seriously sought after, until she failed to appear at the theatre the following evening. This delay would give the fugitives a start of twenty hours, or even more, and practically assure their safety. Besides, in the light of Waite's application to the sheriff for assistance, it was comparatively easy to conceive of a valid reason why Hawley should vanish, and desire, likewise, to take Miss Maclaire with him. But there was no apparent occasion for his forcible abduction of Hope. Of course, he might have done so from a suddenly aroused fit of anger at some discovery the girl had made, yet everything pointed rather to a deliberate plan. Both horses and men were certainly waiting there under orders, Hawley's adherents in charge, and every arrangement perfected in advance. Clearly enough, the gambler had planned it all out before he ever went to the Trocadero—no doubt the completion of these final arrangements was what delayed his appearance at the hotel. If this was all true, then it must have been Christie, and not Hope, he proposed bearing away with him, and the latter was merely a victim of her masquerade.

What would result when the man discovered his mistake? Such a discovery could not be delayed long, although the girl was quick-witted, and would surely realise that her personal safety depended upon keeping up the deception to the last possible moment. Yet the discovery must finally occur, and there was no guessing what form Hawley's rage would assume when he found himself baffled, and all his plans for a fortune overturned. Keith fully realised Hope's peril, and his own helplessness to serve her in this emergency was agony. As they hurried back to the town, he briefly reviewed these conclusions with Waite and Fairbain, all alike agreeing there was nothing remaining for them to do except to take up the trail. The fugitives had already gained too great an advantage to be overhauled, but they might be traced to whatever point they were heading for. In spite of the start being so far to the west, Keith was firmly convinced that their destination would prove to be Carson City.

Procuring horses at the corral, their forces augmented by two volunteers—both men of experience—Keith, Waite, Fairbain, and Neb departed without delay, not even pausing to eat, but taking the necessary food with them. The sun had barely risen when they took up the trail, Keith, and a man named Bristoe, slightly in advance, their keen eyes marking every slight sign left for guidance across the bare plain. It was a comparatively easy trail to follow, leading directly into the south-west, the pony tracks cutting into the sod as though the reckless riders had bunched together, their horses trotting rapidly. Evidently no attempt had been made at concealment, and this served to convince the pursuers that Hawley still believed his captive to be Miss Maclaire, and that her disappearance would not be suspected until after nightfall. In that case the trail could not be discovered before the following morning, and with such a start, pursuit would be useless. Tireless, steadily, scarcely speaking except upon the business in hand, the pursuers pressed forward at an easy trot, Keith, in spite of intense anxiety with the remembrance of old cavalry days to guide him, insisting upon sparing the horses as much as possible. This was to be a stern chase and a long one, and it was impossible to tell when they could procure remounts. The constant swerving of the trail westward seemed to shatter his earlier theory, and brought him greater uneasiness. Finally he spoke of it to the old plainsman beside him.

"What do you suppose those fellows are heading so far west for, Ben They are taking a big risk of running into hostiles."

"Oh, I don't know," returned the other gravely, lifting his eyes to the far-off sky line. "I reckon from the news thet come in last night from Hays, thar ain't no Injuns a rangin' thet way jist now. They're too blame busy out on the Arickaree. Maybe them fellers heerd the same story, an' thet's what makes 'em so bold."

"What story? I've heard nothing."

"Why, it's like this, Cap," drawling out the words, "leastways, thet's how it come inter Sheridan; 'Sandy' Forsythe an' his outfit, mostly plainsmen, started a while ago across Solomon River an' down Beaver Crick, headin' fer Fort Wallace. Over on the Arickaree, the whole d——d Injun outfit jumped 'em. From all I heerd, that must a been nigh onto three thousan' o' the varmints, droppin' on 'em all at oncet, hell-bent-fer-election, with ol' Roman Nose a leadin' 'em. It was shore a good fight, fer the scouts got on to an island an' stopped the bucks. Two of the fellers got through to Wallace yist'day, an' a courier brought the news in ter Hays. The Injuns had them boys cooped up thar fer eight days before them fellers got out, an' I reckon it'll be two or three days more 'fore the nigger sogers they sent out ter help ever git thar. So thar won't be no Injuns 'long 'this route we're travellin', fer the whole kit and caboodle are up thar yit after 'Sandy.'"

"And you suppose Hawley knew about this?"

"Why not, Cap? He was hangin' 'round till after ten o'clock las' night, an' it was all over town by then. 'Tain't likely he's got an outfit 'long with him thet's lost any Injuns. I don't know whar they're bound, no mor'n you do, but I reckon they're reasonably sure they've got a clar road."

They pulled up on the banks of a small stream to water their horses, and ate hastily. The trail led directly across, and with only the slightest possible delay they forded the shallow water, and mounted the opposite bank. A hundred yards farther on, Bristoe reined up suddenly, pointing down at the trail.

Service Must Speak

A STORE is almost human. It is full of temperament. It affects each customer with the composite personality of its management and staff.

There are stores and stores. There are "grouchy" stores and "smiling" stores. There are flippant stores and dignified stores. And the peculiar thing about each is that the goods or the prices have little to do with the store's temperament. It is the personality of the store that colors and defines the character of the goods from the customer's view-point and wins or repels approval.

The temperament or personality of a store is vividly expressed in its face. The face of a store is its advertising. You can judge a store by its advertising the same as you can judge a man by his facial expression.

Stores that honestly try to serve their customers best simply can't help advertising. It is the way of human nature that when we have spent the best of our brain power and physical and financial resources in building up something worth while, our enthusiasm bursts forth into publicity. We simply cannot restrain the desire to tell others about it.

In the long run, service is what you pay for, always. The goods, as goods alone, are incidental. Service implies quality, fair prices, safe treatment, and honesty in every detail of every transaction.

The service store is the "serving" store. It is also the honest-advertising store. By this, you may know it always—anywhere.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or through the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Bldg., Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

Had Boils On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But, but No Relief Until He Used Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Batten, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

Cheese Factory Is Re-opened

Interesting Items From Young's Point—Navigation Co. Preparing for Season

Special to The Examiner:

YOUNG'S POINT, May 13.—Messrs. Walter Young and Wm. Walsh have gone to Calgary, Alta., for the summer.

The cheese factory has opened again for the season under the management of the same maker, Mr. Andy Wilson.

Mr. Andrew Smith, school teacher, who has been ill the past two weeks, will resume duties again shortly.

Mr. Richard Heard, formerly of the Point, who is now residing in Peterborough, payed us a visit this week.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Co. are overhauling and painting their steamers for the coming season, and the majority of the old employees are on duty again.

The water here was extremely high this spring; in fact, it was the highest in twelve years. It was reported in Peterborough and Lakefield at one time that the dam was in danger here, but there is no fear of the structure giving way. It is an old structure, and the Government decided to build a new one here a year ago; in fact, bought the gravel and had it delved at the dam. There should be a new one constructed, and built higher so as to control Clear Lake in the spring. Clear Lake is overflooded in one place, coming down over land to the dam here, so that also requires attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brooks have opened South Beach for the season. Mr. Brooks and his sons have been cleaning up the hotel and grounds during the past week previous to the opening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kearney have opened the Lake View for the coming season. They did some repairing and painting, so that this old-established summer resort will be run in first-class shape this season, and the island in front will be made more comfortable for guests.

Navigation has opened at last, and there are quite a number of lockages every day.

The country looks splendid considering the long cold spring, and if we escape frost it will be a bumper year for the farmers.

Life Saving Drill On Ocean Steamships

by JANE McPHERSON

WHEN a great calamity of the magnitude of the "Titanic" Disaster comes to us, we feel our faith in ships and safety appliances shaken, if not altogether lost. We inquire of those who should know, "Can we not make our ships safer? Is it not possible to protect life on the ocean? What more can be done for additional safety and to prevent a reoccurrence of such a terrible tragedy as that which has so recently filled all our hearts with grief?" Let us hope the awful lesson we have had will result in more careful navigation and in the equipping of our ships with additional safety appliances, which will protect life. After all has been done, when the most perfect appliances that the brain of man can devise are installed, even then we are still dependent upon the men who command, for I do not think it possible for man to design any ship small or large that can strike an iceberg or a rock at full speed of 18 knots an hour or over and float. Safety must be the first consideration and not speed, if we are to avoid disaster and death.

It was a lovely Thursday afternoon last summer, when my aunt and I were staying at the beautiful Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, and she suggested that we visit the "Empress of Britain" then in port. It just happened that we had the privilege of seeing the crew being put through their usual life saving drill, which takes place every Thursday when these boats are in port. Every man on board is mustered, and is instructed in case of accident what he should do and where he must report for service. It is very interesting to see the life boats manned, lowered and rowed around the ship, also to see the great collision mat quickly put over an imaginery hole in the side of the ship, and to watch the men rush with hose, buckets and blankets to put out an imaginery fire. There was no hesitating or inattention, every man seemed to understand just what was expected of him and performed his part with precision and pride.

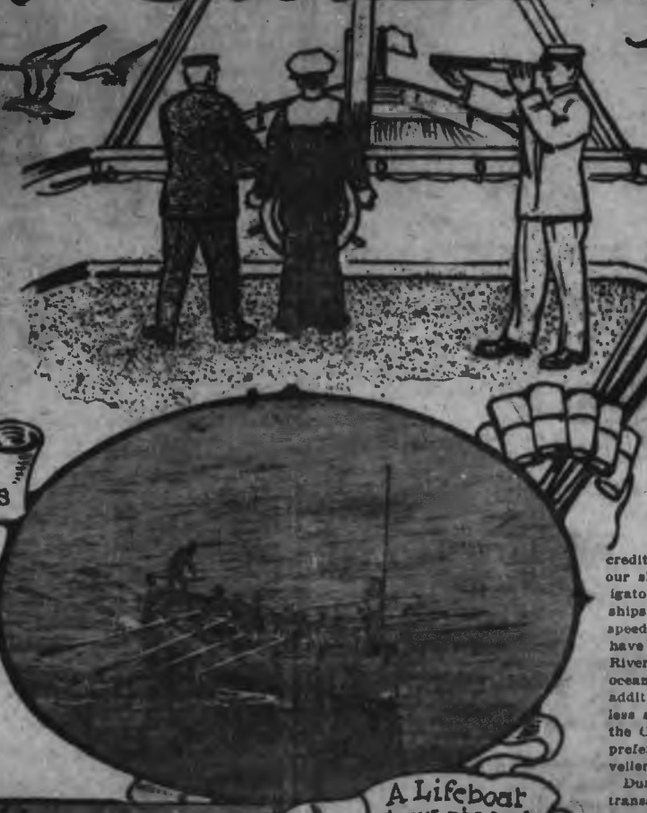
In this safety drill the watertight compartments are closed and opened a number of times to test their mechanism and to see if they are working properly. All of the life boats, of which there are enough to accommodate both passengers and crew, are kept provisioned with biscuits and water enough to last several days.

We were informed that three-fourths of the crew have been in this ship since she was launched, and that all of them look forward to earning a life pension for long service, the minimum of which is twenty dollars per month. There appeared to be a pride in their work and every man spoke of the ship as if he thought her to be the most wonderful thing afloat. It is really marvellous how a sailor loves his ship.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company have for some time been trying to minimize the possibility of danger and believe in providing all possible protection to their passengers and ships. The public must not forget that the safety of ocean travel has advanced greatly during the past twenty years, and the risk attending an ocean voyage is after all comparatively small.

The progress of shipbuilding has advanced wonderfully since the advent of steam navigation and will continue to advance, but with all the progress that mankind is capable of attaining, speed will always be a menace to safety, and the ultimate result of such a catastrophy as we have recently suffered will be a warning long to be remembered, that no matter how big the ship, care and every precaution must be taken to guard the lives of passengers.

Launching the Lifeboats



A Lifeboat Crew at Work

A Wireless Telegraph Room.

Crew at Boat Stations.

We had a look into the wireless room. How important a part it played in the recent disaster. As a Canadian I felt considerable pride in the fact that Canada was the first country to take this great invention seriously and encourage the inventor Marconi by giving him an order for installation of government stations to protect ships coming up our great River St. Lawrence. Just here let me divert for a little and tell you that at a great banquet given recently in New York, there were three guests of the evening, Marconi, who received his first assistance from Canada, Edison, who sold papers on a Canadian train in his youth, and Dr. Graham Bell, the distinguished Canadian who made the telephone famous and as a Canadian I felt proud of our connection with these great men and I did not fail to tell my United States friends of Canada's pride in what these great inventors had done for the world.

When I go to Europe I want to go again via the St. Lawrence route. That two days on the St. Lawrence river makes one feel like a real sailor, and I like the less than four days at sea. One has a chance to get accustomed to the ship before the open sea is encountered. Then again there is less fog on the northern route and also less danger of collision, and it is much the shorter route.

When passing the officers' quarters I peeped into one of the officers' cabins and saw a motto there that I liked. It was "Safety First." I have a dear old sea friend, an old captain who once told me that he would rather go to sea on a poor ship, with a good captain in charge than on a good ship with a poor captain in command. He said he feels safer and sleeps better when he knows there is a good captain in charge of the ship.

Later on I was made acquainted with the submarine telephone, another new invention, by which sounds under the water can be heard for twenty miles. By means of this invention the officers of the ship are notified when another ship enters the zone covered by the instrument, and are then able to shape the course of the ship accordingly. The invention also tells the approach to land, by means of the submarine bells installed for the purpose of warning ships of rocks and guiding them in the right channel.

The Empresses have also a powerful searchlight, which is always ready for service when required.

These few life saving features briefly described prove that this transportation company is making every provision to protect life and property.

Statistics prove that crossing the ocean by Canadian Atlantic Steamship Lines is not a hazardous journey. Indeed, this route has been remarkably free from serious disasters. Great credit is due to the Captains of our ships, who are careful navigators, and the fact that our ships do not travel at excessive speed, and then, in addition, we have the beautiful St. Lawrence River trip and much the shorter ocean voyage, which, with the additional safety by reason of less speed, are the reasons why the Canadian route is given the preference by experienced travellers.

During the last few years transatlantic travel via Canadian Steamship Lines has increased wonderfully. Nineteen hundred and eleven was a big year in steamship circles and so was the previous year, but there is every reason to believe that they were comparatively poor years compared with these to come. Most people are fairly familiar with the huge number of new settlers being annually transported from Great Britain to the Dominion by Canadian steamship lines, but everybody does not realize the extent of the traffic in the other direction.

Submarine Signal Room on board Atlantic Empress

More and more people travel by the Canadian lines to Europe each year, and it is rapidly becoming the more popular route. I have asked many people, who, like myself, have travelled both routes, as to which they preferred in going abroad, and almost invariably they have answered, "via Quebec."

WHAT OTHERS ARE DOING IN THE FIGHT AGAINST CONSUMPTION

(Written for the Examiner By Roy Gilray)

The campaign against tuberculosis which is stirring Peterborough from one end to the other is not a new idea by any means. We are simply following the example set by other municipalities and organizations which for years have been trying to stop the onward march of the dread White Plague.

The inroads of this fell monster are so terrible and cause such distress among its victims that anyone who has the interests of humanity at heart must realise the need of concerted action, and that without delay.

In prosecuting any great work of this kind it is always well to compare notes and see what others are doing in a like cause.

In Toronto the Heather Club, an association which had its origin among the nurses who were connected with the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children, has been aiding in the work against tuberculosis among children of 14 years and under. Their work consists in instructing mothers in the care of the patient and how to prevent the spread of the disease to other members of the family.

They also provide suitable nourishment and clothing when the patients cannot afford to pay for the same.

At first the members, in turn, devoted their spare hours to visiting the homes of their patients, but as the work grew they found it necessary to employ a visiting nurse who should devote her whole time to it.

Such is the plan to be followed by the Health Association in Peterborough.

In Kingston the Board of Governors of the General Hospital are erecting a building to be known as the Sir Oliver Mowat Memorial Hospital, for the treatment of tuberculosis. The cost of the building will be about $25,000.

St. Catharines has built, and has in operation, a Hospital for Consumptives which is of sufficient capacity to meet all the requirements of the city and neighbourhood.

Ottawa has secured the establishment of what is known as the Lady Grey Hospital for advanced cases of tuberculosis. The Hospital is a large and handsome building which stands on a prominent site in the city, and which, finished and furnished, cost about $50,000.

Early in the year 1905 a few ladies of the City of Montreal became interested in the possibility of assisting in the suppression of tuberculosis by establishing a convalescent home in the Laurentian Mountains near the village of Ste. Agathe, P.Q., where persons could be sent who were recovering from typhoid fever, pleurisy, grippe, pneumonia, or any disease which made them susceptible to tuberculosis, and whose environment did not contribute fresh air and a nourishing diet. The need of such an institution had been long felt by physicians, but had not been practically presented until Dr. Arthur J. Richer, a noted specialist on tuberculosis, suggested plans of the house, and offered his services gratuitously as the consulting and attending physician, spending a portion of his time in Montreal as well as at Ste. Agathe.

A quarter of a century ago there were but few people who believed tuberculosis to be a curable disease. To-day the evidence of its curability is sufficient to convince the most sceptical. When Brehmer founded his sanatorium at Goerbersdorf, Germany, in 1859, for the purpose of curing tuberculosis, he was laughed at by his associates, who even thought he was insane. To-day there are over one hundred sanatoria in his native land, and they are springing up everywhere throughout the civilised world. Not only is tuberculosis curable, but it is the most curable of all chronic diseases, provided it is taken in time.

Until recently no effort was made in Canada to grasp the elemental principle that prevention must be the saving force, if the disease is to be mastered. The bucket of water at the beginning of the fire is the same method of saving a burning house; indeed, all reform is working along this line, and rescue work, moral and physical, is being superseded by preventative work, and the elimination of causes is the active agency towards bettering all conditions.

The "Rest" is beautifully located in among the mountains, about 1,500 feet above sea level, near Lake Bruille. The patients are required to remain outdoors eight hours a day, are given three full meals and two luncheons each day.

The results have exceeded their expectations, for, with very few exceptions, in which cases there were complications, the patients have returned to their homes and their occupations fully recovered.

Since the inauguration of the Brehmer Rest, a splendid new Sanatorium has taken shape under the fostering care of The Laurentian Society for the Treatment and Control of Tuberculosis, which has a farm of 160 acres of highly suitable land in the village of Ste. Agathe.

The idea originated in the minds of Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon and Dr. H. M. Kinghorn, of Montreal, who were impressed with the large number of people from Canada who were being treated in the United States owing to lack of accommodation in their own country. The total cost of the Sanatorium, which is being fitted up on an elaborate scale, will be in the neighbourhood of $100,000.

In 1909 a number of patriotic citizens of the City of London conceived the idea of an institution for tuberculosis similar to those at Gravenhurst, Weston and Hamilton. Subscriptions were solicited, and an energetic canvass, led by the Hon. Adam Beck, resulted in $10,000 being raised. The City granted in addition $5,000, and the Government of Ontario made the usual grant of $4,000.

A most up-to-date Sanatorium was erected at Byron on a high bank of the River Thames, overlooking the pretty village of Byron. It has an elevation of 850 feet, and consists of 135 acres, 50 of which are well watered, the balance being under cultivation.

The ladies of London, under the leadership of Mrs. Beck, held a "Made-in-London" Exhibition, which was well patronized by the citizens, and as a result almost $2,000 was raised for equipment.

What others have done we can do.

However, we are not undertaking too much to start with, simply striving to make the initial step—the appointment of a District Nurse. We are not even attempting to open a Dispensary. That will come in due course.

But we must establish the work on a permanent basis, which means that our present effort must provide enough funds to last at least three or four years.

Therefore, no citizen can afford to "rest on his oars"; instead, the hearty co-operation of each one is necessary if the venture is to prove a success.

WOMAN SHERLOCK HOLMES TERROR OF CRIMINALS

Mrs. Mary E. Holland is the best-known woman detective of two continents—probably the most famous female doctor of crime in the world. She is—irrespective of sex—amongst the foremost authorities on the thumb-print system of identification, and has just declared, when cross-examined by an attorney during a murder trial, that the possibilities of two thumb prints being identical average one in 64,000,000. Mrs. Holland has her own private collection of thumb prints and photographs of noted law breakers, which number close upon 15,000, the majority of which she has gathered first hand.

Mrs. Holland displayed her own special little apparatus for taking a thumb print. It is certainly simple enough. The entire outfit consists only of a small copper roller, an inked pad, and a sheet of white paper. I allowed the genial lady—she looks absolutely mild and harmless (which possibly accounts for some of her success) to take my thumb print on her promising not to place it among the collection devoted to men and women who had been arrested for violent acts ranging from murder to common assault.

"M. Bertillon himself gave me instruction in his unique method of thief-catching," said Mrs. Holland, "but it was some time before I was able to put the knowledge I thus gained to practical use. However, soon after I returned to Chicago, a terrible murder was committed in an automobile. I was then employed by the Chicago police, and was sent by them to look into the case. The first thing I did was to carefully examine the automobile. I went over the machine with a strong magnifying glass, and to my intense joy I discovered the imprint of the murderer's hand. I was also successful in proving that a double crime had been committed through the discovery on the automobile of two distinct shades of blood. This was one of my first big cases, and I succeeded in handling it so well that I was constantly employed on important police mysteries afterward.

"Referring to these thumb impressions," continued Mrs. Holland, "I always endeavour if possible to take them myself. Usually a prisoner is a little averse to submitting to this form of identification, though if he is innocent it is all in his favour. One prisoner, whose guilt was absolutely proved, endeavoured to evade identification by mutilating his thumb, but he might have saved himself the trouble, for when the wound heals the marks of the thumb remain exactly as before. It is absolutely impossible to change their appearance."

Mrs. Holland has traced down murderers and other criminals in every capital in Europe, and she is known to the police in every civilised country of the globe. She has been retained on cases in London, Paris, Madrid, Africa, Australia, and India. She possesses a wonderful collection of interesting souvenirs connected with some of the greatest crimes committed during the last fifteen years. She hopes one day to open a museum, for she possesses many things that are new to the profession.

When engaged in her work Mrs. Holland is as keen as ever Sherlock Holmes was, and she will never give up a case until she or someone else has run the quarry to earth. She has spent months on a case which the police have given up as hopeless, and has reached success in the end. On many occasions she has worked 24 hours on a stretch, and then only slept for an hour. But aside from her detective work she has literary talents, and with her husband "Phil" Holland, edits the Detective, the official police magazine of America.

HAVE YOU BEEN BITTEN BY THE MOTOR BOAT BUG?

Written for The Examiner by Roy Gilray

Scientists are always discovering new germs which prey upon poor, frail humanity. A few years ago a new variety was brought to light, and has developed with amazing rapidity. It usually attacks the male portion of the population, but some isolated cases have been known where the female of the species was suffering from the effects of the same "bug." However, it has been carefully traced and proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that it was contracted by breathing the highly-charged breath of the male.

It is a germ that cannot be easily seen at work, but its symptoms are unmistakeable. The patient is not confined to the house, nor even to his bed; on the contrary, he seems to shun home comforts, and if carefully watched will be seen spooking around the river, the lake shores, or the steamer wharves, dreaming, absent-mindedly, by the hour. He seems oblivious to his former surroundings, and resents being disturbed in his reveries. By rare tact, a wise wife will not cross the afflicted one during the inception of the malady. The proper caper is to preserve absolute silence, and calmly await developments. He will, if let alone, utter various incoherent sounds—or, at times, even thoughts—which are proof positive that he is the unfortunate victim of this new disease.

In the very early spring he will slip off with a magnifying glass in a vain search for a blade of grass, evidently snooping around for signs of spring. He will likely talk of ice jams and floods. If he chatters on one topic, such as boats, channels, engines, etc., until his dearest friends begin to shun him; if he rolls and tosses at night, perspiring fearfully, and awakens up with a start or splutter; if he gives up his ordinary reading for that of catalogues and divers hints to motor-boat enthusiasts, using up his wife's fine stationery in ordering boat magazines; if he fills the bath tub and works well into the night with a book in one hand and a toy boat in the other, swishing it along in the water; if you have to call in the assistance of the neighbour and try the X-rays on his head; and if the doctor declares something has bitten him on the "bean," it simply proves he has fallen a prey to the Motorboat Bug.

Above all things be patient with him, for if the progress of the fever be checked it might produce disastrous results to all concerned. Poor fellow, he cannot help it; he is simply obeying the call of spring.

Spring, whose soft breath brings joy to the woodland, the meadows, the hills and the seas, whose sunlight fills the days with gladness, warms our cold earth's bosom, and brings into life the robin, the pussywillow, the honeysuckle, the honey bee, and the Motorboat Bug—yes, spring is here. Each from their winter's nap, each from its accustomed haunt, the sunny southland, the frozen wayside, the slumbering hive, and the bust boat shop—the bug of all bugs—the Motorboat Bug is here.

It is spring, and the water calls.

If your hubby is so unfortunate as to have a second attack, the germ doing the mischief this time is a member of the same family, but has a different name. This time it is the "Speed Bug." He will be seen poring over such advertisements as the following:

"Yes! You Mr. Man, bitten by the 'Speed Bug.' You can go faster than a hoop snake after a rabbit if your boat has a Ring-tail Snorter engine in it. Did you ever think what it means to have thick concentrated power boiled down and squeezed into a little iron 'coffee pot' that weighs only a few pounds and doesn't take up as much room as a pint of peanuts. Bill Jones never had a better engine than his R.T. Snorter, and you, Mr. Man, can have just as good luck as Bill. Dig that faded two-cent stamp out of your vest pocket, and stick it on to one of your wife's envelopes this very evening. Our catalogue is worth more than any fifteen-cent magazine, and you can have it for the asking."

If it is his third season to contract the fever, the new bug will be known as the "Stunt Bug."

It usually manifests itself as follows: The scene, we will say, is about five miles this side of Jubilee Point. The spark plug becomes cranky, and the wrench is produced. Well, to make a long story short, the wrench slips and breaks the glass on the oiler. The language that flows is not worth repeating here. One thing is sure; it was not lubricating oil. The instruction book says, "Sit down and calmly think it over." After several moments of solemn deliberation the "Stunt Bug" hits him square on the head, and whispers, "Why don't you try what you have many times read—put your lubricating oil in the gasoline tank?"

In a few seconds your new saucepan is brought out of the lunch basket and he pours that "dirty oil" into your nice clean pan—(but you dare not say a word)—and transfers it in triumph to the tank. With great gusto he gives the fly wheel a shake, and you arrive home safe and sound with a little bluish smoke at the exhaust, and the engine cool and free.

After that the oil holes are plugged up and the oilers thrown away, and one pint of oil mixed thoroughly with five gallons of gasoline before putting into the tank.

In other words, your husband has been bitten by the "Stunt Bug."

ORANGE MARMALADE.

Now while oranges are plentiful is the best time to make orange marmalade to sell. I use the following recipe, keeping the proportion, but making it in much larger quantities:

Quarter three oranges (navels are best), and three lemons, leaving rinds on; slice thin, cover with two and one-half pints of water, and let stand twelve hours; then cook in same water for twenty minutes. Then for every cup of this mixture add a cup of granulated sugar, let boil fifteen minutes longer. Put in glasses and cover with thin coating of melted paraffin wax.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of Seventeen Conservatives Elected.

Montreal, May 17.—Yesterday the victory of the Gouin Government in the elections which took place Wednesday has been made more complete. The latest figures of the results are as follows:

Liberals, 62.
Conservatives, 17.
Elections to be held, 2.
Liberal majority, 45.

In the last House the standing of the parties was:

Liberals, 58; Conservatives, 16. Eight new seats have been added since the last election.

A small vote was cast practically all over the province, in some places not fifty per cent. of those on the voters' lists troubling to cast their ballots.

To Double Capital?

New York, May 17.—The New York World says this morning:

The stock of the Canadian Pacific Railroad sold yesterday at 270 a share, an advance of about 20 points within the last month. The rise is supposed to be due to a plan of the company to distribute it assets by doubling the present capitalization, which is $237,000,000. Another reason for this increase in capital is that the road has an agreement with the Canadian Government to reduce the freight rates whenever its dividend is raised above 10 per cent. The earnings of the company for several years have justified this increase. The plan is to pay 6 per cent. on the increased capital, equivalent to 12 per cent. on the old stock.

The Brown Clan.

Ever since 1789 there has existed a charitable society in Glasgow known as the Browns Society. The number on the roll at the present moment is 200, or only two-fifths of the strength of the Brown clan as recorded in the city directory. This number is probably not more than a tenth of the actual Brown "residenters," a dreadful word, as Prof. Masson used to say. The society is not restricted to Browns only; husbands, wives, or descendants of Browns are eligible for membership. Of the twelve members comprising the directorate ten are Browns.

Money Trust Lent to Brazil to Limit Coffee Supply.

Washington, May 17.—The first illustration of the activity of the so-called money trust given to the House investigating committee yesterday was testimony that three New York banking institutions, the National City Bank, J. P. Morgan & Co. and the First National Bank, lent financial assistance to the Government of Brazil to limit the output of coffee and maintain prices of coffee at a profitable figure for the benefit of Brazilian planters and American and European coffee dealers. This testimony came from Herman Stellhorn of the New York firm of Ortmann & Stellhorn, large dealers in green coffee. Mr. Stellhorn was on the stand for more than three hours and his testimony was the first real information given to the committee.

Mr. Stellhorn questioned the propriety of the committee going into Brazil's affairs and challenged the Attorney-General of the United States and all the attorneys of the country to discover any illegality in his actions as a coffee merchant.

The witness said that unless something had been done to help the planters of Brazil there might have been a revolution. The price of coffee had grown so low through over-production that the Brazilian Government exercised its right to encourage planters to diversify their crops.

"Which would have been the worst, revolution in Sao Paulo or for the consumers of this country to pay much more for all of their coffee?" asked Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the committee.

"You would have had to pay that anyhow," said Mr. Stellhorn.

He argued that coffee would be still higher if the valorization scheme had not been put into operation.

Mr. Untermyer read from tables to show that the production of coffee for several years amounted to but 6,000,000 bags and that it sold at from 6 1-2 to 7 cents a pound. Now the production was 14,000,000 bags and the price was between 13 and 14 cents a pound.

Mr. Stellhorn testified that there were 4,000,000 bags of coffee now being held out of the market by the valorization committee of seven, of which he is a member. Of that amount 500,000 bags were in warehouses in New York.

The big loan by which the valorization scheme was floated was $80,000,000. English, German, French and Belgian bankers took $65,000,000 of it through J. H. Schreider of London, who sold to the National City Bank $10,000,000. This amount was pro-rated between the Morgan firm, the National City and the First National.

a Joke.

Some years ago in a North Carolina court, Judge Shipp presiding, the trial of a cause had been protracted till near midnight. The jury were tired and sleepy and showed flagging attention. Willie Murchison, who was addressing the jury, thought to arouse them, so he said, "Gentlemen, I will tell you an anecdote." Instantly the judge, the jury and the few spectators pricked up their ears and were all attention, as Murchison was admirable in that line, had a fund of anecdotes and no one could tell them better. But he soon proceeded to tell one of the dullest, prosiest and most pointless jokes possible. Everybody looked disappointed. The judge, leaning over, said in an unmistakable tone of disappointment, "Mr. Murchison, I don't see the point of that joke." "Nor I either," replied the witty counsel. "But your honor told it to me on our way down here, and as I thought the lack of appreciation must be due to my obtuseness I concluded to give the joke a trial by jury."

Remarkable Feats of Strength.

Louis de Bouffiers, who lived in the sixteenth century, could break a bar of iron with his hands. The strongest man could not take from him a ball which he held between his thumb and first finger. While standing up, with no support whatever, four strong soldiers could not move him. He remained as firm as a rock. Sometimes he amused himself by taking on his shoulders his own horse, fully harnessed, and with that heavy load he promenaded the public square, to the great delight of the inhabitants. At about the same time there lived a Spaniard named Piedro, who could break the strongest handcuffs that could be put around his wrists. He folded his arms on his chest, and ten men pulling in different directions with ropes could not unfold them. Augustus II., elector of Saxony, was a man of great strength. He could carry a man in his open hand.

The Puppy's Fault.

An enthusiastic feminist is entertaining friends by reading the lines which Sheridan indited to the puppy with a canister tied to its tail. Lord Erskine, it appears, had likened wives to that same canister, and, Lady Erskine being justly annoyed by the remark, Sheridan dashed off the following impromptu:

Lord Erskine, at woman presuming to rail,
Called a wife a tin canister tied to one's tail.
And fair Lady Ann while the subject he carries on Seems hurt at his kirkship's degrading comparison.
But wherefore degrading, considered aright?
A canister's polished and useful and bright,
And should dirt its original purity hide,
That's the fault of the puppy to whom it is tied.

Improving.

Mrs. Washington's Gowns.

General Washington wore at his inauguration a full suit of fine cloth, the handiwork of his own household. At a ball given in New Jersey in honor of Mrs. Washington she wore a "simple russet gown" and white handkerchief about her neck. On one occasion she gave the best proof of her success in domestic manufactures by the exhibition of two of her dresses, which were composed of cotton, striped with silk and entirely homemade. The silk stripes in the fabric were woven from the ravelings of brown silk stockings and old crimson chair covers.

Musical Note.

"What's the matter over there in the horn part?" asked Dr. Strauss at a rehearsal.

"I'm sorry, Dr. Strauss," replied the horn player, "but I can not play this passage on the horn. It may be all right on the piano, but"—

MAKES HAIR GROW

McDermid and Jury, druggists, have an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid and Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

The Influence of Flowers.

Centuries ago great, elaborate books were written about flowers, and the kinds even then were many and some of the forms were marvelous. Worship and praise have centered about flowers and garlands rather than about the fruits that we eat. This marks them to have been considered as of the higher things. All holy and great occasions need them if the occasions are complete. Not a soul but responds to blossoms even though he knows it not. No soul passes a lily in blow, an apple orchard in May, a clover field swept with red or a good garden lying at his feet, but that some mere reflection of it enters into his mind and lodges itself in some nexus of the brain. It would be difficult for any man to imagine a flowerless world, and if he conjured it in his dream he would find himself sitting in some oasis of greenery and bloom.—Flower Magazine.

No Parallels in Nature.

The wise men say there are no parallels in nature, that no one thing in the wide universe exactly mates and matches any other one thing, that each cloud has differed from every other cloud form in any hour of the day and night or day or yesterday, and so on back through the forgotten centuries, and no two leaves in form, color or texture lift the same faces to the sun on any day of the millions of years; that no wave on any beach curves and falls as any wave has curved and fallen before, not since this planet cooled. And so it is with the whirls and the crystals of driving snow, with the sand and splash of rain and so, too, with the flight of birds, the dash and tumble of the restless brook and the roar of lawless thunder and the cry of birds.—F. Hopkinson Smith.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Minutes counted for days this afternoon on the board of trade. In a single quarter of an hour values that had required a fortnight to pile up were swept away by a whirl of stop-loss selling. Surprising improvement of the crop outlook was the cause. In all directions from the city the winter wheat prospect is at a high level, the right bottom and with the prospect attention to all other growing crops is proportionate. Wheat—May 97 1-8c, ranged from 96 to 97 3-8c, and closed 1 1-8c lower; July 96 to 97 3-8c, and closed 1 1-8c lower; September 93 1-2c to 94 3-8c, closed 1 1-8c lower.

Liverpool wheat closed ½d lower to ½d higher than yesterday, and corn ½d to ¾d lower. Other European grain exchanges were closed.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 16.—A feature of the local grain trade was the increased demand from country points for Manitoba feed wheat and barley, owing to the very high prices ruling for American corn. The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat is still very limited.

The butter market is fairly active and firm under a good demand from western buyers for supplies, consequently stocks on spot are kept well cleaned up. The cheese situation is strong, there being a good demand from exporters to fill their short sales made some time ago at much lower prices than are ruling now.

Flying Powers of Birds.

The rate at which some birds can migrate under favorable conditions is extraordinary, and as one listens to their plaintive cries coming from the darkness overhead it is difficult to realize that in a few hours these same birds may be within the arctic circle and a little later may be even crossing the pole itself. * * * Less is known of the actual dates of the departure of the migratory birds in autumn than of those of their arrival earlier in the year, and this for obvious reasons. The way in which our most charming songsters silently skulk out of the country in the autumn is very different from that in which they make their triumphal entry in the spring, when every wood and copse resounds with their melodies.—Windsor Magazine.

Have Left For Dallas

TO REPORT ON RETURN

Yesterday morning Mr. H. B. Cowan and Mr. C. F. Hardy, two members of the local Ad. Club, started on their trip for Dallas, Texas, to attend the great convention of business men and advertising men of America, which meets this year in Dallas, and it is expected next year will convene in Toronto.

The importance of this convention and what a delegate may learn while there is in a degree evident, when it is known that men from all over America like these two local citizens of Peterborough travel to this convention their team every encouragement, estaking from ten days to two weeks of their time in order that they may profit in the way of information and knowledge gained while at the convention.

The largest spenders of money for advertising purposes, both from Canada and the United States, meet together with members of the Associated Ad. Clubs of America at this convention to discuss their various problems relating to advertising. The trip to Dallas includes a four day tour of the State of Texas, during which trip all delegates are the guests of the State.

In order that members of the Peterborough Ad. Club and our local business men may learn something of what takes place at Dallas, the club will meet for dinner, possibly Tuesday evening, the first week in June, at which Mr. Hardy and Mr. Cowan will speak of sights they saw and things they learned while on the trip and at the convention.

Stormy Scenes In The Reichstag

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, MAY 17.— There was a stormy scene in the Reichstag to-day, and ministers withdrew when former Vice-President Schneidman, the Socialist, caustically criticised the Kaiser for his recent threat against Alsace Lorraine, and launched into vitriolic attack on the government and Chancellor. The Chancellor, the Foreign Secretary and other ministers present, left the chamber declaring that the president did not protect them and the government from insults.

The anti-German feeling in Alsace Lorraine was fanned to fresh fury by recent manoeuvres on the French border of a squadron of German military aeroplanes, under the command of Prince Henry.

A NEAR HERO

City Editor of the Review Can Sing "For I Was A Hero, Too"

The city editor of the Review jumped into the spotlight this morning by what was intended to be a brilliant rescue of a runaway horse. It was one of the delivery type with covered box wagon. It was coming with the lines seemingly loose, the seat empty and no one in charge. The C. E. dug out his chin from the snug comfort of his raincoat collar, grasped the situation, and decided to attempt one of those rescues which he often described in his writings. Out into the roadway he jumped, splashing the nice soft mud upon his trousers that had been pressed yesterday, and made a grasp for the reins. Just then a voice from beneath the canvas covering yelled, "Get away from the horse's head," and a deed of valour was turned into a joke.

CLAIM THAT THE CHARGES ARE FALSE

Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff Gordon Deny That They Refused to Allow Boat to Return to Pick Up Passengers

MANY AT INQUIRY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MAY 17.—A large number of fashionably dressed women and a great array of lawyers appeared in Lord Mersey's court of enquiry this morning to hear the explanation of Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff Gordon regarding the charges of Seaman Hendericksson that they would not permit the boat to return to pick up the passengers struggling in the water. The Duff Gordons were on hand accompanied by their lawyers, Henry Duke, a highly paid Kings Counsal and members of parliament. In his preliminary remarks the Duke indicated that the Duff Gordons denied charges in toto and would bring other members of the crew to corroborate their evidence It was also intimated that the payment of five pounds to each member of the crew by Duff Gordon was at Hendrickson's suggestion.

Quartermaster Symons, who was in charge of the boat in which the Duff Gordons were saved, said that nobody suggested that the half filled boat go back for more passengers struggling in the water. Later he admitted that Hendrickson might have suggested it, but he took no notice of him. He also made the damaging admission that somebody representing the Duff Gordons had seen him during this week regarding the evidence he was to give at the enquiry. This admission made a profound sensation in court.

PRESENT CONDITION IN FAR EAST

Interesting Information Gleaned From A. W. Lochead, of Honan, Who is in the City To-day

The Rev. Arthur W. Lochead of Honan, China, is in the city to-day. He left China for a vacation before the recent trouble had assumed any serious proportions and is therefore unable to give any opinion on the present situation first hand. He has, however, recently received a copy of the North China Herald and from a few excerpts therefrom, the attitude of the public towards the new administration may be readily observed. An article dealing on the resignation of Dr. Sun Yat Sen says: "It is not yet time to decide whether Dr. Sun Yat Sen has deserved well or ill of his country. There is a tendency at present to view the results of his life's work with something more than doubtfulness and the upheaval which he has engineered has yet to justify itself."

In conclusion the article says: "China is being narrowly watched, and it is hardly to be supposed that those who are watching will acquiesce tamely in another rebellion.

In another article dealing with the Republican cabinet, the opening sentence reads as follows: "The formation of the Provisional Republican cabinet, and its acceptance by the assembly at Nanking, will be hailed with general relief."

The Rev. Mr. Lochead, who was a college chum of Rev. H. J. Keith at the Montreal Presbyterian College, will deliver a sermon in Knox church on Sunday next. He intends returning to China on August 14th.

CINCINATTI, OHIO, MAY 7.— After the country for miles around had been scoured without result, the bodies of Robert and Urban Nicholls, aged four and six, were found dead in a huge feed box in their father's barn. They disappeared three weeks ago and it is supposed they fell into the box and were smothered while playing around the place.

FLOYD ALLEN SENTENCED TO DEATH

Patriarch of Outlaw Gang Will Have to Expiate His Crime Upon the Gallows

LONG JURY DELIBERATIONS

Special to The Examiner.

WYTHEVILLE, VA., MAY 17. — Floyd Allen, the patriarch of the outlaw gang that on March 14th assassinated five persons in Judge Massie's court room at Hillsville, must pay the penalty of hanging for his part in the murders. This was the verdict of the jury brought in to-day when the court opened at 10.30. That "the twelve good men and true" did not arrive at their decision without a bitter fight was indicated by the long time during which they deliberated. The case was given to the jury at 12.51 p.m. yesterday.

DATE IS STILL KEPT A SECRET

However Clarence Richeson Will be Executed Next Week

Special to The Examiner:

BOSTON, MASS., MAY 17—Authorities are carefully keeping secret the exact day and hour next week at which Clarence Richeson will meet his death for the murder of his sweetheart, Avis Linnell, but it is understood it will be very early, as the surgeons fear the prisoner will get another attack of hysterical delirium. Richeson was told to-day of the fact that a commutation of his sentence was now practically impossible. He received the news calmly.

"I AM A FILM"

Sarah Bernhardt has consented at last ,after years of obdurate refusal, to become a film ."I am a film," she writes, in a recent letter. "I am immortal. I rely on the film for my immortality."

This explains, briefly, why theatregoers here will have an opportunity, in a few days, of seeing Bernhardt once more. Through the medium of moving pictures of a type never before achieved, the great actress and her remarkable company will appear in "Camille," and all the great scenes of that powerful drama will be silently presented and silently make its appeal through the genius of Bernhardt.

The stage at the Grand Theatre, where these pictures will be shown, on the evening of the 23rd and 24th of May, with matinees on both days at 2.30, will be the scene of a notable development in the evolution of the cinematograph, as well as in that of the modern stage itself. These pictures reveal the art of Bernhardt perfectly, for there is not a trace of flickering. "They are without mechanical fault," writes the critic of the Baltimore "Sun"; there is not the slightest suggestion of flicker."

Moreover, owing to the absolute steadiness and the brilliance of the pictures thrown on a specially prepared screen with an aluminum facing, the full significance of every action, every gesture, is conveyed; there is atmosphere, passion, verility, extraordinary illusion in them. Audiences in Europe and in London have sat and watched them and been stirred to remarkable demonstrations of enthusiasm. Men and women of authority in the dramatic world have conceded that they constitute a new and effective method of establishing a permanent record of an artist's work.

With the scenes of Bernhardt as "Camille" will be shown others of Mme. Rejane, France's greatest comedienne, as "Mme. Sans-Gene." The latter, like Bernhardt, had a great antipathy to moving pictures for years, but her scruples also have been overcome, and the result has been a film record of Sardou's comedy, which shows Rejane at her best.

The two famous actresses displayed all the excitement of school-girls on the occasion of the first private presentation of the new films. They could hardly contain themselves. And when they finally saw the picture thrown on the screen, and, for the first time in their respective careers, saw themselves acting roles which they have made world-famous, they were almost hysterical in their enthusiasm.

Edmond Rostand, the great poet and dramatist, told Bernhardt that she had ennobled the film. The verdict of the French and London critics is that the "Camille" pictures are unique. For the Canadian tour every care has been taken to ensure the same perfection of presentation as characterised those in Paris and London. The pictures give a faithful reproduction, of a vividness and an atmospheric character wholly surprising, of the remarkable art of two of the greatest stage figures of modern times.

MR. JOS. MANTELL HAS PASSED HIS 104th BIRTHDAY

Former Resident of Peterboro' Now Living in Toronto, is 103 Years and One Week Old on Saturday

A REMARKABLE OLD MAN

One hundred and three years plus one week is the span of life that has already been passed by Mr. Joseph Mantell, formerly of Peterborough and now a resident of Toronto. He passed the century mark while residing in this city and lived here during the next two years. Last summer he moved to Toronto with his grand-daughter Mrs. J. C. Edwards, Mr. Edwards having accepted a position with the MacLean Publishing Co. Apparently, Mr. Mantell is enjoying a second youth. While a resident of Peterborough he possessed a vigour and energy that was a source of wonderment and admiration to those who were acquainted with him. Mr. Mantell is a member of the Masonic Order and is of a certainty one of the oldest Masons in Canada, if not throughout the whole Order.

CRACK SOLOIST IS COMING

Mr. Arthur Taylor, Late of the Irish Guards' Band, to Become a Member of the 57th

A NOTABLE ADDITION

The 57th Regt. Band will receive a notable addition to its membership in the arrival in Peterborough tomorrow from London, Eng., of Mr. Arthur Taylor, an expert trombone siloist. Mr. Taylor is a crack bandsman and musician and will be a source of great strength to the local band. He is a graduate of Kneller Hall in London, was for thirteen years trombone soloist of the East Surrey, Eng., Regiment, and for five years with the Irish Guards Band in London. For the same length of time he was connected with the Drury Lane, London, theatre orchestra.

The Gannon's Narrows floating bridge, which was carried away by the ice this spring, was re-opened for traffic this morning, having been thoroughly repaired. The good work of Mr. Wm. The special C.P.R. constable Pinchin, saw the occurrence and assisted materially in helping them to safety.

NO LIGHT MATTER.

"The case of the Chinaman who claimed $1,000 for having his pigtail cut off by a North West Mounted police officer will come up soon. Some hair-splitting arguments may be looked for from the counsel." —Guelph Mercury.

This affair is much more serious than the policeman or the Mercury supposes. That Chinaman was a Conservtive and by one clip of the shears the policeman made him a Liberal. He was a Royalist, and in a moment, while his back was turned, the policeman transformed him into a Republican. It is no light matter for just when one is devoted to the old order of things is, without his own knowledge or consent, converted into a revolutionist. The pigtail is the badge by which the Chinaman declares himself a monarchist. Cut it off and he is a parliament man.

No Canadian policeman has any right to interfere with a pair of scissors in foreign politics, and it is to be hoped that the affair can be smoothed over without international complications.—Toronto Star.

Patrick Lavery Committed for Trial for an Indictable Offence Which Carries With it a Maximum Penalty of Two Years Imprisonment

A PASSAGE-AT-ARMS

The chief cause of interest in this morning's police court proceedings, was that of Patrick Lavery, who was charged with unlawfully assaulting a police officer, while the latter was attempting to arrest William Lavery, brother of the accused.

The offence is alleged to have taken place on Thursday evening, May 16th, near the corner of George and Charlotte streets, and the officer, upon whom the assault was directed, was P. C. Kane, a recently appointed member of the police force.

The fracas was featured, as usual, by the obstreperous actions of the mob element, who quickly gathered on the scene and threatened to duplicate the performance that was witnessed by a concourse of several hundred people on Hunter street, a few weeks ago, which resulted in a trio of participants being committed to the chateau on the hill for a lengthy period.

Among those who championed the cause of the offenders in Tuesday night's fracas, was a member of the 57th Regiment. It is alleged by several witnesses, who observed the incident, that the said soldier (?) actually attempted to release the prisoner.

A Passage at Arms.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused, and would neither plead or elect for his client. The case had barely gotten under way, when a short passage at arms ensued between the Counsel for the defence and the Magistrate, which resulted in the former leaving the courtroom.

P. C. Kane, the star witness in the case, was first called. He stated that on the evening of the alleged assault he had occasion to arrest William Lavery, as the latter was in a state of intoxication and was very profane in his remarks. Witness took this action after having first advised Lavery to desist and go home. This he refused to do and no other option remained but to place the offender under arrest.

To this Patrick Lavery, brother of the man whom Kane was trying to arrest, objected. A scuffle ensued in which the prisoner took an active part, taking hold of the officer by the coat collar. The arrival of Detective Newhall brought order out of chaos and culminated in Lavery's arrest.

The Beginning of the End.

Mr. G. N. Gordon—"Who laid this charge against Patrick Lavery?"

P. C. Kane—"I laid the charge."

Magistrate— "That's not evidence and I refuse to take it."

Chief—"I don't think that has anything to do with the case."

Counsel for the Defence—"I have a right to cross-examine the witness and establish facts a stated by the witness."

The Magistrate remained obdurate and refused to take the evidence. It transpired that Chief of Police Thompson had laid the charge. The matter was merely reported to him by P. C. Kane. The latter had evidently misinterpreted Mr. Gordon's question.

"Well, if you won't take the evidence, there is nothing for me to do but leave," said Mr. Gordon. With that he departed and the case was left to the tender mercies of the prosecutors.

Other Witnesses Called.

The evidence offered by Detective Newhall corroborated that of the former witness. He stated that when he arrived on the scene a member of the 57th Regiment was attempting to assist the prisoner to escape.

Fred Heward and James Windsor also gave evidence relative to the incident from the standpoint of eye-witnesses.

As the accused would neither plead or elect as to how he would be tried Magistrate Denison committed him to a higher court.

The case will probably be tried by His Honour Judge Brucke in the County Court at a date which has not yet been decided upon.

IMMATURE VEAL IS WORTHLESS

So Declares the Sanitary Inspector in the Course of an Interview in Reference to Recent Seizure

RESEMBLED A RABBIT

Mr. G. A. Spence, sanitary inspector, was interviewed by the Examiner this morning relative to the doubt which exists in the minds of some persons as to whether it is possible to detect immature meat. Mr. Spence emphatically stated that he made the seizure on the man's own admission as to the immaturing of the veal, which was seized by him on the market last Saturday.

"The supernatural, miraculous or occult powers attributed to me by Mr. Thompson and the dealer, according to the Review, for determining the age of veal," said Mr. Spence, "were not called into requisition at all in this case, as the meat was seized and the information laid on the admission of Mr. Thompson's man, who, when asked the age, stated that it was three weeks old.

"If all my sanitary work was as easy as in this particular case the position would be a sinecure."

"How did you know that the meat was under age?"

"I did not swear the meat was under the age limit, but that the seller said it was three weeks old. I think it was nearer three days than three weeks. Ask any butcher the average weight of a hindquarter of veal a month old and compare it with the weight of the hindquarter I seized, and which Mr. Thompson, with all his precaution in the interests of his customers and his twenty years' experience, declares to have been over a month old."

"What was the weight?" queried the interviewer.—"5 lbs. 9 ozs."

A PREVALENT CUSTOM.

This business of selling worthless immature veal is too prevalent, and the public must be protected.

It is a fact that not long since a farmer offered a calf three days old to a butcher in the city. Being a man with conscientious scruples, he threatened to kick the fellow out of the shop, but, doubtless, it was sold to some other less scrupulous butcher.

"Why do you say worthless?"

"Because it is practically worthless as far as nutriment is concerned, especially immature veal."

"But veal is considered a delicacy?"

"Oh, yes, it is a delicacy all right, but all delicacies are not digestible or nutritious, and veal is as indigestible as pork. But there I do not want to give you a dissertation on the value of veal as a food, but you may depend upon it, wherever I see veal more nearly the size of a rabbit than a calf exposed for sale, the owner will have to prove that it is not under the age limit, or put up with the consequences."

A local butcher was questioned as to the average weight of a quarter of veal four months old. "I paid one a few days ago that [illegible] a little over 20 pounds."

This is a startling comparison in weight between those which was seized by the sanitary inspector and that sold by the butcher, which weighed over twenty pou[illegible]

THE PLAGUE OF CATERPILLARS.

Most of us remember the beastly plague of caterpillars we had a few years ago, what damage they did, how they devoured our fruit trees, how they devoured the leaves of the street trees, how they covered the powerpents and were crushed in slimy masses under our feet, how they fell down the back of our necks, how they crawled over our persons, and how in sum they helped us to realize the bitterness and inconveniences of the plagues that fell upon the people of the land of Pharoah, who hardened his heart so often. The city had to take the matter in hand, and large sums of money were spent in fighting the pest.

As with everything else, so with caterpillars; prevention is the best remedy. The tent caterpillar (clisiocampa Americana) begins its life (if there is any beginning of its circle of reproduction) in the form of a moth of brownish colour, which, in the month of July lays its eggs in the form of bands or "bracelets" around the twigs of trees, covered with a sort of varnish to protect the eggs. These eggs hatch out in the spring, just as the buds are opening. The larvae at once begin to spin their web in which they are protected; and during the day they emerge, in thousands to feed upon the leaves. When full grown they are from an inch and a quarter to an inch and a half in length. The worms at maturity enclose themselves in cocoons and go into the chrysalis state. These hatch the brown moth, which lays eggs to be hatched into caterpillars, and so the cycle of reproduction is completed and maintained.

Prevention consists in destroying the chrysalis where it can be found under the ledges of fences, etc., or destroying the eggs and finally in destroying the caterpillars in their tents. This can be done by cutting off the twigs, if the tents are on twigs or by crushing the worms in the tents if in the crutch of large branches. Destroying by means of a torch is not certain; unless the tent is broken the flames cannot enter. The gauzy texture of the tent keeps out flames—on the principle of the Davy safety lamp. If we do not destroy the caterpillars as completely as possible, we shall have more trouble next year, as we have more worms this year than last year.

ORATORICAL EDITORS.

The voice of two crying in the wilderness—two newspaper men trying to make themselves heard above the brass band noises of the presidential nomination dog-fights in the United States. We have two newspaper editors talking to our Yankee cousins. Dr. J. A. Macdonald of the Globe talked to the Erie Board of Trade on "Some International Fundamentals," and Mr. John Lewes of the Toronto Star, addressed the International Arbitration Conference at Lake Mohonk. What is of significance in these cases, is that Canada need not be ashamed of the mental or literary, or oratorical ability of her journalistic missionary representatives. They both made good speeches and both took high ground; both advocated, one directly and the other, indirectly international peace. But it is doubtful if these sermons and others like them, reached so far and penetrated so deeply as if thrust home with the point of the pen, rather than with the articulation of their fleeting breath. The pulpit or the platform plumps its message in one big, and it may be grand, bunch and tends to overload the mental stomach and provoke intellectual indigestion. The listeners to orators, pulpit hebdomadal, or platform periodical, are much in the case of a vagrant dog that may chance on a full meal once a week, with an interval of fasting, and he overloads his stomach and makes himself uncomfortable. The newspaper sermon distils its refreshing dews diurnally, according to Scripture—line upon line, precept upon precept; here a little, there a little. The hearer, the reader, gets it in homoepathic doses, and can take it and assimilate the truth and teachings, the lessons thus imparted, without appreciable gastric pains. If eloquent editors feel the cacoethes loquendi too irritating to be comfortably borne, they may occasionally permit themselves to shoot off their vocal organs. But the average editor is not eloquent of speech—mouth and mind do not necessarily go together—and he will find his highest usefulness in sticking to his last, in turning out the daily grist of wisdom and morality through the same old sanctum-onion medium, the quill and the quire.

THE HANDWRITING.

It may be optimistic, or, dependent upon the point of view, pessimistic, to regard the record of the Quebec elections, involving a great Liberal victory, as the handwriting on the wall for the Borden Government to read. The result is, doubtless, a severe blow to the Government, when we remember what a large share it assumed in the elections, and some detail of the outcome of its interference. In all the districts where the Federal Ministers campaigned the Liberals have gained steadily. In Quebec county and district, Hon. Mr. Pelletier's own riding, where the Postmaster-General fought the Provincial battle, the Liberals swept every constituency. In Chirlevoix and Saguenay, the riding of Hon. Rodolphe Forget, the Liberals redeemed the seat by nearly 700. It is significant also that the two ridings which Sir Wilfrid entered rolled up huge Liberal majorities. Arthur Gilbert, the Nationalist winner of the memorable Federal bye-elections of Drummond-Arthabaska, went down to defeat in Athabaska, and in Wright, where Sir Wilfrid spoke, the Liberal majority rose to 846. It is evident Quebec is still loyal to the "Old Chief." When the Liberal debacle of the last Dominion election was disclosed, there were many to say, and among them weak-kneed Liberals, that the Liberal party and Liberalism were dead. But principles never die; the body and form of their medium of expression may be hit hard, and wounded deeply, but the resiliency of right is strong. It has proven so. The reaction has been operating ever since the last elections and it set in most strongly when Mr. Borden, the victorious leader, began to give organic form, and corporal expression to, this hilerogenous and incongruous elements that contributed to his temporary triumph. He coddled and warmed the viper of Nation alism in his bosom; circumstances and events in the meanwhile scotched the snake and the Quebec election has killed it. The Nationalist members of Mr. Borden's cabinet will have to decide between a dead cause and the spoils of office; and there is no question of their abandoning abandoned Nationalism, and remaining tethered to the public crib. Laurier fell for a principle, and principles never die. Borden triumphed by the force of substitutes and makeshifts for principle and he sees the beginning of the end.

Premier Borden would have felt the shock of the Liberal victory in Ottawa much more than when it was buffered by the environment of Tory Toronto.

BABY FELL ON STOVE

Mr. A. Summers, Postmaster of Gledhow, Sask., writes: "I would like to bear testimony to the wonderful healing properties of Zam-Buk. I have used it for some considerable time for cuts, bruises, etc., with excellent results, but the most wonderful cure in my experience happened recently when my little boy (two years old) fell from his chair on to a red hot heater!

One side of his face and his ear were just frizzled. I dressed the burns liberally with Zam-Buk every day, and within two weeks the burns were healed. I was afraid my boy would be disfigured permanently, but the skin has grown beautifully, and there is no scar left. I always recommend Zam-Buk to my friends, and would advise everybody to keep a box handy."

Zam-Buk is just as good for cuts, bruises, poisoned wounds, scratches, ulcers, eczema, piles, festering sores, barbed wire scratches, etc., and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box. Druggists and stores everywhere, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co. Toronto. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations. Have you tried Zam-Buk Soap? 25c. tablet. Best for baby's tender skin.

Question Of Dominion Marriage Settlement Held Up For Two Years

OTTAWA, ONT., MAY 16.—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council having this morning dismissed the appeal in the companies cases, the Supreme Court will now be able to proceed with the hearing of the reference made to it by the Governor-General-in-Council as to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament to pass a general marriage law for the whole of Canada.

It will be remembered that as a result of the Ne Temere decree, and the subsequent agitation in the English-speaking sections of the Dominion, E. A. Lancaster, M.P., for Lincoln, introduced a bill at last session providing for the enactment of a general marriage law for the Dominion. The Government declined to accept the responsibility of allowing the passage of the bill in view of conflicting opinions as to the jurisdiction of the Dominion and the Provinces under the British North America Act, but promised that the bill should be submitted to the Supreme Court, with a series of questions as to whether the Dominoin Parliament had the right to pass such a law.

Why Case Was Delayed.

This was done, but in view of the fact that similar questions of jurisdiction had been raised in three other references last year in regard to the incorporation of companies and cognate cases, the Supreme Court decided not to allow the argument to proceed until the Privy Council had decided the companies case.

In the companies case the Supreme Court decided with two dissentients—Judges Idington and Girouard—that it had the jurisdiction to hear references of the style mentioned, but the Provinces appealed from the decision to the Privy Council. For once, their lordships of the Judicial Committee upheld a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the result will be that the court can now proceed with the hearing of the argument in the marriage reference.

But that does not mean that the decision will be in favour of the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament to pass a general marriage law. For the Province of Quebec, Messrs. R. C. Smith and Aime Geoffrion will argue that under the British North America Act the regulation of marriage is exclusively a matter for Provincial legislation, and that the Dominion has no power to pass a general marriage law.

First Week in June.

No date has yet been fixed for the hearing of the argument in the marriage reference, but it will undoubtedly take place at the present term of the Supreme Court, probably in the first week in June.

An interesting feature of the argument will be that the representatives of Quebec will rely largely upon pleas presented by counsel for Ontario in the companies case, points which were not raised in the argument before the Supreme Court, but which have a very important bearing upon the question of the Provincial rights.

Must Wait Two Years.

In any case, the final decision of the power of the Dominion Parliament to pass a general marriage law will not be a speedy one. Even if the case is argued at the present term of the Supreme Court, a judgment is not likely before November, and as it is certain that whatever the Supreme Court decision may be it will be appealed to the Privy Council, there is little likelihood of a termination of the case for at least a year, and probably two years. And that will probably mean that the final decision in the case will be deferred until after the next general elect ion for the Dominion Parliament.

COMPLIMENTARY BANQUET TO MR. JOHN CRANE BY ST. PAUL'S CHOIR

The members of the choir of St. Paul's church aid a tribute on Thursday evening to Mr. John Crane, who is retiring from the position of organist and choirmaster after 19 years of continuous, faithful service. The tribute took the form of a banquet held in the Sunday School Hall, which was attended by a large number of the members and ex-members of the choir. The banquet, which was provided by Mr. T. H. Hooper, proved a most enjoyable affair. It was really an expression of the choir's deep appreciation of Mr. Crane's ability and of his unfailing kindness and courtesy as leader of the choir.

The programme following the banquet comprised a toast list, interspersed with musical numbers. Mr. D. Moore acted as chairman and toastmaster in a most acceptable manner. The toast of the King was duly honoured, and was followed by a solo by Miss Chalmers. "Our Absent Members" was the next toast, and was proposed by Mr. T. H. Gillespie.

Greetings were read in the form of telgrams from 30 or more ex-members who are now scattered throughout all parts of the Doinion.

"The Church and its Ordinances," was responded to by Rev. R. Pogue, the pastor.

The toast to the "Ladies" was proposed by Mr. W. A. Logan and responded to by Mr. Perrin.

"Our Veterans" was proposed by Mr. P. MceLan and responded to Messrs. Moore, Joseph Jones and R. Mein.

The toast to "Our Retiring Leader" was proposed by Mr. Logan, who referred to the splendid services Mr. Crane had rendered during the past 19 years in the position of choirmaster and organist of St. Paul's. On behalf of the choir, he conveyed to Mr. Crane the appreciation of the members of his courtesy and the kindliness he had always shown in his relations with the choir.

Mr. Crane tanked the members for their expression of appreciation. The success attained by the choir had been due in a large measure to their own abilities and to the interest they had taken in the work., Mr. Crane stated hat he would always be deeply interested in the choir and its welfare.

The Board of Management was proposed by Mr. Crane and responded to by Mr. Moore and Mr. Connal. During the evening solos were rendered by Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. Crane, Miss Steinhoff, Miss McQuarrie, and a recitation by Miss Logan. A very pleasant evening was concluded by the singing of God Save the King, and Blessed be the Tie that Binds.

Training Him

(Short Story.)

"What you need," said the younger Miss Rodman to the big young man who lounged on the rail, "is a thorough course of sprouts. You can't expect to win Nan's heart with five-pound boxes of candy and expensive flowers alone."

"I imagine I am a trifle—er—raw in these things," said Hicks, smiling at the earnest face before him.

It was an attractive face, full of pretty dimples and prone to flash upon you some surprising expression you had never dreamed could be so entrancing.

"I am a rather faint-hearted courtier, I'll admit," he added with an easy laugh.

"You are, that's true," said Miss Rodman. "Girls—especially girls like Nan—admire aggressiveness in men. You are altogether too passive. It fairly made my blood boil the way you let that presumptuous young Williams take Nan from you for a drive just now. What made you let her go?" she asked suddenly.

"My dear Miss Rodman," said he, "I watch you carefully and give you "I am not Nan's keeper. What right had I to say whether she should go or stay?"

"Act as if you had the right, anyway," she advised.

"I'm fearful of the consequences if I did," said he. "You see, all these years when I dwelt at the mines with only the society of half-breeds and greasers have done their full work. In the society of such women as your sister I'm a baabful as a schoolboy."

"I'll help you," she said; "if you were like the other men here I'd never offer my services; but you're so big and good-natured and so helpless, I'll take pity on you."

"Thanks," he said. "I need help badly. What do you intend to do?"

"Educate you," she said, "or educate the fear of women out of you. I believe I'm the only girl here you're not afraid of."

"May I ask for some hints as to your methods?" he said.

"I'll serve as dummy and instructor in one," she explained. "You must devote two weeks to me. Begin as if you had just met me; take me driving and to the dances and all that sort of thing. In short, make love to me and finally propose. I'll point. When you've taken your diploma in this course strike out for Nan."

Hicks straightened himself on the veranda rail.

"I'm awfully grateful to you," he said, with conviction. "It's no end kind of you to take this interest and trouble. When do you begin?"

"No time like the present," she laughed. "You may go down to the stable and get the cob and take me for a drive."

"Look here," said Hicks, "I'll do my very best, and I'll try to get my lessons thoroughly. I'll bring some candy along, too."

"Not yet," she said. "That will come in the advanced lessons."

"I wouldn't have gone with Williams if I'd been Nan," she said pointedly, as she went into the house to array herself for the drive.

The next two weeks were busy ones for Hicks. He was devotion itself to the younger Miss Rodman. He took her to the Casino dances and sent her endless supplies of candy and flowers. They drove together through the surrounding country; they poked about the river in a punt, and discovered all sorts of jolly retreats and quaint lovers' nooks.

The older Miss Rodman looked on with condescending approval. She began to treat Hicks with sisterly frankness. Two weeks earlier this would have made him extremely uneasy. Now he did not care.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AND THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

(By Adeline C. Roberts)

XI.

People who are inclined to believe such statements as were made in Toronto by an anti-suffrage lecturer, to the effect that accounts of the progressive and growth of the white slave traffic are greatly exaggerated, would be much enlightened by reading "A New Conscience and an Ancient Evil," lately published by the MacMillan Co. This is a new book by Jane Addams, in which the author deals with that later aspect of the "social evil," which has come to be called the "white slave traffic," and which has reached such an appalling magnitude as to have at last roused all right-thinking men and women on this continent, and in every European country (with the exception of the Balkan States) to realise the imperative need of a total abolition of white slavery in all its phases. Miss Addams sets forth, for public consideration, a concise statement of the evil as it exists to-day, of the various methods employed to carry on the traffic, and of its far-reaching disastrous effects on the human race. She states that when collecting information she was impressed with the large and ever increasing number of people of all classes and callings who responded promptly to any appeal for help to combat this evil, thus showing how the public is developing a "new conscience" in the matter, and coming to look upon it as one that must be faced and dealt with, not persistently evaded and ignored.

Miss Addams sees, in recent legal enactments, in the awakening desire to improve economical and social conditions, in the movements against germ diseases, for the suppression of alcoholism, and for the protection of the young, and in various other philanthropic works of rescue and prevention, an array of forces which are all tending towards the extermination of the "social evil" in all its aspects.

Referring to these and other public movements, all of which are menacing the evil, she says:

"First among these, perhaps, is the equal suffrage movement. On the horizon everywhere are signs that woman will soon receive the right to exercise political power, and it is believed that she will show her efficiency most conspicuously in finding means for enhancing and preserving human life, if only as the result of her social experiences. That primitive maternal instinct, which has always been as ready to defend as it has been to nurture, will doubtless promptly grapple with certain crimes connected with the white slave traffic; women with political power would not brook that men should live upon the wages of captured victims, should openly hire youths to ruin and debase young girls, should be permitted to transmit poison to unborn children. Life is full of hidden remedial powers which society has not yet utilised, but perhaps nowhere is the waste more flagrant than in the matured deductions and judgments of the women who are constantly forced to share the social injustices which they have no recognised power to alter. If political rights were once given to women, if the situation were theirs to deal with as a matter of civic responsibility, one cannot imagine that the existence of the social evil would remain unchallenged in its semi-legal protection."

In all states, where women have the suffrage, the age of consent has been raised to 16, and the age has also been raised in Australia, Norway Finland and New Zealand since women were given the ballot. In Wyoming, where women have had the suffrage for more than forty years, white slavery does not exist. In Norway, the father of an illegitimate child has equal responsibility with the mother for its education and maintenance. In New Zealand legislative measures have been equated providing for the licensing of servants' employment bureaus in order to protect girls from the white slave traffic; in Utah traffic in women is prohibited, and a measure has been passed making venereal disease reportable.

Only last February the English House of Commons rejected a bill promoted by a few righteous men in the hope of checking the white slave traffic.

In the recent English suffragette trials Mrs. Connor, one of the prisoners, said: "I have done a great deal of social work and in Glasgow I have found that property is valued at a much higher rate than hundreds of girls of 16, and children of 9, 10, and 12. I will fight until I get that law altered, if I die for it, and the whole of the women in the movement will do this."

Miss Emily Duval, another prisoner, said, "Money can replace broken glass, but it cannot replace the innocence of girls who are outraged daily. I am prepared to die for votes for women."

Dr. Ethel Smyth, the well-known musical composer, stated at her trial: "The late Archbishop Benson and Mr. Spurgeon, discussing the number of prostitutes in London, said that less than one-third were there from vice, but through poverty, sweating, and the white slave traffic. I have since heard that appeal after appeal has been made to raise the age of consent above 16. A member of Parliament who was an anti-suffragist, said to me: "You will not get that until women get the vote, because, although not one of its men would like to see a young girl taken advantage of, yet, when it comes to altering a matter like that, well—we think things very well as they are."

Wherever woman suffrage obtains, it is conceded, by state officials, and others that the woman vote has had a marked influence on all legislation tending to solve moral and social problems, and to protect and safeguard women and children. But where women exercise little, or practically no influence on legislation, and have to do their best to combat evil conditions by private effort and indirect influence, those evil conditions cannot be effectually dealt with.

PARK PROPOSED

Near Graham's Landing at Sturgeon Point

Sturgeon Point's council meets tomorrow and one of the questions coming before that body is the proposal to have a pleasure park at Sturgeon Point for the benefit of small picnic parties and visitors to this resort.

It is thought a very nice park could be laid out near Graham's landing. A new wharf could be built and this stretch of the Point fitted up as an ideal spot for picnickers.

The Folly of Weather Worry

By Ruth Cameron

WHICHEVER way the wind doth blow
Some heart is glad to have it so;
So blow it east or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best."

"Yes," said my neighbour, "I've been just as blue as can be all day. Anything the matter? Oh, no. It's just the weather. I'm always blue when it rains like this for two or three days in succession. I'll be all right when the sun comes out, but just now I'm so depressed I don't know what to do. That's the way with all our family. My sister feigns herself almost sick if we have two or three bad days, and my mother was just so. We are all very sensitive to weather."

My neighbour concluded this speech with an air of self-approval as unmistakable as it was inexplicable.

What possible cause for pride is there to be found in the fact that one is upset by such a trifle as a little rain?

And yet I know many people who are similarly depressed and thrown off their poise by the accident of bad weather. I think they are both unfortunate and foolish. Don't you?

Unfortunate, because bad weather must come; "some days must be dark and dreary," and it is too bad to add that cause for depression to the innumerable legitimate causes that crowd the ordinary life. Foolish, because such a tendency can't be controlled.

Comes a second rainy, drizzly day right on the heels of the first rainy, drizzly day, (I do not think many people mind one rainy day. If it comes after a period of sunshine, it may even have a restful charm. It is the second successive bad day that brings the blues) and you say mournfully: "Oh, dear, I am sorry it is raining. Rainy weather always makes me so blue," and straightway you justify your expectations of yourself by feeling blue.

Just as people who expect to be seasick and who go down into stuffy cabins and make all the odious preparations usually are seasick.

But suppose you did not allow yourself to think anything about the matter beyond the cheerful thought that it is likely to clear soon, and that anyhow the rain is doing the crops and the flowers much good. Suppose you brought up all the cheerful things you had in your mind treasury; said something unusually pleasant to someone; hummed a little song about your work and amused yourself by trying to see how well and how swiftly you could do that work; and then, when your tasks were done, suppose you read some especially absorbing book or made a call on some particularly interesting person, or even went out for a splendid invigorating walk right in the rain, do you think you could be blue very long?

Try it sometime. Who knows but that the very next rainy day you will be able to greet and dispel the gloom with our optimist poet's philosophy:

"It ain't no use to grumble and complain.
It's jjust as cheap and easy to rejoice;
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain
Why rain's my choice."

—James Whitcomb Riley.

The White Duck Skirt Is The American Woman's Real Joy

No other nation knows the comfort, the coolness, and the actual joy of the American white duck skirt. In Paris and London the American women are looked at with some envy and a good deal of interest when they slip along on hot summer days coatless, collarless, and befilmy. They are the only women suitably dressed for the weather.

The thin little blouse is a mere wisp of covering, and since it has become unfashionable to heap it with entre-deux of lace and masses of hand embroidery, it looks cooler and fresher than ever. Made of sheer unstarched muslin with a few tucks at the shoulders, long, small sleeves, a narrow turnover cuff with white crochet link buttons, and a wide turnover collar of Irish lace, it carries out a suggestion of coolness that no other garment does.

Its comfort is well known now wherever the English language is spoken, but the duck skirt lags behind, and is only known to Americans. You do not see it on the street or in the shops in Paris or London, except when our own women wear it.

Always there are rumours that it will cease to be fashionable, and always it comes up fresh and youthful to satisfy the need of over a million women. This year it will again appear minus plaits, minus any kind of trimming, unless one calls a hip yoke trimming; severely plain, slim, and short.

As more of these are being made just now in homes than any other special garment, it is not without interest to hear of the new styles in them, the new kinds of weaves, and the best way to make them look smart and snappy. To begin with, all white skirts, worn separately and washed often, need not be of duck.

Some are of linen, others of wash corduroy, and the newer ones are of pique, or what is usually called wash whipcord. One woman can choose a skirt of each fabric if she likes experiments, for the usual number is at least four to a person, and many women feel they must have eight.

If one does not live in the city all summer, and goes in for this kind of uniform every day from May until October, one cannot skimp on the number, and it is far cheaper to get several of these than it is to make up other kinds of frocks. In the cities and for women who are not well off the white skirt for everyday wear is something of an extravagance, to say nothing of the white blouse, which is by no means as inexpensive a commodity as many would have us think.

The soot and soil of the city streets, as well as trains and trolleys, and even chairs, are enemies to everything that is light in tone, and the laundry bills would turn one's hair gray if a fresh skirt was worn every day. The woman who is in the country or in the suburbs does not have to take either of these disadvantages into consideration; she does not have to contend with so much dirt and soot, and her laundry is done in the house at much less cost than town work is done.

Still, every woman wants some white wash skirts. They are mainstays or her wardrobe, the trumps which she plays when all else fails. There are no days in our summer months which are not suitable for white materials that wash. If, by the kindness of Nature, a cool day should slip upon us unawares, there is the ever-ready Norfolk jacket, which has again become fashionable, which can be added to the thin shirtwaist.

WHITE CORDUROY SKIRTS

As for the enthusiasm for separate skirts of white wash corduroy, one can only say that it is founded on hope and faith, rather than on experience, for few women know anything about it. After the failure of wash crepe, which was heralded far and wide, women look askance at any fabric that is put out with the announcement that it washes like a handkerchief and does not need to be ironed.

There is no doubt that corduroy is very good looking, and there is also no doubt that it is warm. This does not matter for the spring, but it matters much for the summer. At present we can wear anything that has the appearance of coolness and which is a change from the heavy velvets, ratines, and chamois cloths that have done duty all winter; but when those first scorching days of June come along one is very apt to rebel against a material that has even the semblance of winter weight.

Those who have upheld white corduroy for the spring are quite right in their belief; it makes an admirable suit and is less common than taffeta, and serves the mid-season better than crash or linen; but it should be restricted to the spring, and not raise any false hopes that it will serve in the dog days.

The answer that every woman will probably make to that is that all clothes are so unbearable in our climate in July and August that we have become hopeless about finding anything that gives comfort. Linen duck and homespun linen give some degree of pleasure, but even they are not as light in weight as we would like, so old-fashioned muslins, figured or striped, have returned to favour since the experience of last summer.

White pique is not an especially cool fabric, either, for the dog days, but there is not much difference between it and homespun linen, and it keeps its shape in a far better manner. It does not sag and bag and wrinkle as any fabric does that has a linen thread through it, and on a slim figure, one who looks best in trig, trim lines, it is far more becoming than any of the wash fabrics.

THE BURDENS OF AGE

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They restore the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

CLAIMS A RECORD.

A young farmer was inclined to brag this morning about a cellar he took out a few days ago.

"I'll bet a new hat there are not many can equal the work we did," he said. "In one day we took out a cellar 27 ft. x 19 ft. 4 in., making a total of 76 cubic yards of gravel. How is that for a day's work? I wouldn't do it again for any money, but we had to do some seeding the next day and we simply had to finish it. I'll bet there are not many around here who can equal that performance."

The Yellow Dog And Aesthetics

Discussed at Length by Mr. W. A. Bailey

Sir,—Your hypocheondrical exaggerations are answered By Toronto Saturday Night.

"A correspondent asks: Why not muzzle the politicians and let the poor dogs alone?

The suggestion is one which should meet with very general approval in these days of rabies hysteria. The trouble is apparently not with the dogs, for so far as I can gather, the canines are behaving themselves with their usual decorum. The difficulty seems to be that a certain number of people are running daft, having become loose, like the riders on the western ranges.

In the name of common sense, what right has a blithering idiot of a Canadian legislator to interfere with my dog, or with that of any neighbour? Some one in Owen Sound or somewhere else is bitten by a dog, and some one, who probably does not know rabies from a case of cholera, yells mad dog from the housetops. Some of the dailies pass it along, and presto, every one of our four-footed friends is obliged to undergo the torture of a muzzle or be summarily disposed of. (I heard one of a gang of youths say recently, "Let's get together and have that dog shot.)

Canadians have endured some fool legislation in their time, but as a crochety, queer, crack-brained sample of idiotic law-making, commend me to the dog muzzling statute now in force.

It should be remembered that streets belong to the public and domesticated animals surely have a right of way, especially the dogs, of whose good deeds there are multitudes of witnesses. The grids, full of filth, dilapidated fences, and buildings and streets a danger and disgrace, all require attention. I have to look my gate, but not on account of dogs.

Yours, etc.,
W. A. B.

BROOKLYN GIRL WELL NOW

When you get right down to the plain facts it is generally a very simple matter to get rid of a bronchial cough, if you go at it right.

The trouble is, most people dose themselves with quieting syrups that really don't have any curative effect.

Now Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil is a specific throat and lung healer—it goes to the seat of the trouble at once, stops the cough and heals the inflamed bronchial tubes.

For example, there is Miss Julia Leyendecker of Brooklyn. She says "I had a stubborn cough last spring that hung on for six weeks and made me very uneasy, so I took Vinol, for I had heard it was good for coughs. I had already tried several cough medicines without benefit, but Vinol soon stopped my cough and I now feel perfectly well."

It's simply a matter of gaining strength and building up health. We guarantee Vinol to give you perfect satisfaction. Try it.

Prize List of Canadian National Exhibition Now Being Distributed

The Prize List of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 24, to September 9th, has been issued. It shows the usual liberal prizes in all departments of live stock, agriculture and home work, amounting to a total of $55,000. It is also evident that the list has been carefully revised to have it in keeping with up-to-date conditions.

A few of the innovations that might be noticed are provision for competition in breeding horses for strings of five horses; a number of sections added to provide for the newer breeds of poultry; $100 in prizes for onions, tomatoes and celery in baskets. The last named is a government suggestion meant to encourage export of these commodities.

On the whole, the list shows a distinct advance on its predecessors, and, as the attractions will include a review of cadets from all the overseas dominions of the Empire, the Scots Guards Band and a brilliant historical spectacle, the Siege of Delhi, it is safe to predict another record year for the Canadian National.

Ways Of Making Friends

Suggestions for the Woman Who Moves to a New Town--The Etiquette of Letters of Introduction---Legitimate Means of Obtaining New Friends.

"What must a woman, moving to a new city, do to secure a circle of desirable acquaintances and friends?

"One who has not artistic gifts," the letter adds, "to whom books are no great resource, and who realizes that her husband and children need the tonic influence of a change of personality as well as herself. In short, a plain, unvarnished married woman, who wants to go to parties and give them."

Was ever a plea more to the point, more natural? Humanity is rarely if ever sufficient unto itself. Without the society of one's kind the world were a wilderness to the biggest part of the folk who walk the globe. Then, the distraction unconsidered, it is not exaggeration to say that upon desirable acquaintances, friend kindly disposed, a good deal of the world's prosperity and actual health depend.

But how is one to acquire a good social circle in a perfectly new city, town or locality, you ask. It is easy enough if you only go about it in the right way. But let me say here, a thing that is crying to be said—present, as it were, the kernel of the argument. New friends are a good deal harder than old ones to impress. Unless one has well studied the A B C of politeness at the last residence, it is not likely that the new one will hang long with the golden fruit of social approval. So anticipate the move with a careful examination of your qualifications, and, wherever deficient, endeavour to correct the error. Practice on all occasions the gentle art of pleasing, even if it is only on the washerwoman or butcher's boy. As a French wit puts it, "A gracious manner has conquered more people than the cannon of Napoleon."

By far the most valuable method of becoming acquainted with a new set in an unknown city is through letters of introduction. It is not, however, considered polite, except between the most intimate friends, to ask for these outright. But the projected move may be touched upon almost anywhere, with the addition of a laughing word expressing one's trepidation at going to live in a strange city without acquaintances.

If this is done naturally and prettily, no person present, who knows anybody in the prospective place of residence, could withstand the temptation to offer the introductory letter. Once on the way this is like the seed sowed in right ground, bringing forth an abundance of fruit in the way of other introductions, receptions, teas and dinners.

CHURCH ACQUAINTANCES.

"For a girl paddling her own canoe," said a bachelor woman the other day, there is nothing like the church for society, comfort and safety against the wrong people. The wolf, however, much be is cracked up as going in sheep's clothing, has no great preference for the fold. Give me the Rock of Ages and all its dear people for my friends."

In these suggestions, through the church and letters of introduction, I have given the best methods of obtaining a new and desirable social circle. But if one is endowed with sufficient character to withstand the possibility of wrong influence, any happening which effects acquaintance may be pursued with dignity.

WOMEN'S CLUBS HELP, TOO.

In Paris the first thing a woman art student does is to join the American girl's club, which formerly stood in the Rue Scribe. If already a clubwoman, she sends her card to the secretary of any woman's club, and is sure of a gracious reception; while the daughter of a Mason, by stating her father's name, order and lodge to other Masons, will find immediate hospitality at the ends of the earth. The doctor, the dentist, the landlady may all be taken into one's confidence. "Here I am, a stranger in a strange land, without family, friends." That is enough, or if the speaker has the correct appearance—that occult something which proclaims breeding—doors fly open.

As to the letter which has inspired this article. It seems to me that, while modestly describing herself as "a plain unvarnished married woman," the writer has placed her case in a most advantageous light. A well-ordered home is indicated, since she wants to give parties as well as go to them, and well-ordered homes are the very foundation of social intercourse. She is also married, which is an advantage, for the world, as is only natural, is a little skeptical at first of the unmarried and unattached social aspirant. "Such a one, then, will be tremendously hampered if there are no letters of introduction.

The solution of this last difficulty is obvious. She who is outside the ring of family and friends must hourly burnish her armour. She must dress with taste—how much clothes have to do with the whole subject after all!—and show herself in every way worthy to be known and invited into homes.

A STRONG CANADIAN INSTITUTION

Canadians are frequently urged to patronize home institutions. In Fire Insurance it is not always easy to do so and at the same time obtain that absolute security which is so essential. You can, however, accomplish both these objects by insuring your property in the Manitoba Assurance Company, which is not only a Canadian institution and thoroughly sound in itself but is guaranteed by perhaps the strongest Fire Office in the world. Ask for a "Manitoba" policy. Agent, Davis-Thompson Co., Limited.

FROM THE GOLDEN BOOKS "THE SKULL"

(Byron: "Childe Harold.")

Is that a temple where a god may dwell?

Look at its broken arch, its ruined wall,
Its chambers desolate, and portals foul.
Yes, this was once Ambition's airy hall,
The dome of Thought, the palace of the Soul:
Behold through each lack-lustre, eyeless hole,
The gay recess of Wisdom and of Wit.
And Passion's host, that never brooked control:
Can all saint, sage, or sophist ever writ,
People this lonely tower, this tenement refit?
Yet if, as holiest men have deemed there be
A land of souls beyond that sable shore,
To shame the doctrine of the Sadducee,
And sophists, madly vain of dubious lore:
How sweet it were in concert to adore
With those who made our mortal labours light!
To hear each voice we feared to hear no more!
Behold each mighty shade revealed to sight,

The roads in some localities are beginning to become sodden and muddy in consequence of the heavy rains we are experiencing. In Lindsay especially, it is said this morning, that some of the roads in that vicinity were almost under water and others were thick with mud.

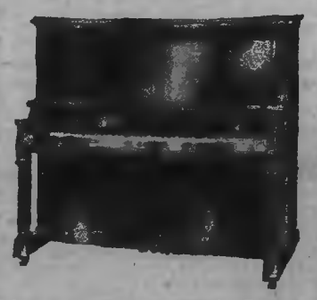
The Piano of the Period



New Scale Williams

The music student, the amateur and the finished musician go about the selection of a piano with a somewhat different viewpoint from the average layman. They have a more definite idea of what constitutes Real Artistic Tone Quality. They have different standards, perhaps more exacting, from which to judge tonal effects, and the fact, therefore, that hundreds of New Scale Williams Pianos have been purchased by musicians, is of special significance. It presents the verdict of a competent jury; one which the intending purchaser of a piano can well afford to take into careful consideration. It is the beautiful singing quality as well as the attractive appearance of these pianos which appeals to the artistic sense of the trained musician and music lover.

Daughters Of The Empire

Mr. F. D. Kerr delivered an address on "Champlain" at the regular meeting of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, on Thursday afternoon, in the reception room, at the Aromuries. There was a large attendance of members, who listened with pleasure to the entertaining manner in which Mr. Kerr dealt with the history of Canada's first great colonizer.

"Canada was indeed an historic country," Mr. Kerr said. "In 1506, Denis of Harfleur, explored the Gulf of St. Lawrence, three years before Henry VIII, of England began his reign. In 1534-35 Canada was visited by Jacques Cartier, who explored the St. Lawrence River as far as Montreal, but it remained for Samuel de Champlain to undertake the first successful and permanent colonization of Canada.

Champlain was born in 1570 at Brouge, on the Bay of Biscay. In 1603 he arrived in Canada for the first time and 1608 he proceeded to Quebec and commenced to lay the foundations of the Canadian settlement. Champlain, accompanied by thirty men, arrived at Quebec in July 1608, and imediately erected a few dwellings. Thus commenced the "Habitation de Quebec," and within this small stockade twenty-eight men, including Champlain, were left to spend the winter, the only white men on that portion of the Continent. The story of Quebec is the story of French Canada, and from Quebec was sent forth the laws that were obeyed through the trackless forests.

Passed This Way.

In 1615 Champlain having proceeded up the Ottawa, via Lake Nipissing to Georgian Bay, returned via the River Severen, Lake Simcoe and the Kawartha Lakes to Chemong, and thence through the present location of the City of Peterborough, being the first white man to visit this portion of Canada, and the first white man to make use of the Trent Valley system.

Champlain, the soldiers and clergy met the Indians with great dignity, and the Indians were feasted and the pipe of peace was smoked. In 1635 at Quebec, in his sixty-ninth year, Champlain, the founder of Canada, passed away, and was buried in what is to-day an unknown tomb, and thus passed to the great beyond the historic founder of Canada, whose character was great, unselfish—a man who was often mistaken but apparently actuated by the highest motives, a romantic explorer with a life of enterprise.

Mr. Kerr concluded by pointing out that Champlain's life work was well done, and that it must surely remain as a common heritge of the two great races of Canada.

MAN'S PET AVERSIONS.

An onlooker at a wedding.

Renting Houses Are In Demand

Middle Classes Experience Difficulty in Securing Good Houses —Renting in Suburbs is Active

Monkeying with a buzz-saw, or forecasting the stock market, is a gentle and joyous occupation compared with delineating the real estate situation as it obtains in the city at the present time. Just at present, what might be called the main fundamental condition is that realty is in a particularly healthy state, and the steady demand for land immediately or presently available for home sites is a real and well-founded one. One, no matter what his social position is, has only to endeavour to purchase a site for a home or a house within the corporation ,and he will find a great dearth, especially if he is a working man or a man of moderate means, and where any are available, in the majority of cases, the prices appear prohibitive.

Suburbs Are Active.

Increase in population and a noticeable rise in land values are contributory causes to this unprecedented quickening in the realty market. The results of the general prosperity that exists is shown in a market degree by the desire of the middle and upper classes to secure larger home sites, and live in restricted districts. The suburbs are particularly active and buying and selling is brisk all around the fringes of the city.

Houses in Demand.

The demand for houses to rent, especially in the south end, is greater than in past years and threatens to exceed the supply. Property on which improvements are being made, such as laying of water mains, sewers, etc., is selling very rapidly, and this season the ordinary workman's house, will be the type most eagerly sought after.

Houses that would bring in a monthly rental of $10 to $15 per month in the north ward will easily rent from $14 to $18 in the south ward and fin dwilling tenants at that. find willing tenants at that.

PARAGRAPHS FOR WOMEN

A woman is apt to "fill the public eye" when she shakes a door mat on the sidewalk.

A woman never really feels that she has too many thumb nails until she is tacking down a carpet.

Bad cookery is working as much mischief as bad whisky, and does more to perpetuate the latter than is generally supposed.

If housekeepers would only be willing to do just what they can do without getting completely dragged out, there would be fewer sick women and more happy homes.

Our homes are what we make them—good, bad, or indifferent—and their precepts and practices are necessarily more or less sharply defined, intensified and demonstrated in our own individual lives. They are the fortresses from which the battles of life are really fought—the embrasures from which are fired "the shot heard round the world," with more telling effect for weal or woe than any other worldly actions known to humanity.

Time For A Spring Tonic

In the spring we suffer from the bad effects of winter living. During the winter the clear, cold weather is a powerful germicide, and keeps us up, but when the spring break-up comes myriads of disease germs are let loose and the run-down system fails to fight them off. The enormously high death rate in spring proves this.

Almost everybody needs a spring tonic to help him over this trying time. Otherwise he loses much valuable time in fighting off "spring fever," or contracts serious disease. Nothing will so certainly help you as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food cure is a true tonic. It actually forms new, rich blood, strengthens the nerves and puts new energy and vigour into mind and body.

It is not a stimulant to whip up tired nerves, but by its upbuilding effects affords lasting benefit. Keep well this spring by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The man who is BUCKLEY HATTED knows that he is HAT-RIGHT not only as to quality, but also as to style.

SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

His Royal Highness the Governor-General and wife landed in Toronto amidst drenching showers. Why not? Royalty and raining naturally go together.

Death knocks with impartial hand at the doors of palaces and humble cottages. The King of Denmark fell, death-stricken, in the streets, like an ordinary citizen, and his body was conveyed to an hospital and lay unidentified for several hours.

The retirement of Mr. John Crane from the position of organist of St. Paul's after 39 years of faithful and efficient service, takes the wind out of the organ pretty thoroughly.

The battle of Hastings is to prevent history in Toronto. Medical Health Officer Hastings is fighting for (and the people are fighting Dr. Hastings) a by-law to forbid the keeping in the city of cocks and hens, dogs, and all domestic animals, but cats, except by authority of a permit which is to cost a dollar a head. It is expected that this head tax will yield enough revenue to maintain the Health Department. The special nuisance, the crowing cock, is to be banished from all congested residential districts, unless the majority of residents approve of his presence.

The East City vandals are bold and bad. Two Burnham street citizens had daffodils and tulips stolen last night—pulled up bodily, bloom and bulb. This, in a city with twenty, or so, churches, and nine schools, such an outrage against the whole city is monstrous.

The opening of the Lift Lock for navigation purposes was promised for May 10th. It is now the 17th. To-day a launch had to be portaged. Spending a million, more or less, on a lift lock and then "backing" steam launches up a sixty-five foot rise don't seem to hitch.

The population of Peterborough county is 36,906.

If it is true that a member of the 57th interefered with a policeman in the enforcement of law and order, the drum might well beat. One of the chief reasons of maintaining a volunteer force is in the interests of law and order, and the protection of law-abiding citizens.

Labelle, Mr. Bourassa's home constituency giving a Liberal majority of 1,157, and Drummond and Arthabaska rejecting Mr. Gilbert, the first Nationalist member of Parliament are rather disturbing to the devotees of the Nationalist political cult.

Acute Indigestion

There are forms of indigestion and dyspepsia which can never be reached by ordinary stomach medicines, and aids to digestion. The kidneys and liver are involved, and, though the stomach may be all right, it is the part of digestion that is imperfect.

The food ferments instead of digesting, and the gas rising therefrom presses on the heart, causing smothering feelings, heart irregularities and often unconsciousness. Acute indigestion often brings sudden death or leads to appendicitis or peritonitis. It is a most serious condition, and calls for treatment that will quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

No treatment can help you more promptly than Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you have made the mistake of dosing the stomach, try this medicine, and, by getting at the source of trouble, cure yourself. Get the poisons out of the system and by keeping these filtering organs active ensure pure blood, good digestion and improved health.

A MEMORABLE AUTO TRIP

The writer well remembers one of the first reliability contests ever held in this country, writes Louis Geyler, in the Chicago Sunday Tribune. It was not so many years back at that—in 1901. It consisted of a four days' run from New York to Boston and back, two days each way and one day for rest in Boston. He was one of the crew of five men that rode in a certain car which at that time was considered one of the most promising of the then budding industry.

The car was equipped with a complete tool outfit and each man with a set of overalls. Whenever the car got stalled for any particular reason, which happened quite frequently, we all donned our overalls and started to help look for trouble. The first thing we did was to lift off the body, as all cars of that period had the entire mechanism under the body, and this was the quickest way to get at it. Perhaps the repair would take a few minutes, and again several hours, but after each operation we would lift the body on again, bolt it securely on the frame, and go on our way rejoicing.

We had a lot of fun on that trip, as things like this were taken as a matter of course and no one expected to go far without having to do a lot of mechanical work on the machine.

"OVERALLS" PART OF EQUIPMENT

How many men of today ever dreamed of taking a pair of overalls as part of their equipment? At that time it was just as necessary as having a wrench. We bought motor cars with the knowledge that we were going to have trouble, and were never disappointed. When trouble did come we took it philosophically and did the best we could. Oftentimes we failed in our roadside repair, and limp that grand old standby, a team of horses, was called into play, and we were towed to the nearest town.

When we look at the almost perfect machine of today with its luxurious equipment and almost silenced mechanism, we come to the realization of the tremendous strides that have been made in automobile building in the short time that the motor car has been in use. The motor car of former days was a noisy, shaky piece of machinery on four wheels. It was looked upon as a machine pure and simple, and little thought was given by anything outside of mechanical features. Body design and all the many little things that go into the modern car were not thought of, and just so long as the car would run the owner was happy.

It is hard for anybody outside of those directly connected with this business to realise what it has all meant to bring the present car to its state of perfection. Beginning as they did with foreign cars as a model, our builders some years ago broke away from the conventional European ideas and began developing a car calling for simplicity of mechanism, certain lines of beauty, and aiming at appointments which were not thought of before by the builders on the other side. The buyer of a 1912 motor car does not realize the time and thought that have been put on his car to make it simpler and better and handsomer than ever before. The old piece of machinery called an automobile has been developed into a thing of beauty. The old noisy, bad-smelling mechanism has been transformed into a quiet running, noiseless, and easily handled means of conveyance. This fact is probably what has spelled the word "Success" for motor cars.

Gradually from something which took a mechanical engineer to take care of the present motor car has been developed into a vehicle that can be successfully handled by even a child. It needs but little care or attention. It is easily guided through the most crowded thoroughfare, and the chief requirement is to keep a sufficient quantity of oil so that all the parts and bearings are well lubricated.

OLD "TERRORS" ARE ELIMINATED.

Where a gasoline automobile used to be prohibitive to many people on account of starting the engine, today it is furnished with a self-starter, with which the engine is started by simply pressing a button from the seat. The puncture has lost many of its terrors, from the fact that demountable rims have made it an easy and cleanly process in substituting a tire on the road. Instead of the old kerosene lamps, all one has to do now is press a button and electric lights blaze at the front and rear of the car.

There were many objections because of the amount of brass that had to be polished on the old cars, so now we have black enamel lamps, painted radiators, and in fact, every thing possible is done to eliminate the polishing process. When we used to lift up the hood in the old days, there was a nasty mess of oil and dirt that was not good to look upon. This must have affected the various working parts of the engine, as today we find everything enclosed and all the working parts are out of sight. This keeps out the dirt, and at the same time silences many of the mysterious noises that it was time kept us worried.

WORKING PARTS MADE ACCESSIBLE

Automobility has not been overlooked. The old alleged funny picture of a man lying on his back in a dusty road hammering away underneath his broken automobile has lost its point. Everything is now so arranged that what little has to be done to a car can be done very easily from above. The owner's comfort has been catered to even to the extent of arranging him to adjust the carburetor without leaving his seat.

Another new feature that the motorist of today cannot appreciate is the practical elimination of the oil can. In the old days this was one of the most useful articles about the machine, and there was plenty of need for it. But the day of the oil can is past. Today the oiling is performed automatically, and neat-fitting grease cups perform the function of lubrication where this is not possible.

One does not have to tax his memory very much to remember the old back door design body used on motor cars. Some bright individual in an after dinner speech once made the remark that outside of an automobile the only two known vehicles where the entrance was from the back was a police patrol and a hearse. One need but look at an illustration of a car made even as late as five or six years ago to appreciate the tremendous difference in the appearance of one made today. Today the body lines are graceful. The seats are arranged in a comfortable manner, the foredoors on the present cars not only give the car a more sightly appearance, but protect the driver as well, and also fill the nasty gap on the old open front machine for which there was no real reason. We have all sorts of adjustable glass fronts, we have graceful and well-built tops, and the addition of seat covers all to the beauty of the machine.

PIONEERS DISCUSS "OLD DAYS"

The other evening a crowd of old-timers sat around and discussed the earlier days. We all told some funny things about cars of 10 or 12 years ago. One man recalled the story of a French inventor who failed because his car was not noisy enough. The Frenchman wanted his automobile to be a piece of machinery. He wanted to see the gear wheels go around, and he wanted to leave a trail of smelly smoke behind him as he rode along the boulevards. In other words, he wanted the public to know that he was in one of the new-fangled motor-driven wagons.

WORTH KNOWING

If table silver is placed in hot soapsuds immediately after being used, and dried with a soft, clean cloth, much of the work of polishing will be saved.

To make a tough steak tender rub it on both sides with vinegar and olive oil, thoroughly mixed, and allow it to stand for two hours before cooking.

A tasty salad is made of chopped celery, seasoned with chopped mint and mayonnaise. Put between slices of bread, it makes a dainty supper sandwich.

To revive root vegetables that have withered, slice off the end of each and lay in cold water. In a few hours they will be as hardy and healthy as ever.

Always lower the temperature of the oven somewhat 15 or 20 minutes after a roast has been placed in it. This will insure that the juices will be retained.

HOW WEDNESDAY'S GAME WAS LOST BY "WHITE CAPS"

After the First Innings They Had the Better of the Argument and Hamilton Spectator Concedes That They Should Have Had at Least an Even Break on the Series

The Hamilton Spectator says of Wednesday's game:

While the Kolts won yesterday, the game was hardly as clean as the one dished up on Tuesday, but at that it was more interesting. Billy Rose was elected to serve the benders for the Kolts ,and while hit hard at times he was good in the pinches and kept the bingles well scattered, with the result that he would have got away with a pretty easy victory had he been given air-tight support in all the rounds. The Kolts went to the bad, however, in the fifth and six inning, and Killilea and Schaefer contributed five fumbles between them, sending across four runs, three of them coming in the sixth, when the Petes also fell on Rose for three safe bingles. The visitors also contributed some loose fielding, which, along with the free manner in which Bartlett was hit in the first inning, cost them the game. Bartlett only lasted one inning, and was yanked in favour of Baver, who twirled a nice, steady game, and what is of just as much importance, contributed a couple of timely hits, which got him in right with the fans.

The Kolts started after Bartlett from the start. Schaefer laid down a perfect bunt to Dolan and beat it out, stealing second and going to third on Keenan's sacrifice. Murphy sent him home with a timely rap, while Conny went on to third when Tully fumbled Corns' hard-hit grounder. Templin fooled Killilea's grounder ,and Murphy scored while Corns came home on Farrell's sacrifice. In the fifth, Corns again started the trouble, this time with a slashing three-base hit, which would have been a home run had the ground been hard, and a muff of a high fly by Hackbush in right field allowed him to score. In the seventh Killilea's two-bagger and Hartman's error resulted in another run.

The Petes grabbed off a tally in the first inning, when Schwartz started with a two-bagger, and came home on Tully's single. Rose held them until the fifth, when errors by Killilea and Maguire, and a safe bingle by Dolan netted a run. In the sixth there was trouble galore. Mooney started off with a hit to centre field, and Baver followed suit. Then Schaeffer muffed a high fly and threw wild to the plate in an attempt to catch Mooney, who scored. Hartman popped out to Fisher, who made a grand catch of a difficult fly, but Killilea bungled Tully's line drive. Templin hit safely as did Dolan, but not before Fisher had caught Tully off second base, while Beard flied out, three runs and four hits being the amount of the damage done.

The Petes played a good aggressive game, and had Bartlett got away to any kind of a start it is hard to say what would have happened. The visitors size up like a strong-hitting team, as their nineteen bingles in two games testify, while both Derr and Baver of the three pitchers who have worked in the two games here, shape up like real good twirlers. On the play of the two days the Petes were entitled to at least an even break, and the Kolts can count themselves fortunate in getting away with both games, especially as they were outhit in each encounter. There is no doubt but that Templin's bunch will afford a lot of trouble to Brantford in the three-day series which starts to-day.

OUTFIELDER JIMMY BEARD, Who Did Some Brilliant Fielding For the White Caps in the Hamilton Series.

WILLIE SCHWARTZ, Left Fielder of the White Caps, Who Leads the Squad in Extra Base Hits and Stolen Bases.

ELMER BAVER, One of Manager Templin's Pitching Staff, Who Relieved Bartlett After the First Innings in Wednesday's Game and Held Hamilton to Five Scattered Hits for the Balance of the Game.

White Cap Notes

Hamilton Spectator: The Peterborough Club, unable to open at home until May 22nd, is under a severe handicap, inasmuch as they will have seven games away from home before they strike the Electric city. An even break, however, will be a good enough record. The Berlin team is even worse, it being June 6th before they will be able to play on the home grounds.

Hamilton Spectator: Manager Templin, of the Peterborough White Caps, has rounded up a strong, well-balanced team which will make a strong bid for the pennant. He trotted out a real good-hand pitcher in Jack Derr, while there was not a weak spot on the team. The White Caps shaped up like a bunch of good, strong hitters, and outhitting the Kolts, deserved to win the game, an excusable error by Mooney, the Peterborough catcher, handing the Kolts the victory. Mooney had been given a bad jar on one of his catching fingers early in the second inning, and this resulted in a bad throw to first base which was responsible for two runs, these two tallies proving enough to win the game. Templin stated some time ago that he would have a good strong team, and he has evidently made good his claim, for the Petes shaped up well in every particular and should be in the first division at all times. Derr worked exceedingly well and had the Kolts pretty well stopped at all stages, deserving a victory. On their showing yesterday the Petes will take a lot of beating, even right now, and there is no doubt but that they will show considerable improvement by the time they get back home and are able to put in a few morning practices. Bad weather has held the clubs back even more than the rest of the Canadian league squads, but even at that they were not to be denied ,and they showed a good, strong, fighting spirit, which augurs well for the future.

Hamilton Spectator: The game was attended by a large delegation of Peterborough supporters and they gave their team every encouragement, especially in the eighth, when it looked as if Templin's crew were going to cause some trouble and possibly sew up the game by forging into the lead. In this they were doomed to disappointment, however, but at that were well pleased, with the showing the White Caps had made, feeling, as did everybody else who was there, that the Peterborough team is a welcome and valuable addition to the league forces. With the opening day ceremonies over and the league officially off to its long race, the teams will be down to real business every day and there is every indication that a warm struggle will ensue. On yesterday's form the Hamilton and Peterborough teams will be in the thick of it and there is every chance that they will be the teams to battle for the bunting.

Willie Schwartz, the White Caps' left fielder, is earning his salary. The little gardener has made the only extra base hits credited to the Petes and stole the only base they have pilfered in their two games.

Beard scored the White Caps' first run of the season, Brode made the first hite, Dolan the first sacrifice, Mooney the first put out and also the first error, Schwartz the first extra base hit and had the first stolen base, Hartman made the first assist and Dolan was the first to receive a base on balls, Umpire Yerkes, who officiated in the Hamilton series, has a voice that sounds like a train passing over a wooden bridge.

Templin and Dolan broke into the hitting game on Wednesday with two bingles each, while Mooney helped himself to another pair of safeties.

The downpour of rain prevented any games in the Canadian League yesterday. The White Caps were idle at Brantford and Ottawa's opening game with Berlin had to be postponed until to-day. The American and International Leagues were not any more fortunate, not a game being played in either organization. The National managed to get two games out of the way.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. RAILWAY NOTES

The first work on the construction of the Grand Trunk Railroad in the State of New Hampshire was started this week. Seventeen engineers met in Concord, on Monday, received their general orders and dispersed to the various parts of the line for the purpose of making a general survey of the double track system. The route in the connecting link in that State will begin at White River Junction, touching at Manchester, and possibly Concord. An effort will be made to reach the towns and cities in southwestern New Hampshire, which are in most need of railway facilities. The engineers have been instructed to spare no expense in the construction of one of the best lines in the country. The survey will include the planning for all the needed bridges and the location of the stations, and work on this will be rushed so that the plans and definite layout of the road can be filed with the Supreme Court of New Hampshire as required by the general railroad law of the State. Mr. George M. Thompson, the former chief engineer of the Boston and Maine Railroad, is in charge, having left the B. & M. to take service with the Grand Trunk.

The first instalment of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway Company's survey outfit has been received at North Vancouver, and it is stated that active survey work will be started somewhere on the water front at that point. A camp is being prepared on the Capilano Road, close to the Indian Mission.

Capt. C. H. Nicholson, Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Steamship Co., has been making arrangements in Seattle for important alterations and improvements to the G. T. P. dock there. It is planned to construct a new roadway and pontoon near the west end of the south slip, which will allow passengers to enter the main waiting rooms from the vessel. The present roadway and pontoon are near the centre of the dock house, quite a distance from the waiting-rooms and this has proved very inconvenient for passengers, both in embarking and disembarking.

Although the water of the Skeena River is still high and running very fast, an attempt will be made this week by the stornwheeler "Inlander" of the Prince Rupert-Skeena Transportation Company to get up to Hazelton. If the water is running too rapidly in Kitselas Canyon, it is possible that she may be forced to abandon her trip until the current gets back to its normal condition. The "Inlander" will be the first of the sternwheelers to navigate the Skeena this spring. There will be very few steamers operating on the river this year as the Grand Trunk Pacific has nearly completed its line into Hazelton and the bulk of the traffic will find its way over the railroad.

Advice is received that the Northern Navigation Company's steamer, "Hamonic" completed discharging her freight for the G. T. P. at Fort William on Monday. This is the first lake and rail freight from Montreal, Toronto and all eastern points, arriving at the head of the Great Lakes, and, as a result, traffic forwarded in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will, for the second year, be the first of the season to be delivered at Winnipeg, Edmonton, Saskatoon, and all western points reached by that line, a very creditable record.

Mr. J. H. Dewar of the Grand Trunk Railway, has left Ottawa to attend the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers which opens in Harrisburg, Pa., on May 8.

The demands for increased pay by the locomotive firemen employed on the railroads east of Chicago and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers is strongly opposed by managers of the affected roads, who declare that this would cost them $20,000,000 annually if granted. One of the demands is that on coal burning locomotives on freight service a fireman and an assistant fireman shall be employed which would alone involve the employment of 14,000 additional men.

The plans and drawings for the interior decorations of the Grand Trunk Pavilion at the Crystal Palace Exhibition have again been prepared by Mr. J. Ceser Turcotte, the well-known artist, and the scheme, as in former years, is carried out in the grains and wild grasses of Canada. The visitor, who is already favorably impressed with the facade of the Pavilion, which is a replica on a reduced scale of the magnificent Grand Trunk station at Ottawa, will be still more pleased with what catches the eye within. Two gigantic decorative vases overflowing with grain and grasses, are placed on either side of the entrance. In the main hall there is again the great frieze, which was so deservedly admired last year, and which is in perfect keeping with the new ceiling. The resources of the Dominion in all their variety are shown by large illustrations of the scenery and industries along the line of the Grand Trunk. Here are also some beautiful oil paintings from the well known Montreal artist, Mr. G. Horne Russell. In an adjoining hall there is a cinematograph entertainment where other interesting views are shown. The G. T. R. exhibit, in fact and without exaggeration, is one of the principal drawing cards of the Exhibition this year.

The Rule Examination car of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway was very busy at Transcona all last week and Examiner H. H. Sparling has now found out what the employees know and don 't know of the standard regulations. The average man not connected with railroading, indeed even the trained college student, would be surprised at the large number of rules to be learned and mastered and at the severity of the test which all railroad men have to undergo. It is claimed that the care which is bestowed on the thorough understanding of the regulations by such a company as the Grand Trunk Pacific bears fruit in the small number of wrecks compared with the large amount of business handled.

Announcement has been made that the G. T. P. steamer "Prince Rupert" will start running on or about May 1st, and, until late in the autumn, will maintain a semi-weekly service with her sister ship the "Prince Rupert" will go north to the port of the same name on Thursdays and, returning, will arrive at Vancouver on Wednesdays. The rush of people to the north by the Grand Trunk Pacific vessels is at present very large, and the officials of the company expect this season to set a new record for the number of passengers handled by their boats.

A Grand Trunk Pacific circular dated April 1st, and effective from date, announces the appointment of Mr. E. McDonald as District Baggage Agent of that company, with office at Winnipeg and territory from Fort William west.

The improvements being made in connection with the Highland Inn, situated in the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, 170 miles west of Ottawa on the Grand Trunk Railway System, are progressing, and the addition of 50 more rooms to his hotel will be complete and ready for the reception of guests about June 1st. The accommodation of this popular Inn will, when the annex is finished, be sufficient for 200 guests. Situated 1,700 feet above the sea level, the air is pure and invigorating and there are few places in Canada which offer such attractions to the summer resorter as those that are found in Algonquin Park.

During the twelve months of 1911-1912, more than 350,000 freight cars were despatched by the Grand Trunk Railway System from the City of Toronto alone.

No fewer than 66 new passenger coaches have been received by the Grand Trunk from the builders, and have been distributed on all through lines of the system, including those between Montreal and Chicago, Chicago and Detroit, Chicago and New York, Montreal and Portland, and Montreal and Boston. As in the case of those recently put on the road by the Central Vermont, these cars represent the very latest designs and improvements for such equipment. They have a seating capacity of 72 people and weigh 114,200 pounds each They are 75 feet in length, are vestibuled and mounted on 6 wheeled steel trucks and are equipped with automatic consolidated steam heating apparatus, together with high speed, Slack adjuster air brakes. The inside finish is of mahogany, highly polished, and the lights are of the four burner, Pintsch gas variety. One of the most novel features is the modern steel type of under-framing, which, together with the steel vestibule, affords perfect safety.

MILK CONTAINED EMBALMING FLUID

New York, May 16.—The will of tional Congress of Domestic Science, held in New York City, an interesting demonstration was given by Professor Breithut, who had charge of the booth occupied by the College of the City of New York. The professor went out to a soda fountain and bought some strawberry syrup. His trained eye told him the colouring was not of the strawberry fruit. His chemical analysis proved his eye correct. With the colouring he dyed a baby's undershirt a bright red, and hung it on a clothes line in the booth for all to see.

Milk, supposed to be adulterated, was taken to the booth. A drop of chloride of iron and strong sulphuric acid was added to it. Immediately it showed a strong purple colour, which was proof positive that it contained formaldehyde, a deadly poison which is used in embalming corpses.

Next one of the visitors took to the booth a bottle of substance labelled "Pure Olive Oil." A student added to this a solution of carbon of bisulphide and sulphur dissolved in Amyl alcohol. It was heated in a salt solution, and thereupon the product turned from yellow to dark red, showing it to be cotton-seed oil instead of olive oil.

HUNDREDS OF TESTS

And there were hundreds of other such tests. A silver instrument was dipped into a can of peas and it was coated a bright copper colour, showing the peas to contain copperas, another deadly poison.

Much of the gelatin on the market was shown to be nothing more than glue, reduced to a less stage through chemical treatment. Such a gelatin is often employed in the manufacture of cheap ice creams and ice cream cones. Enough glue was extracted from these kinds of products to make a chair—back, legs, and all—and it is a very substantial chair, for the glue possessed exceeding tenacity.

Another revelation was adulterated liquorice. It was declared that much of the stick liquorice on the market was made of lampblack, and much of it contained no liquorice at all.

There was strawberry jelly that contained no strawberry, vanilla flavours that contained no vanilla, orange drinks to which the orange was a stranger. To blackberry and strawberry preserves had been added millet seed to imitate the seeds of the berries. Fishes in cold storage since last year were shown to have had their eyes brightened with chemicals, and their gills painted, so as to make them look as if they had just been brought from the water.

"DON'T'S" OF VALUE 3

Don't take a death grip on the steering wheel, as it looks awkward and is tiresome and dangerous.

Don't race the motor, as you are liable to put the car out of commission.

Don't slip the clutch too much, as it will turn or wear beyond repair.

Don't watch the fellow behind you, as he is watching you.

Don't take your eyes off the road for any reason while the car is rolling, as it is very dangerous.

Mother Of Cup Finalist Wishes Barnsley Good Luck

Interesting News of Football---Queen's Rangers to Remain ---Latest Signatures and Transfers

It is authoritatively stated that Queen's Park Rangers, champions of the Southern League, have no intention to leave Park Royal, and that they will not be playing their home matches at the Stadium next season. It now remains to be seen whether Woolwich Arsenal will fix up arrangements to play there, and, if they come to terms, whether the necessary consent of the Football League will be granted. We are informed that the Football League will not consent to the amalgamation of the Arsenal and the Fulham clubs, and that in the event of Woolwich seeking permission to play at the Stadium, strenuous opposition will be offered by Queen's Park Rangers, Chelsea, and Brentford.

Preston and Bury must view their descent to the Second Division with some gloomy forebodings. To secure the championship with competitors like Burnley, Barnsley, Wolverhampton, Notts Forest, and Bristol City in opposition is a big task.

Jocky McTavish curiously enough made his debut for Newcastle against the team his noted partner, Jocky Simpson, plays for. The Rovers would have dearly loved to book the old Tottenham winger, but McTavish, for domestic reasons, wished to be in Scotland, or as near to it as possible, and Newcastle, who had the money, got the prize.

It is again rumoured that Woolwich Arsenal will migrate to Fulham and share Craven Cottage time about with the Second Leaguers. This arrangement would certainly affect the Chelsea gates, and the Stamford Bridge club will have to put up with further serious rivalry when the possibilities of the Stadium as a football enclosure are taken advantage of. The Stadium is the most conveniently situated ground in London.

At the gathering following the homecoming of the Barnsley team, speech-making, as usual, was the order. The following, coming from the lips of Mrs. Downs, mother of "Dicky," is worth repeating: "Mr. Chairman and friends," she said, "I am proud to say I am the mother of the right back of the Barnsley team. I have five more sons, and I wish you could fetch them down here and treat them as well as you have done Dicky.' Good luck to all."

When Bloomer left Derby for Middlesborough many Derby people consoled themselves with the remark that it was better he should go than cramp the methods of the younger men on whom the future of the club would rest. The idea was that these latter were overpowered by the weight of Stephen's personality and history, and were for ever seeking to play up to him. What a lot of these same youngsters the marvellous veteran has outstayed! Derby people have no two ideas now on the question of his value to the County.

Though one cannot but extend sympathy to Burnley in failing at the post, it is difficult to shut our eyes to the fact that they frittered away their chances at Easter. Burnley's one grumble is that Chelsea were allowed to play Barnsley the day after the final.

Caldwell, who has just signed for Everton, is the Reading goalkeeper of the unorthodox methods, who made such a name for himself in the English Cup ties this season. He has all the qualities that go to make a first-rate custodian, and has youth on his side.

The Barnsley boys earned the esteem of all sportsmen by playing their full Cup tie team two days before the final. And with one exception they turned out at full strength against Chelsea the day succeeding

Mr. Smithers Denies That Hays' Successor Has Been Named

Chairman of the Board of Directors of G.T.R. Reaches New York on the "Mauretania" on His Way to Montreal to Choose a New General Manager of the Road.

New York, May 18.—Alfred W. Smithers, chairman of the board of directors of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, arrived yesterday on the Mauretania and will spend a couple of days in New York before leaving for Montreal. He was met here by William Wainwright, acting president; D. E. Galloway, assistant to the president, and E. H. Fitzhugh, president of the Central Vermont Railway.

When asked whether he had any announcement to make, Mr. Smithers replied:

"All I can say is that my mission to Canada this time is a sad one indeed. With regard to the appointment of a president for the Grand Trunk Railway Co., and the other changes that may be made, I can only say once more that absolutely nothing has been settled upon. Matters with the company are in good shape, and the officers are absolutely loyal, so that the interests of the system are not suffering.

"At the same time we wish to act expeditiously in this matter, and just as soon as I have consulted with a number of gentlemen whom I am to meet here, I will proceed to Montreal and take up the matter of the selection of a president and other matters that call for attention at the moment.

"The use of certain names in connection with the presidency of the Grand Trunk was absolutely unauthorized. By unauthorized, I mean not only that no officer of the Grand Trunk Co. has given out any statement leading to show that any person was likely to get the appointment, but I mean that even the facts did not authorize any announcement. I may tell you now that I have not discussed with anybody the question of the availability of any one man for the position."

Mr. Smithers will leave here on Sunday morning by the Delaware & Hudson train, reaching Montreal the same evening.

Other passengers on the Mauretania were Sir Donald Mann of the Great Northern, and Charles R. Hosmer of the Canadian Pacific, who accompanied Mrs. F. W. Thompson and her daughter.

Optical Institute Talk No. 8

It Will Pay You

We frequently hear from persons far and near that they would not be without the eye-glasses which they had from the Optical Institute for several times their price. One lady remarked, I wouldn't take $50 for my glasses; another "they are worth ten times their price to me." A gentleman says "I wear mine constantly scarcely know they are on, but have perfect sight far and near. They are worth all they cost me and I want another pair in case of an accident."

The best cost a little more and require a little more time to have made up but it pays, and they are worth all you pay when they please you.

CANADA IS READY

Will Do Her Share for the Empire, Says Hon. Mr. White

MR. N. W. ROWELL SPEAKS

Toronto, May 18.—A successful house dinner to the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, and Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, was given by the National Club last night, the president, W. E. P. Grundy, presiding.

Hon. Mr. White dealt with the position of Ontario in the Empire, and especially the position that Canada would bear in the future, not merely as the half-way house of the Empire, but as a binding force holding together the portions of the Empire to the eastward and in Asia. In his closing remarks Hon. Mr. White said: "At present the world is at peace. Let us hope it will remain so. In order to maintain peace it is necessary to be strong, and that is the reason the five nations are getting together, not for aggression, but for defence. That the Parliament and people of Canada will be prepared to do its full share in the matter of Imperial defence, I entertain no manner of doubt."

What will be the farther future, under what federal system shall the Empire be federated, said Mr. White, I shall not attempt to forecast, but it seems to me to present no insuperable difficulty. It will be a matter of growth, of development, as is always the case with the British race. Distance is fast becoming annihilated. Halifax is nearer to London than is Vancouver. What more ultimate difficulty in federating the Empire than in federating Canada or the United States? The statesmanship of the Empire will, I believe, be always equal to the Empire's needs. What place in that later and greater Empire will Canada hold? We are the oldest son to-day. We have the territory, the resources, the situation. Look at the globe. Canada is the centre of the Empire. Will she not in numbers, wealth, power and influence, be the very heart of the Empire in days that are to come?

Mr. Rowell, taking his theme from the Canada First party, to provide a local habitation for which the National Club was formed, raised a laugh by pointing out that one of the planks was the representation of minorities. He called upon the members of the club to rally for that plank, which would be a source of strength to the Opposition leader. A plank that his friend, Mr. White, would appreciate, whatever may have been his attitude toward it before last October, was that which proposed a reconstruction of the Senate.

Mr. Rowell then turned to his subject which was the development during the past two decades of the organization of the Empire.

Mr. Rowell showed how the Imperial Conference and Imperial Council of Defence and the improvement of Imperial means of communication and the creation of Imperial citizenship, and an Imperial court of appeal were gradually making for the unity of the Empire. One flag and one king were the centre of that organization. Autonomy of the dominions and co-operation in the concerns of the Empire was the way of progress. Mr. Rowell, in closing, expressed very great satisfaction over Mr. White's announcement regarding Imperial defence.

Toll of Smashed Windows.

London, May 18.—Voluminous testimony by policemen regarding the smashing of shop windows by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and others in their equal suffrage demonstrations occupied most of the third days' session in Old Bailey of the trial of Mrs. Pankhurst, the acknowledged leader of the militant suffragettes, and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and her husband, editors of "Votes for Women," charged with conspiracy.

HE DENIES PROTESTING

Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon Flatly Contradicts Sailors

SEAMAN STICKS TO STORY

London, May 18.—At the Titanic inquiry yesterday afternoon Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon gave absolute denial to the stories that either he or his wife protested against the lifeboat, in which they left the Titanic, returning to rescue other passengers, or that the question of going back to pick up any of the persons in the water was ever mentioned.

Sir Rufus Isaacs: "You heard the cries of drowning people. There was room in the boat and if you had returned you could have saved some?"

Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon: "It is hard to know what I was thinking about at the time. I was looking after my wife."

He continued: "I never heard it suggested that we should return nor that any of the passengers objected to doing so. I did not think it would have been possible to go back nor did the idea of returning enter my mind."

Sir Rufus Isaacs: "You know now that you could have saved many?"

Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon: "I don't know."

Sir Rufus Isaacs: "You had lots of room in the boat?"

Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon: "Yes."

The deep interest taken was shown by the presence of many fashionably dressed women. Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff-Gordon were represented by Henry E. Duke, M.P., an eminent counsel.

Charles Hendrickson, at the morning sitting stuck closely to his story that the objections raised by the Duff-Gordons were responsible for the boat not going back to the rescue of the drowning.

Sailor Symonds, who was in the boat, said he had not heard the Duff-Gordons protest but admitted that someone representing the Duff-Gordons interviewed him shortly after his return to England.

James Taylor, a fireman of the Titanic, and one of the crew of the Duff-Gordon's boat, confirmed Hendrickson's statement that passengers had objected to returning to the rescue. He could not say, however, who they were. The suggestion was made that the boat should return but a lady said it would be swamped. He had since identified that lady as Lady Duff-Gordon. Two of the men passengers agreed with her. Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon took no part in the conversation. It came out that the other woman in the boat was Lady Duff-Gordon's secretary.

Witness admitted that he had been seen by somebody on behalf of Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon to whom he had made a statement and had received seven shillings for expenses.

The enquiry was adjourned until Monday.

Canada Will Never Be "Adjunct."

London, May 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the Royal Colonial Institute dinner last night Earl Grey, recalling Empire Day in Toronto, when 8,000 youths shouldered their rifles proud of their ability to do their part in the defence of the Empire, said the sight made one feel that if there should be a question of "adjunct," Canada wouldn't be an adjunct.

Alluding to the fact that Great Britain bore the burden of Empire defence the speaker declared thousands of Canadians were galled by the thought, envied her privilege, and were counting the day until they could stand and claim a share.

Reproves Gretna Green Marriages.

Brockville, May 18.—Judge McDonald yesterday discharged on suspended sentence George Cardiffe, who pleaded guilty to a charge of perjury in swearing falsely to the age of a girl in procuring a marriage license. They went alone to a minister and were married, the groom being nearly 19 and the bride 16.—The judge called attention to the importance of more care being taken by ministers in marrying young people who come to them unattended.

As Socialists See It.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 18.—"Capitalist Concentration," and "Soulless Industrial Despotism" are held responsible in the National Socialist platform for the higher cost of living, increased burdens of armament, poverty, slums, child labor, and most of the insanity and crime.

It is charged of the anti-trust laws, that the prosecutions, indictments and investigations based upon such, have proved utterly futile and ridiculous.

Found Guilty of Wounding.

Toronto, May 18.—Before Judge Denton in the sessions yesterday afternoon, James Cordwell was placed on trial on a charge of wounding with intent to maim his wife, Annie Cordwell, and was found guilty by the jury. The assault was committed on March 17 last, in their grocery store on Sumach street. Cordwell, striking the woman on the head with a stout hardwood stick, with a claw hammer, and with a steel box opener. He was remanded for sentence.

Poor That Schooner Sank.

Halifax, May 18.—It is feared that the crew of some unknown schooner perished as a result of the collision with the Boston-bound steamship A. W. Perry. A wireless message received in Halifax yesterday stated that the second boat sent out by the Perry to search for wreckage, had found the bount of a vessel. The collision occurred off Little Hope, not more than twelve miles from Liverpool harbor. In answer to an enquiry addressed to the harbor master at Liverpool harbor, he stated that nothing has been heard these of any damaged vessel.

M. H. Nickerson of Clark's Harbor, inspector of life-saving stations, thinks it is a fishing schooner, which would carry fifteen men.

Ambassadors Are Deadlocked.

New York, May 18.—A St. Petersburg cable says: Despatches sent out from Paris declaring that French and Russian diplomatic relations had been severed were officially denied here last night. It was admitted, however, that a deadlock had developed between the two ambassadors, and that Russia would back up her envoy in the trouble.

BY RANDALL PARRISH

"One boss left the bunch here," he declared positively. Keith swung himself out of the saddle, and bent over to study the tracks. There was no doubting the evidence—a single horse—the only one shod in the bunch—with a rider on its back, judging from the deep imprint of the hoofs, had swerved sharply to the left of the main body, heading directly into the south-east. The plainsman ran forward for a hundred yards to assure himself the man had not circled back; at that point the animal had been spurred into a lope. Keith rejoined the others.

"Must have been about daylight they reached here," he said, picking up his dangling rein, and looking into the questioning faces about him. "The fellow that rode out yonder alone was heading straight toward Carson City. He is going for fresh horses, I figure it, and will rejoin the bunch some place down on the Arkansas. The others intend to keep farther west, where they won't be seen. What do you say, Ben?"

"Thet's the way it looms up ter me, Cap; most likely 't was the boss himself."

"Well, whoever it was, the girl is still with the others, and their trail is the easiest to follow. We'll keep after them."

They pushed on hour after hour, as long as daylight lasted or they could perceive the faintest trace to follow. Already half-convinced that he knew the ultimate destination of the fugitives, Keith yet dare not venture on pressing forward during the night, thus possibly losing the trail and being compelled to retrace their steps. It was better to proceed slow and sure. Besides, judging from the condition of their own horses, the pursued would be compelled to halt somewhere to rest their stock also. Their trail even revealed the fact that they were already travelling far less rapidly than at first, although evidently making every effort to cover the greatest possible distance before stopping. Just as the dusk shut in close about them they rode down into the valley of Shawnee Fork, and discovered signs of a recent camp at the edge of the stream. Here, apparently, judging from the campfire ashes, and the trampled grass along the Fork, the party must have halted for several hours. By lighting matches Keith and Bristoe discerned where some among them had laid down to sleep, and, through various signs, decided they must have again departed some five or six hours previous, one of the horses limping as if lame. The tired pursuers went into camp at the same spot, without venturing to light any fire, merely snatching a cold bite, and dropping off to sleep with heads pillowed upon their saddles.

They were upon the trail again with the first dimness of the grey dawn, wading the waters of the Fork, and striking forth across the dull level of brown prairie and white alkali toward the Arkansas. They saw nothing all day moving in that wide vista about them, but rode steadily, scarcely exchanging a word, determined, grim, never swerving a yard from the faint trail. The pursued were moving slower, hampered, no doubt, by their lame horse, but were still well in advance. Moreover, the strain of the saddle was already beginning to tell severely on Waite, weakened somewhat by years, and the pursuers were compelled to halt oftener on his account. The end of the second day found them approaching the broken land bordering the Arkansas valley, and just before nightfall they picked up a lame horse, evidently discarded by the party ahead.

By this time Keith had reached a definite decision as to his course. If the fugitives received a fresh relay of horses down there somewhere, and crossed the Arkansas, he felt positively sure as to their destination. But it would be useless pushing on after them in the present shape of his party—their horses worn out, and Waite reeling giddily in the saddle. If Hawley's outfit crossed the upper ford, toward which they were evidently heading, and struck though the sand hills, then they were making for he refuge of that lone cabin on Salt Fork. Should this prove true, then it was probable the gambler had not even yet discovered he identity of Hope, for if he had, he would scarcely venture upon taking her there, knowing that Keith would naturally suspect the spot. But Keith would not be likely to personally take up the trail in search for Christie Maclaire. It must have been Hawley the nwho had left the party and ridden easy, and up to that time he had not found out his mistake. Yet if he brought out the fresh animals the chances were that Hope's identity would be revealed. Bristoe, who had turned aside to examine the straying horse, came trotting up.

"Belonged to their outfit all right, Cap," he reported, "carries the double cross brand and shod shebang is upon the Smoky; saddle galls still bleeding."

Waite was now suffering so acutely they were obliged to halt before gaining sight of the river, finding, fortunately, a water-hole fed by a spring. As soon as the sick man could be made comfortable, Keith gave to the others his conclusions, and listened to what they had to say. Bristoe favoured clinging to the trail even though they must travel slowly, but Fairbain insisted that Waite must be taken to some town where he could be given necessary care. Keith finally decided the matter.

"None can be more anxious to reach those fellows than I am," he declared, "but I know that country out south, and we'll never get through to the Salt Fork without fresh horses. Besides, as he doctor says, we've got to take care of Waite. If we find things as I expect we'll ride for Carson City, and re-outfit there. What's more, we won't lose much time—it's a shorter ride from there to the cabin than from here."

By morning the General was able to sit his saddle again, and leaving him with Neb to follow slowly, the others spurred forward, discovered an outlet through the bluff into the valley, and crossed the Santa Fe Trail. It was not easy to discover where those in advance had passed this point, but they found evidence of a late camp in a little grove of cottonwoods beside the river. There were traces of two trails leading to the spot, one being that of the same five horses they had been following so long, the other not so easily read, as it had been traversed in both directions, the different hoof marks obliterating each other. Bristoe, creeping about on hands and knees, studied the signs with the eyes of an Indian.

"You kin see the diff'rence yere whar the ground is soft, Cap," he said, pointing to some tracks plainer than the others. "This yere hoss had a rider, but the rest of 'em was led; thet's why they've bungled up the trail so. An' it wa'n't ther same bunch thet went back east what come from har—see thet split hoof! There ain't no split hoof p'intin' ther other way—but yere is the mark of the critter thet puts her foot down so fur outside thet we've been trailin' from Sheridan, an' she's p'inting east, an' being led. Now, let's see whar the bunch went from yere with thet split hoof."

This was not easily accomplished owing to the nature of the ground, but at last the searchers stumbled on to tracks close in under the bank, and one of these revealed the split hoof.

"That makes it clear, Ben," exclaimed Keith, decidedly, staring out across the river at the white sandhills. "They have kept in the edge of the water, making for the ford, which is yonder at the bend. They are out in the sand desert by this time riding for the Salt Fork. Whoever he was, the fellow brought those five horses, and the five old ones were taken east again on the trail. The girl is still with the party, and we'll go into Carson City and re-outfit."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

AGAIN AT THE CABIN.

They were two weary days reaching Carson City, travelling along the open trail yet meeting with no one, not even a mail coach passing them. Evidently the Indians were so troublesome as to interrupt all traffic with Santa Fe and the more western forts. The slowness of their progress was on account of the General, whose condition became worse in spite of Fairbain's assiduous attentions. With no medicine the doctor could do but little to relieve the sufferings of the older man, although he declared that his illness was not a serious one, and would yield quickly to proper medical treatment. They constructed a rude travois from limbs of the cottonwood, and securtly strapped him thereon, one man leading the horse, while the doctor tramped behind.

Keith, fretting more and more over this necessary delay, and now obsessed with the thought that Hawley must have rejoined his party on the Arkansas and gone south with them, finally broke away from the others and rode ahead, to gather together the necessary houses and supplies in advance of their arrival. He could not drive from his mind the remembrance of the gambler's attempted familiarity with Hope, when he had her, as he then supposed, safe in his power once before in that lonely cabin on the Salt Fork. Now, angry with baffled ambition, and a victim of her trickery, there was no guessing to what extremes the desperado might resort. The possibilities of such a situation made the slightest delay in rescue an agony almost unbearable. Reaching Carson City, and perfectly reckless as to his own safety there from arrest, the plainsman lost no time in perfecting arrangements for pushing forward. Horses and provisions were procured, and he very fortunately discovered in town two cowboys belonging to the "Bar X" outfit, their work ther accomplished and about to return to the ranch on the Canadian, who gladly allied themselves with his party, looking forward to the possibilities of a fight with keen anticipation. Keith was more than ever delighted with adding these to his outfit, when, on the final arrival of the others, the extra man brought from Sheridan announced that he had had enough, and was going to remain there. No efforts made revealed any knowledge of Hawley's presence in Carson City; either he had not been there, or else his friends were very carefully concealing the fact. The utter absence of any trace, however, led Keith to believe that the gambler had gone elsewhere—probably to Fort Larned—for his new outfit, and this belief left him more fully convinced than ever of the fellow's efforts to conceal his trail.

The party escorting Waite reached the town in the evening, and in the following grey dawn, the adventurers forded the river, and mounted on fresh horses and fully equipped, headed forth into the sandhills. The little company now consisted of Keith, Fairbain, who, in spite of his rotundity of form had proven himself hard and fit, Neb, having charge of the single pack horse, the scout Bristoe, and the two cowboys of the "Bar X," rough, wiry fellows, accustomed to exposure and peril. It was emphatically a fighting outfit, and to be trusted in emergency.

They followed the cattle trail south toward the Salt Fork, as this course would afford them a camp at the only water-hole in all that wide desert lying between. With this certainty of water, they ventured to press their animals to swifter pace, although the sand made travelling heavy, and the trail itself was scarcely discernible. It was a hard, wearisome ride, hour after hour through the same dull, dreary landscape of desolation, the hot, remorseless sun beating down upon them, reflecting up into their blistered faces from the hot surface of sand. There was scarcely a breath of air, and the bodies of men and horses were bathed in perspiration. Not a cloud hung in the blue sky; no wing of a bird broke the monotony of distance, no living animal crept across the blazing surface of the desert. Occasionally a distant mirage attracted the eye, making the dead reality even more horrible by its semblance to water, yet never tempting them to stray aside. After the first mile conversation ceased, the men riding grimly, silently forward, intent only on covering all the distance possible. Late that night they camped at the water-hole, sleeping as best they could, scourged by the chill wind which swept over them and lashed grit into exposed faces. With the first grey of dawn they swung stiffened forms into the saddles and rode on, straight as the crow flies, for the Salt Fork. They attained that stream at sundown, grey with sand dust, their faces streaked from perspiration, feeling as though the sun rays had burned their brains, with horses fairly reeling under them. According to Keith's calculation this cattle-ford must be fully ten miles below where the cabin sought was situated; two hours' rest with water and food would put both horses and men again in condition, and the travelling was easier along the banks of the Fork. With this in mind, cinches were loosened, the animals turned out to graze, and the men, snatching a hasty bite, flung themselves wearily on the ground.

All but Fairbain were asleep when Keith aroused them once more, a little before nine, unable in his impatience to brook longer delay. Within ten minutes horses were saddled, weapons looked to carefully, and the little party began their advance through the darkness, moving cautiously over the uneven ground, assisted greatly by the bright stars gleaming down upon them from the cloudless sky overhead. The distance proved somewhat less than had been anticipated and Keith's watch was not yet at eleven, when his eyes revealed the fact that they had reached the near vicinity of the lonely island on which the cabin stood. Reining in his horse sharply, he swung to the ground, the others instantly following his example, realising they had reached the end of the route. Hands instinctively loosened revolvers in readiness for action, the younger of the "Bar X" men whistling softly in an effort to appear unconcerned. Keith, with a gesture, gathered them more closely about him.

"If Hawley is here himself," he said quietly, watching their faces in the starlight, "he will certainly have a guard set, and there may be one anyhow. We can't afford to take chances, for there will be five men, at least, on the island, and possibly several more. If they are looking for trouble they will naturally expect it to come from the north—consequently we'll make our attack from the opposite direction, and creep in on them under the shadow of the corral. The first thing I want to do is to locate Miss Waite so she will be in no danger of getting hurt in the melee. You boys hold your fire, until I let loose or give the word. Now, Doctor, I want you and Neb to creep up this bank until you are directly opposite the cabin—he'll know the spot—and lie there out of sight until we begin the shooting. Then sail in as fast as you can. I'll take Bristoe and you two 'Bar X' men along with me, and when we turn loose with our shooting irons you can all reckon the fight is on. Any of you got questions to ask?"

No one said anything, the silence accentuated by the desert wind howling mournfully in the branches of a near-by cottonwood.

The four crossed the stream, wading to their waists in the water, their horses left bunched on the south bank, and finally crawled out into a bunch of mesquite. As they 'crept along through the darkness, whatever doubts Keith might have previously felt regarding the presence on the island of the party sought, were dissipated by the unmistakable noise made by numerous horses in the corral. Slowly, testing each step as they advanced, so no sound should betray them, the four men reached the shelter of the stockade. The older of the "Bar X" men lifted himself by his hands, and peered cautiously over.

"Eight hosses in thar," he announced soberly; then turned to Keith. "Say, Jack, what do you figure this shebang to be, anyhow? You don't reckon it's old Sanchez's outfit, do yer?"

"Wall, if that ol' cuss is yere now we'uns is sure in fer a fight," he commented positively.

They rounded the corral fence on hands and knees, crawled into a bunch of bushes somewhat to the rear of the silent, desolate-appearing cabin, and lay down flat behind a pile of saddles, from which position they could plainly discern the rear door. There was no movement, no evidence anywhere that a living soul was about the place. Keith could barely distinguish that it was Bristoe lying next to him.

"Had their camp over there in the corner of the corral when I was here before," he said in a whisper. "Where do you suppose they can be now?"

Even as the words left his lips a man came sauntering slowly around the eastern corner, his outlines barely visible, but the red glow of a pipe bowl showing plainly. He stopped, directly facing them, yawning sleepily, and then turned the other corner. Another moment, and they distinctly heard a voice:

The remedy applied to the sleeper must have been efficacious, as, an instant later, another figure slouched into view, the new arrival rubbing his eyes with one hand, the other clutching a short-barrelled gun. From the high peak of his hat it was evident this new guard was a Mexican. He walked to the corner, glanced along the east side wall toward the front of the cabin, and then, apparently satisfied the coast was clear, started toward the stream, shuffling along within a foot of where Keith lay flat on the ground. A moment later the men heard him splashing softly in the water; and Keith rolled over, his lips at Bristoe's ear.

"Slip down there, Ben," he whispered, "and quiet that fellow. I'll find out how many are on the west side. Do the job without any noise."

He waited until the scout had disappeared like a snake, not even a rustling leaf telling of his passage, and then silently crept forward himself, yet with less caution, until he was able to peer about the corner of the cabin and dimly distinguish the blanketed forms of several men lying close in against the side wall. They rested so nearly together it was difficult to separate them in that darkness, stars giving the only light, but he finally determined their number at five. Five; the Mexican would make six, and there would surely be another guard posted out in the front—seven. But there were eight horses down there in the corral. Then the eighth man—Hawley, without doubt—must be in the cabin. At the thought Keith's teeth clinched, and he had to struggle to control his passion. But no; that would never do; he must discover first exactly where the girl was located; after that they would attend to the curs. Before creeping back to the others, he made quick examination along the rear of the cabin, but could find no visible point of weakness. He tried to recall from memory the nature of the lock on that back door, but could remember nothing except an ordinary wooden latch. If he could insert a knife into the crack that might very easily be dislodged. He drew his hunting knife for the attempt, and, first glancing about, perceived a man creeping toward him. It proved to be Bristoe.

AWFUL NERVOUSNESS AND PARALYSIS CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

The Miracle Worker, That Cures When Doctors Fail — Now Used In Thousands Of Homes In Every Section Of Our Great Country.

Two Men, From Widely Different Parts Of Canada, Tell How They Found Health And Happiness By Taking These Wonderful Fruit Juice Tablets.

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9th. 1911

"I have been in Walkerton in business for a good many years and many of my townsmen know that my health, for long periods, was precarious. My trouble was extreme nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its most severe form. It was so bad that I could not sleep before about four in the morning. I noticed in the Toronto "World" one of your published testimonials of how someone had used "Fruit-a-tives" for similar trouble, and asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, his opinion on the matter and he advised their use. I immediately procured several boxes and I am pleased to say that I now enjoy splendid health and could not possibly feel better. I can eat with every degree of satisfaction, and sleep without an effort, which pleasure I was denied before I was fortunate enough to use "Fruit-a-tives". I strongly advise anyone suffering from like complaints to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" immediately. Don't stop at a few doses—but continue using "Fruit-a-tives" until a cure is accomplished."

MR. ALEX. McCARTER

ALEX. McCARTER.

BRISTOL, N.B., JULY 25th. 1911.

"I am unable to say enough in favor of "Fruit-a-tives", as it saved my life and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything more for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally, I took "Fruit-a-tives" for the constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of "Fruit-a-tives", I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me.

MR. ALVA PHILLIPS

I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day. I reverently say "Thank God! for Fruit-a-tives".

ALVA PHILLIPS.

These two cases show the wonderful powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in restoring a shattered nervous system to health and vigor—in entirely curing obstinate Constipation—and in completely relieving Indigestion and Dyspepsia. What other one medicine in the whole world has ever done so much? "Fruit-a-tives" cures.

It is the only medicine in the world actually made from fruit with the addition of valuable tonics. It is pleasant to take and will always give the most gratifying results when taken regularly.

LARGE FAMILIES CROWD TENEMENTS IN OLD BERLIN

By United Press.

BERLIN, May 18.—With 600,000 of the two million and a half population of the Kaiser's capital crowded into one room dwellings at the rate of from five to ten persons to a room, the authorities of Berlin are seriously concerned with the problem that confronts them. Rapid as has been the building in Berlin it has not kept pace with the growth of the city and the erection of new houses has been almost entirely confined to the better residence sections of West Berlin.

Berlin is known the world over as the one large city without tenements. It is indisputably the most modern and up-to-date city of Europe. And so it is. Probably in no other city are the streets literally "scrubbed" daily. Electrically propelled water wagons with rotary thin wire brushes pass over the streets. The streets are flooded with the water, immediately behind come the stiff brushes thoroughly scrubbing the macadam. Following the combined water and scrub wagons, come men with long hand scrapers lined with rubber similar to those used by window cleaners.

"OLD BERLIN."

But this is so called "New Berlin." Across the river on the east and north is "Old Berlin," the Berlin of Frederick the Great. These the Berlin authorities have the some sociological problems that confront the authorities of other cities.

There are some 8,000 to 10,000 empty flats, ranging from two to nine rooms, in "New Berlin." In "Old Berlin" as high as 13 persons have been found living in one room. Fairly moderate as are the rentals, ranging from $20 to $60 for three to six-room steam-heated flats, might be considered by American, no German workman, street car or railroad employee, earning but $30 to $35 a month, can pay such rents.

FRIGHTFUL CONDITIONS.

Accompanied by a physician, I made a short tour of investigation on the north side. It was noon, but no one could suspect it in the dim light of the basement room into which we stepped. On a very soiled bed of rags, was a woman and her young baby. The rooms were kitchen, dining room, sleeping room and living room all in one. The family consisted of the husband, wife, four children, the oldest girl being 16. At night they divided the one room with two young workingmen, to whom they rented sleeping space on the floor.

On another street we came to a place in the second court back of one room and a tiny kitchen. They were occupied by a man and wife and eight children. There were three beds for the ten. These two places were typical of a dozen that were visited. The death rate is very high from these sections of the city. Privacy and morality are impossible under such conditions.

A proposition will be laid before the diet to appropriate at least one million dollars for "small dwellings," to be rented at a rate within reach of the workingman.

Harry Lauder Very Ill

London, May 18.—The Daily Sketch says that Harry Lauder is seriously ill here with an internal complaint due to overwork. Two surgeons visited the singer. His wife declared they expressed the hope that they could cure him without an operation.

PUGILIST LEAVES $40,000

New York, May 18.—At the Na-Gas Rublin, the heavyweight boxer, as filed for probate in Brooklyn, leaves an estate valued at $40,000 to Mrs. Sarah M. Rublin, the widow, who is prominent in the suffragette movement. Brothers and sisters of the deceased, who live in the West, have started a contest on the ground that the will was not properly executed and that it was signed under undue influence.

HECLA FURNACE

No Gas
No Dust

FUSED JOINTS CANNOT LEAK

Comfortable heating is possible only with a Furnace that cannot leak gas and dust. At every joint where a leak might otherwise occur, the Hecla is sealed tight. We do not trust to bolts and cement. The wear due to constant expansion and contraction would grind out the cement and leave a series of leaks for the escape of gas or dust. To make a joint that will be as tight after years of service as it is when new, we fuse the steel sides and cast-iron frames of our radiators by a patent process. This welds the iron and steel into one piece.

Homes heated by Hecla Furnaces 20 years old are getting as pure air from the registers as when the Furnace was new.

6—A Trail of Ink

HOW A CLEVER BANK "KITER" WAS RUN DOWN ON A SLENDER CLUE.

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.)

(Editor's Note:—In order that no annoyance may accrue through the publication of these narratives to persons involved therein, other names and places have in many instances been substituted for the real ones.)

The National Bankers' Protective association is an organization formed by the bankers of this country to protect themselves and the money in their care from the onslaughts of that considerable class of sharp-witted and reckless men who live by "working banks."

This class is divided into two minor classes—the "rough workers" and the "kiters." The former phrase is used in detective parlance to designate the gentlemen who travel around the country and blow bank safes. The "kiters" are the persons who obtain money by forgery, raised checks, altered drafts, false identifications, and other misrepresentations. Although the safe-blowers get more space in the papers, because of the spectacular character of their achievements, they are the least troublesome of these two types of criminals. A couple of yeggmen will blow a safe in a country bank in Painted Post, Neb., shoot the town marshal in the leg, and get away with $5,000, and the press of the country will ring with the news. But all the time there is going on the shrewd, silent work of the "kiter," which seldom gets into the papers, but which continually is costing bankers and depositors thousands of dollars.

To catch a "yeggman"—a safe-blower—is nothing more or less than straight police work. To catch a "kiter" is a problem of intricate detective work, for the "kiter" is a man of brains, where the "yegg" is merely one of force, and the former knows better than anyone in the world how to cover his tracks to escape detection. There is living in California at the present time an old gentleman who retired on a pension granted him several years ago by a combination of bankers who calculated that it would be better to pay him to remain honest than to risk losses from his skilful methods of forgery.

It is hardly likely that banking history of this country will see such another incident. The National Bankers' Protective Agency employs the Burns Detective Agency to do all its work now, and no matter how shrewd a forger may be, how scientific his methods, the Burns system, backed by the Bankers' association, is sure to get him in the long run. At the same time there are hundreds of men—mostly young fellows in desperate financial straits—who tempt fate by passing bad bank paper. Such criminals are soon run to earth. It is the old scientific fox, the man who has made "kiting" a profession, who makes trouble, and the first one of these gentlemen that I ran down while working as a Burns detective was the best of the lot.

In Medillion, N. Y., there are three banks, the Old National, the First National and the Farmers' and Merchants'. One Monday morning the office manager of our agency came down to the office to find on his desk a telegram from each of these banks requesting that a man be sent up at once.

"A job for you, Cornell," said the manager, handing me the messages. "Beat it up there as soon as you can."

I caught a Lackawanna train at 10:30, and at seven in the evening I was registering in the best hotel in Medillion, a town of 7,500 people. After three days' work I had unraveled the following tale of what had happened to the banks of Medillion:

A month before a man named Clawson, who conducted the most prosperous coal yard of the town, had decided to sell out and retire from business. He had advertised the sale in a retail coal trade publication that circulated among coal dealers throughout the country. In a few days, or to be precise, just three weeks before I arrived in town, a prosperous, energetic looking man had appeared in answer to the advertisement. He introduced himself as Milton K. Jenkins, said he had been in the coal business years before, in Chicago, had quit it and gone to New York, where he had been working as a coal salesman for the last five years. The death of an uncle, said he, recently had placed him in possession of a little money. He wanted to get into business for himself. He wanted to get out of the grind and worry of the city. He wanted to be his own boss. He had been in Medillion once before and liked the town. As soon as he had seen Clawson's advertisement he had said to his wife, "There's the place for us, Jennie, if the business is any good," and had hied himself straight away to the town.

"Now," said he energetically, "show me what you've got to sell."

The man's knowledge of the coal business was so complete as to assure Clawson at once that he was talking to an old and shrewd hand in that line. His bearing and address had all the earmarks of success and forcefulness. He knew how much coal cost at the mines down in Pennsylvania, how much freight rates were, and what coal ought to sell for in Medillion. He smiled appreciatively when Clawson showed him his books and demonstrated that the people of Medillion were willing to pay even a little more than what coal ought to sell for in that town.

"I see you know the game, too," he said; and Clawson naturally was a little flattered.

Clawson named a price of $5,500 on his plant as it lay then, in the early summer with little stock in it. This was an unreasonable price, and Jenkins said so at once.

"Five thousand is the top-notch price I can see myself paying for it," said he, "and probably $4,500 will be what it looks like when I've looked it over carefully."

Clawson grumbled that $5,500 was his only price, but inwardly he was pleased. He had set $4,000 as what he expected to realize from his sale.

Jenkins began to go into the details of the business with him as no one but a man skilled in that line could do. He covered the field with his investigations and questions in a way that aroused Clawson's admiration.

"Mr. Jenkins," he said, "you can do twice as much business here as I did. You can teach them all something about the coal business."

"I know something about it," admitted Jenkins. "You haven't hustled quite enough. Don't you know that you ought to get a couple of factories into this town? I do. I got one in view now that I could bring here possibly. But you'll never get $5,500 out of me for your business."

Finally he wrote a check for $250 on the Twenty-fifth Street Bank of New York city for a five days' option at $5,000.

At the same time that he was dickering for the business Jenkins began to make inquiries about a home. Here again his evident character as an experienced and forceful business man asserted itself.

Clawson, quite convinced that he would make his sale at a price satisfactory to himself, eagerly carried Jenkins over to a real estate man named Cross and introduced him as a new and valuable addition to the population of Medillion.

Cross, likewise, was deeply impressed by Jenkins. He had no doubt of his ability to pay for the best house for sale in town, and Jenkins was at once taken out and shown a desirable property. It was an old homestead with large grounds and in good repair, and the price was $5,000. It was a fair price. Jenkins agreed at once to this. He went through the house carefully.

"Just about the kind of a place Jennie—my wife—would like," he said. "I'll get her up to take a look at it."

Cross had promptly begun the real estate man's old song: "Well, Mr. Jenkins, there are two or three other parties interested in this property, and I expect an offer for it almost any moment. If you want—"

"Anybody got an option on it?" asked Jenkins.

"No."

"Give me a three-day option on it for $200," said Jenkins. "I'd close with you now, but my wife always wants a finger in the home pie." He wrote a check for $200 on the Twenty-fifth Street Bank of New York city.

The third man in the net was Flink, the big furniture man of the town. He came in the third day, when Mrs. Jenkins, a prepossessing, well dressed woman, came to town. By this time the news had been printed in the town's little daily paper that Mr. Jenkins of New York was buying out Clawson's coal yard and purchasing the old homestead from Cross for a home. Also, it was rumored, Mr. Jenkins was connected with several manufacturing enterprises which were considering Medillion as a possible location.

Mrs. Jenkins came into Flink's Furniture Emporium, and with the good-natured assistance of Jenkins began to pick out furniture for their new home. She had taste and an apparently generous pocketbook. Flink rubbed his hands as he saw her pick nothing but the most expensive stuff in his store. He extended himself to please Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins. The bill for the articles that Mrs. Jenkins had set aside ran up to $1,200.

"It will be some days before we want them sent up," said she. "But when we do want them it will be in a hurry."

A deposit of one hundred dollars was made, and the pair departed. The deposit was in the form of a check on the Twenty-fifth Street Bank of New York.

Clawson, Cross and Flink hurried at once to their banks with their checks. Clawson banked at the Old National, Cross at the First National, and Flink at the Farmers' and Merchants'. The checks were taken for collection—and proved good.

Jenkins made such an impression that the Chamber of Commerce invited him as an honored guest to its weekly meeting. He was looked upon a citizen to be welcomed with open arms. Said the president of the Chamber of Commerce in introducing him: "Mr. Jenkins is what we need and want; a thorough-going hustler."

He was. At the end of a week's dickering with Clawson, he agreed to buy the coal yard at $4,750, $2,500 to be paid at once, as the remainder on six months' time. He wrote a check as before for the $2,500.

"And by the way, Clawson," he said, "Wish you'd take me down and introduce me to your banker. I'll have to transfer my account here in a few days."

Clawson accordingly introduced Jenkins to the Old National bank in a cordial manner. As soon as he had been properly identified Jenkins presented a draft issued by the Twenty-Fifth Street bank for $1,625. The cashier paid it without a murmur of suspicion.

From Clawson, Jenkins went to Cross, and within half an hour he had repeated his operation at the First National, there cashing a draft for $1,510. From Cross he went to Flink, and Flink accommodatingly identified him at the Farmers' and Merchants', where he secured $1,300 on a similar draft.

That night Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins left Medillion. Next day the banks discovered that the drafts were all forgeries. The forms on which they were issued were mere cheap imitations of the Twenty-fifth Street Bank's paper. Hurried telegrams went to the New York bank:

"How much is Jenkins' balance?"

The Medillion banks had been cleverly stung.

This was the story that I gathered thread by thread when I investigated the trouble in Medillion.

To trace Jenkins I had specimens of his hand-writing, excellent descriptions of him, and the knowledge that he was an expert in the coal business. Beyond that—nothing. He had come to Medillion, stayed a little, and flitted away from $4,435 of the bankers' money. He had left no trail to follow. He was a thorough-going "kiter."

Back in New York I found that Jenkins had been a depositor of the Twenty-fifth Street Bank for only a short time. Nothing was known of him there. He had left no trace. So far as any trail was concerned the existence of Jenkins began with his appearance at this bank and ended with his disappearance from Medillion. None of the clumsy little tracks left by the crude criminal were to be found in this case. He had just come, had got the money, and had gone. He was an artist.

"Well," said Chief Burns, "it looks as if a new 'kiter' had begun work among the banks in dead earnest. But I've seen work that resembles this before."

We hunted through our records, and sure enough, the same methods that had worked in Medillion had been used in Michigan about a year before. A coal man had advertised his business for sale, a prospective purchaser had appeared, had established his credit, had cashed drafts through introductions to the local banks, and had flitted, no one knew where. And no one had discovered.

Going back still further we found that about a year before another case of the same sort had been reported from Iowa. This was before the Burns agency began to handle the Bankers' Protective association's business. We hunted through all the records we could find, and as near as we could judge, about once every twelve months a man appeared in some small town as Jenkins had appeared in Medillion, and put over about the same kind of a job. The man never had been apprehended or even located. Upon investigating these old cases we found that the "kiter" always used a different name, that he was sometimes shaved, sometimes bearded, sometimes splurgily dressed, and sometimes quietly—but always he was a coal man of forceful character and apparent success. It was obvious that he and our "Mr. Jenkins" were one and the same man.

A hurried flitting around the country placed in my possession the various specimens of handwriting that had been left by the "kiter." At first I was amazed and disappointed to discover that they were all apparently the work of different men; but a few days' work on the part of our handwriting expert demonstrated that one man had written them all, but that he had so skilfully disguised his hand on each occasion as to make each specimen entirely different in appearance from the others. My respect for my quarry grew immensely at this revelation. The man was absolutely the cleverest forger I ever had heard of.

Now I knew that the Jenkins who had fooled the banks in Medillion was an old and expert hand at crime, that he had worked at it for at least six years, and that he seemed to do only one job a year. And still I was as far away from any apparent clew as when I started on the case. Somewhere in America this forceful, clever fellow was living on the proceeds of his crime. But what a task to look for him! For this Jenkins was not of the criminal type. He would not be found by hunting among crooks. He might be anywhere and in almost any plane of society.

The only physical proof that I had of the existence of Jenkins was his variously disguised hand-writing. This was the only trace that he had left of his presence. But this was enough, as it proved.

I will not tire the reader with telling about the weary weeks of futile toil I spent at first on the Jenkins case. They were weeks of searching and researching without finding anything. Nothing interesting happened in that time. But in the end, after the weariest sort of digging, I finally unearthed the salient fact that all of the coal men who had been the means of attracting the fatal Jenkins to their towns had advertised their business for sale in the same coal trade publication.

This publication was a small weekly issued at Philadelphia. It went only to retail coal dealers. It was not for sale on newsstands, nor was it to be found in any library in the country. It had 3,752 subscribers, and these were about the only people in the country who knew that such a publication existed. Reasoning the thing out it seemed possible to suppose that Jenkins for years had been a constant reader of this paper.

The case for this theory summed up thus:

Six certain men had published in this paper ads offering for sale a coal business, which Jenkins had answered. These particular ads had appeared in a space covering six years.

In three cases at least he had asserted that he had seen the advertisement in this publication.

He was so familiar with all the up-to-date news of the trade that he could hardly have obtained it any other way than reading closely the gossip of a trade paper.

Against this of course was the possibility that Jenkins had merely hit upon these particular coal yards by accident. At all events, this was the only clue that I had to work on.

In Philadelphia I found the publisher of the coal paper to be a crabbed old fellow who would have nothing to do with me at first. I looked around and found that he was head-over-heels in debt, and that his bank held two notes against him which they were threatening to call in, which action would have put the old fellow out of business. The president of the bank, on my request, wrote a little note, and upon its presentation the publisher was glad to turn over for my inspection all his records. Together with the hand-writing expert I set to work on all the letters that the old man had in the office.

Fortunately the old fellow was of a suspicious habit of mind. Whenever anyone sent in an order for a subscription he not only placed the order on his books, but he filed away the original letter, to produce if the subscriber denied payment. He had over 2,500 of these letters, and our task was to look at each one and compare the signatures with the various disguised hand-writings of Jenkins. For I had decided that about the only way of getting a line on our man lay in the possibility that he was a subscriber to the coal trade paper, and that he had written a signed letter to the editor.

As the expert was looking over the 1,306th letter he jumped up with a shout.

"Here's our man!" he cried, and threw over to me a letter signed "A. J. Cummings, Neria, Ohio."

To the layman this signature was totally different from any of those we had found left by Jenkins, but the expert quickly proved that it was from the same hand.

The letter was written on Cummings' letter-head—he was in the coal and wood business in Neria—and was for a five years' subscription to the paper. Trains didn't run fast enough to suit me after that. I rose up to Cummings-Jenkins looked around wildly.

Medillion and got Clawson and Cross and Flink together. I wired the cashiers of banks in other towns who had been fleeced by Jenkins. I went to Neria, Ohio, a tiny town of 1,500 people, and got a spot on Cummings. He was a coal merchant—but I found that he was frequently absent from Neria for weeks at a time. And nobody knew where he went on these occasions.

I wired my bankers and the trio in Medillion:

"Come on to Neria and look him over."

They came as fast as trains could carry them. I pointed Jenkins out to them as he walked down the street. They recognized him, every man Jack of them, as "Jenkins."

Clawson went up and held out his hand.

"Hello, Jenkins," he said.

"You are mistaken," was the answer. "Cummings is my name."

"It is here," said Cross, stepping up, "but in Medillion it was Jenkins, all right."

"Yes," said Flink. "Why didn't you come back for your furniture?"

Cummings—Jenkins—looked around wildly. On every side of him he saw cashiers from the banks that he had swindled in the last six years. They greeted him by the different names he had used in their towns. Then I stepped up and showed him the letter he had written to the coal paper.

"But for this," I said, "we might never have got you."

Cummings was smart enough to see that the game was up. He made a complete confession, clearing up a lot of mysterious bank forgeries, and took 15 years in Auburn prison. His wife went free. She fought the case, alleging that Jenkins had forced her to help him by threats of death. She got a young jury, and she was a pretty, youthful looking woman.

We didn't care much about her, however. Jenkins—or rather Cummings—was the brains of the outfit, and we had put him where his brains couldn't do our clients any harm.

ALL AUTHORS ARE TALKATIVE

If You Know One, Be Tactful and Let Him Converse About His Work.

I know nothing about really great authors, but I think I speak for a large number of the followers of the trade when I say that they like to talk about their work, one great reason being that writing is a lonely profession. If you write, as a rule you must do it by yourself; or if you do attempt it in company, you or the company will be sorry. Therefore, when the writing is done, and a sympathetic listener offers, the writer is glad to wipe out some of the lonely hours with a little conversation.

So, if you know an author, don't be too breathless about his calling; treat him like a human being. Let him talk a little, and do not be shocked if he manages to keep the tears back when he tells you about his last short story. Only, be tactful.

Do not say, as an eager acquaintance once said to me: "Oh, I do think it is so interesting to write. It must be just fascinating when your manuscripts come back!" I discovered afterward that she meant proofs instead of manuscripts, but the mistake of just that single word made me, who am usually so garrulous about my trade, feel for the time being that I really did not care ever to speak of it again. So I repeat, let the poor author talk, but be tactful.—Atlantic Monthly.

IS FULL OF COMPLEXITIES

Drawback to the Much Vaunted Simple Life Is That It Is Not Simple.

The real drawback to "the simple life" is that it is not simple. If you are living it, you positively can do nothing else. There is not time. For the simple life demands virtually that there shall be no specialization. The hausfrau who is living the simple life must, after all, sweep, scour, wash and mend. She must also cook; from that even Battle Creek cannot save her.

She may dream sternly of Margaret Fuller, who read Plato while she pared apples; but in her secret heart she knows that either Plato or the apples suffered. And from what point of view is it simpler to have a maid of all work than to indulge one's self in liveried lackeys? Not, obviously, for the mistress; and it is surely simpler to be an adequate second footman than to be an adequate house a tout faire.

We should really simplify life by having more servants rather than fewer; more luxury instead of less. The smoothest machinery is the most complicated; and which of us wants to sink the Mauretania and go back to Robert Fulton's steamboat? One would think that the decision would be made naturally for one by one's income. But it is the triumph of the new paradox that this is not so.

Thousands of people seem to be infected with the idea that by doing more themselves, they bestow leisure on others; that by wearing shabby clothes they somehow make it possible for others to dress better—though they thus admit tacitly that leisure and elegance are not evil things.—K. F. Gerould in Atlantic Monthly.

SUGAR A HEART STIMULANT

Experiments of An English Physician Show Cures of Cases of Muscle Dilation.

Sugar has had its champions as well as its opponents. Its advocates have declared that, aside from its nourishing value, it carries with it a quick stimulation that is without perceptible reaction.

On the other side, says the Bakers Weekly, "we have had radical utterances connecting sugar with some of the most incurable of organic diseases. But an English physician recently contended that cane sugar is almost a specific in the treatment of certain diseases of the heart. Emphasis is laid upon cane sugar."

Dr. F. S. Locke of King's college, London, has kept the heart of a mammal beating for eighty to ninety hours after death of the animal simply by keeping the heart muscles sprinkled with powdered cane sugar. These later experiments with cane sugar, especially with reference to dilation of the heart muscles, show that in numerous cases cures have been effected that are of three or four years standing.

DISTANT HILLS ALWAYS STEEP

(By S. E. Kiser, in the Chicago Record-Herald.)

The task that seems so very great,
From which you daily shrink in dread,
Will never dwindle while you wait
And wish the way was clear ahead.
The traveller whose feet have burned
On dusty slopes, in valleys deep,
And on the rocky heights has learned
That distant hills are always steep.

The duty that, day after day
You sadly turn from, waiting still
And wishing it could fade away,
Perhaps is like the distant hill.
The tasks we try so hard to shun
Are often found, when forth we leap,
At last, to end them, quickly done—
The distant hills are always steep.

Why wait when there is work for you?
Why scan it from afar and sigh?
It may not be so hard to do
If you but press ahead and try,
We marvel, when upon the height
We let our glances backward sweep,
At all the gentle slopes in sight,
The distant hills are always steep.

SUNDAY DRINKING AND ACCIDENTS.

An employee in a hospital connected with the University of Vienna was caught in the machinery and severely injured one Monday morning while cleaning his elevator. He was promptly cared for in the surgical department, and having a strong constitution, pulled through. In giving an account of the accident at his clinic, Prof. Hochenegg, the chief surgeon, remarked: "The man forgot to shut off the engine before he began his cleaning. That, of course, he would forget to do only on Monday. Then, instead of reaching under the moving cable for his oil-can, he reached over it, which, of course, he would do only on Monday. Such things happen most frequently on Monday. On this point medical experience is in harmony with that of factory inspectors and accident insurance companies."

Commenting on the above, Mr. S. L. Transeau writes in the Scientific Temperance Journay of Boston, Mass. — This prevalence of accidents on Mondays in countries where Sunday is the chief drinking day, like France, Germany and Austria, has come out clearly in a number of investigations. In a few cases a larger percentage of accidents fell on Tuesdays instead of Monday, and here it developed that many of the workmen spend Monday in continuing or recovering from the alcoholic indulgence of Sunday, and do not come to work at all until Tuesday.

The testimony of experience as to the undesirability of the alcohol habitue in modern industry is further strengthened by the physiological explanations of his condition. Dr. Leopold Kraus pointed out in a lecture given in Vienna not long ago that the changes caused by alcohol, which dispose the drinker particularly to accidents are: unsteadiness of the hands, illusions of sight and hearing, and diminution of intelligence, and that these may be the results of either the temporary or continued effects of alcohol. The foremost leaders in the investigations of the relation of alcohol to accidents have been the German insurance societies, which have found that they were losing heavily by accidents resulting from alcoholic indulgence. The results of their investigations are of special interest to employers of labour in this country at the present time, because of the extension and enforcement of legislation requiring employers to pay a compensation to injured workmen.

AN ADVANCE MOVE IN GERMANY

Germany, that wonderfully progressive nation, is evidently tired of having outsiders think that Germany and beer are synonymous terms. We have frequently noted the advance ground taken by the Emperor of Germany and other leaders on the temperance question. Germany is great no. on account of beer, but in spite of it. A nation's greatness is manhood, and whatever destroys or debauches manhood weakens and robs a nation's best asset. Herr Franziskus Hahnel, the distinguished temperance advocate of Bremen, now of Leipsig, Germany, has supplied the National Advocate, of New York, with a copy of the letter of the Ministry of the State of Lippe to Dr. Kraut, of Hamburg, stating that:

"After inquiry from the authorities concerned, and with the gracious consent of his Highness, the Prince the Pollard System is to be used in this country experimentally, in suitable cases, in such a way that convicted persons, who are drunkards, especially if their offence was committed while they were intoxicated, are to have the prospect of having the whole punishment remitted on the condition that during a certain period they abstain from alcohol altogether, and during such period commit no further offences. In carrying out this measure the Ministry of State relies upon the co-operation of the Blue Cross Associations and Good Templar lodges which exist in this country."

BE NOT DECEIVED

"Oh, I take it to aid digestion. I suffer so from dyspepsia," was the reply of an army officer when cautioned against the use of alcoholic drink. What folly! Why, men put dead flesh into alcohol to prevent it from corruption. To take drink to allay or reduce an inflammation is like putting oil on fire. Injuries and gunshot wounds fare far worse in a drinking man than in a sober one. "But for the alcohol in him," says the doctor, "or the bad blood caused by beer, there might be hope."

A man's motive in taking the drink may be good, but liquors never stop to ask what you want of them; they go in and do their work of death.

But it is said that liquor is needful and useful in fatigue duty. Is it? Why do the soldiers need it? Is it to give them warmth? This it never does. Alcohol produces a sudden excitement and glow, but it abstracts heat, and the man is colder after it than he was before it. Does he need it for nourishment when exhausted? This it does not give. The idea that alcohol is consumed in the system, and is properly food, is exploded. It is never digested, more than a stroke of lightning. It remains in the system, disturbing every part until it is expelled through the lungs and liver.

It goes to the brain and produces brain fever and madness, and the man who drinks it on fatigue duty is but the more fatigued and the more disqualified for his arduous duties.—The National Advocate.

Never has the big organization, the Daughters of the Empire, been so active in its philanthropic work as at present. Under the leadership of its president, Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff, the Imperial Daughters of the Empire had a meeting and banquet at the Hotel Victoria. Two hundred women sat down to the dinner, and many brilliant speeches were delivered by these clever women. Canada has given to this splendid organization social and intellectual strength. There is scarcely a province of Canada that has not contributed one or more prominent women to this order.

This meeting, called for the purpose of framing the ensuing year's plans, was typical of the strength and clear-headed executive ability of the English woman. With a woman of exceptional aptitude for her particular branch of the work, the organization drew up a comprehensive scheme of work for the coming year. The officers in charge of the meeting were: Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff, president; vice-presidents, Mrs. K. H. M. B. Lapham, Mrs. Frances E. Parker, Mrs. Carl van Pusten; recording secretary, Mrs. James T. Robb; treasurer, Miss C. Grace Hay; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Augustine J. Wilson; honorary president, Mrs. James Bryce; honorary vice-presidents, Lady C. Purdon Clarke and Mrs. W. Courtney Bennett; directors, Mrs. Ralph Brydges, Miss Louise Henderson, Mrs. Beverly Betts, Mrs. Frederick S. Goodwin, Mrs. Joyce J. Broderick, Mrs. Geo. Massey, Mrs. Geo. Phillips, Mrs. Linneaus E. La Fetra, Mrs. N. Appleton Prentice, Mrs. Edwin S. Howe, Mrs. Chas. H. Peck, Mrs. Woodcock, Mrs. Coulson Gardiner, Mrs. Francis Parker, Mrs., Harmon A. Vedder, Mrs. Chas. Huntington, Mrs. O'Day, Mrs. Wm. H. Locke, and Miss J. K. Gaffray.

The clannish spirit of the British-born subject which pervades their every thought in the big objects of life develops even in the smaller details. Because Mr Angus Gordon, the manager of the Victoria, is a Canadian, and spends his many years as the manager of the King Edward Hotel at Toronto, these loyal daughters of the Empire hold their meeting at the Victoria, where they are made to feel like real guests. In conversation with one of the Canadian menu, Lora, Mr. Gordon discovered that the rumour had gone abroad that the Victoria was to be closed. Mr. Gordon said instead of that the Victoria has recently been installed with up-to-date equipment and new furnishings, and still holds its own against the fashionable new hotels. The fact that Canadian money is taken at par is another reason for the popularity of the Victoria.

Adopting Chubby

(Short Story.)

Chubby sat disconsolate on the front stoop. On the other side of the street a lot of boys were playing fire engine—playing it with his express wagon, too, but Chubby was not permitted to leave the yard, and they had grown tired of a fire district confined to a solemn circuit of the flower-bordered path.

Chubby had vaguely intimated that presently Jane might come along with hot gingerbread, but they had not listened to the suggestion. If they saw Chubby eating gingerbread, they were prepared to swarm back again, but, in the meantime, they preferred the opposite side of the street, where Brown's empty stable made a splendid fire-house, and they could race clear to the corner and back in answering an alarm.

Chubby's plump face was drawn into the suggestion of a whimper as he contemplated their treachery. But he was too game to cry, and presently the lines relaxed, and Sue Sanderson, coming down the street, received a smile in answer to her greeting.

"What are you doing here all alone?" she cried, briskly. "Why don't you play with the other little boys, Chubby?"

His under lip quivered a little. "They won't stay in our yard, and ma won't let me play on the street," he explained. "They were here, but they took my wagon and went away."

Sue's face grew soft. Chubby's mother was a woman famous in the club world. She was too busy to play with her little boy. It was enough that he had plenty of toys. She did not realise that an express wagon is not good in a yard so small that one cannot run it. It was enough that he had it. Sue rescued the wagon from the boys, but the desertion of his playmates still grieved Chubby, and she took the disconsolate little fellow in her arms and, sitting down on the steps, proceeded to tell him a fairy story.

All her latent maternal instinct was brought out by this forlorn little fellow, and so interested did they grow in the romance she was weaving that neither noticed that someone had stopped outside of the gate until, with a shout, Chubby wriggled out of her arms and bumped down the steps to greet his Uncle Harry.

"I came to see if Chubby wanted to go for a drive," he explained, as he came up the steps with his small nephew on his shoulder. "I don't like to interrupt your visit."

"I just stopped because he seemed so lonesome," she explained. "The boys had taken his wagon and were playing with it on the other side of the street. I was sorry for him and I was telling a story."

"Tell it to us both," the man pleaded, as he looked toward the buggy. "It will be a fine drive over to the lake and back."

For a moment she hesitated, but Chubby added his plea and presently they were in the buggy, Mrs. Morrison regarding Chubby's departure with decided relief. She had an important paper to write, and the house would be quiet all the afternoon.

"I'm sorry for the little fellow," said Harry Kinsman, as they drove slowly homeward. "I suppose if anyone told Nell that she was not a good mother there would be a mighty row, but she is so occupied with her club affairs that Chubby gets little mothering. I come around as often as I can and take him out, but this has been a red-letter day with you along."

"It was very good of you to ask me," she said, as she glanced down at the little fellow sleeping with his head against her shoulder.

"I did not know before that you cared for children," he said slowly. "Somehow, I've always seemed to think of you as one of the society butterflies."

"That's so," he admitted, wonderingly. "I suppose it's because I've only met you at teas and things. But when I came up the walk this afternoon your face looked like a Madonna's."

"The Madonna of the marcel wave?" she asked, with a little laugh. "I'm afraid that I was not dressed for the part."

"I didn't see your hair or your clothes," he denied. "I only saw your face, and wondered how it would seem to Chubby if he had a mother who could look like that."

"You are unfair to your sister," she protested. "Because she is a very busy woman, it does not follow that she is always engrossed with her papers."

"I suppose not," he admitted, "but you don't know how you looked. It was like meeting a stranger whom you felt that you must have known for a long time. I can't explain. I've always liked you, but somehow when I saw you on the steps this afternoon I just wanted to take you in my arms and tell you how much I loved you. I don't know how I've kept from blurting it out before now. It's not much like a real proposal, Sue. I can't get down on my knees and ask you to be mine, but I do want you, dear, and so does Chubby. Will you marry the two of us, little girl?"

"I think Chubby needs me," she said softly.

"I need you more than Chubby," he declared.

"And I—I think I've needed you for a long time, Harry."

"Kiss me too," he commanded. "I wish you was my mamma."

"It's all right, old fellow," said Harry, with a happy laugh. "We're going to adopt you, the future Mrs. Kinsman and I."—Lottie Weber in St Louis Globe-Democrat.

DISTANT HILLS ALWAYS STEEP

"Five years ago I thought an older woman an idiot because she told me she could not read ten minutes after dinner without falling asleep. Now my scorn is punished, for I, too, fall asleep over the most fascinating book," said a woman.

This is so common an occurrence that it bears investigation. Somnolent as is much of modern fiction, it is not the book that is at fault, but the reader. Nor is the trouble mental.

This after-dinner sleepiness—when it is not sheer laziness or yielding to a bad habit—can be traced to one of three causes, bad air, a bad liver or wrong eating.

When the gas is lighted in our overheated houses the air is quickly vitiated, and a sluggish sense follows. A preacher thought himself a failure because so many of his parishioners slept during his sermons. In his depression he was about to resign when a doctor suggested opening the windows and doors of the church while the people stood for a hymn before the sermon. It worked. With the purer air the proportion of sleepy-heads decreased.

If the sleepy ones will make a practice of standing for five minutes after dinner, while the windows of the living room are raised, they will find that their brains can go on working.

A bad liver is responsible for many social failures. If the liver is sluggish the brain follows suit and sleepiness results. If this sleepiness is not excessive it need cause no alarm—save on the score of good manners—but if one drops to sleep on all occasions, if there is a drowsy expression and the eyes are dull, serious trouble may follow if a cure is not sought.

If, instead of coffee—which makes many people bilious, though it is supposed to keep them awake—lemon and water, without sugar, is taken as an after-dinner cup, one will soon cease to demand naps.

This is too mild for excessive sluggishness, which demands treatment by a physician, perhaps a course of gymnastics with special liver exercises.

ONE EATS TOO MUCH.

Overeating is one of the surest causes of sleepiness in the early evening. It is not flattering to one's self-love to feel she cannot keep awake because she is "stuffed," but that is what it amounts to. Give the digestive organs too much to do and the blood that should feed the brain goes to the stomach.

Instead of using stimulants to keep you awake eat less. Get up from the table feeling not quite satisfied, and you will rarely be asleep within the next half hour.

Often this sleepiness comes from the monotony of following pages of close print. If one talks for a half hour directly after dinner it will be possible to read later.

Occasionally the sleepiness is mental. One reads from a sense of duty, is not interested, and naturally sleeps by the end of the first chapter. Such a habit of sluggishness is so deteriorating that it is better not to read at all in the evening. Do something you are interested in, if it is nothing more uplifting than a game.

The sleep habit out of season is not one to be encouraged. Give in to it and you are soon unfitted for social intercourse, and soon you are too lazy to exert yourself to be agreeable. There is no swifter road to ruin for good manners than to become reconciled to constant sleepiness. No one is flattered at yawns, open or suppressed, or eyelids that are only kept open by heroic effort.

So hunt the cause and cure it if you want to keep yourself youthful. Sleepiness is not a sign of age—rather to the contrary—but the woman who "drops off" when she is alone will soon drop off in the presence of company, which is a sure symptom of increasing years to the public mind. Life is far too short to spend needless hours in sleep. This is wanton time wasting.

Just Hold the GILLETTE Naturally

Shaving with the GILLETTE is not a fine art, nor does it require skilled labor. You may be "no good with tools," yet you can shave yourself easily and well with the Gillette Safety Razor.

Hold it lightly, as illustrated, and it falls naturally into the right shaving position, blade edge just touching the skin. Then draw it across the face, not hoe fashion, but with the Angle Stroke shown, and the keen GILLETTE blade will cut smoothly in any direction—with the grain, across it, or against it.

If you want a light shave, or if your skin is tender, screw the handle tight.

If you want a close shave, loosen the handle about a quarter turn. This allows the blade to spring away from the guard a little and take more hold. Buy a GILLETTE and forget your shaving troubles.

Standard Sets, $5.00. Pocket Editions, $5.00 to $6.00. Combination Sets, $6.50 up.

Stratford's Agricultural Society will ask the City Council for $15,000, to take over the Exhibition grounds and Driving Park and provide for improvements. The grounds would then be under city control. Sounds like an echo of Peterborough.

Civic representatives of Stratford visited Buffalo recently and report that several manufacturers will visit that city shortly and will examine its advantages along with those of other cities.

London's Council wants to annex its eastern suburbs. There are manufactories in that district and their engagement has been boosted by the tornadoin. Hence the likelihood of the success of the movement.

London expects to build a new $250,000 city hall and estimate that the Government will contribute $120,000.

It is stated that the Edwardsburg Starch Co. has definitely decided to locate a plant on No. 2 Island, Fort William.

L. L. Pelletier, former Mayor of Fort William, and director of the West Algoma Agricultural Society, has resigned from the Society's Board, alleging a general spirit of apathy on the part of citizens, and dilatory financial assistance shown by the twin cities.

Welland Board of Trade is taking steps to try to secure a lower fire rate. The lack of a steam fire engine, paid fire brigade, and fire alarm system are some of the contributory causes to the existing high rate.

Welland Council referred to its Finance Committee a request from the Board of Trade for $1,000 to advertise the city.

The City Solicitor of Welland states that a $75,000 waterworks by-law, passed in Council need not be presented to the ratepayers.

Welland is beginning the work of street paving.

Chatham has a Scenic Committee. On Tuesday, May 14, they held a general clean-up of all residences, the work being completed in one day. Teams were provided to cart the refuse to the city dump. The committee desires to teach the school children cleanliness and fire preventive methods. To that end the teachers in the Public Schools will be taught how to keep premises clean and the best precautions against fire.

The committee have also decided to inaugurate a competition among the children in which suitable prizes will be given for the children writing the best essay on the subject.

Remember that all fires are the same size at the start and that every fire is a personal responsibility of the occupant of the building for the first five minutes of its life.

When a fire starts try to put it out in its early stages of existence by using nearest appliances at hand, or else call the firemen at once.

Keep cellars and attics free from combustible material.

Do not let electric wires or globes come in contact with curtains or draperies.

See that the gas pipes do not leak.

Do not enter a cellar with a light unless you are sure that pipes are not leaking.

Do not fill gasoline stoves or lamps when lighted or with a flame in the room.

When using gasoline in cleaning it is advisable to use in the yard, but in any event it is never advisable to use in the room with an open light.

Keep chimney free from soot.

Why It's Colder When Windy

A chill, penetrating wind does not make any day really colder, but it adds tenfold to discomfort and actually causes a greatly increased sensation of cold, or to state it more correctly, it makes it much more difficult for a man to keep the skin of his body up to the normal temperature. An accurately registering thermometer is an exact guide to the degrees of heat and cold, but it is grossly misleading so far as "feeling" cold is concerned. In no particular does this show more clearly than when the thermometer registers a few degrees below zero and the calm, clear cold is pleasant rather than otherwise, when a few days later the thermometer will show several degrees above zero and the unwary traveller is nearly paralyzed in the biting blast that seems to pierce to the very marrow of his bones.

The wind blows away the warm air envelope the body is constantly forming. That marvellously contrived self-controlling furnace—the human body—keeps at the same temperature, 98.6 deg. Fahrenheit, summer and winter, night and day. (There are slight variations in individuals and among young children, but otherwise in health this temperature is constant). A surface as large as the human body, constantly fed by the fuel of food, kept steadily at a temperature of 98.6 deg., radiates heat to a degree that seems incredible. It is estimated that a man of average build, 5 ft. 8 in. in height, throws off enough heat every day to raise six and one-half gallons of water from freezing point to boiling point, and of this immense loss of heat, seven-eighths of it is radiated, conducted or evaporated from the skin.

From this it can be seen how dense is the envelope of moist, warm air constantly encircling the body. An excellent example of this is seen in the cold bath many people take in the morning. After the plunge, if one can lie perfectly still, within twenty seconds the radiation of the body has overcome the cold of the water and has warmed a thin film of water almost to the temperature of the body, and if the bather remains motionless and the water is not disturbed this thin layer protects him from the colder water beyond. Any movement of the water drives away this heated layer and the body has to warm anew what has taken its place. But if it be running water, with constant change, this warming process has no chance. The wind, blowing away the heated air, is identical in its operation with a wave driving away the heated layer of water.

Clothes are for the purpose of catching and retaining this layer, or rather series of layers of heated air. For this purpose wool is ideal (on a calm day), as it permits the evaporation of moisture, which is necessary to health, and being a poor conductor of heat, retains the radiated warmth. But being loosely woven for ventilation, an open woollen garment is of little avail on a windy day, the wind blows through. Hence comes the value of fur, the skin of which is still porous enough to allow some evaporation, but which by its structure does not afford an opportunity for the wind to blow through and thus denude the body of its inside garment of warmed air.

Johann Strauss

Johann Strauss wrote some of the most alluring waltzes that have ever bewitched the feet of the world, and they have aptly been described as "those irresistible waltzes that first catch the ear, and then curl around the head, till on a sudden they invade and will have the legs."

The music of the waltz originally consisted of two sections, each composed of eight measures in three-fourths or three-eighths time. Examples of these primitive forms are found in Beethoven's and Mozart's German dances. The next development was the stringing together of several of these 16-measure waltzes, and the addition of trios and a coda. Hummel first effected this in 1806. The base of modern waltz music, however, is found in the dances of Schubert. But it is to Weber that the waltz owes what, musically speaking, is its most important development. The composition of the "Invitation to the Dance" marked the adoption of the waltz form into the sphere of absolute music, and prepared the way for the stream of pianoforte and vocal waltzes not intended as accompaniments to dancing, the best examples of which are the waltzes of Chopin and Rubinstein.

Johann Strauss, the first, called "the father of the waltz," raised the waltz to a higher level than it had ever been raised before, and Johann, his son, called "the waltz king," developed the waltz to its present form. Strauss, the son, wrote over four hundred pieces of dance music of which "The Beautiful Blue Danube," his first vocal waltz, was the most popular. His waltzes were built up of such beautiful musical themes, often so inspired and moving, as well as rhythmically alluring that they were in a sense symphonic.

In the early part of the 19th Century the composition of waltzes for dancing was almost entirely in the hands of the Viennese composers—and the Strauss family in particular. The Strauss waltzes, which were written for the ballrooms of the gayest dancers in the world, are full of piquancy, coquetry and vigour, as full of momentary hesitancies and sudden abandonment of reserve as the conduct of coy but ardent lovers.

Wagner wrote: "A single Strauss waltz surpasses in grace, refinement and real musical substance most of the products of foreign manufacture which we often import at great cost." Hans Von Buelow publicly advocated the occasional inclusion of Strauss waltzes in the programs of symphony concerts, and Brahms wrote under the opening measures of "The Blue Danube Waltz," "Not, unfortunately, by Johannes Brahms."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Understudy of the Sun

McClary's Sunshine Furnace

WHEN Old Sol retires for the day he appoints an understudy for the purpose of keeping Jack Frost where he belongs—Outside.

Years ago McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace, by reason of its marvelous heating capacity and the balmy June air it suffused the house with, was specially appointed Understudy to the Sun. That appointment has been confirmed year after year, and—your "Sunshine" Furnace—Jack Frost's Master awaits your orders for the coming winter.

Remember the past winter—the Frost King was very active — He battered us with a three months' siege of snow and ice — Almost conquered the thermometer by chasing the mercury out of sight. But he failed to penetrate thousands of homes, because the Understudy of the Sun — McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace —was on the job in the cellars of these homes.

It's easy to keep Jack Frost at a safe distance with the "Sunshine" Furnace. He may storm and rave outside, but there is no place for him within—because, the Understudy of the Sun has demonstrated its mastery in the home.

The average furnace is a glutton for coal—it literally burns up money. The "Sunshine" Furnace saves money—earns its cost in a very few years because it burns coal sparingly. Call on the McClary agent of your locality and ask him to prove that statement true. If he cannot convince you—show you that the "Sunshine" Furnace will cut your coal bills by a very pleasing margin we don't want your order. That's the fairest way we know of doing business—does it appeal to you?

There are a multitude of reasons why the "Sunshine" Furnace does save fuel—reduce coal bills—reasons that will be printed in the following advertisements. Here is one that should make you call on the McClary agent at once—the "Sunshine" Furnace has four radiating surfaces—surfaces that gather up the heat greedily and diffuse it liberally all over the house.

But—you just call on the McClary agent and ask to be shown. If you do not know him write us at our nearest address and we'll tell you.

You certainly owe it to yourself to find out why McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace is called the "Understudy of the Sun."

Good Wives

Small marvel there are so many good wives. All wives are good, of course. Women may find fault with their husbands. What husband has ever been known to admit that he did not have a good wife? The public schools make good wives.

"They are training men to unload pig iron by science, and they find that a trained man can do one-third more work with half as much effort as the untrained worker," said a Denver matron who is interested in teaching young girls domestic science.

"So it would be in housekeeping. I have often thought that a little one-act play, 'Getting Dinner,' in which a woman would show how a good dinner can be got with the greatest amount of celerity and ease would be a splendid thing for our vaudeville theatres.

"You'd wonder how many girls have ever even learned to turn down their bed coverlets. Young women admit that they have been 'reared to ornament the parlour' and know nothing whatever about any sort of housekeeping.

"The same young women cannot run a seam in a napkin or hem a sheet or even thread a needle. They must have even the simplest things they wear made for them.

"If men were as helpless as these women the world would stop.

"In the public schools the small girls take to cooking with great avidity. They first like to learn to make themselves 'goodies.'

"Very shortly they get to being proud of cooking things that their fathers and big brothers like. Directly they have beaux and they like to feed them well, too. Nothing pleases a girl so much as to have her sweetheart express appreciation of her cake. Boys and young men, you know, are like girls in their appetites. They like cake and ice cream. Their tastes have not been spoilt by tobacco and liquors.

"I have never known a girl who did not like a chafing dish. Even the undomestic ones like to cook in their bedrooms in the middle of the night."

Lame Back Cured

Nerviline is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for—wherever there is pain. Apply Nerviline and the pain disappears.

No remedy so thoroughly cures same back, stiff joints, sore muscles, lumbago, and cold in the chest as

Nerviline

The farmer, the mechanic, the man who works at hard labor, is subject to the baneful influence of dampness, fog, and inclement weather. It's hard for him to escape pain. What he needs at home is a bottle of Nerviline, which gives instant ease to every kind of pain.

Nerviline is about four times as strong as the ordinary liniment. It gets right at the core of pain and cures it as no other remedy can. So strong and concentrated is Nerviline that one application is always as good as six ordinary rubbings with other liniments. Try a large 25c bottle. Sold everywhere.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

THE NO GLOVE MOVEMENT

There is an old saying that a French woman dons her gloves in the privacy of her boudoir, an English woman while coming down the stairs and the American tugs on her gloves when half down the street. And if this is so, it would appear as though for once the Parisians are imitating their American contemporaries.

The no-glove fashion is particularly noticeable in Paris, where many smart women are carrying their gloves in their hands instead of putting them on. The gloves they carry are exceedingly fine suede ones in beautiful tints of biscuit, ecru and tan.

For some time past women have been flouting the old inexorable law that the hands should be covered in the evening, and at the theatres and the less ceremonious parties the wearing of gloves has been on the decrease.

There is also a new liking for duck's foot yellow gloves, which several years ago were exceedingly modish. These are worn for morning walks.

The reason assigned for the no-glove movement is the fact that rings with very large gem settings are fashionable, and muffs are exceedingly popular. It is customary to take to the theatre a large muff, in which the hands are buried. But the gloves must be there, too, loosely carried in the hand after the manner affected by men.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy that was completely cured of fits. He experienced terrible fits at an early age and had them on our front porch. I tried many remedies and consulted but all of no avail. I finally got Dr. Miles' Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and gave a complete cure. He is now quite hearty and grows. It has been three years since he had the last spell. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines credit wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

"WHEN THE CURRENT FAILED"

(Short Story.)

John Fayersham, of the Electric Power Workers' union, spoke as one inspired. Every ear in the great hall hung on his words, every eye fastened on his tense nervous figure. He seemed a magnetic personality on the platform, lashing up their emotions with his fierce words, till at times they broke out in little, short, snapping snarls like pistol shots; and again, when he touched the deeper things that mattered—their lives, their hopeless future—did they respond with a low note of anger that was like the growl of a distant storm.

"Tonight we cease work," said John Faversham simply, in a hushed voice that came as a fine, unconscious dramatic effect after a passionate outburst. "We cease work. Let the oppressors stoke the fires; let the task-masters spend the night hours by the dynamos; let those who grow rich out of our lives taste the meaning of their labour."

He sat down to a great roar of applause. It was an audience of earnest men. And they were men who had reached the limit of endurance. But it was John Faversham who had showed them where their wrongs lay, who had crystallised their difficulties, so that they wondered why they had endured them so long. It was John Faversham who pointed the way they must go. It was John Faversham's words that set the seeds of revolt.

He left the platform flushed and eager, surrounded by his intimates.

"Man, you'll make your name over this!" Johnson, of the Machinists' said enthusiastically. "I'd like your chance, hanged if I wouldn't. You've done finely tonight. The fellows would never have had the pluck to stand fast if you hadn't shown 'em things."

Faversham hurried out into the nipping air, with the cheers of the meeting still playing pleasantly on his senses. To lead men is always exhilirating. To Faversham the experience had something of intoxication in it. It drove out all other thoughts. He found his mind going over the words of his speech again. The mass of upturned faces was photographed on his brain; the interjections vibrated in his ears.

With an effort he threw it all off. He had to get home. There was reason there. Only the excitement of the morning had caused him for a moment to forget that. There was a sick-bed his wife was watching over. Their only child had reached a critical stage of a dangerous illness—an illness that was baffling the doctor.

From the terminus of the tram he broke into a run. He began to be afraid lest the boy might be worse. The little one meant so much to them—to him and to Nelly, his wife. Each night they had taken it in turn to watch at the bedside. Together they had spent hours watching the forces of life ebb and flow, alternately despairing and hoping.

A dull fear began to assail him as he reached the gateway that led to the huge block of flats, a fear that perhaps things were not well. He mounted the stairs two at a time. The loud talk and laughter of some people coming out of one of the dwellings in this big hive irritated him. He had the odd feeling that the world should be on tip-toed silence while the littlelife upstairs fought for its continuance.

He reached the top, put his key in the door, and entered the tiny hall. It was dark. He switched on the light and hung up his coat and hat silently, noiselessly.

Suddenly a bedroom door opened. His wife came out, softly, and put a hand on his arm. He kissed her, and then noticed that her cheeks were wet.

"He is worse," she said huskily. "Oh ,John, I am so afraid!"

"Has—has the doctor been?" he asked, keeping a tight hold on himself, for he could feel his lips going nerveless.

"Yes; he is coming again with another doctor. He wanted a second advice. He thinks there may be need for an operation. But he would not take the responsibility alone. He promised to be back within half an hour. Twenty minutes of the time has gone. But it has seemed twenty years sitting watching him die."

They entered the room together, tightly holding each other's hand. They went to the bedside and looked at the little sufferer.

"Yes, yes, Billy," murmured Faversham, with breaking voice. "Are you getting better, laddie, yet?"

"I—I don"t know, daddy. I'm very hot. I wish I could get cool. And I am so tired—so tired. Kiss me, daddy."

The little curly head rolled about on the pillow. He chatted childish things for a moment, then lapsed into silence, as though life ebbed slowly away.

They watched for a little time. Then Faversham felt a tug on his hand. His wife went down on her knees by his bedside.

He followed. They both knelt together, with fingers tightly clasped.

The ring of the outer door bell made them lift their heads. "The doctor," she murmured.

He was on his feet instantly, and ran softly to open the door.

He gripped silently the hand of Dr. Sims. The new man's name was mentioned. It was the name of a surgeon whom Faversham had heard of in connection with a famous hospital case.

"We shall do our best," Dr. Sims said, with the professional manner of encouragement.

"Yes, yes, thanks, doctor," answered Faversham, in a sort of dream. The surgeon gave him a curt nod. He followed them to the bedroom, weakly, helplessly, this man, who, an hour ago, had been leading a great multitude of men.

He stood on one side while they hovered over his child, reading things and signs with their skilled eyes that to him were meaningless.

He left them, because he could not bear the suspense, and went to join his wife in the sitting room. He found her again on her knees. For himself, he leaned dully against the edge of the table. For a moment, as he stood, there flashed across his mental vision the sight and sound of the crowded meeting he had just left—the sea of faces looking up at him, the explosive exclamations as his words got home. But he seemed to be seeing it from afar off, as though it had happened many years ago. The cry came faintly: "Yes, we'll stop work—now, now!"

And then it was wiped out suddenly as from a slate with a damp sponge, and there was only the little room, with the one electric bulb lighting up its shabbiness, his wife on her knees sobbing into her hands, himself with set jaw and white face, looking at himself in a cracked mirror over the mantelpiece.

Footsteps sounded in the passage. His heart gave a leap. He nerved himself for the verdict.

"Yes, doctor?"

"We shall save him—with an operation. But it must be done at once, otherwise it will be too late. It would have been better to do it in the morning, for the sake of the light, but we can't delay.

"Light?" said Faversham. "You want more light in the bedroom? I can rig you up a couple of extra lights in half an hour."

"You can? That's famous! We shall be back in an hour with everything necessary. You get ahead with your electric light fitting."

Faversham plunged into the work with some kind of relief. The ghastly inaction paralysed him. To be able to do something that would help was like a load lifted from him. He got to work with his tools.

He was a skilled workman. He had wire in plenty, and two or three spare incandescent bulbs. He connected them up, and hung the bulbs so that the light would concentrate on the middle of the room, where the operating table was to be placed. He tested them. The light was good. If the doctors could only do their work as well!

"Yes, that light's good." said Dr. Sims. And the great surgeon also nodded approval of the lighting arrangements.

The leather cases containing their instruments were in the passage. Faversham, pathetically anxious to help, brought them and put them into the room.

"Now the table," said Dr. Sims. "And that's all, except a bowl of clean water. Perhaps we'd better have a spare jugful as well. Put the kettle on the hearth. There, that will do. And don't work yourself into a stew. I'm sure we shall go on swimmingly now. I need not say that you could not have a better man for the operation if you were the king."

"We can only sit and wait now," he said to his wife. I think it will be all right. He's the best man that can be found. These modern surgeons get as accurate as mechanics. And they've got a good light. Yes, a good light is everything in a job of this kind. Of course, it's horrible this waiting in suspense, but I believe it will be all right. Shall we make some coffee?"

They made coffee in the kitchen for the sake of something to do, but when it was made neither could drink it. They watched the clock carefully. They followed in imagination every cut of the knife.

"I think it must be over now," Faversham said in a hollow voice, although in his own mind he guessed that now was the critical moment. "We—we shall—soon know."

And then of a sudden the incandescent bulbs above his head went red, like the head of a dying fuse, and expired suddenly into darkness.

"What did you do that for?" he exclaimed. "You've switched it off!"

"No. I haven't. It must have sprung."

He put out his hand to the switch. It had not moved. He pressed it backwards and forwards. No light came.

There was no current.

He did not realise then what had happened. He opened the door into the passage. The light was out there. In that instant the bedroom door opened, and no flash of light shot out from there, for the room was in darkness.

Dr. Sims' excited voice broke out through the opened door.

"The light has gone! What has happened? It is likely to be fatal if it is not restored!"

"I don't know; I haven't done anything. The current is off. I don't understand."

He ran outside on the landing. That was in darkness, and the stairs as well.

Indeed, the whole place seemed to be smitten with black night, for the big stair window, through which the arc light in the street usually shone, was dark. The electric lights in the street were out as well. There came a noise above and below stairs from the tenants who were discomposed by the sudden darkness.

And then one voice from below cried out to him—who should have known it better than anyone else—the reason of it all.

He gave a wild moan of agony. This was his work!

For a second or two he stood paralysed into dumb, agonised helplessness; then he leaped down the stone steps. He ran through a knot of complaining people without ceremony out into the street. There was a little shop just closing where they used the more primitive gaslight.

"Candles," he gasped. "A handful—quick!"

He snatched them up and ran. He swore wildly at the people who impeded his way. He ran into his own flat.

"I've got candles," he cried—"twenty of them, or more!"

"It is too late," said Dr. Sims very gently.

Beyond in the sitting room he could hear the sound of a woman sobbing.

The Age of Hurry.

This is the age of hurry. More and more people are flocking to the towns and cities, where offices and factories, stores and workshops make life like clockwork. The machinery must be started at the blow of the whistle, the salespeople must be ready at the stroke of the gong, and the home must be run at the same swift pace to keep time with the busy workers. Business must be attended to, let the strain on the human system be what it may.

There is the hurry at breakfast, the hurry to work, the hurry to accomplish the daily stint, the hurry at lunch, the hurry home, the hurry to meet evening engagements.

There is no time for rest or sleep, no time for the nerves to renew their lost vitality, no time for the body to rebuild its wasted tissues, no time for digestion or assimilation of food—the spirit of hurry is everywhere, and few can escape its influence.

As a result of this constant strain you find yourself irritable at slightest provocation, and wonder why it is so. Did you ever realize before that you are almost always making an effort to be on time—that you are almost always in a hurry?

In the youth of our grandfathers paralysis, locomotor ataxia and nervous prostration—diseases so common to-day—were rarely heard of, because the nervous system was not always kept at highest tension, as it is to-day.

Heart disturbances are among the early indications of an overtaxed system. There are stomach troubles, brain fag, headache and neuralgia. You cannot rest or sleep, you start up suddenly at the slightest noise, your nerves are on edge, you are in constant dread of paralysis or insanity.

Oh, if you could only get away from it all to some quiet place to rest and to let nature restore your wasted system. But you cannot. Business must be attended to. You must be at your daily grind. Then what is to be done? Many have solved this problem by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now rejoice in health and strength. They were just as much run down and discouraged as you are, but persisted in this treatment until their old-time vigor and vitality were restored.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The Greatest of Nerve Restoratives

Since Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the very elements of nature which go to form new, rich blood, and create new nerve cells and muscular tissue, it only seems reasonable that this should be the treatment best suited under the conditions here described. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. LYING IN STATE.

Copenhagen, May 16.—The body of the late King Frederick VIII. of Denmark reached the Danish capital yesterday, and is now lying before the altar of the old Castle Church at Christianborg. There it will remain until May 26, when it will be taken on its final journey to Roskilde, 19 miles from this city, and interred in the tomb containing the bodies of most of the former Danish kings in the ancient church of that picturesque little town.

When Talbotten wharf, in the inner harbor of Copenhagen, where the royal yacht Dannebrog landed the body of the dead sovereign on Wednesday, on its return from Germany, the coffin was borne by naval officers to a hearse which was waiting. It was then [illegible] the streets, lined with troops and [illegible] of with [illegible] of Christianborg Castle, [illegible] than X. of Denmark, [illegible] kon of Norway, with [illegible] bers of the royal family, walked behind. The queen mother, the new queen, and other women of the family, followed in state carriages.

Despite the military escort and the salutes of the guns the ceremonial was marked with extreme simplicity. The spectators appeared to be witnessing the grief of a private family rather than the obsequies of a monarch.

Preceded by an escort of cavalry, artillery, bluejackets and the King's Body Guard of Grenadiers in their scarlet coats and with their rifles bound with crepe, the procession went first through the grounds of the royal palace of Amalienborg, passed the United States legation, with the stars and stripes overhanging the streets, and then through the great Newmarket square and business thoroughfares to Christianborg.

In addition to the townspeople probably 100,000 visitors from outside the city lined the route, eight to ten deep, swarmed on the roofs, at the windows of buildings, on the tops of omnibuses, delivery wagons, lamp posts and other vantage points.

After a march of about an hour the procession reached the Castle Church, which is a Grecian structure that escaped when the parent building was destroyed.

On arrival at the church, the casket was borne in by officers and placed on a catafalque. Here the funeral lost all public character, and only the royal family and their relatives entered and listened to the private memorial services, remaining for some minutes in silent prayer.

The church is to be reserved to-day and to-morrow for private devotions, but will on Monday and following days be thrown open to the public, who will be permitted to march past and view the body of the dead sovereign lying in state.

Devlin Elected.

Ottawa, May 18.—E. B. Devlin, M.P., who returned yesterday from Temiscamingue, where he directed the campaign for his brother, Hon. C. B. The complete figures, he states, show Mr. Devlin elected by 11, he having received a majority in all but two polls, which gave Aubin majorities of 16 and 4.

He who wishes to secure the good of others has already secured his own.—Confucius.

H. WILSON, Lock St., on premises

Resented the Speech.

Berlin, May 18.—The Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, yesterday in the Reichstag resorted to an unusual means of protesting against a sharp attack by the socialist, Philip Schiedemann, upon the emperor.

Referring to the recent threat made by Emperor William at a banquet in Strassberg that he would incorporate Alsace-Lorraine into Prussia, Schiedemann said: "We regard it as a momentous confession when, from a competent source, incorporation into Prussia is threatened as the most severe punishment that can be inflicted upon a people, a punishment like imprisonment and the forfeiture of civil rights."

Schiedemann's words called forth storms of protest and cries of "shame" from the Conservative benches.

The Imperial Chancellor rose excitedly from his seat and gave a sign to other members of the Government, upon which they all walked out of the House. A large number of the Conservative members followed their example.

Richeson Execution.

Boston, May 18.—Although Richeson expressed disappointment that he would not be permitted to live as he had requested, he displayed no other emotion.

Warden Briggs is not permitted by the law to announce the time of an execution, but it is generally believed that Richeson will not be electrocuted before midnight of Monday.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Strain in the wheat trade, altho unmistakably evident to-day, diminished when the fact became clear that no person or firm would be obliged to suspend. Signs of a revival of flour business and of demand for cash wheat cut a figure in partly restoring confidence, but not until the market had fallen more than 2 cents below last night's level. The close was irregular, ranging from ⅝c to ⅝c net decline to ⅛c advance. Corn finished ⅛c to ¼c off to 1⅛c up, oats unchanged to ⅜c down, and provisions varying from 10c less to 17½c gain.

Liverpool wheat closed ¼d to ½d lower than yesterday and corn unchanged. Paris wheat closed 1¼c to 1½c lower, Berlin 1c lower, Buda-Pest 1½c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 17.—Business in Manitoba wheat over the cable continues dull, owing to the very low prices being bid for shipment in all positions. The foreign demand for oats was fair, but cables were again weaker and the prices bid showed a further decline of ½c per quarter. The undertone to the cheese market continues strong and prices have scored a further advance of ½c to ¼c per lb., owing to the good demand from exporters for supplies and the higher prices ruling in the country. The butter market is firm with a good demand from the west and a fairly active trade was done on spot. Demand for eggs is good and the trade is fairly active at steady prices. Provisions are firm under a good demand.

RICHARD THORNBECK TELLS CORONER'S JURY OF THE TRAGIC END WHICH BEFELL THE LATE JAMES PETERS

"Hang On" Shouted Peters in His Death-Laden Moments to His Companion—Thornbeck Denies Alleged Conversation.

THE DOG IN THE BOAT?

"Shortly after my late husband had been appointed fishery inspector, and while he was away attending to his newly acquired duties, Richard Thornbeck came over to my house, and during the course of a conversation, said to me: "Jim's got the job of fishery inspector; somebody will give him a dump into the water some of these days."

I replied: "I don't think Jim has got any enemies who would do that."

Thornbeck replied: "Well! you will see."

"And sure enough, I did see," sobbed Mrs. James Peters as she concluded her testimony with the foregoing remarks.

Attired in deep mourning, and her face bearing every indication of her recent bereavement, Mrs. Peters, widow of the late James Peters, who, it is alleged, was drowned under peculiar circumstances on May 1st, told her story to the coroner's jury of this coincidental conversation which, she stated, occurred at her home on April 22nd.

Witness was one of a number who was called upon to give evidence at the adjourned session of the inquest, which was held last night in the Council chamber to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late James Peters, who met a tragic death, presumably by drowning, in the Otonabee river, a few days ago.

The jurymen were Messrs. R. J. Soden foreman), Frank Jacobi, William Zach, Harry Morgan, A. Brown, F. Miller, Angus McPherson, Charles Banks, Herbert Stinson and Harry Meredith. Mr. R. C. Braund was excused. Coroner Greer presided.

Crown Attorney Wood was present in the interests of the crown. Provincial Detective Boyd, who has been conducting an investigation in connection with the case, was also present.

The Star Witness Called.

The first witness called was Richard Thornbeck. He stated that he had occasion to go down the river on the day preceding the fatality, where he went to search for some traps which he had lost. He met Peters next day about noon. Deceased had been camping on the shore of the river. After dinner the two rowed down the stream a short distance. When in the vicinity of Baxter's creek the boat upset. Witness could give no explanation as to what caused it to capsize. Thornbeck climbed onto the upturned boat, and paddling with his hands, struck for shore, which was about twenty feet distant. Peters, when last seen by witness, was headed for the shore. His last words to Thornbeck were: "Hang on." Thornbeck paddled until he reached some bushes. Witness and John Bonner visited the scene of the accident next morning for the purpose of securing the boat.

Climbed a Tree.

Pictures of the fatal spot where Peters was supposed to have been drowned were produced. Witness was a little at sea as to the exact geographical location which Exhibit "A" and "B" portrayed.

When witness neared the shore, which was lined with small bushes he climbed up a small tree and shouted for help. Witness estimated the time he spent in the tree to be about two hours. He remained there until he was taken away by Mr. Stewart.

Memory Was Poor.

"What is your explanation of the upsetting of the boat?" queried the Crown Attorney.

Witness: "I don't know anything about it."

"You are an intelligent man. Tell us what you know about the upsetting of the boat?" persisted the Crown Attorney.

Witness: "That's all I know about it."

"How did you get the canoe into the bushes?"

"I paddled in with my hands."

Crown Attorney Wood sought to show that the distance from where the canoe upset, to the shore line, was 38 feet, and that the bushes extended a considerable distance into the water.

The witness denied and disclaimed knowledge of the presence of bushes in the water. Witness said that he and Peters were always on good terms, but he admitted that he had not visited the Peters home after the body had been brought home. He gave as his reasons that he was unable, owing to the effects of the exposure which he had undergone.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC HOTEL, EDMONTON, ALBERTA

Active operations are soon to be started in forging the third link of the chain of hotels which the Grand Trunk Pacific are to erect throughout Western Canada.

For some time Messrs. Ross & McFarlane, architects of Montreal and Winnipeg, have been engaged in the preparation of drawings for a hotel at Edmonton, Alberta, and within a few weeks the actual work of building will commence.

The site chosen for the hotel is possibly unequalled anywhere in western Canada, for it combines convenience to the business centre with a wonderful outlook over the valley of the Saskatchewan River. The building is to be located on McDougall street, almost at the crossing of Jasper Avenue and directly opposite to the Edmonton Club. The building is planned in such a manner as to take full advantage of the view across the beautiful ravine of the river which bounds the entire southerly exposure of the property.

The main entrance has been placed at the corner of McDougall street, and a private thoroughfare, which has been widened sufficiently to provide a splendid outlook for the rooms along the north side of the hotel. In order to take full advantage of the wonderful site and at the same time provide the most pleasing approach from the city side of the building, the entrances have been set back some distance from the corner and are approached through a large fore-court and covered logia. From this logia access to the building can be had directly into the rotunda, or for the convenience of the lady patrons, through a smaller entry leading directly to a ladies' reception room, the office, and the elevators.

From the rotunda a spacious corridor leads right and left, the former to a large, well lighted, octagonal palm room, the latter to the cafe, and main dining room while midway along this corridor on either side is the coat room and ante-room, the latter leading to the buffet, barber shop and billiard room.

Directly beyond the rotunda is the lounge, lighted by large segemental windows, from which a full view of the ravine and the river can be had. A portion of the McDougall street facade on this floor is to be given up to stores which have direct communications with the hotel proper and on the north elevation a separate entrance is provided to the bar and cafe.

Between the ground floor and the first bed-room floor a mezzanine gallery provides space for ladies' parlour and drawing room, fronting on McDougall street, while a banquet room and a series of private dining rooms are situated over the ante-room and the bar. The balance of this floor is devoted to galleries overlooking the rotunda, tea room and main dining room.

Above the mezzanine floor are five typical bed room floors, making seven stories in all, and giving two hundred sleeping chambers, each room having a private bath room, arranged so that it may be rented singly or en suite.

The building architecturally is distinctly of the Chateau type, modified to suit its purpose as a modern hotel. The exterior will be entirely of stone, and the building will be entirely fireproof, of re-inforced concrete, and the interior partitions terra cotta.

In mechanical equipment the new hotel will have all that recent experiments have proved to be of value. This includes three electric passenger elevators, one electric freight hoist, two electric dumb waiters running through the entire height, together with the most modern and approved heating and ventilating system.

The interior decorations and furnishings will be in keeping with the rest of the building, and the hotel when completed should play a big part in the future development of the city of Edmonton.

POTATOES WERE PLENTIFUL ON THE MARKET TO-DAY

And at the Same Old High Prices —Somebody Said They Would Have Been Extinct By This Time

BUTTER AND EGGS IN PLENTY

A few months ago the farmers were declaiming that there were no potatoes in the country. This morning every other rig was loaded to the hubs with potatoes that spent the winter months in some smug pit and are now being trotted to market with the expectations that they will realize $2.25 a bag.

A few weeks ago they asked $2.50 a bag and got away with it. To-day the price was confined to the $2.00 mark for seed and $2.25 for what are supposed to be for table use. This morning it was every other waggon, but in many cases there was nothing to relieve the unbroken display of potatoes.

Buyers can think over these conditions as they like, but the facts are there. Some of us who said there would not be a potato left by the 24th of May, were good salesmen in one sense, but their statements have not been verified. The only extenuating thing that can be said about them is that they have disappeared from the market, and these now selling potatoes have apparently but recently begun to tap their supplies and the people's purses.

The market was exceptionally large this morning with ample supplies of butter and eggs. Butter sold at from 27 to 30 cents and eggs at from 20 to 23 cents.

Chickens Were Scarce.

The supply of chickens was limited to a few dozen, which were quickly bought up at prices ranging from 50 cents each to $1.00 each.

One woman had a pair of fair-looking chickens, for each of which she asked 65 cents. Some man asked if she would take $1.25 for the pair, but she replied that twice 65 cents was not $1.25, at least not according to 'rithmetic she had been taught, and she still remembered her tables.

TWO SMALL BOYS FACE A SERIOUS CHARGE

Entered Store of East City Grocer and Robbed the Till in the Absence of the Proprietor

COMMITTED TO SHELTER

The appellations of two small boys were found inscribed upon the juvenile court register when the court convened at ten o'clock this morning. They were not on hand, however when their names were called. Detective Newhall left the court room and returned a few minutes later with one of the delinquents, whom he had rounded upon the market square. His companion could not be found, and to all intents and purposes, was a fugitive from justice.

Robbed the Till.

The boys were charged jointly with entering the store of Mr. David Flynn a (concession street grocer and robbing the till to the extent of $18, on Thursday night last. The youth who appeared this morning admitted having ransacked the till on four different occasions.

It appears that the proprietor of the store lived in the rear of the shop and depended upon a small bell attached to a cord to appraise him of the presence of customers in the store.

The boys in question conceived the idea of opening the door in such a manner that the bell would not give the usual warning. To open the till and slip out with a portion of the contents was but the matter of a few minutes.

The youth who appeared in court this morning, together with his companion, who was apprehended later, were both committed to the Shelter until Monday, when the parents will be asked to appear and give evidence.

Jealous Husband Murders His Wife on Street and Kills Himself When Pursued—Portage Du Fort Girl is Badly Wounded.

ASSAILANT MISSING

Special to The Examiner:

HAMILTON, ONT., May 18.—Crazed by jealousy Frank Truckle shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, shot and killed his wife at the corner of Park and Merrick streets, in full view of many people; then jumping into an automobile, he then turned the revolver on the chauffeur and compelled him to dash away with him. A number of other automobiles gave chase, and when Truckle found himself cornered near the mouth of the tunnel he turned the revolver on himself and committed suicide by firing several bullets into his body. The affair created much excitement.

OTTAWA, ONT., May 18. — Gordon Hodgins, 24 years of age, a clerk in the Merchants Bank of Bytown, last night fired three shots at Jessie Dolan, the 23 year old daughter of an hotel keeper at Portage du Fort. No reason is known unless it was a lover's quarrel. The girl is still living but very weak. Hodgins, who is a nephew of G. E. Hodgins, ex-M.P. for Pontiac, disappeared immediately after the shooting, but the revolver with which he did the shooting was found on the wharf at Portage du Fort, and it is supposed that he has committed suicide by drowning.

TOOK PHOTOGRAPHS

ROME, MAY 18.—Intrepid scientists from the University here, succeeded yesterday, with great danger to their lives in penetrating the crater of Mt. Vesuvius, one thousand feet below the top. They took photographs and returned almost exhausted by gases after nine hours inside the much-feared crater. This feat is regarded as one of the most intrepid ever attempted by scientists and their work will be invaluable to future generations.

Another Sign Of Serious Tension

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, ONT., MAY 18.—A special cable to the Toronto Star to-day, says:

London— Winston Churchill's announcement of his intention to present supplementary naval estimates providing for additional men, money and war material is another sign of the serious tension still existing between Germany and ourselves. Our arsenals are working overtime to produce reserves of ammunition and the Admiralty is making great purchases of coal. Everything is being prepared as though war loomed ahead. Baron Marschall Von Bieberstein's appointment by Germany as ambassador at London, has aroused a tremendous semi-official press campaign. England has been overwhelmed with stories largely of French origin, aimed at discrediting the ambassador, and making impossible any advance in the Anglo-German approachment. Politically, the strange parliamentary apathy continues to arouse speculation. Great debates are conducted to half empty benches. On Thursday the Welsh Disestablishment bill passed its second reading in painfully indifferent house. There are many suggestions in the air that the government will consent to considerable modifications in its scheme of Welsh disendowment. Many years of steady growth, advancing values and sound finance have built up an enviable position for Canadian securities in London. This public confidence threatens to be shattered by extravagant exploitation of a group of land boomers who are now trying by every trick to sell Canadian townsites and farmlands here. These exploiters charge often ten fold the value and trade on the ignorance of the British public.

THE LAST WORD IN FOOD INVENTION

What gigantic strides have been made since primitive man struck down his quarry in the forest, and cutting off as much of the flesh as he could carry, bore it to his hut, and broiled his evening meal in the hot ashes of a wood fire. Animals still roam the prairie destined for food of man. If one took a journey to the Argentine, one would see countless thousands of the finest cattle in the world, wandering at will over millions of acres of splendid pasturage. They are not the quarry of the hunter, but the fine herd of the Liebig Company, exported direct from well known breeding establishments in England, many thousands of which are the progeny of pure bred Herefords. Their flesh is not destined to be broiled in the hot ashes of wood fire, but to be made into the latest production of the Liebig Company—OXO CUBES—in model factories where science and hygiene reign supreme. The significance of this remarkable advance in food invention is seen by the way in which Oxo Cubes are taking the place of the old-fashioned beef extracts and fluid beefs. Bottle and jar are disappearing, and everywhere one sees, instead of them, these neat, handy, convenient, little cubes. Science and experience have combined to make them the last word in handiness, whether in home, kitchen, nursery, hospital, camp or settler's hut. They occupy hardly any room, do away with the need of measuring, and are always ready for use.

SWITCH NEAR C.G.E. GATE ON NEW LINE

When the street railway extension is completed to Byersville it is stated that two cars will be run on this division with a switch just south of the C.G.E. gate on Park street. The switch will be practically at the half way point on this division.

The service will be in point of time practically as at present, the main point, however, is that the line has been doubled in length and the same number of trips will be made every hour as were made over the old line.

The construction of the new line is advancing rapidly under the direction of Mr. N. Bibby. The road has been prepared out to Alfred street, and is almost half completed on Albert street.

CANADA AND PRIME WHEAT.

Canada has good right to be regarded as potentially one of the greatest wheat producing countries of the world, by virtue of her extended area of especially suitable soil and peculiar climatic conditions; and by virtue of the highest quality of milling wheat produced any where. Canada has also won distinction by originating the two best varieties of wheat. A Canadian, a native of this county, Mr. Sylvester Fife of Otonabee, originated the Red Fife wheat, the basis of "Manitoba No. 1 Hard." And Dr. Saunders of Ottawa, originated a wheat so high in production and milling quality that it has been adjudged, in keen competition, the best wheat grown on the American continent. At the Land Exhibition held in New York last November, a prize of one thousand dollars in gold was offered by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy for the best exhibit comprising one hundred pounds of milling wheat, grown on the American continent. The prize was won by a Canadian farmer at Rosthern, Saskatchewan, and the second and third prizes by farmers in Alberta and Manitoba. The brand of wheat which was considered the best produced on the American continent is known as the Marquis, and was originated by Professor Saunders, of the Ottawa Experimental Farm, who thus shares in the credit achieved by Canada as producing the best wheat on the continent. The legislative assembly of Saskatchewan, at its last session placed on record its congratulations to the winner of the prizes, and to Dr. Saunders, upon having originated so valuable a variety of wheat. Canada now holds first place in wheat quality in the world, and fifth in quantity of production; and it will not be long before she will head the list, for no rival wheat-growing country possesses the possibilities of expansion of Canada, or the promise of production increase. From 1900 to 1911, Canada, that is, Western Canada, increased its annual yield of wheat from 23 million a year to 180 millions a year. At that rate of increase our wheat production will, in the next ten years, grow to about 340 millions. But the increase will be greater in the next decade than in the past ten years, so that by the year 1921, the next census year, the total yield of the western wheat fields will probably reach 400 million bushels. "Good as the wheat" is a comparison that fits Canada well.

THE RELIGION OF CIVIC BEAUTY

Beauty is part, nay the very essence, of the Divine plan of created things. God has made all things beautiful. He gave beautiful forms, colours and scents to the flowers. He clothed the birds in bright plumage, and gave them tuneful throats. He might as well have made all the flowers a dull gray, or unsightly brown; they would have as well fulfilled their function of maturing seed as they can do with the myriad forms of beauty—of shape and tint and scent. But that was not the way He chose to reveal hiself in nature. He made everything beautiful; He made man in His own image with a love of the beautiful, and man's worship of the beautiful in nature is worship of God in the form of His natural revelation.

Mankind, for the past few weeks, has suffered the agony of the annual feminine May mania of house cleaning. Woman's way is to have the home beautiful, and her instinct tells her that it cannot be made so without being clean any more than we can have beautiful human characters, without clean hearts, or, at least, clean minds, and the natural fruits, clean actions and clean lives.

We are all endowed with the instinct of the beautiful. Men and women wear clothing for the primary purpose of covering their bodies, but this object becomes secondary in both to the beauty of the covering. A gown of burlap would be an effective covering, but woman must have the beautiful in attire. The same spirit rules the structure, the furnishing, the adornment of our homes. Four walls to keep out the sun and wind and storm would shelter, but we must have the walls adorned, and the interior made as beautiful as our means and tastes permit.

With the inside made clean and tidy and beautiful, attention to the outside—the setting of the jewel, called home—is the natural next step. While the housewife has been creating chaos within that she may create a new home, the house-band—the husband—has been tidying and cleaning and raking, and planting the grounds, great or small—doing the spring-time sowing for the harvest of summer beauty. We beautify our grounds with flowers and shaven turf. We do this we think for our own glory and satisfaction, and enjoyment. But we cannot shut the passerby—the public—from the same enjoyment any more than we can shut out our fellows from the heat and light of the sunshine. No man liveth unto himself. No man plants a beautiful garden of flowers, and smoothes a stretch of emerald turf for himself alone; it becomes common property so far as visual enjoyment of its beauties, goes. Thus, every citizen works for the benefit of every other; though each may selfishly seek to glorify himself—he cannot help being unselfish in contributing to the happiness of everybody, through the enjoyment of the sight of beautiful gardens and grounds.

This brings the consideration of these matters, to a crucial point. We have beautiful, cleanly, tidy homes, opening upon beautiful, cleanly, tidy, and charming grounds. The next natural sequence would be a step upon beautiful streets, and clean, tidy and well-kept boulevards, to correspond with the beauty and brightness and order within the fence, or the boundary that divides public from private grounds.

But is the harmony of beauty preserved? By no means. Where the walks are placed outside the tree line, the boulevard is continuous with the open, private lawn, and is kept in beautiful condition. But where the walk is inside the line of trees, the boulevard, as a rule, is unsightly, or absent, and when present, cut up with wheels. There is no beauty or comeliness, and the boulevard shames the beauty and charm of the private premises within.

The fault of this lies with the city. They have no care for the boulevards—everybody's garden — which could be made and kept as neat and comely as the private grounds they adjoin. The city builds a stretch of walk and leaves the boulevard outside of it littered with stones and rubbish, and if the owner of the abutting property has no more public spirit and taste than the city, it remains so—in a condition that would be an eyesore to a mining camp. With a very little care; with hardly any cost, every street could be boulevarded and if the city did the work as it went along the adjacent householder would keep it in order. In this way every residence street in the city would be an extension of a park, an extension of the beautiful, private grounds within.

But the city does not care; at least it has not done so in the past, and the indifference of the city has created the vandal. Taking example from the city's neglect of our boulevards and public places, the unneighbourly and the thoughtless tramp the life out of private grounds. The vicious and the selfish and the dishonest, seeing that the authorities do not care, become bold and bad. They not only desecrate and rob and mutilate, public gardens, but they invade private grounds and steal and carry away flowers, root and branch.

This is exasperating and disheartening. It is not fair to private citizens who spend time and money to beautify the whole city through the collective adornment of their private grounds. A vandal that despoils one man's plot of blooming flowers—the dearer because the first of the spring not only outrages one individual, but commits an offence against the public, whose property, as far as enjoyment of its beauties go, every private flower garden is.

We have a Horticultural Society, with hundreds of members. We spend hundreds of dollars to beautify our private and public grounds, to be destroyed, defaced or deformed by vandals and thieves, by vagrant dogs and prowling cats. We have no end of complaints of, as there is no end to, the destruction and disorder created by, these unrestrained pests. Not only is civic beauty marred in this way, but the public spirit of our citizens is dampened. They desire the work for the city beautiful by each making his or her own part conform to this ideal. But when their work is brought to naught by conditions that the civic authorities permit to continue, discouragement and relaxation of work are natural and inevitable. The neglect of the city authorities, and their indifference encourages the lawless and the vandal.

There are two ways of counteracting the spirit of destruction of civic beauty—administrative and moral. The city has power to pass and enforce by-laws that will protect citizens and the public in the regards mentioned. By so doing the city would show that it cares; authority would be on the side of civic beauty, and authority compels a large deference on the part of the lawless.

The other way—the moral way—is the better; goes deeper and strikes at the root of the evil—lawlessness of character—it chastens the impulse to vandalism and disregard of the rights and feelings of others. Our schools, our Sunday Schools, our churches should be nurseries in which the flowers of courtesy, kindness, consideration, respect for the right, respect for the Divine—in the beauties of His creation—should be propagated. That is a form of education that seems to be neglected. But it is near the base of real true, practical religion. The two fundamentals of righteous living—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbour as thyself," are inter-related and reciprocal; if one is observed the other must necessarily be fulfilled. And how can the love of our neighbour be shown if we treat our neighbour as we would not treat ourselves; as we would not like to be treated. It is as much a breach of the divine law to set a foot in the way of trespass or injury upon the beauty created by another, and dear to another, as it is to swear blood-curdling oaths; and more so, for the latter only injures the perpetrator, who is pretty well beyond further injury. But the other is a sin, a crime against everybody; against the whole body of citizens. In respect for the rights of others, for the feelings, for the work of others, for the beauty created by others, which, collectively, become the property and delight of all, consists the religion of civic beauty—it is the application of the divine fundamental of righteousness—"love thy neighbour as thyself."

The churches and the preachers and the teachers could, and should, bring about this; it is their duty—their whole duty. If they could bring their flocks—and by aggregation of results, the whole cityful, to the point of loving their neighbours as themselves they would have achieved the fulfilment of the law, and their work would be done. To keep the law of neighbour love would require and involve all the Christian graces, the practice of all the Christian virtues that make a man the complete and real Christian.

STILL ANOTHER CONSERVATIVE PARTY PLANK COLLAPSES

When the Conservatives were in opposition one of their chief planks was that there should be no alliance between federal ministers and the men placed in charge of the governments of the various provinces. It was held then that interference by the members of the Dominion Cabinet in elections in the provinces was nothing short of a scandal, and many were the speeches delivered, in and out of Parliament, in vigorous denunciation of the practice. Now, however, that the Conservatives are in power, these protests are all forgotten, the plank has been thrown aside, and the full strength of the Federal government is being used for the purpose of fighting provincial elections.

The recent Quebec contest was marked by the use of all the federal machinery available in the hope of defeating the Gouin government. Hon. Messrs. Monk, Pelletier, Doherty and Nantel, to say nothing of such minor lights as Deputy Speaker Blondin and Speaker of the Senate Landry, used all their influence to aid their party friends in a contest in which federal issues were in no sense involved.

Then, there is a provincial election coming on in the Province of New Brunswick, and the first thing seen is the journeying of Hon. J. D. Hazen and of Hon. G. E. Foster down to St. John to give a hand to Premier Fleming, although here again not a single federal issue is involved.

And, finally, there is Saskatchewan. There, where it is true the tariff question does not enter into the campaign, the order has gone forth that the Scott government must be destroyed at all costs. The full power of the whole machinery of the Interior Department is to be utilized under the skilful direction of Hon. Robert Rogers, who has gone west for the purpose, and no expense is to be spared to endeavour to secure a reversal of the popular vote of September last.

Such a course may be all right from a party standpoint, but it is a complete and cynical betrayal of pre-election promises which is on a par with the abandonment of other attitudes taken by the Conservative eparty when in opposition—a betrayal which may have dangerous results upon the men responsible for it.—Ottawa Free Press.

PIONEER DAYS IN THE TOWNSHIP OF ENNISMORE

BY ROY GILRAY

The township of Ennismore was surveyed in 1825. Its first settlers were a portion of the immigrants under the Hon. Peter Robinson to the number of sixty-seven and their families, consisting in all of 297 souls. During the first year, including the journey up from Prescott, there were among these Ennismore settlers nine births and twenty-three deaths. The official returns show their first year's produce to be 8,900 bushels of potatoes, 3,000 bushels of turnips, and 1,042 bushels of Indian corn. Of the 193 acres cleared up to that date (1826), 44 acres were sown with fall wheat. They had besides made 1,330 pounds of maple sugar, and owned among them four oxen, nine cows, and ten hogs.

So large a result for their first year's labour was creditable to these new settlers, most of whom had not the most remote idea of the proper methods to pursue in clearing and tilling their land. More than one of them attempted to burn the timber in the winter as he chopped it, and in the spring some of them swept the ground with a besom (a bundle of twigs or boughs used as a broom) lest it might not be sufficiently clean for the seed about to be sown. For the first year or two oxen were very scarce, and instead of harrowing in the grain it was hoed in as best it could about the stumps.

The Chemong or Mud Lake in front was a serious obstacle in the way of procuring supplies; for as yet the settlers were too inexperienced to construct canoes of any service, and consequently the wheat to the mill and the flour on their return, had to be carried on their shoulders round the head of the lake. Roads as yet were scarcely thought of; and thus heavily laden, they followed the "blaze" on the trees, through brush, swamps, and over fallen timber as best they could. These laborious journeys and heavy burdens were not confined to the men, but even the women too, at times, found it necessary to proceed, laden with grain, to mill or market, and in assisting their husbands and providing their families, performed feats of labour and endurance of which in later times we have but a faint conception.

Sir Peregrine Maitland visited the settlement in Ennismore during his visit to Peterborough in 1826, accompanied by Col. Talbot, of Western Ontario fame, Mr Alexander McDonell, and others. They put up for a short time at the shanty of Mr. Eugene McCarthy, and partook of such refreshment as the settlement afforded.

During the first two years the population of Ennismore rather diminished than increased. This was no doubt owing to the fact that many of the younger men were obliged to seek in older settlements for employment at remunerating wages.

Ennismore is but a small township —it might be said, a mere corner of Smith cut off from the remainder by Chemong Lake. It has near its centre a Roman Catholic Church, erected many years ago. There is also a Post Office, of which Mr. Patrick Gallivan was first postmaster.

The soil of Ennismore is naturally rich and fertile, and notwithstanding many drawbacks from inexperience and the isolation of the township by water, the patient perseverance of the settlers, for a few years, overcame the first difficulties, and they and their families gradually grew into comparative wealth and independence.

This township is situated on the direct route between Peterborough and Bobcaygeon. Owing to the influx of settlers and the extensive lumbering operations carried on in the new townships bordering on that road during the years between 1860 and 1880, it was the thoroughfare for traffic between these points—the bridging of the lakes on either side by the winter's ice affording the necessary facilities for such a transit. Several attempts were made to supply this necessary link of communication by bridging the water.

In February, 1848, a by-law was passed by the District Council authorising the appropriation of twenty-six pounds, currency, from the wild land assessment fund of Ennismore, "for the purpose of building a snow and ferry boats on Mud Lake, to ply from Gait's Landing in Ennismore to Edmonson's Landing in Smith." The councillor for the township and two other persons chosen at the town meeting were appointed commissioners to have the same in charge and to contract with a ferryman to perform this duty. The tolls to be charged, which were very low, were as follows: A span of horses and wagon, one shilling; a single horse, with or without a wagon, sixpence; a yoke of oxen and vehicle, sixpence; horned cattle per head, threepence; pigs and calves per head, twopence; each passenger, threepence.

The ferry thus established was kept in operation for a few years, but was found troublesome and expensive, and although a convenience to the public, was discontinued.

In 1854 a joint stock company was formed to construct a gravel road from Peterborough to Bobcaygeon, intending to cross Mud Lake by a bridge at the point mentioned, and thence passing across the township of Ennismore. Of this company Augustus Sawers was president, and William Lundy, Elias Burnham, James Stevenson, and W. S. Conger were directors, with Thomas White as secretary. The town of Peterborough adopted a by-law pledging itself to $25,000. The township of Ennismore at a public meeting took stock to the extent of $15,000, and stock was otherwise taken, chiefly by private individuals, to the amount of $5,500, but the project, though launched under these favourable auspices, was never even commenced.

Nothing more seems to have been done till 1867, when the County Council passed a by-law on the 12th of October, in which it was resolved to raise the sum of $10,000 for the purpost of erecting and building a bridge across Chemong Lake from a point in the township of Smith to a point opposite in the township of Ennismore, also for a bridge across Pigeon Creek from Ennismore to Harvey, $1,400 to be raised annually by a special tax rate for the payment of said debt or loan. This by-law (No. 206) was signed by P. M. Grover, Warden, and Edgar Pearse, County Clerk.

On the 19th of June, 1868, the following committee was appointed by the county to supervise the construction of the two bridges: S. S. Peck, W. A. Scott, Peter Pearse, Isaac Garbutt and James Millar; these were to act jointly with a committee appointed by the town a few days before.

The contract was let to William Trennum, who spent about three years in their construction. The great timber floats were secured in the township of Harvey surrounding Sandy Lake, and were assembled at Scotchman's Point to be towed to the scene of building. Mud Lake bridge was put together along the Smith shore in the vicinity of Nichol's woods, and on completion was towed into position, the event being celebrated by a dance on the new structure.

It proved a great boon to Ennismore, and from that day she continued to make rapid progress.

The original structure has been replaced by a new one, the Smith end having been moved north some distance to take advantage of a natural bar, which was filled in, and rendered the floating structure much shorter, and less expensive to maintain.

HOME CIRCLE

THE IDEAL HOME.

Dear Editor,—What do you say—"my idea of home" in the space you indicate? A volume, and a large one, would be required to discuss the mere outlines of this subject. But you have given me some time to boil down my crude and imperfect ideas on this theme. A great writer, you know, said on one occasion, "This is a very long letter, but positively I had not time to make it shorter."

"An Ideal Home," you say. Well, it must be where love abides, rock-rooted in confidence.

It must be where physical comforts are not wanting, but where luxury and pretence have not usurped the places of peace and repose. There may be more joy in the hovel than in the palace; but you are asking for the "ideal" home, and such a home requires all the comforts.

There must be music, because music is the language of the soul when ordinary language fails.

There must be religion. I do not speak of creeds or doctrines or Bibles or prayerbooks. There must be a deep, reverential, God-fearing and God-trusting religion, which exemplifies the doctrine taught in the "Sermon on the Mount," and the golden rule.

There should be calm, low voices and quiet manners. There should be children and books, and pictures and flowers. The silver hairs and tremulous voice of age should be there—the grandmother or grandfather, or both.

The well-tried friend should be there and the way to the door should not be hedged against the poor, for he is "always with you."

With these crude suggestions accepted and applied, I should say with one whose literary abilities I am not worthy to unloose,

"Friends, it is where the day-star springs,
And where the evening sun reposes;
Where'er the eagle spreads his wings
From northern climes to southern coasts."

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A smile and a cheery word is a welcome sunbeam in a sick room. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under pleasant smiles. No one cares whether you have the earache, headache, or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. A good-humoured man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic is not wanted anywhere and is a nuisance as well. Above all, give pleasure. Lose no chance of giving pleasure. You will pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that you can show to any human being, you had better do now; do not defer or neglect it, for you will not pass this way again.

A BABY DEFINED.

A London paper offered a prize of two guineas for the best definition of a baby, and received the following, the first-named taking the prize:

A tiny feather from the wing of love dropped into the sacred lap of motherhood.

An inhabitant of Lapland.

A padlock on the chains of love.

A curious bud of uncertain blossom.

The most extensive employer of female labour.

The pulp from which the leaves of life's book are made.

The morning caller, noonday crawler, midnight brawler.

A native of all countries who speaks language of none.

A thing we are expected to kiss, and look as if we enjoyed it.

A soft bundle of love and trouble which we cannot do without.

The unconscious mediator between father and mother and focus of their hearts.

A pleasure to two, a nuisance to every other body, and a necessity to the world.

The latest edition to humanity of which every couple think they possess the finest copy.

The bachelor's horror, the mother's treasure, and the despotic tyrant of the most republican household.

A mite of humanity that will cry no harder if a pin is stuck into him than he will if the cat won't let him pull her tail.

A stranger with unspeakable cheek that enters a house without stitch to his back and is received with open arms by everyone.

A necessity—in order to keep up the supply of readers for the future, the sweetest thing God ever made and forgot to give wings to.

(Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Golden Text—He that loveth his neighbour hath fulfilled the law.—Rom. xiii., 8.

1. Verses 17-18—In what sense did Jesus mean that the law was not to be destroyed until all be fulfilled?

2. What, if any, reason is there to believe that Jesus did not mean that the law of Moses was to last for ever?

3. How did Christ fulfill every "jot and tittle" of the law of Moses, spiritual, moral, political and ceremonial?

4. Verse 19—What was the final end, purpose or object of the commandments of Moses?

5. If a disciple of Christ at that time had taught against the least of the Old Testament commandments, what would he have lost thereby?

6. If a disciple of Christ now teaches against the keeping of the ceremonial law or the moral law as exemplified by the "eye for an eye" and the "tooth for a tooth" commandments of the Old Testament, how does God regard him?

7. Verse 20—What did Christ mean by "the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees"?

8. If a man does an outward good deed for the sake of custom or policy or to be seen of men that he would not do from his own choice, how is his deed regarded by God?

9. How would you characterise two men, one whose motives are pure, but who blunders in carrying them out, and one whose motives are impure, but who acts outwardly in a faultless manner?

10. Does righteousness consist in motives or in actions, and why?

11. Verses 21-22—The law of Moses, like human law now, could only punish when an outward crime had actually been committed. How does the law here given by Jesus differ from that?

12. If a man secretly plans a murder and lacks the opportunity of committing it he is innocent at law. Would you say that he is just as guilty before God as if he had committed it? Why?

13. Does Christ teach that wicked anger or hatred is regarded by God as murder, and, if not, what does it mean? (See 1 John, iii., 15.)

14. What does Jesus here mean by the various degrees of punishment represented by the "judgment," the "council," and "hell fire?"

15. Verses 23-26—Why is it impossible to worship or be in harmony with God if we bear a grudge against any person?

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

If the fat in the frying kettle is hot before you are ready for it, put in a dry crust of bread. It will not burn as long as it has something to do, only when it is left idle.

It is convenient to have an iron holder attached by a long string to the band of the apron when cooking; it saves burnt fingers or scorched aprons, and is always at hand.

To mend a very large hole in socks or woven underwear, tack a piece of gauze net over the aperture and darn over it. Thus mended the garment will be stronger than when new, and look far neater than if darned in the ordinary way.

To keep the bright, green colour of summer cabbage and some other vegetables, boil fast in plenty of water in which has been dissolved a piece of washing soda the size of two peas; cover until the water boils and then take off the lid. If the steam is shut in the cabbage will be yellow and unsightly.

To avoid the horrible odour which too often fills the house when cabbage or other green vegetables are boiling, follow these simple directions: Put your cabbage in a net, and when you have boiled it five minutes in the first pot of water, lift it out, drain for a few seconds, and place carefully in a second pot which you must have full of fast-boiling water on the stove. Empty the first water away and boil your cabbage till tender in the second.

SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH REGULATED

Just a Little Diapepsin Ends Indigestion in Five Minutes

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order Stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more Indigestion, no feelings like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

MR. ALLAN, ORGANIST ST. PAUL'S TO-MORROW

Mr. Allan is an organist of exceptional ability, and his visit to Peterborough has especial present, as well as prospective, musical interest.

DR. SHEARER TO GIVE ADDRESS

Dr. J. G. Shearer, D.D., of Toronto, the secretary of the Social and Moral Reform Department of the Presbyterian church, will give an address in St. Andrew's church at the evening service to-morrow.

COMPANY OF PETERBOROUGH CHILDREN DISTINGUISH THEMSELVES

Children's Festival Held in the Conservatory of Music Hall Last Evening Was an Undisputed Success---Select and Varied Programme.

An extremely attractive entertainment was given in the Conservatory of Music hall last evening by a company of one hundred and fifty children, who, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, created quite an impression upon the large audience present.

The boys and girls presented quite a fascinating appearance, arranged, as they were, in perfect symetry about a special structure, built for the purpose, and their uniform dress rendered the sight the more attractive. And their singing was none the less pleasing, for although miniature children's voices have always an individual charm, it could readily be observed that the chorus had received a systematic preparation, and the efforts of those who trained them met with their due reward. Among the selections rendered by the full chorus were "Hail Canada," Dontzetti's "Twilight," "The Maid of Algoma" and the old favourite "Old King Cole."

The individual performances, considering the extreme youth of the artists, cannot be too highly spoken of. An item which struck the writer as quite phenomenal, was a piano solo by Miss Isobel Baird, entitled "At the Fountain," by Ducell. The manner in which this little tot rendered the piece was surprising. She seemed to be imbibed with the spirit of the composer, and played with remarkable precision. The work contains a series of cadenzas which are as a rule, a stumbling block for children. Not so with her, however, nd the position of her hands during her playing was a sight pleasing to look upon. Master Carlus Greene, a young violinist, played a delightful little melody, by Berthold Tours, in which he astonished his listeners, and he was accorded a round of applause. One of Schumann's beautiful works, namely "Traumerei," was very cleverly rendered by Master Otto Gliddon, who promises to become a musician of no mean calibre, while his brother, Paul, distinguished himself to na equal extent with his cornet, on which he rendered the ancient favourite "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Miss Hazel Davidson has the makings of a splendid elocutionist. She has a naturally sympathetic voice and her articulation is clear and crisp. "Our Own Dear Land" was the title of her recitation. Master Alexis Spillman rendered as a 'Cello solo, Millard's "Romance," which was executed in a very commendable manner, while Lois Braund and Baden Greene played "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" as a violin duet, in an equally capable style. Miss Prudence Long, Miss Geraldine Delaire, Master Arthur Johnston, and little Miss Cheverill sang the following songs effectively: "Butterfly Song," "Lullaby Laud" "Land of Hope and Glory," and "Dont You Play." A little orchestra, comprising a number of the children, rendered [illegible]ve's Old, Sweet Song," an old favourite composition by J. L. Mallory. This was an ambitious item for the violin in some passages worked in contrast with the cornet and 'celo. However, the players did full justice to the piece. They also rendered Zeller's "Midnight Song." A party of eight little tots dressed as "bear cats" performed a song and frolic entitled "Teddy Bears," and their gambols produced much merriment. They were enthusiastically recalled. Misses Dean and Choate were accopanists, whom we are always pleased to hear.

And now another word: Great commendation is due to the youthful performers, but it must not be forgotten that they needed training too. Therefore more than a word of praise is due to those who devoted so much time, patience and energy to the rehearsing and training of the individual children composing the principals, chorus and orchestra.

To Miss Julia Choate, to Miss Hazel Dean, and to Mr. Gliddon are certainly due a large meed of commendation.

the fact that there was a dog in the boat, which occupied a position between witness and deceased. The last Thornbeck saw of the dog was when he was paddling around in the water yelping. The dog was found dead next morning. To one of the jurors witness said that he and Peters had not been drinking on the day of the fatality.

After considerable questioning by the Crown Attorney, witness admitted that he pointed out to Stewart the direction in which Peters is thought to have taken when he struck out for a point along the shore line.

Witness had a pair of short rubber boots on which were fastened by laces. These he managed to kick off when the boat capsized. Thornbeck would not swear whether the boots were laced when the boat upset.

Witnesse's knowledge of the circumstances relative to the disposition of the boots was very uncertain. He could not state exactly where he parted with the boots. Crown Attorney Wood suggested that he might have disposed of them prior to climbing the tree, but Thornbeck's recollection of this circumstance was very indefinite.

Witness emphatically stated that no intoxicating liquor had been consumed with his knowledge, by Peters. While Thornbeck was in the water he secured a paddle and tried to scoop the water out of the boat.

Thornbeck's Rescuer Called.

Mr. Ormond Stewart, who was next called, stated that his first notifications of the accident was when he heard shouts for help about four o'clock in the afternoon. He at first paid no attention to the cries, but when they were repeated, witness, together with his brother Fred, put out in a boat. They found Thornbeck standing in water up to his waist a short distance from shore. A boat, which was within Thornbeck's reach, was three parts full of water. He believed it would have been an easy matter to have emptied the canoe. When witness approached Thornbeck the latter begged to be taken out of the water, as he had been in it about two hours, he said. Witness backed the boat up to the bushes close to Thornbeck. The latter climbed in over the deck of the boat without assistance. Thornbeck remarked to Stewart during their passage down to Bonner's, where he was taken, that Jim Peters was drowned. "It's too bad for his wife." Thornbeck is alleged to have stated.

Finding of the Body.

During the short time they were away, Peters' body was found by James Latimer about twenty-five feet from the shore. Witness did not think it possible for Thornbeck to have scaled the tree, which Thornbeck in his evidence is alleged to have done. The tree was about six inches thick at the bottom and was bare of limbs from the surface of the water to a distance of twenty-five feet upward. Witness said that he detected the smell of liquor from Thornbeck's breath after he had rescued him. Witness did not think it was possible for the current to carry the body to where it was found.

Boat Struck a Snag.

Witness did not see the dog, which was the third occupant of the canoe. When witness asked Thornbeck how the accident happened, the latter replied that they had ran into a snag.

Fred Stewart, who assisted the former witness to make the rescue, corroborated the evidence as given by his brother Ormond Stewart. Witness had also detected the dour of liquor from Thornbeck's breath. He did not think a man would have much difficulty in climbing the tree which Thornbeck, in his evidence, admitted he had scaled, when his life was imperilled.

Water Was Shallow.

James S. Latimer, who assisted in the recovery of the body, gave evidence describing the circumstances leading up to the recovery of the remains. His attention was first attracted to the scene where the body was found by the clothing of the deceased. The body was lying face downwards in shallow water. Witness tried to remove the body from the water but was unable. He then awaited the return of Stewart and with his assistance the body was taken out of the ater. Witness who saw Thornbeck later, did not detect the smell of alcoholic liquor from the latter. He stated that the dog's body was found at a point between the spot where Peters body was found and the boat. There was no semblance of land at this place, but there was considerable small brush in the neighbourhood. A man could touch bottom easily for a radius of fifty feet each way from where the body was found.

Responded to Cries For Help.

George Seabrook was next called by Crown Attorney Wood. He stated that he was attracted to the scene by a series of cries for help. When he arrived on the scene, Thornbeck was standing in the water holding on to a small tree.

John Bonner, to whose house Thornbeck was taken after he was rescued, gave evidence to the effect that Thornbeck was in a very bad condition, due to exposure, when he arrived at his house. Witness described the position of the body prior to its removal from the water. The water was shallow, he declared.

Mrs. James Peters, Harry Peters and Frank Peters, widow and two sons, respectively, of the deceased, gave evidence. The former's evidence was practically limited to the conversation which is alleged to have taken place on the 22nd day of April, during which, Thornbeck is alleged to have intimated to Mrs. Peters that somebody would dump Peters into the water.

Denied Alleged Conversation.

Thornbeck was recalled and asked to explain the discrepancy between the evidence given by Seabrook and himself. This he failed to do, and further denied the alleged conversation with Mrs. Peters, in which he stated that Peters would be dumped into the water. He disclaimed knowledge of having been in the Peters home on the day mentioned. Witness also swore that he had not partaken of liquor on the day of the accident. He admitted having conversed with Fishery Inspector Watt relative to the prospects for a position as assistant fishery inspector.

Crown Attorney Wood attempted to elicit the information from witness that he had visited the Peters home a few days before the accident, but failed. Thornbeck contradicted the allegation and also denied having made such a statement to Detectives Newhall and Boyd, also Chief of Police Thompson.

Statements Repudiated.

Harry Peter's testimony was contradictory in regard to this statement. He swore that Thornbeck had visited his father's home and that he had asked him (witness) to take a trip to Lily Lake for trapping purposes. Chief Fishery Inspector for this district, John Watt, next took the stand His evidence went to show that Peters had been engaged by him in the capacity of assistant fishery inspector, for a period of about three months, commencing about the middle of April. He described the circumstances under which this arrangement had been brought about. He stated that Thornbeck had frequently reminded him of his willingness to accept a similar position, should the opportunity present itself.

Death by Drowning.

Dr. Eastwood, who performed the autopsy, assisted by Dr. Young, stated that the body was in a normal and well-nourished condition. There were no marks of violence and that death was due to drowning. The latter finding was determined by the condition of the lungs.

This concluded the examination of the witnesses.

Inquest Adjourned.

Crown Attorney Wood was unwilling to have the inquest closed and suggested that it be adjourned for three weeks in order that an analysis of the stomach might be made.

"It's a strange thing that a strong, healthy man should be drowned in three feet of water," commented the Attorney.

The inquest was adjourned, to be re-opened on the evening of June 7th in the Council chamber.

WILL LEND AUTOS FOR LEAGUE OPENING

Automobile Association Members Will Help Make Opening of Canadian League a Success

The opening of the Canadian Baseball League has moved the members of the Peterborough Automobile Association to offer their assistance in the opening ceremonies. At a meeting of the Association on Friday night, in the Banl of Montreal chambers, it was decided to offer the use o fthe autos for the officers, executive, and players of both teams for the opening parade.

The members of the Association are enthusiastic about its possibilities and at the meeting decided to hold a run, in the near future, the route and destination to be determined upon later.

Members of the Association will send large deputations to the City and County Councils to urge the building of good roads. These deputations will likely be sent to the next meetings of the respective Councils. Other questions were discussed, and it was particularly pointed out that the Association should be supported by all automobile owners, as it has been formed for the advancement of their interests in all respects.

GOOD AS A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Baby's Own Tablets are as good as a doctor in the house. They never fail to relieve the little one from stomach and bowel troubles, to expel worms, make teething easy and promote healthful sleep. Concerning them Mrs. J. H. Turner, Glenora, Ont., says: "I always recommend Baby's Own Tablets to my friends. I have used them for a long time and find them without an equal .They relieved baby of the feverishness and restlessness while cutting teeth and have made her one of the most healthy babies there is. I always keep them in the house and consider them as good as a doctor." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Farewell Banquet In Their Old Church

A RETROSPECTIVE BANQUET

The congregation of the Murray St. Baptist church is about to withdraw from the building that has served it so well, to the splendid new edifice which will be formally opened on Sunday, May 26th. The new church indicates the growth and flourishing condition of the congregation, but even in the relations of a people to their place of worship there is a sentiment that lies deep in the hearts of the members. The memories of the first attendance in childhood, the gradual advancement in the Sunday school from the children's class through the various grades until many of those who had been students became teachers, these and associations of a similar nature are not readily forgotten.

Hence the banquet in the Sunday School room of the old church was retrospective and the willing workers, the Young People's Missionary Society of the church planned the affair with that intention. It was a looking-backward banquet, to bid farewell, as it were, to the old place of woship. And not the least interesting feature were the reminiscences of some of the members who have been long connected with the church, as have been Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Dr. Scott and Mr. C. B. Boutley. Their remarks were probably an expression of the general feeling of the congregation. There is a pride in the fine new church just completed, but the old building, which they have outgrown, is associated with many of the best years in the lives of quite a number of the older members. This was the apparent feeling of Friday night's affair, but at the same time there was the spirit of further endeavour and advancement in the larger edifice that will present even greater possibilities than were afforded in the old building.

Letters from Former Members.

Dr. Mann, who acted as chairman for the postprandial programme, presided in a most acceptable manner. He asked the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, to read a number of communications, received from former members of the church who had moved to various cities. One was from New York city, another from Sheldrake, Mich., another from Toronto, and others from other cities. In almost every case the writers expressed regret that they could not attend the opening of the church, but expressed their pleasure upon the progress that has been made, and sent contributions to be placed on the collection plate on the first Sunday in the new church. Mrs. H. P. Kennedy telephoned from Toronto expressing regret that she was unable to attend the farewell banquet, but assured Mr. Webb that she would be present at the opening.

Rev. Dr. Clifford's Letter.

The following letter was received from Rev. Dr. Clifford, who laid the corner stone of the new church, last summer:

London, Eng., April 29, 1912.

My dear Mr. Webb,—I have been delighted to hear that your magnificent church has been completed and that you will enter it shortly. I have watched the Canadian Baptist week by week for news of your work, and have been specially glad to see that while the material edifice has been going up, the spiritual structure, the believing Church, nas been advancing in strength. I saw that thirteen had been baptized on one Suday. The Lord is adding to your forces those who are being saved. In the new building that experience will be renewed again and again. God will bless your labours and the Church will be the mediator of immense good to your "growing city."

I have most grateful memories of my visit last year with your good people and I wish to send my greetings to them all, and accept the kindest regards and best wishes yourself, of

Yours always sincerely,
John Clifford.

Rev. Mr. Smith of Belleville, delivered an address on the essentials of a successful ministry. Character, consecration, courage and cheer or a joy in the work were the necessary essentials Mr. Smith outlined in a bright and serious discourse. Possessing character and desiring to give our best efforts in God's work there is a need of courage of convictions, the armour of faith. Mr. Smith also pointed out the need of having a joy in performing church work which was a work of God.

During his address he paid a tribute to Rev. Mr. Webb, who, he said, "found you in brick and will leave you in stone. He came, he saw, and he conquered. Mr. Webb has accomplished wonderful things since coming to Peterborough.

Interspersed with the addresses was a vocal solo by Miss Kidd and a piano duet by Miss Janet Quinn and Mr. Asa Huycke, both of which numbers were much enjoyed.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

ONE MORE ADDED TO THE GREAT ARMY

Chiswick, Ont., May 17.—(Special.)—Rheumatism, which developed into Diabetes, had made life a burden to Octave Labracque of this place. Doddis Kidney Pills cured him and he is added to that great army of Canadians who [illegible] in telling their neighbours that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure remedy for all kidney ills.

"My limbs would swell and I had a dragging sensation across the loins," Mr. Labracque says, in giving his experience, "I could not attend to my work properly as I had to keep resting and I was troubled with rheumatism, and my troubles finally developed into Diabetes.

"I tried different medicines and doctors but got little relief till I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have made a new man of me."

All Mr. Labracque's troubles came from diseased kidneys. They speedily ceased when he commenced to use the one sure cure for diseased kidneys — Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Last Services In Old Church

The services of to-morrow morning and evening will have special interest to the people of the Murray street Baptist church. This is to be their last Sunday in the old building. It is now over a quarter of a century since they moved into Murray street, and many precious memories linger round the edifice. The services of to-morrow will be of an appropriate character, and doubtless every member will be making a special effort to partake in the services. The evening is to be the farewell.

Always Rains On May 17th

May 17 should be marked on the calendar as the rainy day of the year. According to a Queen's avenue lady, who has reached her 93rd year, it has rained in the city of London for the past 80 years on this date. The information is gleaned from diaries which this lady has kept year after year for nearly the greater part of her life. The condition of the weather each day is a feature of these daily entries, and going back through the pages each year, it is found that there has always been rain on May 17. Sometimes it has merely been a shower, while at other times the rain has lasted all day. Often a thunder storm comes on this date, but no matter in what fashion or for what length of time, the fact remains that it has rained for fifty-five consecutive May 17's. This is a record that no other day in the year can equal. Whether it is a coincidence or merely a day set aside by old Jup. Pluv., on which to demonstrate his rain-producing abilities, is a matter for conjecture. The moral is, carry your umbrella on May 17, and hold your Sunday school picnic on the 18th.—London Advertiser.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Cars Ordered.—So busy are they on the local system of the G.T.R. that seven hundred cars have been ordered from Midland to carry grain, pig iron, etc.

Are Now Part Of Edmonton

Mr. H. P. Kennedy is in the city to-day. Mr. Kennedy states that he has just received word that his property, "Industrial Heights," has been taken into the city limits of Edmonton, and that those who have purchased lots in that section of the city last fall, are able to realize handsomely on their investment. Some of those from Peterborough and this district who purchased lots have gone west to reside and are erecting houses on the property. One gentleman from Madoc, who is out west, sold five lots at a decided advance over what they cost.

Woodmen To Have Excursion

The Woodmen of the World have announced a [illegible] excursion from Peterborough to [illegible] via the Trent waterway for the 18th. Similar excursions last year proved very popular and no doubt the people of Peterborough will keep June 18th in mind this year.

SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

Lockmaster Collins reports a good run of suckers—both on sea and land.

A citizen asks why dogs are allowed to roam the streets at night. Why are they not kept shut up—both as to body and bark? That's easy. Because nobody in authority is awake.

Is there a hold-back combine among the farmers? A few weeks ago, we were told that there were no potatoes in the country, and we paid fancy prices for imported Irish potatoes. This morning, on the market, there were scores of farmers' wagons "loaded to the water line" with potatoes. Where did they come from?

It is rumoured that John Allan is to take John Crane's place as organist of St. Paul's. If the coming "John" fills the bill as well as the retiring "John," St. Paul's will be fortunate.

The newspapers photograph the Duke of Connaught's smile, that breaks out like a glint of sunshine. If he indulges in any other form of smile it is, fortunately, unphotographable.

Mr. John Allen, organist of Crescent Street Presbyterian Church, Montreal, will take the organ at St. Paul's church to-morrow, at both services.

Sabbath breakers should keep an open eye to-morrow, Rev. J. G. Shearer, former secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, is in town.

12 Tumors Removed Without An Operation

Silver Lake, Ont., Sept. 20, 1909.
Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for your remedy, Health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women the world knows. Its use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled. Some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. Thus may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and pen cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Lemon H. Bottrell.

This letter gives an inflection of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organs. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, failing of womb, irregularities, hemorrhoids, etc.

I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering woman who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Inclose 2 stamps and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont. 6

JEANNE TOWLER IN THE "WHITE SISTER"

Plays that have a religious or church title usually frighten and drive away the ordinary playgoer from the theatre, leaving the patronage to the church element of society who only patronize such plays. It is not so with the great Viola Allen success, "The White Sister," which the charming actress Jeanne Towler and her splendid company will present at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, May 22nd. Although "The White Sister" is the story of a Nun, it breathes of all the passionate romantic love of the Italian race in an intensely human manner. It has all the beauty and fragrance of the peaceful convent life, and again it pulsates with the fiery spirit of the impetuous soldier-lover. The great conflict between a woman's earthly and spiritual love is fought through four inspiring scenes that hold the auditors spellbound in their seats, and never for one second loses its gripping interest until the final curtain fall, and the audience leaves the theatre happy in the thought that "the right has been done." "The White Sister" affords opportunity of action of superior quality and gives Miss Towler a chance to demonstrate her right to her position as the most beautiful American emotional actress. The production is strikingly picturesque and presented with the same minute attention to detail that characterized the original Liebler and Co. production in New York.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Chas. Perry took place this afternoon, at 2.30. The cortege proceeded from the family residence, 571 Water street, to St. John's Church, where, at 3 o'clock the Rev. Canon Davidson officiated at a very impressive service. Interment took place at the Little Lake Cemetery.

Many prominent citizens assembled at the funeral and the magnificent display of floral tributes was significant of the esteem in which the deceased was held by those with whom she was associated. The pallbearers were Messrs. Harry Rush, T. A. S. Hay, L. M. Hayes, J. H. Rush, M. P. Warren Dean and T. Hayes.

FANS ARE ANXIOUSLY WAITING FOR LOCAL CANADIAN LEAGUE OPENING

Grand Crowd Will See St. Thomas and Peterborough Battle in the First Professional Ball Ever Played in This City --Riverside Park is Almost in Shape for Opening-- New Stand and the Grounds Will Be Ready.

Peterborough baseball fans, and there are more this year by many hundreds than ever before, are looking forward to next Wednesday when the lid will be officially pried off the local baseball season with appropriate ceremonies and a game between St Thomas and Peterboorugh. Everything is in good shape for the opening. The rain of the past two days did not tie up operations on the new grandstand and the structure will be ready when needed. The diamond will also be finished and while it is not as fast as it will be in a week or two, it will will in good condition. The outfield and the grounds generally have been put in better shape than they ever were before.

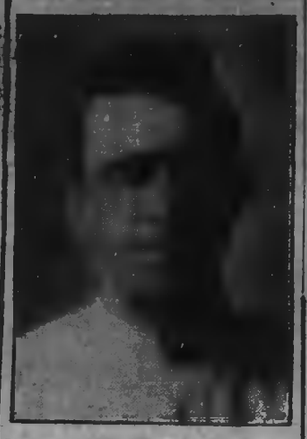
The interest the people of Peterborough have been taking in the success of the ball club is remarkable. Everyone seems to be talking baseball and nearly every one is satisfied with the prospects and with the showing the team has made. While a few people seem to be disappointed because it is not possible now for the club to win the entire 168 games, as they apparently imagined they should, the majority consider they did remarkably well considering the little training they have had. All the Hamilton papers speak in terms of the highest praise of the work of the White Caps and President Fitzgerald of the Canadian League struck the nail squarely on the head when he said Peterborough has a fine team there, and they will bear watching after they have played a few games. They need a few contests to allow them a chance to get going."

The worthy president is right, as he generally is on baseball matters. Manager Templin has the material for a team that will be a pennant possibility at all stages. They will win games and lots of them this season, and there is no need of worry because they meet with a reverse on the road. They have already shown they can clout the ball, leading the league in that respect in the games already played, and their fielding and all-round playing will improve as time goes on. The battery staff is as good as any in the league. Derr outpitched Teed, the best Hamilton twirler, in the opening game, and Baver, after he succeeded Bartlett, had the better of Rose for the remainder of the game. Bartlett got a bad start, partially owing to infield errors that unsteadied him, but the Rochester youngster has the stuff and he will show it to any one of Missouri ancestry before long. Bill Schaefer has not been on the firing line yet, but the big fellow looks to be there with everything.

Wednesday's game with St. Thomas will be commenced at 3.45 o'clock There will be a parade, commencing at the Y.M.C.A. at 3 and in the opening ceremonies at the grounds Mayor Bradburn, J. H. Burnham, M.P., E.



BILL SCHAEFFER, the giant of the Peterborough pitchers. He has not been seen in action yet. Schaeffer is over 6 feet tall and tips the scales at 197 pounds.

A. Peck, M.P.P., President Denham and Vice-President Patterson will take part. The Saints play only one game here on this trip and then give way to Guelph, who will be seen in action on Thursday afternoon, twice on Friday, Victoria Day, and again on Saturday afternoon. Then the much-heralded Ottawa team will invade Peterborough, playing games on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the following week.

Complete details in connection with the opening day ceremonies will be given in Monday's Examiner.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH LEAGUE SCHEDULE

For the second day in succession all the teams in the Canadian League had to remain idle on account of rain and wet grounds and the financial loss as a result will be heavy, especially with Ottawa and Berlin. Rube Deaneau's Busy Bees were scheduled to open the season in the capital and there would have been a rich harvest for both teams had it been possible to play on Thursday and Friday. However, there will be games to-day all around the circuit and record crowds are expected at Ottawa Brantford, Guelph and St. Thomas, which cities are doing the entertaining. The postponements mean double-headers in each of these towns on the next visit of their schedule adversaries. Peterborough played Brantford to-day and will play in St. Thomas on Monday and Tuesday, returning here at noon on Wednesday with the Saints to open the local season.

Mooney Is Called Home

Peterborough fans will be sorry to learn that the father of Catcher Jas. Mooney of the White Caps, is very seriously ill and that the Peterborough backstop has been summoned to his home in Homestead, Pa. A telegram was received early this afternoon, stating that Mr. Mooney, Sr., was dying. The wire was forwarded to Brantford, where the Petes are playing to-day, and Mooney will leave for home to-night. Either Trout or Brode will do the catching for the team next week.

White Cap Notes

Manager Templin will introduce his squad to morning practises as soon as they arrive home.

Boyd Hackbush the utility man Templin signed on Wednesday should add batting strength to the White Caps. "Hack" stung the pill at a .286 clip last season and led the league in two base hits, having made twenty-eight double ply swats during the season. His nearest rival in this line was Amby Kane, the Brantford manager, who had 26. Hackbush will likely be played regularly in right field, although he can handle the infield positions efficiently.

Gun Club Shoot

The regular shoot of the Gun Club was held on Thursday evening. Owing to bad weather and a heavy wind blowing at the time, the attendance was small, as was also the scores.

What are the requirements of your Motor Boat for this summer? From tiller rope to engine make a careful overhaul.

How's the Engine? If it was not in first-class shape last fall, you don't want to start the season with it. A weak spot or break may mean a tie-up for the best part of the summer.

Why not equip your Motor Boat with a Fairbanks-Morse Engine—the sense of satisfaction!

DON'T BE BASHFUL

Ask your friend who owns one. Ask any one of the thousands of owners of Fairbanks-Morse Engines. We do not ask you to take our word for it.

After looking into the merits of the Fairbanks-Morse two-cycle Marine Engine we are confident you will purchase one—then your engine troubles will cease—for it is known to give absolute satisfaction.

It is an engine that is valued because it is dependable. Easy-running—lack of vibration—careful workmanship—are its strong characteristics.

Write for a copy of our interesting book on Marine Engines and Motor Boat Accessories to Dept. L 8.

Mr. Wm. Irwin returned on Friday evening from Espanola, where the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Company's mills have been constructed.

Mr. Sam G. Shoemaker, from Buffalo, N.Y., was in the city spending a day with friends. He has secured a situation as practical millwright for the Calgary Milling Co. He leaves to-day for Calgary, Alberta.

Mr. Claude Rogers and Mr. Geo. McClelland of the Peterborough Canoe Co., went to Port Hope on Friday night. They intend to sail from Port Hope to Toronto to deliver the police patrol boat built by the company for the Toronto Police Department.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR AT SMALL COST

A Simple Remedy Beautifies the Hair, Cures Dandruff, Stops Falling Hair.

What a pity it is to see so many people with thin, wispy hair, faded or streaked with gray, and realize that most of these people might have soft, glossy, abundant hair of beautiful colour and lustre if they would but use the proper treatment. There is no necessity for gray hair under sixty-five years of age, and there is no excuse for anyone, young or old, having thin, straggling hair, either full of dandruff or heavy and rank and smelling with excessive oil.

You can bring back the natural colour of your hair in a few days and forever rid yourself of any dandruff and loose hairs, and make your hair grow strong and beautiful by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. For generations common garden Sage has been used for restoring and preserving the colour of hair; and Sulphur is recognized by Scalp Specialists as being excellent for treatment of hair and scalp troubles.

If you are troubled with dandruff or itching scalp, or if your hair is losing its colour—is coming out, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and notice the improvement in the appearance of your hair after a few days' treatment. Special agent, Warne Drug Co.

Potatoes Were Plentiful

at any time, were offered at ten cents a box or three for a quarter. Sounded like a bargain.

"I think I will have to have six pounds this week," remarked a city woman buying butter. "We had company this week and we ran short one night when it was too late for the morning supply. It was very aggravating, and after this I am always going to have more on hand than we actually need."

The supply of new vegetables is limited to a few bunches of onions and rhubarb. The householder can find a full range of cucumbers, radish, strawberries, asparagus and all the other new fruits and vegetables that are imported from the New England States, at the grocery stores. They will give a tang of the freshness of spring to dinner and afford an appetiser for palates jaded by the drab sameness of winter provisions.

Prices asked to-day were:
Butter, per lb.—27c. to 30c.
Eggs, per doz.—20c. to 23c.
Potatoes, per bag—$2.00 to $2.25.
Chickens, each—50c. to 85c.
Live hogs, per cwt.—$8.65.
Hay, per ton—$18.

Will "Otonabee" Go To Barrie?

It is understood that the steamer "Manila" of the Otonabee Navigation Company's fleet has been sold within the past few days to Mr. G. N. Gerdon, representing others. Negotiations are under way for the transfer of three others of the fleet, the "Otonabee," "Monarch," and "Water Lily," with three years remaining. The Barrie Examiner says the "Otonabee" is to go to that town. The following clipping explains the position:

Speaking to the Barrie Examiner, Mr. H. D. Jamieson said that he had been authorized to purchase a suitable boat for these waters. He had [illegible] owning options and has decided to buy the "Otonabee" for $12,-000, provided the boat is pronounced by the Government Inspector to be thoroughly satisfactory in every way.

MORE FORDS TO BE DELIVERED

Mr. J. J. Duffus returned from Toronto this week, where he concluded arrangements to secure a larger and a steadier supply of Ford automobiles. The company has had such record sales that many salesmen have been hard put to secure supplies. Mr. Duffus has been delivering three Fords a week, this week's supply being taken from the station to-day. He hopes to be able to secure a steady supply of Ford touring cars every week now until his supply has caught up with his sales. No better evidence of the popularity of the Ford touring car could be found than this fact of the heavy demand, the conditions in Peterborough being common to most other places, although it has been largely due to Mr. Duffus' energy that the interest in autoobiles in Peterborough has been stirred up to the present state.

The price of the Ford car, combined with the general satisfaction they have always given are features that have become generally known and appreciated. The success of the Ford sales is due to this combination of price and quality, which is not found to the same extent in most other cars

Mock Trial Was Success

The Utopia Bible class of St. Andrew's church held a most successful concert and mock trial last night, the event being greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The feature of the evening was the mock trial, the hearing of a breach of promise case between Widow Smythe and Widower Smith, which provoked great amusement. Those taking part deserve the greatest credit for their clever work. The programme was opened by a piano solo by Mr. H. C. Treneer, which was greatly appreciated Mr. Norman Laing contributed a vocal solo and there was a duet by Messrs. Patterson and Gillespie

CITIZEN COMPLAINS OF DOG DEPREDATIONS

Dear Mr. Editor.—I am suffering under the doom of the destroying dog. I take a melancholy interest in the depredations of dogs on lawns and flower beds. Others confide their troubles of the same kind to me—the fellowship of common suffering. Private grounds, church grounds, parks, all suffer. I planted nice beds of onions, beets and other horticultural bric-a-brac, and they were all ready to grow under the bountiful rain. This morning I saw that a dog that left tracks deep and broad, something like a baby elephant's, had been making a midnight promenade of my seed beds. I am only one of many such sufferers. My lawn—an open one—is on a corner, and yesterday morning I saw nine dogs, most of them untagged, some good, some bad, and some indifferent, in fact all indifferent to the damage they were doing my lawn and flower beds. Are we to give ourselves pains in the back, and spend our pin money to make lawns and plant flowers and vegetables and have them destroyed by commercially worthless dogs? If a man did the damage dogs do every day, he would be jugged and fined. Yet he could do no more damage than the dogs. Is there no remedy? Are law-abiding and good citizens to suffer without redress? I pay my taxes, promptly and more or less willingly, and I should like to be treated better than mongrel dogs that pay no taxes and besides are no good to the community. "The life of a dog" is used as a symbol of hardship. But "the life of a dog" in Peterborough is one long riot of fun for the dogs. They are allowed to play and gambol and frisk and scratch on places made beautiful for them; flower decked plots, smooth, green lawns, and they enjoy themselves immensely. Where do our legal authorities get legal authority for regarding a dog as better—with more unrestricted rights—than a man?

Yours truly,
SUFFERER.

BANQUET TO LAURIER IN MONTREAL TO BE ENTHUSIASTIC

Former Minister of Railways Says the Victory in Quebec is the First of a Series of Successes for the Liberal Party

Montreal, May 20.—"The Reform Club's coming banquet to Sir Wilfrid Laurier promises to be a big affair, as the recent sweep here has given new life to the party. Le Canada says:

"We hope that our friends in the English provinces will not fail on the first opportunity to show the vitality of our party outside of Quebec. Our province has given an example which New Brunswick and Saskatchewan should not fail to follow. The Conservatives' wave is now broken, and having lost its force can no longer frighten our friends. As in 1775, as in 1812, it was Quebec which saved the situation. The Conservative wave last fall was the voice of Ontario. This triumph is the voice of Quebec."

La Presse says that on Sept. 21 Quebec, while remaining faithful to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, gave signs of a Conservative reaction, furnishing Mr. Borden 27 partisans instead of 12 in the preceding Parliament. Is it not, therefore, extremely significant that out of the 27 counties, 12 have returned to the Liberal fold, such as Bellechasse, Brome, Berthier, Chambly, Compton, Dorchester, Hochelaga, Labelle, Maskinonge, Montmorency, Quebec County, Rimouski and Yamaska.

As Lavergne Sees It.

Montreal, May 20.—Armand Lavergne, who is Mr. J. M. Tellier's lieutenant in the Quebec district, gives his following reason for the recent defeat of the party:

"The defeat was neither due to Mr. Tellier nor his program. We were beaten by the navy question and by the school question. After what took place at Ottawa, I am not disposed to blame the electors who did not believe in our sincerity. At the last Dominion elections the present French-Canadian Ministerialists, as well as the Ministers themselves, came forward as Nationalists, or at least supported the Nationalist program."

Graham Is Jubilant.

Toronto, May 20.—"The result of the Quebec elections shows that if Premier Borden were to go to the country now he would meet sure defeat," said Hon. G. P. Graham, M.P., former Minister of Railways, in an interview at the Prince George.

Mr. Graham went on to say that the Quebec election was a great triumph for the Liberals, and went to show that the people were losing confidence in the Borden Government. It showed strongly that the Nationalists were no longer in favor of, Borden and foreshadowed his defeat at the next general election.

Referring to the statement that he would probably be the next president of the Grand Trunk Railway, Mr. Graham said there was absolutely no truth in the report, that, in fact, he had never been approached on the subject.

DYMENT WINS GUINEAS.

Barrie Owner Captures Coveted Racing Purse.

Toronto, May 20.—The King's Plate, Canada's most celebrated horse race, was won easily on Saturday by A. E. Dyment's Heresy, the favorite for the guineas. C. A. Crew's Amberite was an easy second and Seagram's Rustling had a close call for their place. Far surpassing the interest in the classic race, however, was the fact that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were present and Canadian society turned out its best attire to participate in the gaiety of the occasion.

The results were:

First race—Six furlongs, purse $300, for three-year-olds and up—1, Plate Glass; 2, Yellow Eyes; 3, Warbler. Time, 1.13 1-5.

Second race—Juvenile purse, 4 1-2 furlongs, purse $600, for two-year-olds—1, Brawney; 2, First Sight; 3, Lohengrin. Time, .55.

Third race—Minto Stakes, 1 1-16 miles, purse $1,000, three-year-olds and up—1, Edda; 2, Altamaha; 3, Reybourn. Time, 1.48 4-5.

Fourth race—Woodstock Plate, 1 1-8 miles, purse $2,000, for three-year-olds—1, Light o' My Life; 2, Jenny Geddes; 3, Froglegs. Time, 1.55 2-5.

Fifth race—One and one-quarter miles, King's Plate, purse $5,000, for three-year-olds and up—1, Heresy; 2, Amberite; 3, Rustling. Time, 2.11.

Sixth race—About two miles, Alntree Steeplechase, purse $1,000, for four-year-olds and up, handicap—1, The Prophet; 2, Broadsword; 3, Be Thankful. Time, 4.32.

Seventh race—One and one-sixteenth miles, purse $600, for three-year-olds and upwards, selling—1, West Point; 2, Servicenow; 3, Captain Swansea. Time, 1.49.

WILL HANNA GET IT?

Rumor That He Is to Succeed Mabee Is More Definite.

Toronto, May 20.—Unless Sir James Whitney and his Cabinet colleagues can persuade him to remain, and unless he decides himself that the work he now has in hand is of two great importance to leave, the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary for Ontario, will accept the position of chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, in succession to the late Judge J. P. Mabee, which has been offered to him by the Dominion Government. If Mr. Hanna accepts the position he will be succeeded by the Hon. I. B. Lucas. This is the unofficial but highly creditable statement that is going the rounds here.

While no definite statement as to the offer or the decision of Mr. Hanna has been made public, it is understood that Mr. Hanna is very likely to accept the position. A despatch was sent out from Ottawa a few days ago stating that Mr. Hanna's name had been mentioned, along with half a dozen others. When Mr. Hanna was asked about it, he replied that it would be bad grace to accept a position before it was offered. Since that time, however, a definite offer has been made, and Mr. Hanna is now considering it.

Not Puzzle-Witted.

"Roosevelt says that I lack imagination and sympathy and am puzzle-witted," said the President. "I am not so puzzle-witted but that I can conceive the different between the fifty million dollar treasury deficit at the end of Theodore Roosevelt's two terms and the $40,000,000 surplus at the end of my first year as President."

Mr. Taft declared Roosevelt should not be nominated because of the character of his campaign and because to do so would mean a violation of the third term tradition. He spoke against the judicial recall.

Drowned While Canoeing.

London, May 20.—The first local drowning accident of the season occurred here yesterday morning when Harold Legg, aged 22 years, of this city, lost his life in the Thames while boating with a boy friend. He sank to his death only twenty feet from the shore.

There were two canoes and in splashing water on to each other the canoe in which Legg was paddling, upset. In trying to save themselves they overturned the other craft also, but three were able to get ashore. Legg could not swim. The body was recovered.

Sir William Treloar in America.

New York, May 20.—Sir William Treloar, former Lord Mayor of London, reached New York Saturday on a business trip on the steamer Celtic. Sir William will visit various hospitals here, in which he takes an interest.

THE NEWEST TRUST.

U. S. Attorney-General Will Get After Coffee Combine.

New York, May 20.—Attorney-General Wickersham has moved against the so-called coffee trust or Brazilian valorization scheme. In a petition in equity filed here in the United States court, the valorization plan is declared to be a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The court is asked to decree the scheme unlawful, to enjoin the valorization committee from withholding the coffee from the market, and to appoint a receiver to sell the 650,000 bags, valued at $10,000,000, now alleged to be stored in the various warehouses of the New York Dock Co.

The Government also applied for a temporary injunction restraining the valorization from removing or disposing of the coffee held in America pending the termination of the issue.

The members of the valorization committee have agreed and conspired among themselves, the Government charges, to withhold from the market large quantities of coffee under their control for the purpose of raising the price of the commodity, to an unnatural and unreasonable extent. They have thus attempted, it is declared, to restrain the coffee trade throughout the world, including the interstate and foreign commerce of the United States and to "injure and defraud the public for their own enrichment."

HAYS WAS LOYAL.

Did Not Let Americanism Into G.T.R. Affairs, Says Smithers.

Montreal, May 20.—A. W. Smithers, chairman of the board of directors of the Grand Trunk Railway, arrived here last evening from New York. He will confer with the officers here in reference to several important matters, and in particular will take up the matter of a selection of a successor to the late president, Mr. Charles M. Hays, a victim of the Titanic disaster.

Mr. Smithers was met in New York by such well known railway men as Wm. Wainwright, acting president of the Grand Trunk; E. F. Galloway, assistant to the president, and E. H. Fitchugh, president of the Central Vermont Railway, but if any discussion was made as to the selection of the new president, nothing of the proposals has been made public.

Mr. Smithers was asked whether he cared to comment on a rumor that the coming of Mr. Smithers meant the removal from the Grand Trunk staff of the so-called Hays-Harriman officials.

"I do not care to say anything on that subject," he replied. "The announcement of any changes that are to be made will be given out at the earliest possible moment. I will say this, however, that I believe that Mr. Hays was absolutely loyal to the interests of the Grand Trunk Railway System, and, further, that he was absolutely loyal to Canada and Canadian interests."

Buried Unidentified Body.

Cornwall, May 20.—The body of a man found in the river off Cornwall Island, on Friday evening, was interred in Woodlawn Cemetery on Saturday. The man was about 60 years of age, bald headed, had a grey moustache, weighed about 200 pounds, and was six feet tall. The identity of the man may never be discovered.

SAWMILL IS BURNED

Owen Sound Suffers From a Costly Blaze

HAMILTON PLANT GUTTED

Owen Sound, May 20.—For the second time in six months a disastrous fire visited Owen Sound, when at an early hour yesterday morning, the big saw mill plant of the Carney Lumber Co. was wiped out, meaning a total loss of about $250,000. The whole milling plant was a seething mass of flames when the firemen reached it, and it was impossible to save any part of it. The plant was probably the most modern and thoroughly equipped on the Georgian Bay, and special attention had been paid to fire protection.

In the absence of the owners, both of whom are in the United States, and are not expected until to-day, it is impossible to say whether or not the plant will be rebuilt. The blow to the town industrially speaking will be felt. The company employed over 125 men, and their wage roll ran up to about $75,000 annually.

The origin of the fire is a complete mystery.

Fire In Hamilton.

Hamilton, May 20.—The factory of the Diamond Flint Glass Co., situated at the corner of Hughson and James streets, was completely gutted by fire, which started late Saturday night. The fire was well nigh out of control when the firemen were notified, and by the time the men had the water turned on the whole north end of the city was brightly illuminated by the blaze. The flames gained headway very quickly and in a few minutes from the time the first blaze was noticed the whole building was one mass of flames.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is stated by the company that the flames started from the molten glass, of which there was 100 tons in the furnace. The factory in which the fire occurred is utilized for the furnace and the bottle machines. The main building was a one-storey stone structure, but at the part where the furnace is situated was three storeys high.

The damage cannot be accurately estimated, the company officials refusing to make any statement as to loss that they have sustained. Chief Ten Eyck, however, placed the damage at $6,000. The company claim that the bottle machines are a complete loss and if this proves to be the case, the loss will probably be much heavier than the chief's estimate.

Cigar Factory for Windsor.

London, May 20.—John McNee & Sons, cigar manufacturers, will establish a branch factory, to employ 100 people, on Sandwich street, Windsor, where they have purchased a five-storey building and may eventually move their whole plant out of this city. "KEITH OF THE BORDER"

BY RANDALL PARRISH

(Continuing from Yesterday)

"Fired the gunpowder all right, eh, and I reckon it'll be some help, at least or two. Now, be considered, are; struck a pitch of powder beside you I'll get my duke!" The face of his blouse with cut where the bullet Keith thought he perceived a stain of blood.

"Finished you, anyway, didn't he? "Opened the door, thought that one had given us the slip another. What's 'round on the south?"

Keith's face showed his hand shaking hard on the knife.

"Five, and another out in front, that leaves five. Eight men inside. Bring our fellows up closer, and post them where they can cover those fellows' windows, while I make an effort at breaking in here."

Bristoe crawled back like a snail, and confident the others would do their part, Keith thrust his knife blade deep into the narrow crack, and began probing after the latch. In spite of all caution this effort caused a slight noise, and suddenly he started back, at the sound of a woman's voice:

"What do you want? I am armed, and will fire through the door if you do not go away."

"Hope," he exclaimed as loudly as he dared. "This is Keith; open the door."

He could hear a little smothered cry break from her lips, and then the sound of a bar being hastily removed. An instant, and the door opened silently, just wide enough to permit her slender figure to slip through. She grasped him with her hands, turning his face to the light of the stars, and he could feel her form tremble.

"Oh, I knew you would come! I knew you could come!" she sobbed, the words barely audible.

The man's lips set firmly, yet he held her close to him, begging her not to break down now.

"It's all right, little girl," he said pleadingly, "we've got you safe, but htretg hs iegfi thm etaoin shrdlu mh there is a fight to be attended to. Come with me; I must ask you a question or two."

He drew her back into the fringe of bushes, placing her safely behind the stack of saddles. She was not crying any more, just clinging to him, as though she could never again bear to let him go.

"Oh, Jack, it is so good just to feel you near again."

"Yes, dear," soothingly, "and it is good to hear you say Jack, but tell me one thing—is any one else in the cabin? Is Hawley here?"

"No, no! He left us early the first morning. I haven't either seen or heard of him since. The men have left me alone since we got here; I have not suffered, only mentally—from dread of what they intended doing with me—until to-night. Three men rode in here just before sundown—two Mexicans and an Indian. One of them was an awful looking old man, with a scar on his cheek, and a face that made me shudder. He didn't see me, but I saw him through the window, and he had such strange eyes. All the men acted as though they were afraid of him, and I heard him say he didn't care what Hawley's orders were, he was going to sleep inside; if the girl didn't like it she could take the other room. I didn't know what to do—oh, I was so afraid of him; but what he said gave me an idea, and I went into the back room, and put up a bar across the door. When he came in he tried the door; then he spoke through it, but I never answered; and finally he lay down and went to sleep. I sat there in the dark so long, and when I heard you—I—I thought it must be some of the others."

He stroked her hair, whispering words of encouragement.

"That is all done with now, Hope, and we'll have those fellows at our mercy in another half-hour. But I must go now to the boy so lie down here behind these saddles, and don't move until I come for you. I can trust you to remain right here?"

"Yes." He was bending over, and her eyes was upon his face. Suddenly, despite an expression of pain, it changed into a look of [illegible]

CHAPTER XXXV.
THE FINAL FIGHT.

[illegible] the others, giving them, in a whisper, a hurried account of Hope's return from the cabin, and of what she had to report.

"It's old Juan Sanchez in the front room, boys," he added soberly, "and there is ten thousand dollars reward on for him, dead or alive."

Joe of the "Bar X" drew in his breath sharply.

"I'll sure be dead then," he muttered, "that cuss will never be got no other way."

They went at it in the grim, silent manner of the West, wasting little time, feeling no mercy. One by one the unconscious sleepers were aroused, each waking to find a steel barrel pressing against his forehead, and to hear a stern voice say ominously, "Not a move, Johnny; yes, that's a gun; now get up quietly, and step out here." Resistance was useless, and the five, rendered weaponless, were herded back toward the corral. They all belonged to Hawley's outfit; one, a black-whiskered surly brute Bristoe remembered having seen in Sheridan. There was no time to deal with them then, and a "Bar X" man was placed on guard, with orders to shoot at the slightest suspicious movement.

The Indian, then, would be guarding the front of the house, and Sanchez sleeping inside. Well, the former could be left alone; his chance of escape would be small enough with Fairbain and Neb on the opposite bank. Old Sanchez was the villain they wanted—dead or alive. With this in view, and anxious to make a quick job of it, the three entered the back room, and, revolvers in hand, groped their way across to the connecting door. As Hope had described, this had been securely fastened by a stout wooden bar. Bristoe forced it from the sockets, not without some slight noise, and Keith, crouching down at one side, lifted the latch.

"Keep down low, boys," he cautioned, "where he can't hit you."

With one quick push he flung the door wide open and a red flash lit the room. There were two sharp reports, the bullets crashing into the wall behind them, the sudden blaze of flame revealing the front door open, and within it the black outline of a man's figure. Two of the men fired in instant response, leaping recklessly forward, but were as quickly left blind in the darkness, the outer door slammed in their faces. Outside there was a snarl of rage, another shot, a fierce curse in Spanish; then Keith flung the door wide open, and leaped down the step. As he did so he struck a body, and fell forward, his revolver knocked from his hand. Rising to his knees, the dim light of the stars revealed a man already half across the stream. Suddenly two sparks of fire leaped forth from the blackness of the opposite bank; the man flung up his hand, staggered, then went stumbling up the stream, knee deep in water. He made a dozen yards, reeling as though drunk, and fell forward, face down across a spit of sand. Keith stared out at the black, motionless shape, felt along the ground for his lost gun, and arose to his feet. Bristoe had turned over the dead body at the foot of the steps, and was peering down into the upturned face.

"It's the Indian," he said grimly, "Sanchez must 'a' mistook him 'er one of us, and shot the poor devil."

"And Sanchez himself is out yonder on that sandpit!" and Keith pointed; then lifted his voice to make it carry across the stream. "Come on over, Doctor, you and Neb. We've got the gang. Bring that body out there along with you."

The "Bar X" man waded out to help, and the three together laid the dead Mexican outlaw on the bank, beside the Indian he had shot down in his effort to escape. Keith stood for a moment bending low to look curiously into the dead face—wrinkled, scarred, still featuring cruelty, the thin lips drawn back in a snarl. What scenes of horror those eyes had gazed upon during fifty years of crime; what suffering of men, women, children; what deeds of rapine; what examples of merciless hate. Juan Sanchez!—the very sound of the name made the blood run cold. "Dead or alive?" Well, they had him at last—dead; and the plainsman shuddered, as he turned away.

Taking Fairbain with him, and hastily reviewing late occurrences to him, Keith crossed over to the corral, realizing that their work—his work—was not wholly done until Hawley had been located. With this quest in mind he strode straight to the black-bearded giant who had guarded Hope from Sheridan.

"What is your name?" he asked sharply.

The man looked up scowling.

"Hatchett," he answered gruffly.

"Well, Hatchett, I am going to ask you a question or two, and advise you to reply just about as straight as you know how. I am in no mood to-night for any foolishness. Where is 'Black Bart' Hawley?"

"How in h—— should I know?"

"You do know, just the same. Perhaps not to an inch, or a mile, but you know near enough where he is, and where he has been since you left Sheridan."

"If I do, I'm d——d if I'll tell you."

"No. Well now, Hatchett, listen to me," and Keith's voice had in it the click of a steel trap. "You'll either answer, and answer straight, or we'll hang you to that cottonwood in about five minutes. If you want a chance for your miserable life you answer me. We have our way of treating your kind out in this country. Sit up, you brute! Now, where did Hawley go after he left you?"

"To Fort Larned."

"After those fresh horses?"

"Yes."

"He didn't bring them to you; I know that. Where has he been since?"

"Topeky and Leavenworth."

"How do you know?"

"He writ me a note the boss herder brought."

"Hand it over."

Keith took the dirty slip of paper the man reluctantly extracted from his belt, and Fairbain lit matches while he ran his eyes hastily over the lines. As he ended he crushed the paper between his fingers, and walked away to the end of the corral. He wanted to be alone, to think, to decide definietly upon what he ought to do. Hawley, according to the schedule just read, must have left Larned alone early the day before; this night he would be camped at the water-hole; with daybreak he expected to resume his lonely journey across the desert to the Salt Fork. For years Keith had lived a primitive life, and in some ways his thought had grown primitive. His code of honour was that of the border, tinged by that of the South before the war. The antagonism existing between him and this gambler was personal, private, deadly—not an affair for any others—outsiders—to meddle with. He could wait here, and permit Hawley to be made captive; could watch him ride unsuspectingly into the power of these armed men, and then turn him over the the law to be dealt with. The very thought nauseated him. That would be a coward's act, leaving a stain never to be eradicated. No, he must meet this as became a man, and now, now before Hope so much as dreamed of his purpose—aye, and before he spoke another word of love to Hope. He wheeled about fully decided on his course, his duty, and met Fairbain face to face.

"Jack," the latter said earnestly, "I read the note over your shoulder, and of course I know what you mean to do. A Southern gentleman cou'd not choose otherwise. But I've come here to beg you to let me have the chance."

"You?" surprised and curious. "What greater claim on that fellow's life have you than I?"

"It's for Christie," he explained brokenly. "She was the one he tried to run away with. You—you know how I feel."

"Sure, I know," shaking the other off, yet not roughly. "But it happened to be Miss Waite he took, and so this is my job, Fairbain. Besides, I've got another score to settle with him."

He wasted little time upon preparations—a few brief words of instruction to Bristoe; a request to the doctor not to leave Hope alone; the extracting of a promise from the two "Bar X" men to return to Larned with the prisoners. Then he roped the best horse in the corral, saddled and bridled him, and went into the cabin. She had a light burning, and met him at the door.

"I thought you would never come, but they told me you were unhurt."

"Not a scratch, little girl; we have been a lucky bunch. But I have had a great deal to look after. Now I shall be obliged to ride ahead as far as the water-hole, and let you come on with the others a little later, after you get breakfast. You can spare me a few hours, can't you?"

His tone was full of good humour, and his lips smiling, somehow she felt her heart sink, an inexplicable fear finding expression in her eyes.

"But—but why do you need to go? Couldn't some of the others?"

"There is a reason which I will explain later," he said, more gravely. "Surely you can trust me, Hope, and feel that I am only doing what it seems absolutely necessary for me to do?" He bent down, and kissed her. "It will be only for a few hours, and no cause for worry. Good-bye, now, until we meet to-night at the water-hole."

The east was grey with coming daylight as he rode plashing across the stream and up the opposite bank. She watched him, rubbing the blinding mist from her eyes, until horse and man became a mere dark speck, finally fading away completely into the dull plain of the desert.

CHAPTER XXXVI.
THE DUEL IN THE DESERT.

Keith rode straight forward into the sandy desolation, spurring his horse into a swift trot. After one glance backward as they clambered up the steep bank, a glance which revealed Hope's slender form in the cabin door, his eyes never turned again that way. He had a man's stern work to do out yonder, and his purpose could not be swerved, his firmness of hand and keenness of eye affected, by any thought of her. His lips compressed, his fingers gripping the rein, he drove all regretful memory from his mind, until every nerve within him throbbed in unison with his present purpose. He was right; he knew he was right. It was not hate, not even revenge, which had sent him forth, leaving love behind, but honour—the honour of the South, and of the frontier, of his ancestry and his training—honour that drove him now to meet Hawley face to face, man to man, to settle the feud between them for all time. And he rode smiling, gladly, as to a tryst, now that he was at last alone, free in the desert.

The hours passed, the sun rising higher in the blazing blue of the sky; the horse, wearied by the constant pull of the sand, had long since slowed down to a walk; the last dim blur of the cottonwoods along the Fork had disappeared; and the rider swayed in the saddle, the dead lifelessness of sky and desert dulling his brain. Yet he had not forgotten his errand—rousing constantly from lethargy to sweep his shaded eyes about the horizon, keenly marking the slightest shadow across the sands, taking advantage of every drift to give him wider viewpoint, rising in his stirrups to scan the leagues of desolation ahead. Twice he drew his revolver from out its sheath, tested it, and slipped in a fresh cartridge, returning the weapon more lightly to its place, the flap of the holster turned back and help open by his leg. The sun beat upon him like a ball of fire, the hot sand flinging the blaze back into his face. He pushed back the upper part of his shirt, and drank a swallow of tepid water from a canteen strapped behind the saddle. His eyes ached with the glare, until he saw fantastic red and yellow shapes dancing dizzily before him. The weariness of the long night pressed upon his eyballs; he felt the strain of the past hours, the lack of food, the need of rest. His head nodded, and he brought himself to life again with a jerk and a muttered word, staring out into the dim, formless distance. Lord, if there was only something moving; something he could concentrate his attention upon; something to rest the straining eyes!

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

CHRIST'S TRIUMPH A GLORIOUS ONE

Died to Rescue Humanity —Victor, He Leads Forth Captives in Multitudes.

Boston, Mass., May 19.—Pastor Russell spoke here to-day in the Boston Theatre. In one of his discourses he spoke from the text: "When He ascended up On High, He led a multitude of captives."—Ephesians iv. 8.

This grand expression respecting the glorious outcome of the Saviour's work is quoted by the Apostle Paul from the Psalms. (Ps. lxviii. 18.) The figure thus thrust before our mental eye is that of a great Conqueror whose victory is being heralded. With the Romans we know that it was a custom that generals returning from various wars were granted what were termed "Triumphs"—that is to say, triumphal processions, that the people might have tangible evidence of their victories.

Thus, for instance, Titus, returning from the war upon the Jews, in A.D. 70, brought with him certain notable persons, and the Golden Candlestick from the Temple, and these were displayed to the eyes of the people following the conqueror. They were subsequently sculptured on the Arch of Titus, still standing in Rome. And evidently the custom was still older than the days of the Romans, since it was so prophetically set forth by the Prophet David.

Let us permit our mental eye to feast upon the scene presented in our text. Jesus, in fulfilment of the Divine Program, had left the heavenly condition and descended to earth, taking a bondman's form or nature in order "that He, by the grace of God, might taste death for every man"; in order that He might rescue Adam and his race from the dying and death condition in which they were—under Divine sentence and under the power of Satan.

Therefore the Redeemer counted not His life precious to Him, but freely delivered Himself up for our offences and died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring mankind back into harmony with God. His humiliation ended in death, but His triumph began when, as is recorded, God raised Him from the dead by His own power, and set him at the right hand of His own Majesty —"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

The prophecy says nothing about our Lord's descending from the heavenly glory to the earthly nature, but St. Paul supplies this feature saying, "He that ascended, what is it but that He first descended, into the lower condition of the earth?" Thus the Apostle asserts that He that descended is He that ascended above all heights, that all things may be fulfilled through Him.

An important thought here noted is that our Lord not only left the heavenly glory, but that He returned to a still more excellent glory—He did not suffer the disastrous loss of the heavenly nature as a result of His obedience in taking the human nature. As He left the heavenly nature to take the human, so in returning He left the human nature to ascend again to that which He had before, with the additional glory of the divine nature.

With most of the conquerors in olden times the captives were made slaves. Not so, however, will be the result of Jesus' victory. He leads forth to liberty and eternal life those who have been slaves of sin and death. His train of captives is a long one indeed; the procession has already occupied eighteen centuries, and is yet to be the great work of the thousand years of that Messianic reign!

First of all in the procession are the saints—"the Church of the Firstborn, whose names are written in Heaven." In the forefront of them we see the twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas. The Apostles are to be Kings who are to reign with Christ in pre-eminent positions; but following them are some others of the saintly company of Kings—in all a "little flock."

Then will come a company, more numerous, but less heroic—"a great multitude," uncrowned, but with "palm branches," not anti-typical Priests, but anti-typical Levites, associates and servants of the royal Priesthood, the Bride. Then will follow (Hebrews xi, 39-40) other faithful ones of the past, the Ancient Worthies. The Prophet speaks also of the "rebellious house." The classes previously specified were not rebellious, but gladly and willingly forsook all to do the will of the Father and to attain the liberty of sons of God, as the first-fruits of the triumph of the Lamb.

But during the thousand years of Christ's reign He will lead forth the "rebellious house"—the world of mankind—not all of them, we may be sure, for some, the Scriptures positively declare, will die the Second Death, because, after realizing their deliverance, they will love sin and will therefore be destroyed as enemies of righteousness. But it is a blessed thought that many of those who are now aliens, strangers and foreigners from God through wicked works are in this condition of opposition, not willingly, not intelligently, but by reason of the ignorance and weaknesses which came to them by heredity, under the reign of sin and death.

It is to be a distinct feature of the great Triumph of Immanuel that every eye shall be opened and every ear unstopped, that "the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth," during His glorious reign of righteousness. Are we not distinctly told of the time that will follow, in which all the willing and obedient shall receive the Holy Spirit, which men will be poured out "upon all flesh" even as now, during this Gospel Age, it is poured out upon God's "servants and handmaidens" only?

"Oh, that will be a glorious Triumph for the great Redeemer! In the language of the Bible, "He shall see the fruitage of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." What a glorious fruitage!—not only His own exaltation—not only the exaltation of His faithful Bride class, and the additional exaltation of "the virgins, her companions, which follow her," and the exaltation of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets, but finally the deliverance to human perfection of all the groaning creation willing to accept the same upon the Divine terms of loyalty to God and to the principles of His Government as these shall be made known to them.

It was the custom in olden times that a king coming into authority and power should give gifts according to His wealth. Governors and princes would be needed and he would dispense the honors of these offices to those found faithful in his service, loyal in the defence of His cause. So in this prophetic reference to our Lord's ascension it is declared, not only that He would lead forth a multitude of captives, granting them freedom, liberty, blessings, but also that He would confer certain gifts.

We might have spent valuable time guessing the nature of these gifts which the great Redeemer would dispense, but such a waste of time is unnecessary, since the Apostle proceeds to explain the matter and tells us what gifts are meant. He says, "And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers."

There is an astounding thought connected with this statement—that the Apostles were not self-appointed, and that they had no successors, and that the work of evangelizing, or making known the "good tidings," and the pastoral work amongst believers, are all under the supervision of the Head of the Church, the great Victor, who redeemed us with His blood, and who proposes, first, to lead forth a Bride class, and subsequently all the willing and obedient.

It behooves us to notice that the Apostle does not intimate that Jesus gave to some Methodism, to others Presbyterianism, and others Roman Catholicism, etc. No, when we hold such thoughts it was because of more or less misunderstanding—because we failed to see first that there is but the "one Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven," and second, that that one Church is not any of the various sects and parties, but includes the saintly in all of these; "the Lord knoweth them that are His."

Noting carefully the Apostle's argument we perceive that the Master did not give these gifts for the conversion of the world. He does specify, however, what they were for, namely, "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ"—the Church, the Bride class. Is it supposable that the Apostle erred in this statement and that the fact is the reverse—that these gifts were provided for the conversion of the world, and that the Apostle thoroughly misunderstood the matter and supposed that they were given for the perfecting of the saints, for the edifying of the Body of Christ? No! We are to be taught by the Apostles and may be sure that there is no mistake, no error in his statement.

Notice the force of the expression, "the perfecting of the saints." It is not sufficient that believers have a little knowledge, a little faith, and a measure of sanctification or devotion to the Lord, for after they have received and attained all of these things they still need the instruction of the Apostles and ministers, pastors and teachers, provided by the great Head of the Church for their perfection. Ah! there is a force and depth of meaning in that word perfecting. We remember that of our Head it is written, "Being made perfect through suffering. He became the Author of eternal salvation to all who obey Him." So His followers are to be made perfect through suffering.

The Master's perfection, indeed, was a little different from ours, and yet there is a similarity between the two. He was perfect before He humbled Himself; He was still perfect as the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself; but as a result of His consecration He received a begetting of the Holy Spirit to the divine nature, and His development as a New Creature required that He faithfully carry out His vow, or covenant of sacrifice, in the doing of the will of the Heavenly Father. By such faithfulness He perfected Himself on the Divine plane—that is, He proved Himself worthy according to the covenant—"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive glory, honor, dominion and power."

Similarly the followers of Jesus are to be sharers with Him in the sufferings of this present time and in the glories which shall follow, for "If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him." Although we are imperfect in the flesh, while He was perfect, yet the robe of His righteousness, the merit of His sacrifice, covers all of our blemishes and makes us, as His footstep followers, holy and acceptable before the Father, as joint-sacrificers with Jesus.

The begetting of the Holy Spirit starts us in the life Divine. We are not to be perfected in the flesh, but in the spirit, and our perfection and acceptance with the Father will be demonstrated by our loyalty of heart and the fullness and thoroughness with which we submit our all to the Divine will and seek to glorify God in our bodies and spirits, which are His. Our justification comes to us as a reward of faith, regardless of works, but our glorification will follow only as a reward for faithfulness—"Be our faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Not merely for a few days or years were these gifts to the Church provided; on the contrary, they were to endure throughout this entire Age, until the Church perfected shall pass beyond the veil and be forever with her Redeemer, to share His glory, honor and immortality. The Lord from time to time has raised up evangelists, pastors and teachers for this glorious service of preparing the "chaste virgin," the Church, to be the Bride in glory. But the Apostolic office, as represented in The Twelve, specially provided by the Father, has continued and needs no replenishment. We still have their instructions as fully as the early Church, "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

That the Apostle did not understand the matter to be merely for a day, but throughout this Age, until the completion of the Church, is clearly evidenced by His statement, namely, that all these gifts were for the edification of the Body of Christ and the perfecting of the saints to the last—"until we all come to the unity of the faith and to knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Verse 13.

This is a wonderful statement, however we view it. Shall we say that it applies to each individual member of the Church of Christ, and that each individual must come into that full unity of faith, and that full knowledge of the Son of God, and the perfection of manhood in Christ, and to a developed stature or maturity in Christ? Or shall we understand the meaning to be, until the entire Church of Christ shall have reached a full knowledge and shall, as a whole, have come to the condition of a perfect Man, of which Christ is the Head and we are the members—to the full development or stature of the Anointed, the Messiah, Head and members? We believe that the latter is the Apostle's thought.

Nevertheless it cannot be disputed that the selection of these members all the way down the Age must have been along the lines here indicated. Individually, one partially developed would not be fitted for the Kingdom. One not in the unity of the faith would not be suitable. One not developed to the proper measure or stature as a Christian would not be suitable. Nothing is more plain than that the individual Christian needs a great deal of instruction, edification, building up in the holy faith, testing, proving, chiseling, polishing, fitting, preparing before he shall be ready for a place in the glorious Temple of God, the Church in glory.

This thought is confirmed by the succeeding verses, in which the Apostle tells us that by the assistance of these, the Divinely provided gifts, teachers, etc., God's people need no longer, like children, to be tossed to and fro, and be misled by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness of those who would deceive. On the contrary, being sincere, and speaking the truth in love, they are to grow up into membership in the Anointed One in all things—coming fully and completely into returning and exact conformity, under the Head, even Christ.—Verses 14, 15.

Proceeding, the Apostle tells us that all who are recognized as members of the Body of Christ must be properly joined to the Head—by a proper compact, or covenant, intelligently made and fully intended. This union must be compacted, and it requires the entire Gospel Age to effect this developing and compacting as members, that the whole Body of the Anointed may be one, symmetrical, beautiful, co-operative, making increase in its members and edifying itself in love—growing in grace and in knowledge and in character-likeness to the Mind of the Church, Jesus. —Verse 16.

In conclusion, then, the Captain of our Salvation has gone before. He has accepted us as His joint-heirs, and we are following on, blest by the gifts which He dispensed when He ascended up On High; and we, in turn, will be His gifts to the world of mankind. When as Priests and Kings we shall be associated with our Lord, we shall bless all the families of the earth with a glorious opportunity of knowledge and obedience, that they may, if they will, attain life everlasting, "the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Piquant Stories About the Late Queen Victoria at Home.

Gracious though the late Queen Victoria could be at times, she would brook no interference with her personal wishes. Furthermore, she was quite convinced in her early days of the infallibility of kings and queens, and strongly resented anything which, in her opinion, would lower her royal dignity. This is made plain by Mrs. Jerrold in her stories of the court in the 'forties, contained in her book, "The Early Court of Queen Victoria."

Queen Victoria's childhood was exceedingly dreary, and it was, perhaps, scarcely surprising, when she became Queen of England, that she used her power and great position in very little ways. Her first request to her mother on her accession was that she should be "left alone for two hours," a privilege she had never enjoyed, while, when the Duchess of Kent begged her august daughter not to overtire herself by the excitement of attending in person to prorogue Parliament, the girl of eighteen answered:

"That is a word I do not like to hear; all these ceremonies interest and please me, but have no such effect on my mind as that which I understand by excitement."

Not even Lord Melbourne was allowed to give her any slight correction. At her first council the young Queen began reading:

"This act intituled"—which is the legal way of spelling "entitled."

"'Entitled,' your Majesty, 'entitled,'" hastily corrected Lord Melbourne, in a loud aside.

The young Queen slowly drew herself up and said, quietly and firmly, "I have said it."

Then, after a pause, once more the beautiful childish voice rang out:—

"This act intituled——"

We get another striking illustration of Queen Victoria's independance of character in connection with what has been facetiously termed "the Great Bedchamber Plot." Ladies of the Bedchamber are appointed by the Government, and a change in the administration usually means a change in the appointments. In 1839, however, Queen Victoria refused to part with the Ladies of her Bedchamber on the occasion of a change of Government, and the consequences was that Sir Robert Peel declined to form a Ministry, Lord Melbourne returning to office.

"They wish to treat me like a girl," Her Majesty said, regarding this trouble.

Waves and Surf.

Long and oscillatory waves run by gravity, the first agitating the water to nearly the same amount at all depths, while the chief disturbance due to the latter confines itself to the upper layers of the water. These oscillatory waves, the most typical example of which is perhaps furnished by the "swell," or regular rolling waves which continue to run in deep water after a storm, will break on a shelving shore when their height is about equal to the depth of water. When the depth is sufficient to allow the oscillations to proceed unimpeded no progressive motion takes place, each column being kept in its place by the pressure of surrounding columns. If, however, free oscillation is prevented, as by the interposition of a rock or by the shelving of the shore, the columns in the deep water are not balanced by those in the shallower, and thus they acquire a progressive motion and form "breakers." For this reason waves always break against the shore, whatever is the direction of the wind.

Ragging Metre into Money

THREE years ago a black-haired young man of twenty with a moderately fair voice and a ragtime movement in his legs did extremely ordinary stunts in vaudeville houses and cabarets on the side about New York; his syncopated popular songs were no better than those of hundreds of others, so his success was not encouraging. Usually Irving Berlin was hard up. One day he took it into his head to write an original song. He knew nothing about poetry, the rules of meter, and he was absolutely ignorant of the most rudimentary technics of music. He got $25 for his song. It made a fair hit and, thus encouraged, he wrote many others. During the three years that have since passed he has scored more hits than any song writer who has ever tinkled his way into the sentimental heart of the public, and has "ragged" more money from the public's unsentimental pockets than possibly all the writers of real poetry since the days of Thomas Chatterton put together.

When a song scores a big hit it may sell from one half million to more than two million copies, and decrepit pianos will jingle it from the banks of the Saskatchewan to the shores of the Yukon; from the shacks at Panama to the remoter homes of Brooklyn and New Jersey. Such a song will pay its author royalties totalling three thousand dollars and upward. Berlin made $30,000 on his "Alexander's Ragtime Band," possibly the most phenomenal success in the history of song hits. With the proceeds from his dozen or more other hits—including "Sweet Italian Love," "Everybody's Doin' It Now" and "That Mesmerizing Mendelssohn Tune"—Mr. Berlin has made in three years (these figures are based on his own statement) $100,000.

$30,000 for One Song.

When I met the popular author of "The Grizzly Bear" I could not help thinking of Richard Le Gallienne, Bliss Carman, Edwin Markham and other poets of my acquaintance, who spend weeks polishing up a sonnet for which they may get a top notch price ranging from $14 to $23. Mr. Berlin's $30,000 "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was written in ten minutes. I could not help thinking of Milton laboring for seven years on his "Paradise Lost" and selling it for fifteen pounds, of Poe, hungry, demented with anxiety, parting with "The Raven" for $10, and of Chatterton starving. In comparison with our modern writers of bona fide verse, who have exchanged the garrets of a more classic antiquity for electric-lighted and steam-heated Harlem flats, Mr. Berlin can occupy a luxurious suite at a big hotel, dine at the most elaborate of our gilded lobster palaces, and run his own car.

So far as the higher-brow writers of lyrics go, they are but vaguely known to Mr. Berlin and his plethoric contemporaries. The mention of the names of Arthur Symons, George Sylvester Viereck and Joyce Kilmer evoked only a puzzled look of disinterested inquiry. And when—in an effort to get at the personality and intellectual interests of these unknown favorites of the song-loving public—I asked Joe Goodwin, author of the stupendously successful "Billy," whether he was acquainted with Swinburne, he acknowledged frankly:—

"Well, I tell you, we fellers don't associate with one another much as a matter o' fact, excepts occasionally we get together and have a drink."

Of the new writers of songs there are less than half a dozen who make more than $5,000 a year; a few make upward of $10,000. Two or three make this sum on a single song. Mr. Berlin, the Rockefeller of the song industry, has written more than four hundred songs, of which more than one hundred and fifty have been published. Nearly all have a sale and a dozen have made big hits.

To secure an interview with Mr. Berlin was as difficult as with a magnate of any other industry. A call at his office at ten A. M., at noon, and four in the afternoon on three successive days elicited the information that Mr. Berlin "has not come to his office yet"; a telephone call to his hotel was met with the reply that the great man was composing and could not be disturbed; a letter brought no response: finally one busy afternoon Mr. Berlin was actually caught in, and between a feverish devotion to popular musical comedy stars, who came to try out his productions, he told with a frank unreserve everything that was asked about himself.

As we sat in the little coop-like office, I could hear a half dozen of his songs being tried in a half dozen other little coop-like offices. Pianos tinkled "The Ragtime Violin," "Everybody's Doin' It Now," "The Wild Cherry Rag," and other rags. A blonde voice crooned:—"Talk of yo' loon-ey coons, talk of yo' spoo-ny coons; luv-er of coon-y tunes, Jackson-was-the-leader-of-a-big-brass-band. . ." A rasping brunette attempted:—"Fid-dle up, fid-dle up . . . on . . . your violin; lay right on it, rest your chin up-on it; dog-gone, you bet-ter be-gin." A peroxide voice chirruped in the hall:—"Where's Ted? Give my love to Ted!" and a bevy from a Broadway chorus went rushing by. A truculent and very theatric individual was raising a row in a rear office. And Berlin was saying:—

Never Studied Music.'

"To be frank about it, the less you know about music and the less you know about verse, the better chances you got to make a public hit. If I'd had an education I'd not be where I am now. I never had no chances, and I never got any school learning. I never studied music, and I can pick out a tune only with one finger; but I know what the public wants. Yes, I depend on inspiration. I get a thought—a line comes—the lyric writes itself. An' then I pick out a tune. The whole thing is to get a 'punch' in your composition—a thing the public will remember. You get the knack of it in time; it's simply a trick; and song writing is a business. I never studied anybody else—I just wrote what came. You may call it genius, if you like; but I got no such swell idea about it. And this business is one o' the things where a lack of education helps. The more limited your vocabulary is the better; I don't know many big words; I can't talk well; but I'm not sorry, for, as I've found out, the public won't buy a song with any three syllable words in it—the simpler the better. They want things any child can play or sing."

In Mr. Berlin's opinion, one person out of every twenty has ambitions to become a popular song writer. Hundreds of manuscripts of verses and musical compositions are received by him personally every week; but, according to him, the newcomer has little chance.

"You'd be surprised at the rotten stuff they send in here. It is certainly rot-ten. Some of the things are pretty good; and if I can, I encourage a writer; but, as a matter of fact, there's little chance in the field. Now, my songs were so successful that I was taken in the musical publishing firm that printed them. There's no chance here for a newcomer unless he beats me."

Mr. Berlin's tone indicated that he had no fear of any one making him look like the proverbial thirty cents.

Berlin's father was a rabbi, and as a child Irving used to sing in a synagogue choir. He contemplated going into a shop and selling goods, but the purveying of gents' wear did not appeal to him.

"I figured I had a voice," he said, "and felt I could make easier money on the stage. So I bucked the vaudeville game. I sang around New York for several years, got engagements in theatres and little cafes. Was often pretty hard up, too. I used to make parodies on popular songs and sing them. One day I thought that if I could write parodies I might as well try original stuff. Well, at that time Dorando ran his race at Madison Square Garden and lost. This gave me the idea of a humorous song about an Italian making a bet and losing. I took the poem to a publisher. He thought it was pretty good and suggested I set it to music.

"Well, I know nothing about music, but I got to work and picked out a melody with one finger. That's the way I always do it—I can't even play the piano. As a matter of fact, if I stuck to the laws of music I wouldn't be original.

"As it was I thought 'Dorando' a rotten melody. But I sold it—got $25 for it. And, to my surprise, it was a hit—they sold 100,000 copies. On a royalty basis by rights I should have gotten $2,000 for what I sold for $25. I next wrote 'Sadie Salome'—it sold to the extent of 250,000 copies. On the strength of that I got a regular job with a music house. I wrote lots of songs—some were only fair successes. As a matter of fact, the thing that makes a big hit is the piece that comes by inspiration, the song you write while it is hot. None of my real hits took more than half an hour to do.

"One day I went into one of these coop-like places and composed 'My Wife's Gone to the Country,' words and music, and then, being anxious to see how it would go, I took it to a café up here on Broadway. It made an instant hit with the people there. That song was written and played before the public in less than half an hour. Over 600,000 copies were sold, and it made me $12,000."

Chorus Always Written First.

Four of Mr. Berlin's hits, "Call Me Up Some Rainy Afternoon," "That Mesmerizing Mendelssohn Tune," "The Grizzly Bear" and "Kiss Me! Stop!" were written in three weeks. Over three million copies of these were sold. Last year Berlin wrote "Sweet Italian Love," "Yiddle on Your Fiddle" and "The Wild Cherry Rag," of which between two and three million copies were disposed of. Determining to write four rag songs of the same metre and style, Berlin composed in quick succession "Alexander's Rag Time Band," "That Mysterious Rag," "The Rag Time Violin" and "Everybody's Doin' It Now."

"In writing rags I first work out the melody," the composer explained, "then I write the words. Usually I work at home, and I've got to keep working all the time. If I loaf a week or two it takes me two weeks to get into the swing of work again. Success depends on the trick of putting in what we call 'the punch'—that's a swinging melody or a sudden twist which will make an impression on the public mind. Will these songs live? I think so. At least they'll live ten years—that's long enough for me."

Musical immortality means nothing to Mr. Berlin.

"This is a business, and I'm in it for the money," he said. He admits his rhymes usually mean little. The chorus is always written first, then the rest of the song follows. As an example of the poetic beauty of some of these compositions, the first verse of "The Mendelssohn Rag," which is calculated to delight the simple heart of the public and throw a devotee of Wagner into colic, runs as follows:—

"Honey, listen to that dreamy tune they're playin',
Won't you tell me how on earth you keep from swayin'?
Um! Um! Oh, that Mendelssohn Spring Song tune—
If you ever loved me, show me now or never.
Lord, I wish they'd play that music on for ever. Um! Um!"

And the chorus comes:

"Oh, that Mendelssohn tune . . .
My honey love, to that ever lovin' Spring Song melody,
Please me, honey—squeeze me to that Mendelssohn strain.
Kiss me like you would your mother,
One good kiss deserves another,
That's the only music that was ever meant for me,
That tantalizin', hypnotizin', mesmerizin' Mendelssohn tune."

Night after night one can hear the "lobsterites" applauding some hoarse voiced girl singing this arrant nonsense in the cafés. But when some exquisite selection from Aida" or "Madam Butterfly" is stingily given there is a contrasting lack of enthusiasm. The intense interior anguish I have observed two operatic singers of my acquaintance exhibit during these riotous, ripping performances was equalled only by the pain evidenced by that disciple of Swinburnian verse, George Sylvester Viereck, when I asked his opinion on this ditty by Mr. Berlin:—

"Sweet Italian love, nice Italian love,
You don't need the moon-a-light your love to tell her;
In da house, or on da roof, or in da cellar,
Dat's Italian love, sweet Italian love,
When you kiss your pet, and it's a like spagette,
Dat's Italian love."

Yes, Mr. Berlin has seen the Italian operas, "Rigoletto," "La Gioconda," "Aida" and the others. The difference of his interpretation may be due, as he says, to his lack of musical knowledge or to his confessed determination to be original.

The entire success of a popular song does not, however, rest with the composition. "Boosting" is a necessary function of the musical publishing business. When a song is written the publisher may spend from $5,000 to $25,000 pushing it. Songs wholesale at seven cents a copy and sell to the public at ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents. The composer and lyricist get a royalty of a cent a copy each. When one writes both words and music, like Mr. Berlin, the author gets two cents.

To have a song introduced by a popular Broadway star may require quite a payment to the idol of the footlights. The song writer depending on personal suasion will wait at the rear entrance of theatres and buttonhole the noted black face comedian or the pretty lass of the twinkling toes to interest them in a new song. Singers in the cafés must be induced—not tipped. Night after night Berlin and his confrères visit the cafés, the singers and musicians, whose attentions generally agreeable, command a minimum of $10 a day on each song. All recognize the importance of getting a song started in New York. If it makes a hit here it is pretty certain to sell everywhere. The musical house which exploits Mr. Berlin's work employs 75 people to push these songs; ten piano rooms are constantly occupied by singers who visit the establishment to learn the melodies.

Next to Mr. Berlin, the most successful of new song writers is Joe Goodwin, a slight, dapper youth of twenty-two, who professes much astonishment at the easy money made in this "business."

Mr. Goodwin is the author of the popular song "Billy," which he wrote one day in the early part of 1911. The actual labor of composition required twenty-five minutes and Mr. Goodwin's royalties amounted to $8,000. "Billy" made the fortune of a new publishing house, as well as launched Mr. Goodwin, and sold to the extent of one million copies.

Mr. Goodwin is also a graduate from vaudeville.

"I used to do character sketches in street clothes—no make-up," he said. "I'd always written verse and wrote parodies for friends. You see I hadn't much education, but I liked to write. So I made up my mind I was going to try the song game. I came to New York, got a cheap room, and worked for four or five months on lyrics. I'd a hard struggle. I'd take these to publishers and get four or five dollars for them, sometimes ten.

"Then I wrote 'Billy.' An unknown house took it; they didn't have money to advertise or push it; the song made itself, and in two months everybody was singing it."

This twenty-five minute production made an instant public appeal. It is supposed to be the love plaint of a love maiden, but judging by her method of expression, the popular type in song does not resemble that of Mr. R. W. Chambers in fiction or Mr. C. D. Gibson in art.

"Behold in me a maiden who is feeling sad,
Yearning for a wedding day.
It's just because I love a man I feel so bad,
Now that he has gone away.
Though I have his picture near,
It can't love and call me dear;
So I confess I'm hungry for some real live love."

It was Mr. Goodwin who admitted that he did not "associate often" with the late Algernon Charles Swinburne. I wanted to discover where, and how, the writers of these commercially profitable lyrics get their inspiration.

Crazier Line—Bigger Hit.

"Of course, you read the poets?" I asked after he had misunderstood my query as to his "acquaintance" with the author of "Laus Veneris." "Do you get any ideas from them?"

"Well, I'll tell you," Mr. Goodwin replied, "not much. You see, I don't know the first thing about poetry, but if anybody tells me to write a lyric to waltz time I can do it to waltz time, and if they want a schottische rhythm I can write a schottische rhythm. And I don't know a thing about music. One thing I've found out, to make a hit you've got to have a crazy line in your song—and the crazier it is the better."

The chorus of Mr. Goodwin's popular song "We All Fall," may illustrate this statement:—

"We all fall for some girl that looks sweet,
Some girl that dresses neat,
Some girl that can't be beat,
And then we join the army of married boobs,
To the altar.
Just like lambs we're led for slaughter,
When it's over—my! but we get it good,
Bachelor days we then recall—
Rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief,
Doctor, lawyer, Indian chief,
We all—are bound to fall—fall."

night treating in the cafés." And continuing his remarks about poetic values, he added, "As for reading, well, I have read Kipling and Omar Khayyam."

Mr. Goodwin's composer, Al. Piantadosi, it is said, makes an income of $10,000 a year. This sum is said to be averaged by some of the older writers of songs, who include Eddie Madden, author of the recent hit, "Rum-tum-tiddle;" Vincent Bryan, Percy Wenrich, B. Ray Goetz and Billy Jerome. Joe McCarthy, one of the newcomers, made over $10,000 last year. Mr. McCarthy is twenty-six, and in three years has written "Honey Man," "Dreamy Italian Waltz" and "When Broadway Was a Pasture." On "Honey Man," alone he declares he made $3,000.

Ragtime, in the opinion of those who keep tabs on the public's musical pulse, is unquestionably the sort of music most in demand, and compared with it, as one manufacturer of this sort of melody expressed it, "opry don't figger." Whatever commentary it may be on the public taste, Mr. Lew Muir, who has made the most sensational recent hits in ragtime, made twice as much on his "Barber Shop Chord" as Professor Horatio Parker made out of "Mona."

Mr. Muir also frankly acknowledges he knows nothing about music. Which, in his opinion, accounts for his being able to write "original" rags and earns from $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

Glad to Be Written Up.

The prospect of being written up in a paper appealed powerfully to the composer of "When Ragtime Rosie Ragged the Rosary," "Chilly Billy Bee," and "The Oklahoma Twirl." Although Mr. Muir has toured the country in a minstrel company, and became known as "Bert Williams in white" his career has never been glowingly presented to the public.

"The truth is," Mr. Muir admitted, "that people are playin' my compositions all over the country, and nobody knows who Lew Muir is outside of the profession. Now, I'm mighty glad to be written up, and I'll tell you all about myself. Of course, I've made a hit; I work hard, and I stick at the business; things is easy now, but I've had a time, I tell you. And there are certain things I don't like to tell about.

"I'm twenty-six now—I've never taken a music lesson in m' life. When I was a kid in Oklahoma I used to beat out tunes with a pencil on my desk and the teacher would get hot. Why I'd beat out a melody on anything—boxes, tin cans, bones, pieces o' wood. I went in the millinery business and peddled hats and trimmin's. Off and on I played the piano in cafés an'—an'—well, to be frank—in 'dumps' all through the Southwest. I've had cow punchers come up to me and point a revolver in me mug, and say, 'Play slow, kid—cut 'r down,' or 'Speed 'r up! Speed 'r up!' An' when I pleased 'em they'd drop dollars down m' back. Why, out in St. Louis, at the time o' the fair, I was in a place where I was so ashamed o' bein' I wore green goggles so's if any one who knew me came in I wouldn't be recognized. I used to play rags, and originate 'em so that through the Southwest I became known as the 'white coon.' I used to loaf about the barber shops—there's where I got the idea for 'The Barber Shop Chord.' All through the Southwest the barber shop is the loafing place of negroes. They come in an' improvise on their mandolins and all the coons sit around, an' when some darky strikes up a chord that pleases them, they shout out:—'Great chord, that; that's—now that's—a real barber shop chord.'

"I kept it around for about five years. Then I went to Chicago at the time of the World's Fair looking for something to do. I thought I'd find gold on the streets there. I didn't, I played rags in low places around town, and finally I attracted the attention of some people and got a job playing ragtime in the Manufacturers' Building at the fair. 'Five years ago I wrote the 'Pandinga Rag' and Ziegfeld took it for his 'Follies.' But the orchestra couldn't play it. The air was peculiar and they couldn't get the sound out of their instruments. 'What kind o' dance goes with this?' asked Julius Mitchell, the stage manager. He didn't know. I had to go up and play the piano and teach the chorus the steps. It was a peculiar step and that was the original 'turkey trot.' No, it didn't take at the time—the public wasn't educated up to it.

"Well, I slipped back into the millinery business—didn't like it—thought again about music, and 'The Barber Shop Chord' came to me. I took it to a publisher and it made a great hit. I got an engagement in a minstrel company and went out West. Gee! when I got to places where I'd played in 'dumps' years before it was like a home-comin'. Everywhere they was playin' 'The Barber Shop Chord' and I found myself famous. Everybody greeted me—an' everybody 'touched' me. Why, I've loaned hundreds and hundreds of dollars an' I'll never get a cent back.

Must Have "Kick."

"I didn't like the show business, and I got back to writin' music. I wrote the 'Bear Cat Rag,' 'Chiribiribin,' 'When Ragtime Rosie Plays the Rosary,' and a lot of others. Then I tied up with a musical concern, and hav. got a guaranteed salary. I make about $10,000 to $15,000 a year. If I'd get all that was comin' to me I'd a made $12,000 on 'The Barber Shop Chord' alone.

"You know it's a funny thing! My family never took me seriously, so far as music goes. I'm a nephew of Dr. Joseph Muir, who was appointed by McKinley as Secretary to the American Legation at Sweden. He is a musician, and years ago when I used to compose rags he'd say to me, 'Lew, that's awful! Lew, you're rotten!' Well, I got the laugh on him now.

"How do I compose? Depend on inspiration. A fellow may come in with a set o' words, and they'll give me an idea for the melody. The words don't count, in m' opinion. With rag it's the music entirely. Then I sit down at a piano and work out the tune. I can't read a note. Just have the knack, that's all.

"When I started I determined to make money. I concluded that the American people don't like a long or difficult song. And the thing they take to is the thing with a 'kick' in it. The public will remember a sudden twist in the melody. Now, take my last song, 'Ragging the Baby to Sleep'—mark the twist"—

"Night has fallen, lights are low,
Shadows they creep—baby's asleep,
All at once there comes a squall—
The baby has started to bawl.
Wife has said, 'Jim, leave the bed,
Tootsie has weakened,'
So once more you take baby to your arms
Too bum while you're walking the floor—
That ragtime walk with baby—baby-shake."

"Now, there's a song with the 'kick.' It's already used by such artists as Al Jolson, Dorothy Russell, daughter of the fair Lillian, and Marshall Montgomery, the ventriloquist. The public will hear it, and if they like it they'll buy it. Now, with this piece we employ talent and send 'em out to sing this song in the cafés. That's the way a song is introduced—in the cafés and theatres. Then, I gotta go out too. Every night it's dippin' and treatin'. But that's part of the business. And this is a business. I just learn what the public likes and I gives 'em the goods.

Plugging the Game.

"My recreations?" Mr. Muir for a moment seemed surprised. "Oh, if that's what you mean, got little time for pleasure. I'm on the job most o' the time. I work every day—write scores and melodies—some I throw away. At nights I go out plugging my game and pushin' my pieces. I get a machine and have a nice little home. No, I'm not married. I live with my parents. They're satisfied now to have me in the song business. You see, I can show 'em there's more in it than in millinery. Once in a while I go to vaudeville, and then I belong to the Comedy Club, and hope soon to join the Elks.

"Say, fellers often come in here an' say, 'Gee, Lew, but you're a genius! Dat's a great thing you've wrote! You're a lucky guy, all right. You've got talent!'

"Listen to me. So far as education goes, I know I'm a dub. I simply have got this trick down, and I know how to make money. I give the public the merchandise it wants, and as for genius—well, I laugh right here."

Miss Mary Garden recently said that the American public needs "to grow up—musically." Mr. George S. Viereck recently announced that he would stop writing poetry "until America caught up—intellectually." With these two points of view there will, of course, be diverse opinions. But whether this is to happen or not, in the meantime writers of verse whose names never appear in the literary columns of the newspapers, and composers whose names are never associated with those of Richard Strauss and Mascagni will reap hundreds of thousands of dollars. Undoubtedly there is one of the most profitable occupations of obscurity, and perhaps the only one in which, as they declare, lack of education may be an asset.

the wedding ceremony itself is really not much for anybody excepting the clergyman, but it s a lot. If the accompanying tions are followed as carefully as circumstances will permit things go along favourably.

The Best Man.

e "best man" must recollect that as something else to do besides g nervous and uncomfortable. up to him to look after most of hings the groom is liable to for-get. These are always numerous and unexpected and he must be prepared at any moment for a "C.Q.D." and ready with first aid. It is impossible to say what the trouble is likely to be, as a bridegroom is prone to do something original at any time in the course of the ceremony. Being so busy getting married, he doesn't usually know that he is doing anything else.

But the best man has specific duties and any fellow upon whom the job awaiting the bride. When the clergyman reaches the part of the service where the ring is mentioned, it is the duty of the best man to hand it over neatly just at that moment. This sounds simple enough, but it is simpler if care has been taken to have the charmed circle handy. Don't carry it in a pocket or you are bound to forget which pocket you put it in and so will get rattled during the fumble to find it. Better hold it in the hand until the time comes to part with it. At the close of the service be ready to hand the husband his hat at the church door.

Business Manager.

The best man is the business manager of the attraction, as far as the church end of it is concerned. He must attend to the minister's fee. Then it is up to him to see that the arrangements for the young couple's departure are smooth and that their baggage goes away on the same train that they go on. He is also expected to frown upon signs bearing the words "Yum Yum," "We'se just married," etc., being fastened at the rear of the carriage.

Then he must see that the happy event is properly announced in the newspapers. These few duties, combined with impromptu demands upon his services, will prove enough to constitute a bus yday even for a young stitute a busy day even for a young able activity.

The above few hints are not penned to scare the prospective best man, but are submitted in a Christian spirit as a help to one who is in need of some kind counsel for use on an extraordinary occasion.

It may be added that there is no established rule to prevent a benedict acting as best man, but it is not customary. It is usual for the groom to provide his best man with funds for the necessary expenditure. It is better, too, that way, for in many cases the bridegroom never acquires much money afterwards.

The groom himself had best be satisfied to follow the simple instructions found in the directions "What to do at Church.". The bride is, as a rule, fairly well posted on her part, and gets along well after she just gets started.

There seems to be an unwritten law that the bride's friends should be seated on the left of the middle aisle, facing the chancel, and the bridegroom's friends on the right. This choice of position is reasonable when you come to figure it out, being occasioned by the fact that the bride walks on the left side of the aisle both as she enters and leaves the church. She walks up the aisle on the left of the father or the gentleman who is giving her away, and descends the aisle on the bridegroom's right, and during the ordeal it is doubtless comforting to be near one's friends, particularly when the friends are in their most admiring and sympathetic frame of mind.

What Men Should Wear.

It is of no use trying to tell the bride what her gown should be like. She has likely known it for years. The groom and the best man will, however, be glad to learn that the orthodox glad rags for this kind of gathering in the morning or afternoon consist of trousers of dark grey striped material, a black Prince Albert frock coat with waistcoat to match, or of white pique or duck, a white silk or pearl grey scarf, kid gloves to match, and a high silk hat. There is, however, no law compelling a man to follow this out literally, but that is what they all do in the first families. At a morning wedding a cutaway coat is sometimes worn, but the rest is the same.

For evening weddings the regulation swallow tail outfit is the correct thing.

Get Ring and License.

Bridegrooms should get the ring a day or two before the wedding, and thus be sure of avoiding the unpleasantness of having no ring when the time comes. His best man should help him to look after this important detail, for their mutual benefit. The groom should also get the marriage license a day or so ahead. He will have to visit an official issuer of marriage licenses. The license costs two dollars, and has a big seal on it.

As to the gifts to the bride and the happy young ladies who are helping the good work along, the groom should take his intended into his confidence. She can do it better than he can.

Be Ready in Time.

The bride's friends should let the minister know in plenty of time when it is going to be, and in order to avoid waiting at the church and possibly delaying another wedding, should see that the young lady is properly fixed up on the day of the wedding some time before the appointed time for leaving for the church. This is said to be one of the most difficult things in connection with a wedding. Excitement and many cases come into the family of a prospective bride for weeks before the ceremony, but the climax is in that last awful hour. The bride should be allowed to cry a little if she wants to. That will keep her from fretting about anything else.

The Invitations.

The girls should see to the sending out of invitations at least a couple of weeks ahead of the ceremony. This will give invited ladies a chance to change their minds a few times as to what they had better wear and to worry people in regard to the choice of a present.

As to the wording of the invitation, tell the printer candidly that you are not used to getting married, and ask him to put you next to the real thing. He will have just what you need in his samples, and will be tickled to death to oblige you.

The reception at the home after the ceremony can generally look pretty well after itself until the happy couple are on their way. There are established forms, but they are rarely followed, and directions would be futile.

Bridegroom and best man go to the church together.

Bridesmaid, flower girl, etc., go in carriage ahead of that of the bride and await her arrival in the church vestibule.

Clergyman comes first from the vestry and is immediately followed by the bridegroom and best man.

Bridegroom stands towards the left of the clergyman, a little in advance of the best man, facing the guests, awaiting the bride.

Bridesmaids then enter at once and approach by centre aisle in advance of the bride.

Bride follows, leaning on the arm of her nearest male relative.

Bridesmaid takes her place at chancel steps to the left of where bride will stand.

Bridegroom meets the bride and leads her forward to the place before the clergyman.

Best man takes position at right of bridegroom a few steps back.

Father of bride, or person acting in his stead, stands back and awaits the moment when he is to give away the bride, when he advances, takes her right hand, places it in that of the clergyman, who places it in the right hand of the bridegroom.

Best man gives ring to the bridegroom, who passes it to the bride, and she gives it to the clergyman, who returns it to the bridegroom to place on the third finger of the bride's left hand.

Bride's father or other relative may then retire to a front pew.

The ceremony over, the newly-married, after signing the register, lead the way down the aisle, the bride taking the right arm of her husband.

Best man must not overlook attending to the minister's fee.

Organist should play while guests are assembling, softly during responses, and the wedding march after the blessing.

RAILWAY NOTES

The journalists of the Dominion will have the distinction of being the guests at the first banquet to be held in the Chateau Laurier, the Grand Trunk's splendid new hotel at Ottawa which is so soon to be thrown open to the public, as the civic entertainment committee of the Capital has decided to entertain the Canadian Press Association, which meets there June 5-7, in this way.

A Grand Trunk railway line running between London and Port Stanley and passig through St. Thomas, is rumoured in transportation circles in that district. It is claimed that the road could be built for $500,000, and that it would give to the G. T. R. a valuable connection with the lake port as well as access to a rich section of Ontario.

The company, says this report, has already surveyed a portion of the proposed route and their engineers, after having gone carefully over the whole situation, have reported in favour of building of the line. The major portion of the Grand Trunk's supply of soft coal, it is pointed out, is taken to London over the London and Port Stanley Railway, and this short route would answer its purposes much better than bringing the coal in over the present lines via Buffalo. Another factor is the connection between the two chief cities of western Ontario, London and St.Thomas; and between the two main lines of the Grand Trunk running through western Ontario, Niagara Falls, and Buffalo and Sarnia and Detroit. The only connection between those two lies is at Kingscourt and Glencoe and by the Buffalo and Goderich line.

With The Power Boat Enthusiasts

(By Alfred J. C. Robertson, A.M.I.N.A., A.M.I.E.S.)

This is the time when every boat owner gives attention to the condition of his power plant. When an engine has proved itself to be all that is desired, it is only fair that it should be given a thorough cleaning and all worn parts should be put in order or replaced, and every attention of this kind given to an engine will be amply repaid if the engine is worked hard throughout the season.

If, however, the engine has not proved all that was required in the past, the question will naturally arise as to whether it would pay to replace it with a new one. And the owner will probably procure catalogues and price lists of all the different makes of engines which his friends assure him have given their every satisfaction. Here, however, the trouble begins, for it does not take long to discover that every engine maker claims for his particular engine every good and desirable quality, such as efficiency, reliability, power, simplicity, good workmanship, etc., and the rival claims of four cycle vs. two cycle, gasoline versus low-grade oils, high vs. low speeds, etc., are presented to the prospective owner, with every favourable argument brought forward.

Let us, therefore, consider the pros and cons presented, and see how far they should influence the choice of an engine.

TWO-CYCLE VERSUS FOUR-CYCLE

For a small boat much can be said in favour of a two-cycle engine. It is cheap (an exceedingly important point, as a rule), and this cheapness is not necessarily produced by inferior workmanship, for a two-cycle engine is much simpler in construction than a four-cycle. It is usually reversible and does away with clutches or reversing propellers. It is compact and generally sits lower in the boat. It, however, cannot be made as economical as the four-cycle, for the products of combustion of one charge remain in the cylinder to mingle to a certain extent with the following charge. It is not so reliable because owing to this mixture occurring, a very slight misadjustment of carburetor will prevent the incoming charge from being ignited. It is practically inaccessible as the crank case must be sealed, and its efficiency is destroyed by the crank bearings becoming worn.

ENGINE SPEEDS.

There is practically only one type of two-cycle engine, the medium speed type, but in four-cycle engines there are racing engines with piston speeds of 900 to 1,200 feet per minute, medium duty engines with speeds of 600 to 900 feet, and low speed heavy duty engines, running 400 to 600 feet piston speed. (The piston speed is the length of stroke multiplied by twice the number of revolutions.)

When gasoline engines were first adopted in working boats, they naturally were placed under the care of marine engineers, who were accustomed to steam engines, which could have their bearings tested by hand while running and the eye could detect any trouble, so the first working engines on the coast were of very slow speed. Even so, however, the speeds had to be such that the engine base had to be closed in if a clean engine-room was wanted, and if it was closed in the primary advantages of the slow speed engine were at once surrendered, forced lubrication became possible, and the medium duty engine has consequently come to the fore. For cruising and working purposes the argument still used for the heavy duty type has a good deal of force in it. There is no doubt propeller efficiencies are higher with low speed engines, but the advantage is not very great, and can hardly be compared to the advantage of getting about 50 per cent. more power for the weight, space and cost of engine when medium duty is installed in place of heavy duty.

THE FUEL QUESTION

Another question often argued now is the point as to what fuel should be used. If one wishes a clean, odourless, flexible engine, there is only one possible answer—gasoline. If, however, safety is the first consideration, then kerosene must be used, while for economy the distillates or gas oils are the best. Of course, today, Diesel engines are being much talked of, for they use fuel oil, but Diesel engines are not yet practicable in small powers. They are enormously heavy, even with comparatively high speeds. They are made by only a few, far-away firms, and they are very costly.

Where distillates or gas oils are used the ordinary gasoline engine is a failure. Any gasoline engine when warmed up will run on distillate, the hot air sucked over the exhaust keeping it vapourised, but exhaust heat is variable and if satisfactory at one speed, will be too little to vapourize at slower speed, thus sooting up the cylinders, and will "crack" or decompose the fuel at higher speeds.

If you wish an engine that will run satisfactorily on low grade oils, get one specially designed for these, or there will be no end of trouble before you.

IGNITION PROBLEMS

Great strides have been made lately in ignition systems. The little high speed magneto driven off the fly wheel is now generally giving place to the slow-speed magneto, driven direct off the cam shaft, and perhaps no recent improvement is so important. The low-speed magneto without coil or battery gives an almost perfect system of ignition either for make-and-break or jump spark.

In regard to the system of sparking, there is no doubt where the ignition is effected to damp that make and break is best, but where the engine is properly covered in jump spark is much quieter and in conjunction with a battery often greatly eases the starting of the engine.

STARTING DEVICES

Many American and all English engines are now fitted with a free wheel on the crank shaft, and a cranking handle, and this is undoubtedly better than pulling the fly-wheel round by hand. Half compression, by keeping the exhaust valves open for a part of the compression stroke, is also of great assistance for starting. Some engines of as little as 40 horse-power are now fitted with compressed air starting, and this is a great convenience, though it slightly complicates the engine.

IMPROVEMENTS IN LUBRICATION

Improvements are being made all the time in the methods of lubricating engines, and there is no doubt that forced lubrication will be universal. This system pumps the oil from the base of the engine through all the main bearings, and using the same oil over and over again, of course, with the help of a filter. This system, which was first adopted in high speed steam engines for electric lighting, keeps all the bearings flooded with oil so that metal does not touch metal at all, and if properly carried out no wear is perceptible after thousands of miles of running.

REVERSE GEARS ARE IMPORTANT

Reverse gears are usually supplied as part of the engine, and for this reason it is necessary to look carefully to these. Very many gears are too light for their engines and give constant trouble.

The clutches should in every case be metal to metal. Some are now on the market, where cone clutches are used, and the tail shaft is moved fore and aft to engage forward or aft driving cones, and if well made this proves exceedingly successful. A good expanding band clutch is, however, hard to beat.

Reversing is obtained either by pinions of the sun and planet type, or by level gears, and as a mechanical device the latter is distinctly superior.

But beyond the advantage of all the technical details just enumerated, that engine will be the best which is actually designed by the most skilful engineer and made by the most skilful mechanics.

This seems a truism, but it is most necessary that it should be stated, for every known advantage in engine design may be incorporated in the design of two engines, in one case carried out in a piece-meal slip-shod manner, in the other case carried out by those at the head of the profession. Both engines will claim the same advantages ,the first may even be better looking than the second, but the good one will be well worth any reasonable price while the other would be useful chiefly as ballast.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkburger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

SCHOOLBOY "KNOWLEDGE."

Some More Howlers Concerning Kings and Vaccination.

The unconscious humor of school children is shown in the following "howlers" collected from English schools:

Much confusion seemed to prevail as to the famous stone that figured in the Coronation Service; for to the query: "A Stone of Destiny is a stone that somebody puts in an important building, such as chapels, cathedrals, cottages, etc. The person that puts a stone in one of these buildings carves his name on the stone." Another stated, "The Stone of Destiny is a large stone on which the ancient people had their gods."

Vaccination is apparently a mystic rite to most children, for the question, "Why are children vaccinated?" elicited the following strange replies: "So that children will be very healthy." "Children are vaccinated to get all the scabs out of their body." "Children are vaccinated to show that they have been christened. The spots are white." "Children are vaccinated to show whether they are strong or not." "Children are vaccinated to make their skin soft." "Because their arm has four marks on them."

"What is meant by 'Home Rule for Ireland'?" took a large number of children quite out of their depth. Among other definitions were: "Home Rule means that the people of Ireland must obey the laws of the country." "The Home Rule of Ireland is a certain thing that is passed by the law that the Irish can do." "The Home Rule for Ireland is that they have to keep their houses clean." "The Home Rule is that the people of Ireland are very good." "What is meant by Home Rule for Ireland is the rules of all the land." "The Home Rule for Ireland is farming." "The Home Rule for Ireland is, let the Irish grow potatoes." "Home Rule for Ireland is one of the King's favorites going to rule there." "The Home Rule of Ireland is the rules which they have in their homes." "Trying to get the Irish to do better work and live in more comfortable manner."

One scholar described the Royal Standard as being used by "the King and Queen to sit on when they are crowned." A fiftieth, according to one youthful authority, is a kind of a jaunting car, and a shillelagh is "a war between two countries," while George Stephenson was "a man who fought in a battle with his cousin because he wanted to be King of England."

A Postie's Record.

Mr. William Stoddart, rural postman, of West Newton, Cumberland, England, has finished a tramp of 325,000 miles, and retired after fifty years' connection with the service. He started as a letter-carrier, and for twenty years he covered thirty miles a day afoot, and for the next two decades regularly tramped twenty-two miles per day. Stoddart was formerly a great athlete, carrying off many prizes in Cumberland wrestling rings and at pole-leaping.

Life's Handicap.

Referring to his opposition to Woman's Suffrage at Reading, Lord Saye and Sele said he recently attended a "book dinner," at which everyone was expected to appear with an emblem denoting the title of a book. At Lady Saye and Sele's suggestion he went with a petticoat on his arm and won the first prize. His emblem represented Mr. Kipling's "Life's Handicap."

Sun Still on Amusements.

Minneapolis, May 20.—With the decision of the amusement question and the taking of the sixth ballot for bishops, delegates of the Methodist Episcopal general conference made rapid strides in the completion in the business of the session.

By a vote of 446 to 369, the conference voted to leave unchanged the church discipline, paragraph 260, which prohibits dancing, card playing and kindred amusements.

On the fifth ballot for bishop, the result of which was announced Saturday afternoon, W. O. Shepherd of Chicago was high man, with 500 votes, lacking 30 of election.

At the close of the sixth ballot in the afternoon the votes were sealed to be counted to-day.

New York, May 20.—Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, first wife of Col. John J. Astor, before departing for Europe with her daughter, Muriel, Saturday on the steamship Oceanic, made it known that she intended to return later to New York to make her home here with her son, Vincent Astor, who will become the head of the Astor family next fall. Mrs. Astor expects to be abroad about three months.

C.P.R. Trains in Collision.

Woodstock, N.B., May 20.—A head-on collision occurred Friday night on the C.P.R. branch line a mile from here. One train was slowing up for the semaphore at the time and the impact therefore was not so serious. The train crews jumped and no one was seriously hurt. Several cars were thrown off the rails but the track was cleared Saturday morning. The blame has not been fixed.

A Police Terrier.

An Irish terrier named Jerry, which has developed a wonderful capacity for police work, is now stationed at Surbiton. The terrier, owned by a sergeant of the Metropolitan Police, knows all the "beats" in the district, and always accompanies his master when making patrol by cycle. Jerry's "speciality" is in the capturing of stray dogs. These he lures in a friendly manner to the police station, and then mounts guard at the gate until the derelict receives official attention.

LADY GORDON ON STAND

Before Lord Mersey, Emphatically Denies Story That She and Husband Objected to Rescuing the Drowning

SAYS HEARD MANY CRIES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MAY 20.—Before Lord Mersey, at the Titanic investigation to-day, Lady Duff-Gordon, looking very pale, but with uplifted head, apparently unembarrassed by the hundreds of eyes focused upon her, told her story of the night of terror in the icefields. She said that she was very sea-sick, and declined to enter a lifeboat at all without her husband. An officer gave permission, she said, and both got into a boat. Vehemently, Lady Duff-Gordon pronounced absolutely false extracts from the New York American, published after the arrival of the Carpathia, to the effect that the Duff-Gordons objected to the lifeboat going back to rescue the drowning. Lady Duff-Gordon admitted that she heard the wails and cries for help of those doomed aboard the vessel before the Titanic sank.

Cured of Piles After 20 Years

Many people have got the impression that piles can only be cured by a surgical operation, with all the attendant suffering, risk and expense. There is an easier way: by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. No risk, no danger and little expense is attached to this treatment, and results are highly satisfatcory.

Mr. John M. Bates, gardener, St. Laurent, Que., writes: "I had piles for twenty years ,and tried all kinds of ointments and medicines, but they did me no good. It was getting worse and suffering more from the dreadful itching all the time. I used three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and today I am perfectly cured. There has not been a sigh of the old trouble for six months, and it leaves me in perfect health to-day, whereas I was in agony for about twenty years. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a positive cure for piles."

GARMENT WORKERS TO WALK OUT

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, QUE., MAY 20.—Ten thousand garment workers in Montreal will walk out within three weeks if the manufacturers do not accede to their demands. They ask for a ten per cent. increase of wages and nine hour day. They work ten hours now. Preparations which some of the manufacturers are making for bringing in labour, indicate that it is not their intention to give the strikers any concessions.

PRISONER IS CHEERFUL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BOSTON, MASS., MAY 20.—It is thought and generally understood here that to-day is the last, in the life of Clarence Richeson, the former Baptist clergyman, condemned to die this week for the murder of his sweetheart, Avis Linnell. Popular opinion has it he will be electrocuted immediately after midnight. Everything is being done with extreme secrecy. The only news from the cell of the condemned man has been obtained from his spiritual advisers, who say to-day he is maintaining his composure magnificently, and is quite prepared for the end. At times he is cheerful and sings favourite hymns. The surgeons do not anticipate another attack of hysterical delirium, and his physical condition recovered wonderfully in the last two days. None of his relatives will visit him during the last hours. His father and sister are prostrated with grief.

CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 20.—Two men and three women, whose identities are not yet established, were drowned this morning, when their automobile, running at high speed, went into an open swing bridge, and crashed in to the river, which is fifteen feet deep at this point. The accident happened after midnight. No attention was paid by the chauffeur to the red lights and other signals.

Said Farewell To Old Church

Murray Street Congregation Had Last Service in Old Building

The congregation of the Murray St. Baptist Church yesterday said farewell to the old church that has served them so well for many years. There were very large congregations present at both services, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, made a feeling reference to the occasion. Next Sunday the new church will be occupied for the first time and the first of a series of three opening services will be held.

OVAL CLOSED FOR A TIME

Ground Has Been Softened by Recent Rains and Commissioners Have Ordered It Closed

YOUNG MEN ABUSIVE

Owing to the continued rains of late the ground at the Nicholls Oval had become so spongy that the Park Commissioners considered it advisable to close it for a few days to those who had been using it. On Saturday this notice was in effect and a number of young men who went up to disport themselves found that they would not be allowed on the lawn. They used abusive language to the grounds keeper and, from reports, acted in a manner unbecoming to gentlemen. The commissioners wish the young men to remember that the grounds keeper is a constable who is empowered to make arrests if necessary, and he does not need to endure abusive language entirely unprovoked. The commissioners were actuated only by the desire to maintain the Oval at its best, and past experience has shown that a great deal of damage can be done if it is used so soon after a heavy rain. The park will be closed to athletes until the ground is considered firm again and drained of the moisture that has made it spongy.

TO LET CONTRACTS FOR THE SCHOOLS

A meeting of the Building committee of the Board of Education was held on Saturday night when the tenders for the two new Public schools were dealt with. On the street to-day the names of the contractors who successfully tendered were mentioned. A meeting of the Board will be held on Tuesday, when the committee's report will be dealt with.

NOTICE.

On account of the wet weather the Nicholls Oval is not in condition for use and will be closed until further notice. The Nicholls Park Commission are anxious to have the oval fit for continuous use by the public, but until more favourable weather conditions, this is impossible.

BIRTHS.

BRECKENRIDGE — On Saturday, May 18, 1912, to Mr. and Mrs. W. Brenckenridge, 313 Pearl Ave., a son.

THAT SIDE-STEPPING INTERVIEW ABOUT THE COLLAPSIBLE WHARF

The Superintendent of the Canal shows a strong sense of loyalty to his employers, when he consents to be publicly exhibited as the scape-goat of the responsible person in respect of the wharf abortion on George street. The alleged interview published in the local papers reads like a pure concoction. The reporter first assails him with a question of which he would know nothing unless he had been "primed," in regard to "the new dock on George street, Peterborough." All the talk about "soundings and plans" is moonshine and only employed to divert responsibility from the representative and the government. It is very kind of Mr. McClellan to be willing to shoulder the responsibility, but he can't do it. The responsible persons are those who can be reached by the people—the representative of the riding and the government. The superintendent is only responsible to his employers; the representative and the government are responsible to the people. The claim that $100 to $200 will repair the wharf, amounts to nothing. "Between $100 and $200" may make the wharf or landing as bad as it was originally; but a million dollars won't make a good wharf with the foundations that are provided. The chief point, the only point of the published interview, is that the responsible representative inspired it in order to shirk responsibility and put the blame on a man who is not responsible, except to his employers for the failure of the work in question. But it is not surprising that a man who advocated shirking responsibility in parliament by voting by ballot should seek to shift from his shoulders the Atlas weight of a collapsible wharf.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Two East City Youths Who Robbed Till of $17.75 Will Have to Report Monthly

EVIDENCE OFFERED

Temptation that proved irrepressible to two East City youths of irresponsible years, featured largely in the case of theft which was registered against a couple of juvenile delinquents.

The case, which lasted nearly an hour, was dealt with in the juvenile court, over which Magistrate Dumble presided. Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution, High County Constable Cochrane and Mr. E. L. Goodwill were also present, the latter representing the Children's Aid Society, in whose custody the boys were placed following their apprehension on Saturday.

Robbed the Till.

The boys were jointly charged with having entered the store of Mr. David Flynn ,a Concession street grocer, and extracting $17.75 from the till during the absence of the proprietor. The boys pleaded guilty to the charge, and upon the consent of their parents, who were present, elected to be tried summarily by the magistrate.

Mr. Flynn, the complainant, stated that he was accustomed to remove the day's receipts from the till each evening, and on different occasions had found a shortage in the cash. His suspicions were directed towards the two boys by the lavish manner in which they were wont to spend money at his store .On Thursday night last the sum of $17.75 was removed from the till and the following day the culprits confessed their guilt to Detective Newhall.

Scored Complainant.

Mr. Goodwill took the complainant to task for his failure to warn the boys parents when he became suspicious as to the source from which the boys secured their funds. The latter admitted that lack of time prevented him from taking that prescribed course of action. Mr. Goodwill intimated that the complainant had shown glaring neglect of duty in this respect.

The father of one of the delinquents took exception to the manner in which Mr. Flynn had exposed the guilt of the boys to the authorities, believing that the complainant should have taken the matter up with the parents. In this he was scored by the magistrate and Crown Attorney, both of whom declared that Flynn had taken the proper course, and that no other alternative could have been legitimately adopted.

The Magistrate severely reprimanded the boys for their waywardness and self-indulgence at the expense of others, and in allowing the boys to go under suspended sentence, ordered them to report to the Chief of Police monthly.

AUTO ASSOCIATION TO AWARD PRIZES FOR THE BEST ROADS

Pathmasters of the Three Best Roads in the Surrounding Townships to Receive Money Prizes —Scheme to Improve Roads.

WILL JUDGE IN AUGUST

The Peterborough Automobile Association has decided to give three prizes of twenty dollars, fifteen dollars and ten dollars, respectively, to the path masters of the surrounding townships, who make the best roads this year, the roads to be judged in August.

At a meeting of the Good Roads committee of the Auto Association, held in the Bank of Montreal on Saturday last, with Mr. W. R. Travers in the chair, the foregoing resolution was passed, with a view to improving the condition of the roads. The secretary Mr. W. W. Doan, was instructed to send a letter to this effect to the Reeve of each township, and also to the clerk thereof, asking the latter to forward to the pathmaster, under his jurisdiction, a copy of the following letter:

I am pleased to advise you that the Peterborough Automobile Club have arranged to donate three prizes of $20.00 for the first, $15.00 for the second, and $10.00 for the third, to the pathmasters making the best roads this year, viz., filling up hollows, holes, ruts, and removing large, loose stones and grading an even crown to road.

As good roads is one of the most important matters to this country, and as everyone is interested, I trust you will enter into this competition, especially as such entry incurs no obligation. Entries received by the Secretary of the committee up to June 15th, 1912. If you will kindly sign and send in the enclosed form so that your name will be entered on the list of competitors.

If you would like any information on road building, as carried on by the Government, we will be pleased to furnish same. Prizes will be awarded about August, after three or more competent judges on road building have had an opportunity to travel over same.

With respect to the request of the Baseball Club that all automobile owners would assemble on the day of the first local game and proceed in procession to the ground, this was left with the Reception committee. Mr. Doan remarked, however, that he saw no reason why the request of the Club should not be granted.

INVENTION OF WORTH

Serious Accident on Welland Canal Averted When Gates Struck by Steamer "Beaverton"

DEVICE FORCED GATES

Examiner Special:

ST. CATHARINES, MAY 20. — A serious break on the Welland Canal and a tie-up of navigation was averted on Sunday night, when the Gowan safety device for lock gates prevented the carrying away of the head gates of lock twenty-four at Thorold after they had been struck by the steamer Beaverton. The steamer was upbound, and had entered and locked all right, but the breaking of a cable caused her to forge ahead and force the gates several inches.

The Gowan device worked admirably, and forced the gates back before the rush of water from the mile level above could tear them off.

J. J. BREEN DIVORCED

Judgment Recorded in Favour of Ethel Croker Breen

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, N.Y., MAY 20.—The jury has found J. J. Breen guilty of acts of infidelity with Maude Diehl of Toronto, and a Peterborough lady, unnamed. Ethel Croker Breen, therefore secures her divorce after ninety days. The judgment was made absolute. The Diehl woman could not be secured by the respondent, as a witness, and Breen's Counsel did not offer any evidence in rebuttal.

Private Car On Rampage

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, MAY 20.—Sir William Mackenzie's palace private car Antilokan, while standing on a siding, just outside the city this morning, was seized with the racing fever, which pervades the whole town, started on a down-grade of its own momentum, and went whirling through the crowded freight and passenger yards towards the Union Station at the rate of thirty or forty miles an hour. It narrowly missed wrecking two express trains and several freights. Finally, just outside the station a switchman sidetracked the runaway, sending it into a switch engine, with a terrible crash and both were badly wrecked. Fortunately nobody was aboard and nobody hurt.

BY-LAW IS OVERLOOKED

Householders Fail to Comply with Regulations Governing Disposal of Garbage From Their Residences

A STILL HUNT

A plethora of complaints continually reach the sanitary inspector's care of the supposed failure of the garbage collectors to perform the duties as prescribed by the by-law. A closer investigation in the majority of these cases reveals the fact that the complainants are usually to blame. They have in some manner or other overlooked the fact that upon them devolves certain regulations that must be complied with before the garbage collector becomes obliged to remove the garbage.

Clause 6, By-law number 1,654.

Every owner, lessee or occupant of premises herein referred to shall provide boxes or barrels of convenient dimensions and shall place therein from day to day all ashes, garbage and refuse, and shall keep the same conveniently placed for collection, but not upon the public highway, and the garbage shall be placed in a box or barrel seperate from ashes and other refuse.

7. In case the occupant of any premises has neglected to place the boxes or barrels which he is required to provide for the ashes, garbage and refuse in a proper place on the day appointed, the contractor or his employees shall call at such house while on their route, and shall warn the occupants, and if the neglect is repeated the contractor shall report the same to the inspector.

A violation of this by-law calls for a penalty of a fine of ten dollars and costs.

In many instances the collector is compelled to search backyards, woodsheds and other inaccessible places, whereas the foregoing clauses direct that the garbage shall be placed in a convenient place on the day upon which the contractor or his men are expected to call.

The contractor complains that a number of householders and storekeepers are not complying with the regulations in the matter of supplying suitable boxes or barrels of convenient dimensions as containers for the garbage.

Garbage is often found stored in receptacles that require two, and sometimes three men to lift.

Dr. McPherson, medical health officer, would favour the idea of having householders place their garbage cans on the highways on special appointed days, as is the custom in other cities.

This would enable the collectors to make their rounds more expeditiously, and would appear to present a more satisfactory arrangement for all concerned.

Keep Well This Spring

Many people seem to regard sickness as something that must be endured at one time or another. They have got accustomed to drag themselves about in misery for weeks every spring, with no idea that all this can as well be avoided by using a true tonic, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Why not change all this and be strong and well and happy this spring? Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you wonderfully.

The long, cold winter has left your system badly run down. You are sure to suffer these bad effects in the spring unless you afford nature the assistance which is to be found in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This food cure supplies the elements from which pure, rich blood is formed. The nervous system is nourished back to health and vigour and new energy and vitality is felt in every part of the body.

PHILADELPHIA, MAY 20.—With to-day's game with Detroit postponed the public interest is turned towards the conference between President Johnson of the American League, and President Navin of Detroit. If Johnson persist it is probable several players of the various teams in the American League will go over to the new United States League, and it is all over Ty Cobb's fight with a quotation.

JEANNE TOWLER IN THE "WHITE SISTER"

The three greatest and most successful church or religious plays of the past twenty years are "The Christian," "The [illegible]," and "The White Sister," and one of the three the largest individual money-makers is Viola Allen's latest success "The White Sister," in which Miss Jeanne Towler is announced to appear at the Grand Opera House next Wednesday, May 22nd. Although "The White Sister" has a religious setting and uplifting theme, it is not essentially a religious play, but partakes more of the nature and spirit of the romantic. It is that fact that sustains its popularity with the general public. It is a human story with both and blood characters showing the same strength and weakness that all human nature is subject to. The scenes are laid in Italy and the action in the story are [illegible], but it could be laid just as well in [illegible] as [illegible]. The principal type of the characters are [illegible] amongst us every day, and [illegible] same [illegible] [illegible] the "White Sister" [illegible] sell to an American [illegible].

Miss Towler will be supported by a company of players of [illegible] Viola Allen by [illegible] Co. [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] Grand [illegible].

NOT BIG ENOUGH.

Mr. Bonar Law, the new leader of the Tory party in Great Britain, has a foot nimbler than his wit. He "puts his foot into it" with the greatest facility, while his wits go wool gathering. His judgment is weak and his outlook narrow. His course in a recent speech of abusing the British government for minding its own business—in refraining to interfere with Canada's negotiations anent reciprocity, shows that, Canadian as he is, he does not know Canada; he regards this country as still kicking in an infantile way, in colonial swaddling bands. He shows an utter lack of diplomatic sense when he interferes in a state matter in the manner of a bull in a China shop. He talks with the irresponsible flippancy of a Champ Clark on imperial matters, and in a way, that if done in offices, would be disastrous. While we would be proud to see a Canadian elevated to the position into which he has, by stress of dearth of statesmanship, been pitchforked, we like to see its incumbent show qualities that would measure up to the requirements of a village reeve in Canada. He is not big enough for his "job."

KEEP OUR NAME GOOD.

The land boomer, exploiting worthless or presently worthless land sites in the old country, threatens to deal Canadian credit in the British money market, a severe blow. With our large dependence for development of our practically unlimited natural resources upon British capital, this would be a great misfortune. For many years their steady growth, increasing values and sound finances have built up an enviable position for Canadian securitnes in London. This public confidence threatens to be shattered by the extravagant exploitation of a group of land boomers who are now trying by every trick to sell Canadian townsites and farm lands there. These exploiters charge often ten-fold the proper value and trade on the ignorance of the British public. Their abundant advertisements and absurd promises have so answered that, encouraged by success, they are now, we understand, planning campaigns on a still larger scale. Some of these schemes are bound to react dangerously upon the great body of sound Canadian propositions. Canadians there urge that Lord Strathcona take the initiative by publicly branding some of the worst as unworthy of English support. Canadians in London urge this, not merely for the sake of protecting English fools, but also that any reaction of their unchecked folly may not dull Canadian prestige.

Would it be practicable to exercise some kind of state control over the market offerings of Canadian lands. For instance, if land companies and real estate "boomsters" were required to file plans of their real estate offerings with the government and be able to show to probable investors, some certificate of the value of them, a sort of protection would be established. If the British investor in Canadian lands and lots, could apply to the Canadian office in London and get some sort of reliable information to guide him, he would, in case of failure to realise his exectations, be able to put the blame upon his own judgment. Worthless enterprises should at once be blacklisted as a warning and a guide to the unwary. Anyway, something can surely be done, and great injury to Canadian credit be avoided. The Board of Trade of the town of Welland has passed and circulated a resolution exposing the worthless offerings of "outside" realty in the vicinity of the town, and thus cleaned its skirts, in respect of disappointment by the over-anxious to become rich quickly. If there could be some such governmental way of dealing with irresponsible and dishonest exploiters of western lands and town plots—often only existing on paper—there would be less of disappointment, fewer people misled into ruinous investments and less injury done to Canadian reputation for business probity, and to Canadian financial credit. Canada has now got a good name, a name that draws population and capital, both of them indispensable conditions of permanent growth and stable progress.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The government has engaged, so the Ottawa Free Press discovers, the services of a New York expert to endeavour to improve the acoustic properties of the House of Commons chamber. Are there no experts in the British Empire that this Royal government must have recourse to the services of an American? What has become of the "no truck with the Yankees" outcry?

OUR POOR WHITE TRASH.

H. F. G. Gadsby, well-known in Peterborough, a pungent prober into conditions, and with a keen eye for underlying causes, in his letters from the west to the Toronto Star, thus exposes "the root of it all," of the colour labour problem on the Canadian Western coast:

But here comes Problem No. 5. Last but not least. On the contrary, this is a case where the last is first, because Joe Shirker—to give him a good Pilgrim's Progress name—is the prime cause. Joe is at the bottom of all the trouble. It is because he scorns working with his hands that the yellow man and the brown man have to do it instead. If Joe would do good work for good wages, the brown man and the Dago and the Slav wouldn't get a look in. But Joe is a free-born citizen, an Anglo-Saxon, with an inalienable right to three dollars a day whether he works for-it or not. You can see he-things like Joe all along the Pacific coast, loose-mouthed, weak-chined, red-nosed, blowsy-faced. Joe is mostly a brown-paper cigarette and a thirst. He is maneas—do it to-morrow—or never. He is Unskilled Labour. Also Unhampered Desire for Revenge on Capital. He feels sour because he sees so many smart young men getting rich quick out of real estate. Joe couldn't do it if he tried, because he has a head full of mush instead of brains.

But he thinks he could if he had a start. Meanwhile he belongs to the Industrial Workers of the World, the I.W.W.—called in these parts the I Won't Works or the I Want Whiskeys. He hasn't sense enough to be a leader and live on the fees of ignorance. He simply belongs to the order and shares the general grouch against predatory wealth. His pockets are full of anarchist pamphlets, the contents of which have leaked through into the vacuum he calls his mind.

Meanwhile the I.W.W. has tied up development in the State of Washington and threatens to do the same for British Columbia. British Columbia's five chief problems will not be solved until Joe Shirker has a change of heart.

We seem to be in a fair way of developing a western poor 'white trash' article similar to that which our United States friends boast of in the South.

ONTARIO AND A MARRIAGE LAW.

(Toronto Star.)

Now that the decision of the Privy Council has been given sustaining the right of the Supreme Court of Canada to hear stated cases, the reference by Parliament of the Lancaster bill to that court will at once come to argument.

What is Ontario going to do about it? In the Legislature Mr. Rowell in reply to a question was informed that the Whitney Government would appoint counsel to attend the argument of the case, when the time comes, but the leader of the Opposition could procure no information as to what instructions would be given counsel. He sought to have a general principle adopted by the Legislature. On April 12 Mr. Rowell moved that the House

"is of opinion that in view of the importance of a uniform marriage law for the Dominion of Canada, the Government should instruct counsel for this Province to support the view that the Parliament of Canada has power to enact a bill declaring the validity of all marriages celebrated throughout the Dominion of Canada."

Mr. Rowell's motion was voted down by a party vote. Thus the Legislature left with the Whitney Government the power of instructing counsel. It is no longer possible to delay a decision in this matter. It has been put off until the last moment, but now the decision must be reached, and in the interests of the whole people there seems no choice open to the Whitney Government but to instruct counsel along the lines of the Rowell motion, and uphold the right of the Parliament of Canada to enact a bill "declaring the validity of all marriages celebrated throughout the Dominion."

The Peterboro Light & Power Company's show-room will be open on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings during May and June from 8 to 10 p. m. for the convenience of those wishing to secure gas appliances or to arrange for gas connections.

Hon. George E. Foster Calls Patronage Damnable

Says M.P.'s Are So Harassed That They Can't Properly Attend to The Country's Business

Fredericton, N.B., May 17.—Speaking at a banquet of the University of New Brunswick Alumni last night, Hon. George E. Foster deplored the fact that the public men of Canada were kept so busy that they had no time to fully consider the problems of the country.

Referring to members of Parliament, he said that while in Ottawa they were harassed by an enormous correspondence, and pounded by a patronage system which was simply damnable. Because of this, he went on to say, members of the Government and Parliament had no opportunity to earnestly consider matters which came before them, and consequently their decisions were often hastily given.

Hon. Mr. Foster's academic arguments and conclusions are admirable, and the latter represent too correctly an actual state of things. But his academics condemn his practice. He has to bear his share of responsibility for the condition he condemns. He is a member of a government, that has done more than any other government that has held power in Canada, to intensify the curse of the patronage system. He and the government of which he is the senior member, in political length of service and experience, and of which she should be the Mentor, are responsible for adding to the evils of the patronage system, the evils of the spoils system—making the public service the medium of rewarding at the public expense, the ward heeler and the pot-house politician. Not only at the financial expense of the country, but at the expense of the efficency of the service. Before he gained office, largely by virtue of his glowing promises of reform, Mr. Borden, declared for improvement of the civil service. The moment he got got office, got power to implement his promises in this regard, he forgot them, and made the civil service, to adapt the language of Scripture, "ten-fold more the child of hell" than it was before. The academic humbug talked by Mr. Foster becomes humbug when it is denied in practice; when he lends his hand to make, in his own language, the patronage system "simply damnable."

An Unconstitutional Way Of Spending Provincial Money

The Legislative Assembly of Ontario has been prorouged, but the fact has not stifled adverse criticism of the high-handed action of the government during the session in obtaining power to raise $5,000,000 for the development of New Ontario, and to spend this sum without asking the consent of parliament in the usual way. The act further provides for the appointment of a deputy minister, commissioners, officers and persons for the administration of this fund, "who shall be paid such salaries or other remuneration as the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may direct."

There is also a want of definiteness with regard to the purposes for which the money is to be expended, for it is provided that it shall be devoted to "the construction of works and improvements, the making of roads, the improvements and development of water powers, the advancement of settlement and colonization, the improvement of means of transportation and of communication, the encouragement and assistance of agriculture and reforestration, and "for such other public purposes of a like character as the Lieutenant-Governor in-Council may direct". In short, the government has a free hand in the disposal of a sum of money which a few years ago would have been equal to the entire annual expenditure of the province, and it divests itself of all parliamentary supervision other than reporting to parliament the manner in which the money has been spent. This is a very convenient method of getting rid of the criticisms which are offered while the Legislative Assembly is in committee of supply, and it is also a very objectionable one.

The absolute control by the people, through their representatives in parliament, of the expenditure of public moneys is a right which was not gained without a long and desperate struggle, and cannot with safety be surrendered.

The principle of parliamentary control in such matters is clearly set forth in Todd's Parliamentary Government in England, where we read:

"Any deviation from the constitutional rule of parliamentary appropriation of supplies granted for the public service is to be regarded with great jealousy.

Note the proceedings had, in both Houses, when at a period of public exigency in 1734, the Commons were induced to empower the crown to apply out of the aids of the year such sums as the exigency of public affairs might require. The Act 7, Geo. II, C. 12, No. 12, containing the provision was protested against by the House of Lords, and is censured by Hatsell as a measure entirely subversive of the rules of parliament in the grant of supplies.

Nevertheless it will sometimes occur—as when a ministerial crisis has necessitated a speedy dissolution of parliament, or when military operations, on a large scale, are about to be undertaken for the defence of the Empire, or the prosecution of a foreign war—that it is deemed expedient to entrust the government with means for carrying on the public service, for a limited period, by votes of credit for large sums, instead of by specific appropriations for the several branches of public expenditure, as in the case of ordinary supplies. But this proceeding is only justifiable upon occasions of great and unforeseen emergency, which do not admit of delay, or which ay render it inexpedient for the House to commit itself to the details of expenditure included in the estimates prepared by an existing ministry whose tenure of office has been condemned. It is incumbent upon the House under such circumstances to limit the supply of credit to the bare necessity of the state for the period which must elapse before the reassembling of parliament, and to require the sum so granted to be properly accounted for at the earliest possible period."

No urgency exists for the development of New Ontario which justifies the departure which has been made from well-understood constitutional practice. When the matter was being discussed in the House Mr. Rowell particularly asked of the government how much of this large sum it was proposed to expend during the ensuing year, and when the reply was that the outside amount was $350,000 the leader of the opposition at once suggested that the government should take a vote for $350,000 and let the House deal with the balance next session and succeeding sessions. But this the government would not consent to.

Equally objectionable is the power taken by the government to fix the salaries and allowances of all offices. This is directly contrary to parliament procedure. The principle has been long established that the House has control over the salaries of all government officials, no matter to what department they belong. The government cannot even increase the salary of a junior clerk by $50 a year without obtaining a vote of the House. Why should the offices to be created under the act now being discussed be differently dealt with?

The only precedent which can be found in Ontario for this pernicious kind of legislation is the act passed by the Sanfield Macdonald Government in 1871, setting apart one-and-a-half million dollars to be applied by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to subsidize railways for the development of the province. The act, however, specified the conditions under which the subsidies were to be paid, and, as compared with the present, was comparatively less objectionable, but it was looked upon by the Liberals of that day as such a serious departure from constitutional practice that it formed one of the main grounds of attack upon the government in the election held in the fall of 1871, and it was upon this issue in the ensuing April that the Sanfield Macdonald Government was defeated.

It is not necessary in order to make a case against the manner in which this $5,000,000 grant has been made to adopt the language of Premier Whitney while he was a member of the opposition and say that there is to be "a gigantic robbery" or "a phenomenal steal." It is enough to say that the powers taken are so dangerous that Sir James would be the last man to intrust his political opponents with them, and what he would not be willing to concede to others he is not justified in taking for himself and his associates.—Brantford Expositor.

BAD BLOOD CAUSED ABCESS

Mow Vinol Saved Mrs. Hall.

It took a dangerous and painful experience to prove to Mrs. Hattie Hall that she had let her health run down. In a letter from Schenectady, N. Y., she says: "I was forcibly reminded that my system needed renovating and that my blood was out of order, by the fact that an abscess formed in my side a short time ago and required treatment for several weeks.

"Under the regular use of Vinol to enrich and purify my blood and build up my strength, this was soon healed up and my general health very much improved."

Right now is the very best time of year to put your blood in good order by the use of our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, Vinol. It enriches the blood by adding iron and thus frees it from its impurities.

Vinol is wonderfully strengthening and vitalizing for all who are run-down and weak, and we guarantee it to give perfect satisfaction. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

BIG CROWD WILL SEE THE OPENING GAME OF THE SEASON ON WEDNESDAY

Everyone is Talking Baseball and They Will be All There to See the End Lifted—An Automobile Parade Will be Among the Features

SOME NOTABLE VISITORS

Details in connection with the opening of the local baseball season at Riverside Park on Wednesday afternoon, when St. Thomas and Peterborough will play the first professional ball game ever seen in Peterborough, have all been completed, and nothing is needed but fine weather to make the event one of the most successful sporting features ever pulled off here. One thing is certain, and that that is that Manager Templin and his White Caps will be greeted by a record crowd on Wednesday. The city has rarely been so stirred up over any sport as it is at the present time over baseball and the mortality among grandmothers and the abundance of toothache and other troubles that necessitate absence from business will be unprecedented on Wednesday. Everybody is making it a point to be on hand for the opening. There is something about the procession and the band and the manoeuvres of the civic dignataries who endeavour to pitch or hit the first ball, that seems to make the first game of the season doubly attractive. It is a circus and a band concert and a ball game all rolled into one and everybody wants to be there.

The management of the Peterborough Ball Club are making preparations to have Wednesday's opening a thoroughly classy affair. There will be a number of invited guests present for the occasion, including officials of the St. Thomas club, the officials of the Canadian Baseball League, representatives of the different newspapers in the district and the clergy of the city. It is expected that President Fitzgerald and Secretary Robinson of the Canadian LeagueL will be among those on hand. L

Thanks to the Peterborough Automobile Association enough cars have been placed at the disposal of the ball club to take care of the players and officials and the parade will be an imposing one. The ball club officials very heartily appreciate the co-operation of the Automobile Association, whose assistance will be a big factor in the success of the procession. The 57th Regimental Band will head the parade and will also play a programme at the grounds. The procession will start at 3 o'clock sharp from the Y.M.C.A. and the route will be along George street to Hunter, along Hunter to Water street, down Water to Charlotte street, along that thoroughfare to George street and thence to Riverside Park via George and Hunter streets. At the park the players will parade across the field and will be addressed by President W. H. Denham. The preliminary practice will then take place, after which the balance of the opening ceremonies will be put on. Mayor Bradburn will pitch the first ball, E. A. Peck, M.P.P. will catch, J. H. Burnham, M.P., will bat and Vice-President E. G. Patterson will be the umpire.

The ball game proper will be started at 3.45 o'clock.

Although the White Caps are for the moment in the cellar, there is not a fan in Peterborough who expects them to stay there long. The enthusiasts are loyal to the thirty-third degree and are confident that Templin's squad will start to climb, and keep on climbing until they are at the top of the heap. The fans point out that they have been right in the fight in the three games played, making every game a battle, and say that once they get going they will all have to look out for the White Caps.

WHITE CAPS BEATEN BY A LAST-MINUTE RALLY

"Red Sox" Scored Four Runs Off Johnnie Derr in the First Two Innings, Schaeffer Finishing the Game—Hartman's Home Run With the Bases Full Gave Peterborough the Lead in the Fourth Innings But They Failed to Stay in Front.

Peterborough dropped another close and bitterly fought game in Brantford on Saturday, being forced to hand over a victory to the Red Sox after an up and down fight. Brantford showed in front at the start, getting three runs in the first two innings, but the White Caps came through with a rally in the fourth and fifth innings which netted them six runs and apparently cinched the game for them. But you never can tell about baseball—it is the uncertainty that makes it such a fascinating game. The Brants chalked one up in tre eighth and won out in the ninth, the final score being 7 to 6.

There was the greatest possible interest in Peterborough over the game and the fans were alternately plunged into deep gloom or lifted unto joyous heights as the figures came over the wire. The Examiner received the details of the game by innings and a big crowd of fans gathered, while hundreds more kept the telephone busy with in quiries about the game.

When the first news was received and it was seen that Brantford had scored four times in the last two innings, the bugs refused to be downhearted. "It is early in the game yet," some one said. "Wait for a while and the Petes will pull that down." Pull it down they did. The third innings was a blank for both sides, but the fourth was a joyous session for the White Cap adherents. "Peterborough 5, Brantford 0" in the fourth innings," was the gleeful tidings that came in and the fans were jubilant. Another Peterborough tally was recorded in the fifth and the game was apparently on ice. There was nothing further doing until the eighth. Derr had calsomined the Brants from the second innings and when the report arrived that Brantford had scored one in the eighth, the crowd refused to get alarmed. However, not long after, the final score came along ,and naturally there was keen disappointment, although the defeat was taken philosophically. "They were there all 'the way anyway" one fans said, and "Wait till they get home" said another.

BRANTFORD, MAY 20.—Brantford made a grandstand finish here on Saturday in the ninth and snatched a victory from Peterborough 7 to 6. Derr lasted two innings against the Red Socks and was yanked after four runs had been scored by clean hitting. Tasker was wild in the fourth and a home run by Hartman with the bases full proved his undoing, five runs resulting from the rally. Novak's scorching single to centre in the ninth drove the winning run over. The score:

BILL SCHAEFFER TO PITCH WEDNESDAY'S OPEKING GAME

Big Pitcher Sent Home by Manager Templin to Rest Up for Local Debut of the "White Caps"—He Worked Seven Innings Against Brantford on Saturday.

Pitchers Bill Schaeffer and Harry Snell of the Peterborough Baseball Club arrived home last night from Brantford, and will rest up for the opening of the season on Wednesday. Schaeffer is scheduled to pitch the first game of the year at Riverside Park, and Templin sent him home to allow him a chance to get in the best possible shape. The big fellow pitched the last seven innings against Brantford on Saturday, going in when the score was 4 to 0 against the Petes. He held the Red Sox without a run or hit until the eighth, but they got to him in the closing spasms, and assisted by an infield error, pulled out in front. He is in fine condition now and with two days' rest should go the route without any difficulty on Wednesday. Snell accompanied the big fellow, to work out with him here.

The boys state that the breaks have all gone against them, so far, and that with any kind of luck they should have cleaned up all three games. Their rabbit's foot was surely spratted during the first three engagements, but the luck can't stay that way for ever. Bayer is billed to pitch this afternoon, if it is possible to play a game, and Derr will work to-morrow. Manager Templin is endeavouring to arrange matters so that the team can reach home on the midnight train to-morrow night.

EARL HARTMAN, the White Caps' third baseman, who made a home run on Saturday with the bases full, in the game at Brantford. This was the first homer of the season in the Canadian League.

White Cap Notes

Came from behind and took the lead—then lost in the stretch.

Well, Brantford needed that game as bad as we did. They had already lost two at home.

The three leading teams all lost Saturday, so the eight are still well bunched. A little spart will put the White Caps in the first flight.

St. Thomas stopped Bowerman's Tecumsehs Saturday. Jacobson won his second victory of the week. The ex-Michigan Leaguer will in all probability pitch against Peterborough in the opening game here on Wednesday.

Mayor Bradburn's arm is in the pink of condition for Wednesday, when His Worship will try to outguess J. H. Burnham, who is to endeavour to hit the first ball.

Rube Deneau's Berlin Busy Bees struck a snag at Ottawa on Saturday. The Senators bumped the Green Sox 7 to 1, Herbert holding the Berliners to four hits.

Guelph, after losing two games to London, without securing a run, invaded Hamilton on Saturday and beat the Kolts 7 to 1. The Hams kicked in with six errors. They had seven in the last game against Peterborough.

The White Caps are playing in St. Thomas to-day and to-morrow. The Saints will accompany them east on Wednesday morning for the opening game here, the two teams arriving at noon.

"They gotta stop kicking our team around."

It will be over the bridge and follow the crowd on Wednesday. Everybody'll be doing it that day.

Peterborough is ball crazy. There were five hundred fans over at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon inspecting the new stand and incidentally picking out their seats for Wednesday. There will be a warm welcome for the White Caps when they trot out onto the diamond to play the first home game.

"Wait until they get home and they'll start to climb" is the slogan from the loyal fans.

REV. J. A. MacDONALD'S SERMON AT DALLAS, TEXAS, YESTERDAY

The Toronto Delegation to Big Convention, Including Messrs. Cowan and Hardy, of Peterboro', Had Charge of the Services in First Presbyterian Church Yesterday --Inspiring Address by the Editor of the Globe.

The Toronto delegates to the big Ad. men's convention in Dallas, Texas, had charge of the service in the First Presbyterian church yesterday. A sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe, while the Toronto representatives, including Messrs. H. B. Cowan and C. F. Hardy of Peterborough, all attired in Highland costume, occupied seats in the choir. The Canadians had provided suitable music for the occasion, the organist being E. Jules Brasil organist and choirmaster of St. Basil's cahedral, Toronto, while P. Redferne Hollinshead, the well-known tenor, contributed solos.

Dr. MacDonald's sermon was as follows:

AN APPRECIATION.

My first word must be one of appreciation. On behalf of the delegates to the Eighth Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America I would express our sincerest appreciation of the great kindness and the true Southern hospitality extended to us to-day by the Churches of Dallas. Specially would I speak for the delegation from Toronto, and of our grateful appreciation of the quite unique mark of confidence shown by the minister and session and congregation and putting into our hands the complete charge of this service—organ, choir, and pulpit—and in joining with us in the worship and exercises of this hour. As Canadians we greet you. As citizens of the world-empire of Britain we have fellowship with you. As heritors with you in the Anglo-Saxon tradition, and as trustees for North American civilization, we share with you the opportunities and the obligations which bind together the two English-speaking nations on this continent.

"And passing along by the Sea of Galilee He saw Simon and Andrew casting a net in the sea, for they were fishers. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they left their nets and followed Him."

It was evening by Galilee. The sun went down behind the Napthali hills. The shadows lengthened across the lake. The lights began to glimmer around the shore.. One by one the stars came out in the deep blue of the Syrian sky. The hush of the evening hour was broken only by the measured stroke of the fishermen going out to their night toil, and by the long lone call of the late sea-bird homeward bound.

In the gloaming two men shoved out from shore, and silently pulled away to their accustomed fishing ground. They were young, not yet out of their twenties, but, browned by many a sun, strained by many a storm, their hands were hard and their faces deeply marked by the toil and hardship of their life. Their trained eyes scanned now the darkening waters, and now the gathering cloud that hung low along the western sky. Their minds were filled partly with fear of a sudden storm from the hills and partly with thoughts of the chances for a good night's catch and prospect for a good market at Capernaum in the morning.

When they were at the place, with the sure swing of experts, they cast their nets in the sea, for they were fishers. Scarcely had the ruffled waters closed over the checkers of net when from the land a voice hailed them. Against the dark background of the shore they saw a Stranger, a young man of their own age. Something about him, a tone of his voice, a turn in his salutation, the poise and attitude of his figure as he stood there in the twilight, recalled One they had met months before down by the Jordan—a young man with a wistful touch, whose rare words had haunted them in the silence of the night-time as their boat rocked dreamily under the mystic stars.

The Stranger spoke again. That voice could not deceive them. It was the voice of the Nazarene with the seamless robe. They answered his friendly greeting with a friendly salute. Then there came to them on the quivering night-wind a call so wondrous, an invitation so compelling, that all within them answered with a strange new thrill: "Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." The love-note in that call went through them. Over the waters they saw the Gleam. And straightway they left their nets and followed Him.

What a man he must have been, and what a sense of resource he must have had, to warrant him in calling them away from the trade in which they were trained to go with him who had not where to lay his head! And what men they were, so sensitive, so quick to understand, so ready to respond, that, without hesitation, or calculating, or regret, they left the ways and means of which they were sure to follow the youthful Stranger and the visionary Gleam.

One wonders if there were many fisher-folk on the lake or in the towns about the shore that night who could match those two in their imaginative insight and eager response and unhesitant venture of faith! One wonders, too, how it would be to-day were such a Stranger so to call our toiling artizans or so to call ourselves with a word so abrupt and a reward so uncertain! Who among us would rise up and answer that call? And yet those rough-handed, weather-beaten Galileans, who had never yearned beyond the hills of Napthali, left the things they had and the life they knew, left them once and for all, and went out and on and never looked back. What a calling that was!

Let us turn again and look along at that scene on the lakeside. It has deep significance and an apt message for our modern life any where and at any time, but, on this unique occasion, and under the rare circumstances of this hour, it comes to us with all the directness of a personal appeal. It speaks to us as to the young Galileans of the great chances and choices of life. To us, as to them, it calls for decision. To us, as to them ,the secret of the message is the Master's Call to the Nobler Life.

The Nobler Life! This is no empty, abstract, or speculative question, remote from our daily lives and practical interests, about which we can afford to be unconcerned. It is a personal question, "yours, mine, every man's." It is the most intimate and personal problem with which we have to do. We have only one life to live. We go through youth and mid-life and old age only once. Is is worth while, supremely and eternally worth while, that we face our life situation squarely, that we expose the interior of our life ,its motives to action and its standards of conduct, frankly to the whitest scrutiny, as those two men were made to do that night on the seashore, and to see if we, too, are putting our lives to their highest uses, making the most of ourselves, using our time and talents and opportunities to such high purpose that, when the Master of all true workmen looks upon the finished products of our lifework, we may rise to our feet as he passes by, unafraid of blame and unashamed of praise.

A SEEMING DISTINCTION.

First of all, I would have you mark the distinction Jesus seems to draw between one kind of life and another. He seems to suggest the superiority of one kind of work over another. In calling Simon and Andrew away from their fishing trade he seems to say that their new occupation is nobler than their old. What was it that gave that new life its higher dignity?

It was not that the one was honest and the other dishonest. Catching good fish and selling them in wholesome condition at a fair price is just as honest as preaching sermons or founding churches or writing epistles or going up to martyrdom. It was not honesty that made the difference.

It was not that one work was better paid than the other. In all probability, indeed, quite certainly, for Andrew and Simon the financial advantage was altogether with the boats and nets. There was for them a competence, if not, indeed, an abundance, in the Galilean fishing trade; but the discipleship of Jesus offered them the hardship and penury and suffering and death Garibaldi offered his Italian soldiers. No, it was not money.

And it was not that one occupation was more highly respected than the other. No man ever lived who cared less about the superficial estimates and judgments of society than did Jesus of Nazareth. To him real nobleness of life was neither made nor marred by the praise or blame of the crowd.

What, then, made the new calling seem nobler than the old? It was that in their new work Simon and Andrew would deal with men rather than with things. In their old task they thought first of the catch, and the market and profits of their trade. Only remotely did they touch the lives of men. In their new calling they would deal directly and at first-hand with human character and life. It was that close human touch that made the difference between the new and the old.

This ,then, is the real meaning and permanent message of that scene on the lakeside of Galilee: that the life of a man rises in dignity and comes to truest worth only as it comes into close, personal, sympathetic and helpful relations with the lives of other men.

And is not that distinction made by Jesus the very same distinction suggested by the more modern classifications of the employments of men as the Professions and the Trades? Was it not that principle roughly applied that set Law, Medicine and the Ministry by themselves on a higher plane, and over against them and lower down set all the other arts and industries of men? And was it not because the Professions were regarded as having to do directly and personally with men, and the Trades directly and chiefly with things, that these were esteemed nobler than those, more attractive, more dignified, more honourable.

The lawyer, the physician, the minister and the teacher, according to the etiquette of the Professions, must come into personal relations with those whom they would serve, must gain their personal confidences, and must serve them not for the sake of the money returns, but for the sake of the service. The relation is personal, the motive is service, the standard is professional honour. That is the distinction of the Professions.

It would seem to be otherwise with other occupations. They are more impersonal. The manufacturer, the mechanic, the tradesman cannot possibly know the people served by their goods, or by their handicraft, or by their work in the office or shop. There is lacking in the Trades that intimate personal touch which in the old-time notion gave the Professors their distinction.

Is there not a suggestion of that distinction in the Master's call to Simon and Andrew to leave their boat and nets and fishing tarde and to join him in more direct and personal service to men? He called them to what seemed to be, even in outward form, a nobler life. They heard that nobler call, and straightway they left their nets and followed him.

THE REAL DIFFERENCE.

But let us not be misled by a distinction which only seems to be real. It is not a real distinction. Let us, therefore, mark and always remember that in the thought and estimate of Jesus the real superiority and nobleness of life consists, not in the form and external circumstances of an occupation, but in the personality of the man and in the spirit and motive of the work he does.

In the white light of Christ's scrutiny positions are not high or low, only men are; offices are not honourable or dishonourable, only men are. It is altogether superficial, and it contradicts the essential teaching of Jesus, to say that a lawyer or a doctor or a preacher or a teacher is a nobler man than a manufacturer or mechnic or merchant or a broker. Nobleness is a moral quality, and belongs not to things but to men. "Noblesse oblige" is an authoritative maxim, but it does not mean that only those who are of noble blood or who hold office of prominence and trust are obliged to speak the truth and to behave like gentlemen.

The learned Professions, every one of them, may be degraded, and sometimes are degraded, into the meanest most vulgar and most dangerous of Trades. Such degradation always comes when professional honour is sold for a fee and the confidence of the public betrayed to sordid greed for personal gain.

On the other hand, the Trades are dignified into the noblest Professions when capital and labour and the profits of business are made subservient to the ideals of service and the welfare of the people. The manufacturer, the merchant, the clerk in the office, the artisan in the shop, the servant in the house, the scavenger in street—the man anywhere who makes work true that it may bless and sweeten and make strong the lives of other men—that workman takes professional rank with all men of noblest service. His hands may be hard and his clothes soiled, and his wages meagre, but his honour is unstained, and on his head is the consecration of the "Master of every trade."

The obligations of truth and honour bear with peculiar and increasing directness on all who have to do with the Press. At the present moment the most sacred interests of democracy in America are at the mercy of the Press. Under our forms of government and by reason of the conditions of our life the character of the Press influences to a degree the character of our civilization. A Press that is untrue to its trust, venal, ignorant, false, corrupts and misleads public opinion and makes honesty and power in government difficult, if not impossible. There is no crime against the State more dangerous or more damning than the crimes of which editors, reporters and publishers are guilty who deliberately defile public taste, confuse public issues, and degrade public morals.

No less exacting are the standards now being applied to the business of journalism—the publicity service carried on through the advertising columns. Incalculable damage has been done by dishonesty in trade promoted by dishonest advertising. One of the most significant and most hopeful signs of the betterment of American life is the earnest leaguing together of thousands of men interested in business publicity—men who sell advertising space, men who buy it, and men who write advertisements for it—thousands of such men in all the Advertising clubs of the United States and Canada leagued together for the high purpose of making the business of publicity honest and clean, and of the truest service to the public. As one whose responsibility is chiefly confined to editorial work, making editorial opinion honest and news reports trustworthy, it gives to me the sincerest pleasure to testify in this conspicuous place to the high-minded earnestness of the men who lead in this new and far-reaching reform. The annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, whose delegates are the honoured guests of the city of Dallas this week, will mark a step forward in the progress of business morality compared with which all spectacular muck-raking and trust-breaking may in the end prove but empty show. The redemption of publicity from the unclean and the fake has no political objective. Its purpose is to make industry and trade wholesome and true. Its motive is the best service of the people.

And the time is come when service of the people is seen to be the kingliest thing in life. In June last from the triforium over the Poet's Corner in Westminster Abbey I had a rare view of that most gorgeous and most impressive of all historical spectacles, the Coronation of King George. The supreme and most memorable moment in that ceremonial was not when the jewelled crown of Edward the Confesor was placed on the head of the new monarch. The kingliest act in all that splendid ritual was not the anointing, or the crowning, or the homage before the throne, but the simpler scene when His Imperial Majesty, standing there in the midst of his own people and the great ones from all the earth, accepted in reverent sincerity the kingly words of Jesus, which were the text of the Archbishop's sermon: "I am among you as he that serveth."

THE TRANSFORMING SECRET.

The secret of the nobler life is suggested by Jesus in his call to the two fishermen: "Come ye after me." Life must touch life. Personality transfigures personality. No mere change of occupation, no mere improvement of conditions, deeper than blood goes, more mysterious than the things of the mind, it was in that innermost character, behind instinct and impulse, where motives stir and choices are made and destinies are fixed—it is there a change must take place which Jesus himself called being "born again."

Men and women, the hope of our lives and of our world, is in that radicalism of Jesus. New motives must be born within us. New inspirations must compel us. The motive of self-interest must be "born again" into the motive of love. Love alone can change us to serve the unlovely. Nothing else in life goes deep enough or has power radical enough to transform selfishness into service.

Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, passed in music out of sight.

Love alone can do it. That Stranger on the shore is the supreme Master and Lord of Love. He can love us clean. He can thrill our sordid lives with his own deathless passion. Back to the common street and up to the hard task we may go with a high resolve, inspired with a new enthusiasm, haunted with a wistful sense of that Presence which will not be put by. And whether in the silence of the night-time or in the bustle of the noonday there will come to us, and not in vain, that nobler call of which all after life shall be the pledge and proof.

Pessimistic Joker Stirs Up Washington

WASHINGTON, MAY 20.—Here is a story that was keenly enjoyed by members of both parties in the house and senate cloak rooms. It is related that a man called on his neighbour armed with an imposing looking document.

"Bill," said the caller, "I want you to sign this petition."

"What is it?" asked his friend suspiciously.

"Well," was the reply, "it looks as if Roosevelt would be nominated at Chicago and that Bryan would be named at Baltimore. This is a petition praying that the country be restored to the Indians."

Just 50 years ago Mr. Langley took an active part in decorating the streets of London when our late beloved King Edward VII brought the charming Danish Princess Alexandra to her future home, so gladly welcomed and to live in the hearts of the whole British nation. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to her in her recent bereavement.

THE DUTY OF MAN TO HIS NEIGHBOUR SHARPLY DEFINED

Rev. Dr. Shearer, of Toronto, Who Was Special Preacher at St. Andrew's Church Last Evening, Delivers an Interesting and Inspiring Discourse to Large Congregation

The special preacher at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, last evening was the Rev. J. G. Shearer, D. D., of Toronto. Dr. Shearer is the Secretary of the Social and Moral Reform Department of the Presbyterian Church, and in his sermon, last evening, he dealt in a very lucid manner with the subject of the duty we owe to each other. His text was the 27th verse of the 10th Chapter of St. Luke: "Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbour as Thyself."

"The question has sometimes been raised as to whether the Church gives due prominence to this great commandment," said the speaker. "It is sometimes charged that the Church heeds it disproportionately . It may be that the Church was not able to bear this social thing until now; and it may be that the next great awakening of the church will be the awakening of the duty of man to his neighbour.

Our Lord gave this commandment in a very delicate manner. He told the parable of how a certain man had fallen among robbers, who had left him by the wayside, half dead. A priest passed by, on the other side as also did the Levite, but a certain good Samaritan took compassion on him and tended his wounds. Do we recognize that the drunkard or the man in the gutter is our neighbour, whom we should love as ourselves? Isn't it terrorising? Just think of it. It is a serious thing, for no matter who the man may be, he is our neighbour, and we should minister to him as far as we are able; yea, even to death, if necessary. But how far do we do it? Have you ever had a local option compaign? Have you canvassed for it?

A great dramatist has said: The world is a stage and men and women are the actors, but it appears to me in a different light. I think of the world as a highway, and we are all travellers. We see many times the man by the wayside. Take the drunken man. It is all very well to organize an Ambulance Corps to pick up the men who have fallen from the precipice of drink, but it would be far better to put up a fence at the precipice. Take, again, the hundreds of thousands of foreigners who enter this country every year. They are thrown by the wayside in many ways. A pathetic story once came to our department as to how some foreigners had been fleeced by an Employment Agency. They had been sent to tramp fifty miles with their tickets, and when they got to their destination they were not wanted. Then they had to tramp back and for forty-eight hours had no food. Then, again there is the girl who has been brought down to the very depths of self respect by brutes of both sexes. We would welcome a man ten times as guilty, yet we would shut the door of our affections to her. God forgives us for this misunderstanding. Thou shalt love even her, thy neighbour, as thyself.

And many women, too, would pass by. They would be afraid of the dirt and blood of the wounded man in the gutter. It would soil their skirts and they would lose the good opinion of the public if they were thus seen. But our Lord does not consider it in that light. If a woman stained her skirt in the execution of a good deed, it would be an honour to her.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bastard, Maxwell, N.B. SPLENDID ORGANIST

Mr. John Allen Pleased Congregation of St. Paul's Yesterday

The congregation of St. Paul's Church had the pleasure, yesterday, of listening to the magnificent playing of a well-known organist, Mr. Joh Allen, organist of the Crescent Street Church, Montreal ,who presided at the organ at both services. Mr. Allen comes to Canada from Scotland, where he had won fame through his skill as organist. He had played before the late King Edward, before King George, the Duke and Duchess of Fife, and other royalties. The music committee of St. Paul's church are endeavouring to secure Mr. Allen, as organist, and his coming to Peterborough would be a decided acquisition to the local musical forces. His playing yesterday demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is indeed a virtuoso.

Marriage Licenses Issued

TWO POINTS OF VIEW

By Ruth Cameron

"The minute I get to New York I always feel shabby, no matter how well dressed I felt before," said a woman from a less metropolitan city who sometimes goes to New York. "I declare it spoils my pleasure. I feel as if everybody was staring at my clothes."

"Why, I never felt like that," answered another woman. "There are so many wonderful things to look at in New York that it never occurred to me that anyone would look at me."

Shy and self-conscious people sometimes write me to ask how they can overcome their misfortune. I hereby recommend them to these two women. Let them avoid the point of view of the first and try to get that of the second, and they will be on the high road to recovery.

Each of us is, for himself, the centre of the universe. That is a law of psychology. Even the most unselfish person cannot think of the world in any way than that. Although he may wear himself out in the service of others, he must still think of this universe of service as built around himself. As I go through a railway station, or look about a trolley car, it interests me to realise this, and to think how each commonplace person I see before me is the centre of a little universe of his own.

And yet there are people like the woman I first quoted who are always fancying that they are the centre of other people's universes.

Don't worry about receiving too much attention from others. Unless you are signally beautiful or signally disfigured, you are in no such danger. Half the time when you think people are staring at you, they are only looking at you as they look at the trees, or the houses they pass, with an entirely indifferent, half-seeing eyes.

I often think with amusement, of a conversation I heard between two girls. One was a rather pretty girl with a vanity out of all proportion to her pretensions to beauty. Said this girl with a simper: "My dear, is my hat on crooked, or is there anything the matter? I've seen so many people staring at me that I know there must be something wrong." I am sure it would have been evident to a babe in arms that she expected to be told that it was her charm which had made her the cynosure of so many eyes.

But the second young woman, who has a reputation for her frankness, ignored this bait and answered: "What made you think they were staring at you?"

"Why, I saw them of course," explained the pretty one indignantly.

"Then you were staring at them just as much," triumphatly pointed out the blunt young person. "And there wasn't anything wrong or remarkable about them, was there? People have to look at something. They can't walk along with their eyes closed. That's all it meant. I would not worry if I were you."

But the pretty young woman looked much less relieved than she should have.

Suffragettes, Suffragists And Women

By Adeline C. Roberts

NO. XII.

In 1906, a London newspaper, the "Daily Mail," first began to use the word "Suffragettes" to designate the members of the Women's Social and Political Union who had adopted militant methods, in order to distinguish between them and members of the older Suffrage Society who had always been called "Suffragists," and who strongly objected to the militant tactics. Many people, however, now apply the term "Suffragette" to any woman who is in favour of equal suffrage, and occasionally one finds some opponent of equal suffrage who seems to take a sort of malicious pleasure in so applying it, apparently under the delusion that it may annoy those suffragists to whom it is applied. It causes no annoyance, however, being a matter of no importance which word, "suffragette" or "suffragist," is used.

Recently we have been told by an anti-suffragist that her sex consists only of suffragettes, and women. This remarkable statement of course implies that women are not suffragettes, and suffragettes are not women; also that suffragettes desire equal suffrage, and women do not. We must therefore conclude that Florence Nightingale, Clara Barton, Jane Addams, George Eliot, Mrs. Florence Kelley, Harriet Beecher Stowe and many more being all firm believers in woman sffrage are not women. Neither are they men, so we must perforce adopt the language of 18th century novel-writers, and call them females. From the same inference we must conclude that there is an amasing dearth of women in Australia, New Zealand and Norway, since from 75 to 90 per cent. of the females in those countries are voters. In the United States more than 1,000,000 females will vote at the next Presidential election, and before very long several other states will be added to the present 6 which have enfranchised their females. It seems therefore as if women will soon be as scarce in the United States as they are in Australia, New Zealand and Norway!

It is a pity that so able and popular a speaker as Father Vaughan was unable to suggest any other occupation for idle women than "taking in a little washing." Suffragettes and suffragists are almost invariably women with definite employments, either industrial, professional or philanthropic, so the suggestion can hardly apply to them. But if all the women with no definite occupation were to follow out Father Vaughan's idea it is doubtful if there would be sufficient washing available, without depriving a large number of women employed in laundries, or conducting laundries of their own, of their means of livelihood. They would be thrown out of work in order that other women who do not need to make a living by it may have occupation for their idle hours. The homes of many of these latter, especially in cities, would have to be enlarged and altered in various ways to afford facilities for such work. To Father Vaughan, being a man, and probably quite inexperienced in laundry work and its requirements, such details never occurred. They do not seem to have occurred to some women either.

In a previous article of this series, the word "home" was explained in accordance with its implied meaning in the favourite cry of the anti-suffragist, "woman's sphere is the home," and therefore naturally lunatic asylums, hospitals, jails, and similar institutions were not included. Neither suffragettes nor suffragists are peopling insane asylums, nor is there the least probability of their ever doing so. A large proportion of female inmates of insane asylums are the unfortunate wrecks of humanity who are victims of those terrible "blots on civilization"—prostitution and the white slave traffic—the abolition of which women are now using all their influence to bring about. It is deplorable that this influence is but an indirect one, since it is opposed to the direct influence of many men who (in the words of an English member of Parliament, referring to the subject), "think things are very well as they are." The right-thinking men who are fighting these evils are sadly in the minority. In the United States, where facts and statistics have lately been collected, we are told:

"There are limited liability companies in every country in the world commanding large amounts of capital for the sake of procuring girls for the purpose of prostitution. One organization had its own burial lot for the burial of infants and young women who died in their houses. One lot contained 451 nameless graves of girls. This society was only one of several. At a low estimate 15,000 fresh girls were imported in one year, and in 1909 one syndicate alone made a profit of about $200,000."

On isolated farms, and in outlying districts and country villages conditions have not changed so rapidly as in cities and towns, where much work, still done in the home in country districts, is now done by the community. Women have never discarded their womanly occupations, nor is there any fear that they will do so. They have only discarded the old-fashioned womanly occupations in favour of the newer ones more adapted to modern conditions. People are tending more and more to congregate in or near cities and large towns, and though old-fashioned womanly occupations have of necessity been discarded, new-fashioned womanly occupations are varied and plentiful enough.

Mr. Clifford Howard says: "It will be found that many of the prejudices and arguments against woman suffrage are based upon conditions that no longer exist. . . . Would we discuss the subject intelligently we must regard it in the light of present-day conditions; we must realize the tremendous transformation that has taken place in our social and economic conditions within the past two generations."

It certainly shows a most amazing ignorance of present-day economic conditions, that any one should make such an erroneous statement as that "except a small minority, women and girls are not forced to earn their livings in factories, offices, etc." In the United States alone upwards of six million women are supporting themselves by their own labour. The increased cost of living, and other economic forces, make it impossible for many thousands of women and girls to remain at home, either idle or giving unpaid service. The reason for the scarcity of domestic help has also been thoroughly investigated, for the awakening women of to-day are making everything that concerns their sex a vital question. The results of inquiry into the "servant problem" would occupy too much space to go into at length in this article. Let it suffice to state one significant fact, which goes to prove that the lives of domestic servants in general must have peculiar disadvantages of their own, as compared with the lives of factory or shop girls. "The federal report on 'Women and Child Wage-Earners in the United States,' gives the occupation of the majority of girls who go wrong as that of domestic service, and in this it confirms the experience of every matron in a rescue home, and the statistics in the maternity wards of public hospitals."

The individual interns of each mother in her home are, of course, matters of education, food, health, morals, etc., as they always were, but these matters are no longer under direct control of each individual mother, as they used to be. This is not a "shockingly erroneous proposition," but a well-recognised fact of the times. The old home industries in city households are now absorbed by large industrial concerns, the state control schools, drainage, sanitation, moral conditions of our streets, and many other matters, and as country towns grow and develop, the same takes place in them. If each individual mother were to return to the customs of earlier periods and purchase raw material in order to do the work in her own home which is now done in factories (as it has been suggested she should do), the complications and difficulties met with in attempting to carry on such work in many a modern city home would be as numerous as those she would encounter in trying to establish a laundry there. And the purchase of raw materials would place her just as easily in the power of the trusts as does the purchase of manufactured articles. Trusts are formed in connection with popular demand for certain commodities, whether raw materials or manufactured goods. Referring to woman's "sphere," the home, Mr. J. Ll Williams says: "If she is to do her old-fashioned share of the work of the world, as a homemaker, and a housekeeper, the ballot is becoming as necessary now as the broom was once. Even to have a clean home it is necessary to have clean streets. To have clean streets it is necessary to elect a clean mayor. The same may be applied to schools and school boards, health and health boards; in fact, all government is merely housekeeping on a large scale."

It is often said that woman should devote their energies to philanthropy, rather than to politics, but it is just those women who do devote their lives to philanthropic work who most realise how disfranchisement hampers them, how they may go just so far, and are then brought up as against a blank wall, because their lack of political power so limits their power for good.

Olive Shreener's book, "Women and Labour," is very widely read and appreciated, and the [illegible] of its views and opinions is acknowledged by many eminent men and women, well qualified to judge. An adverse criticism of it by some one [illegible] comprehend it will have no effect on its popularity.

Though many individual women, and often large groups of women, still retain their narrow-minded prejudices, and are unable to see beyond their own very limited horizons, women in the aggregate are advancing and developing so rapidly that attempts of retrogressivists to check their progress are quite unavailing. They cannot "make the wheels go back."

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

CURES CROUP

In attacks of this dangerous disease prompt attention is all important. The moment signs of Croup appear apply Radway's Ready Relief freely to the throat and chest, and give sufficient quantity of the Syrup of Ipecac to produce vomiting. SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

It is hard to believe that the term, "filthy lucre," originated before the days of dirty bank bills.

In 1897, the immigrants into Canada totalled only 21,716. Ten years later, 1907, the depression year, the number entering (for 9 months) was 146,266. Last year the number of new citizens amounted to 208,794.

It is rumoured that the Building Committee of the Board of Education will, on Tuesday night, recommend awarding the contract for one of the new school buildings to Alderman Johnston, and for the other to Langford and Sheehy.

"Old Probs" promise us more rain —"showers to-morrow." The continuous wet weather prevents the holding of another post-mortem examination of the Romaine street sewer. Apparently the only way to make the Romaine street sewer work is to feed it with yeast.

Next thing we may expect to learn is that Dr. Sun Yat Sen, President of China, has been offered the presidency of the Grand Trunk Railway.

Juvenile till-tappers have a certain sense of humour, when they restore the small change to the till through purchases from the shop whence the money was pilfered.

The Crown Attorney's jocular suggestion that cages be placed in the show windows of the temporary police headquarters, in order to punish offenders by exposing them to the public gaze, is a return to the days of the pillory and the stocks.

The East City people still think the Armour's Hill School site is a sight too high, both in situation and price.

The Canadian Club prizes for best essays in Canadian history were presented by Messrs Goodwill and Wainwright to the separate school winners, Masters Tom Rutherford and Jack Duignan, jr., a few days ago.

SLANDERING MONARCH.

Persons Suspected of Spreading Tales About King of Belgium.

Brussels, May 21.—A semi-official communication dealing with false reports as to the private life of the royal family was issued yesterday in the following terms:

"Since a recent garden party held at Laeken, calumnious reports have been put in circulation concerning the private life of the royal family. It was even declared that on the day of the garden party the Queen of the Belgians surprise King Albert in the company of a chambermaid, and that the Queen shot the woman dead with a revolver.

"King Albert had no knowledge of these reports, although for several days military officers attached to the court had learned of them by telephone calls, both from Belgium and abroad. After consultation, it was decided to inform the king of the report. His majesty was astonished and very indignant. He decided to prosecute the authors of the reports and all persons repeating them.

"The newspaper Le Peuple understands that three persons, whose names are not given, are being proceeded against for circulating the slanders, which takes three forms. According to the first, the queen surprised the king in the company of a chambermaid, and killed the latter. According to the second, the queen fired upon the king, while the third report makes it appear as if the queen merely threatened the lady of the chamber."

The incident has produced a profound sensation here, and public opinion is greatly wrought up over the slanders and their authors.

Injuries Proved Fatal.

Smith's Falls, May 21.—Richard Hicks, an employe of the Smith's Falls Electric Power Co., was engaged in fastening a pulley into the end of a shaft at the power station, when his clothing caught in the shaft. He was hurled around, and was badly injured before the machinery could be stopped. His right hand was cut off, he sustained a bad wound on his head, and is thought to have been injured internally.

Hicks succumbed to his injuries yesterday afternoon. The deceased had been an employe there for several years. He was thirty years old and had been married but a short time.

Veteran S. S. Superintendent Resigns.

Belleville, May 21.—Owing to ill-health Wm. Johnson, who for eight years has been superintendent of Bridge street Methodist Sunday school, one of the largest of the province, has been compelled to resign. Mr. Johnson's fame as a Sunday school worker is widely known.

FIREMEN INJURED

Two Men Hurt in Big Fire at Brantford

DAMAGE IS GREAT

Brantford, May 21.—Lightning caused a disastrous fire here last night which, within half an hour, wiped out the main factory of the Farmers' Binder Twine Co. and caused a loss of $100,000. Two firemen, H. F. Howarth and E. Wilde, of the central department, were severely, if not fatally, injured in the conflagration, while Watchman Richard Johnson was almost suffocated by smoke and oil fumes and severely lacerated by falling glass, a minute after the lightning struck, in his endeavors to turn in the alarm.

The building contained 96 spinning machines, around which was strewn, from end to end, fibre already oiled and ready for the process of manufacture. When lightning caused the first ignition, the blaze spread almost instantly throughout the entire building, the interior and contents of which were of a most inflammable nature. When the firemen arrived the building was a seething furnace and efforts were directed towards preventing the conflagration from spreading to the storage building across the lane, where almost the entire winter's output was stored.

This saved the building, but it was at this spot that Firemen Howarth and Wilde went tumbling through the roof, a distance of 25 feet, into fire and smoke, apparently to their death. It brought forth great heroism on the part of Chief Lewis, who plunged into the building with others in an endeavor to rescue his men. Howarth, who weighs about 230 pounds, fell on the needles of a finishing machine, his face and chest being badly slashed and one ear was almost severed. He was finally extricated from his terrible position, a mass of cuts and wounds.

Wilde, it is thought, was injured internally. He fell to the floor.

During the progress of the fire the lightning, continued to flash vividly and the firemen worked under a deluge of rain. Few people in the city knew of the blaze. Telephone connection was completely shut off.

The fire was of such volume that it left a charred mass of twisted iron and other debris inside of half an hour after it started. The loss is partially covered by insurance, but it is stated to be unlikely that the factory will be rebuilt, owing to the fact that operations in recent years have been conducted at a loss.

About 100 hands are thrown out of employment.

A FEATURE FOR CAMP

Royalty Will Grace the Manoeuvres at Niagara

NO LIQUOR ALLOWED

Toronto, May 21.—Brig.-Gen. Cotton yesterday issued the standing orders for the Niagara camp in June. One new feature this year is that the three Toronto regiments—Queen's Own Rifles, 48th Highlanders, 10th Royal Grenadiers—have been ordered to turn out for preliminary camp, which opens on May 30 and last for five days. When the Toronto infantry has closed its manoeuvres the rural regiments from eastern and western Ontario will cross the lake. On account of the ever-increasing number of men who join the ranks, there will be two camps this summer, as was the case last year, the first opening on June 3, and closing June 14, and the second opening June 17 and closing on the 28th.

The Duke of Connaught, before returning to Ottawa, will review the troops on the historic common at Niagara-on-the-Lake. The date for his visit has not yet been definitely decided, but it will likely be the first week in June. He also will present a new set of colors to the 19th York Rangers.

The hours for which canteens will be permitted to be open are restricted to 7 to 7.30 a.m., 12 to 1.30 noon, and 5 to 9.30 p.m. No beer or spirituous liquors of any kind will be permitted, even in the officers' mess canteens or other regimental institutions.

This year's manoeuvres will be slightly different over all previous ones, as the soldiers will be put under a more thorough drilling, which will include night marches and bivouacking.

As usual, Brig.-Gen. Cotton will be camp commandant. The general staff officer will be Lt.-Col. L. F. Phillips, G.S.O.; Col. Sir Henry Pellatt will be commander of the Toronto brigade, while Col. W. A. Logie will be head of the Hamilton brigade. The musketry instructors will be Capt. Butcher of the permanent staff; Major J. L. McLaren, 91st Regiment, and Capt. C. H. Vandeburgh, 44th Regiment.

War an Closed Shop.

New York, May 21.—Continued warfare on the "closed shop" in the printing trade was urged in a report submitted to the seventeenth annual meeting of the National Manufacturers' Association. Politicians and municipal officials were criticised for enforcing the rule of placing the union label on city printing.

The report of the committee against the union label in part was as follows: "As the presence of a union label on printed matter is an indication that this emanates from a shop closed to non-union printers, it represents a discrimination against a great class of American workmen that should be the concern of every man who believes in an equal opportunity to labor. The committee advises those who believe in the principles of the 'open shop' to return union label printing marked with appropriate comment and to give patronage to printing concerns ignoring the union label."

No Friction, Says Despatch.

Paris, May 21—An inspired despatch from St. Petersburg to The Temps, denies in the most categorical form the insinuation that there is a divergence of views between France and Russia. Russia, according to the despatch, is anxious to bring the Turco-Italian war to an end, as it is causing immense losses to Russian shipping. Nevertheless the Russian Government does not harbor the slightest design against Turkey, nor is it exercising pressure on Turkey.

Russia is likewise anxious to preserve the existing condition of things in the Balkans, for which purpose it has reached understandings with Austria and Italy. These understandings are not inimical to France, which Russia hopes will not be influenced by the attempts of schemers to destroy the solid Franco-Russian alliance.

Halifax Tories Not Pleased.

Halifax, May 21.—The Conservatives of the constituency of Halifax are not satisfied with the administration of federal patronage. The feeling assumed concrete form last night when a gathering of over 400 accredited representatives of the party met and passed a resolution.

This resolution is addressed to Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden and expresses strong dissatisfaction with the patronage committee of Halifax, which consists of five members. The resolution further asks that the patronage committee be dissolved and that the old system be returned to—that is, that the patronage be left in the hands of the Government for the county and his defeated colleagues.

The resolution passed unanimously and was signed by all present, and will be forwarded to the Premier.

Optical Institute Talk No. 8

It Will Pay You

We frequently hear from persons far and near that they would not be without the eye-glasses which they had from the Optical Institute for several times their price. One lady remarked, I wouldn't take $50 for my glasses; another "they are worth ten times their price to me." A gentleman says "I wear mine constantly scarcely know they are on, but have perfect sight far and near. They are worth all they cost me and I want another pair in case of an accident."

The best cost a little more and require a little more time to have made up but it pays, and they are worth all you pay when they please you.

MARKET BUILDING

Given Twenty-Three Months.

Toronto, May 21.—John Graham, 207 Bleecker street, was sentenced to 23 months in Central Prison yesterday morning by Magistrate Denison for a particularly cruel and vicious attack upon his wife, while under the influence of intoxication a week ago. It appears from the evidence adduced that Graham entered the house, and with a clawhammer, inflicted several ugly wounds upon the person of his better half. Had it not been for the interference of one of the boarders at the house, Ernest Brockband, Mrs. Graham would in all likelihood have lost her life for she was lying defenceless on the floor, her husband standing over her with the hammer raised for another blow, when Brockband interferred. Graham pleaded for a lighter sentence, but the court refused acquiescence.

PRINCE IS KILLED

AN AUTO COLLISION

Friessack, Prussia, May 21.—Prince George William, the eldest son of the Duke of Cumberland and his chamberlain, Von Greve, were instantly killed in an automobile accident on the highway near here last evening. They left Berlin early in the afternoon, intending to proceed to Copenhagen by way of Hamburg to attend the funeral of the prince's uncle, the late King Frederick VIII.

The prince, who was at the steering wheel, probably failed to observe the signs of warning that the highway was being repaired, and drove the machine at full speed into a part of the roadway which was being macadamized. He lost control, the machine being ditched and turned on its end. The prince's head was crushed. Chamberlain von Greve's neck was broken. The chauffeur, who was inside the automobile, suffered from a broken arm.

Prince George William was born in 1880. His father, Duke Ernest August, Duke of Cumberland and Duke of Lunenbourg, is head of the house of Guelph.

Aged Farmer Shot Tormenter.

Brantford, May 21.—A shooting case just outside of Burford was investigated yesterday by County Constable Kerr. Private Catton, a member of the 29th Dragoons, was shot on Saturday by an old man named Splatt.

Catton, it is explained, teased the old man to the point of anger, and the latter rushed into the house for his rifle. The bullet lodged in Catton's shoulder. Doctors yesterday were unable to extract the bullet. Splatt went to Burford Village and gave himself up, but he is not under arrest.

Richeson Pays Penalty.

Boston, May 21.—Clarence V. T. Richeson was electrocuted at 12.17.08 o'clock this morning.

The current was turned on at 12.10.08 and the prisoner was declared totally dead at 12.17.08.

The former Baptist clergyman, confessed poisoner of Avis Linnell of Hyannis, his one time sweetheart, was outwardly calm when he entered the death chamber, and he maintained his composure while the straps and electrodes were being adjusted as he sat in the electric chair.

Philadelphia, May 21.—Representatives of the anthracite coal mine workers and the coal companies met at the headquarters of the Reading Company here yesterday afternoon and signed the agreement entered into between the operators and the representatives of the workers.

More Trouble Looms in Morocco.

Tangier, May 21.—The tribesmen of the Sous district have proclaimed Hamel El Hibe sultan. It is believed here that he will either march on Marakesh or the tribesmen will establish an independent realm with Hamel El Hibe as ruler.

UNREST IN CUBA.

Negro Rising is Feared on Occasion of 10th Anniversary.

Havana, May 21.—There is no room for doubt of the existence of a negro conspiracy, extending to all the provinces of the island, with the apparent intention of taking up arms against the Government to-day, which is the tenth anniversary of Cuban independence. The negroes appear to have been roused to rebellion by the denial of what seems to them their just political rewards for services rendered in the war of independence, in which they constituted a great majority of the Cuban forces.

The feeling against the Government has been intensified by a law denying the negroes the right to organize a political party.

The principal trouble now is in the vicinity of Sagua La Grande, in Santa Clara Province, and Cruces, where two armed parties are operating and in Oriente Province, where several bands are converging on Guantanamo City.

The situation is considered sufficiently grave for the Government to despatch last evening a column of 1,200 men from Camp Columbia, composed of cavalry and infantry, with field and machine guns, bound for Santa Clara and Oriente Provinces.

Lieut.-Gen. Laurie Dead.

London, May 21.—The death of Lieut.-Gen. John Wimburn Laurie, C.B., colonel Royal Munster Fusiliers and 63rd Halifax Rifles, Canada, occurred yesterday after a long illness in his 77th year.

Lieut.-Gen. Laurie was well known in Ontario. He served in the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, being mentioned in despatches, in the Persian raids of 1856 and 1857, and later in 1885 during the Northwest Rebellion as second in command and commandant of the base and lines of communication. He attained the rank of lieutenant-general in December, 1867, and at the time of his death was on the retired list.

Plymouth, Eng., May 21.—The report circulated in Cherbourg that the Kronprinzessin Cecilie had picked up some survivors of a wrecked vessel in the Atlantic is unfounded.

The agent of the North German Lloyds at Plymouth, who boarded the liner on its arrival, conversed with Capt. Hogemann, who reported that the voyage had been splendid and uneventful. No signs of ice were seen and only two vessels were spoken on the voyage.

Berlin, May 21.—Endeavors are to be made by the German Government to negotiate a new and up-to-date extradition treaty with the United States Government, according to a promise made by a representative of the Government in the Reichstag. In answering several complaints of members of the House as to the present method of extradition between the two countries, he declared that the German Government recognized the existing defects.

His First Time.

The best man was doing his best to make the groom brace up.

"Where's your nerve, old man?" he asked. "Why, you're shaking like a leaf."

"I know I am," chattered the groom. "But this is a nerve wrecking time for me. I've got some excuse to be frightened, haven't I? I've never been married before."

"Of course you haven't," soothed the prospective father-in-law. "If you had you'd be a great deal more scared than you are."

Medicinal Honey.

There is a common belief in Mexico that wild honey possesses medicinal properties, particularly that hived by a certain small stingless bee. This insect, the size of a housefly, is domesticated and given a gourd for a hive. The wax is almost black. When allowed to remain wild these bees build combs in cracks in the ground or fissures of rocks or trunks of trees.

Kongo Salt Marshes.

Along the central part of the Kongo river there are a number of salt marshes. The African digs shallow holes in these, whence issue streams of hot water, which on being evaporated leaves a residue of salt.

BY RANDALL PARRISH

But there was nothing, absolutely nothing—just that seemingly endless stretch of sand, circled by the blazing sky, the wind sweeping its surface soundless, and hot, as though from the pits of hell; no stir, no motion, no movement of anything animate or inanimate to break the awful monotony. Death! it was death everywhere! His aching eyes rested on nothing but what was typical of death. Even the heat wave seemed fantastic, grotesque, assuming spectral forms, as though ghosts beckoned and danced in the haze, luring him on to become one of themselves. Keith was not a dreamer, nor one to yield easily to such brain fancies, but the mad delirium of loneliness gripped him, and he had to struggle back to sanity, beating his hands upon his breast to stir anew the sluggish circulation of his blood, and talking to the horse in strange feverishness.

With every step of advance the brooding silence seemed more profound, more deathlike. He got to marking the sand ridges, their slight variations giving play to the brain. Way off to the left was the mirage of a lake, apparently so real that he had to battle with himself to keep from turning aside. He dropped forward in the saddle, his head hanging low, so blinded by the incessant sun glare he could no longer bear the glitter of that horrible ocean of sand. It was noon now—noon, and he had been riding steadily seven hours. The thought brought his blurred eyes again to the horizon. Where could he be, the man he sought in the heart of this solitude? Surely he should be here by now, if he had left the waterhole at dawn. Could he have gone the longer route, south to the Fork? The possibility of such a thing seared through him like a hot iron, driving the dullness from his brain, the lethargy from his limbs. God! no! Fate could never play such a scurvy trick as that! The man must have been delayed; had failed to leave camp early—somewhere ahead, yonder where the blue haze marked the union of sand and sky, he was surely coming, riding half dead, and drooping in the saddle.

Again Keith rose in his stirrups, rubbing the mist out of his eyes that he might see clearer, and stared ahead. What was that away out yonder? A shadow? A spot dancing before his tortured vision? Or a moving, living something which he actually saw? He could not tell, he could not be sure, yet he straightened up expectantly, shading his eyes, and never losing sight of the object. It moved, grew larger, darker, more real—yet how it crawled, crawled, crawled toward him. It seemed as if the vague, shapeless thing would never take form, never stand out revealed against the sky so he could determine the truth. He had forgotten all else—the silent desert, the blazing sun, the burning wind—all his soul concentrated on that speck yonder. Suddenly it disappeared—awale in the sand probably—and, when it rose into view again, he uttered a cry of joy—it was a horse and rider!

Little by little they drew nearer one another, two black specks in that vast ocean of sand, the only moving, living things under the brazen circle of the sky. Keith was ready now, his eyes bright, the cocked revolver gripped hard in his hand. The space between them narrowed, and Hawley saw him, caught a glimpse of the face under the broad hat brim, the burning eyes surveying him. With an oath he stopped his horse, dragging at his gun, surprised, dazed, yet instantly understanding. Keith also halted, and across the intervening desert the eyes of the two men met in grim defiance. The latter wet his dry lips, and spoke shortly:

"I reckon you know what this means, Hawley, and why I am here. We're Southerners both of us, and we settle our own personal affairs. You've got to fight me now, man to man."

The gambler glanced about him, and down at his horse. If he thought of flight it was useless. His lip curled with contempt.

"D——n your talking, Keith," he returned savagely. "Let's have it over with," and spurred his horse. The gun of the other came up.

"Wait!" and Hawley paused, dragging at his rein. "One of us most likely is going to die here; perhaps both. But if either survives he'll need a horse to get out of this alive. Dismount; I'll do the same; step away so the horses are out of range, and then we'll fight it out—is that square"

Without a word, his eyes gleaming with cunning hatred, the gambler swung down from his saddle on to the sand, his horse interposed between him and the other. Keith did the same, his eyes peering across the back of his animal.

"Now," he said steadily, "when I count three drive your horse aside, and let go—are you ready?"

"D——n you—yes!"

"Then look out—one! two! three!"

The plainsman struck his horse with the quirt in his left hand, and sprang swiftly aside so as to clear the flank of the animal, his shooting arm flung out. There was a flash of flame across Hawley's saddle, a sharp report, and Keith reeled backward, dropping to his knees, one hand clutching at the sand. Again Hawley fired, but the horse, startled by the double report, leaped aside, and the ball went wild. Keith wheeled about, steadying himself with his outstretched hand, and let drive, pressing the trigger, until, through the haze over his eyes, he saw Hawley go stumbling down, shooting wildly as he fell. The man never moved, and Keith endeavoured to get up, his gun still held ready, the smoke circling about them. He had been shot treacherously, as a cowardly cur might shoot, and he could not clear his mind of the thought that this last act hid treachery also. But he could not raise himself, could not stand; red and black shadows danced before his eyes; he believed he saw the arm of the other move. Like a snake he crept forward, holding himself up with one hand, his head dizzily reeling, but his gun held steadily on that black, shapeless object lying on the sand. Then the revolver hand began to quiver, to shake, to make odd circles; he coudn't see; it was all back, all nothingness. Suddenly he went down face first into the sand.

They both lay motionless, the thirsty sand drinking in their life blood, Hawley huddled up upon his left side, his hat still shading the glazing eyes, Keith lying flat, his face in the crook of an arm whose hand still gripped a revolver. There was a grim smile on his lips, as if, even as he pitched forward, he knew that, after he had been shot to death, he had got his man. The riderless horses gazed at the two figures, and drifted away, slowly, fearfully still held in mute subjection to their dead masters by dangling reins. The sun blazed down from directly overhead, the heat waves rising and falling, the dead, desolate desert stretching to the sky. An hour, two hours passed. The horses were now a hundred yards away nose to nose; all else was changeless. Then into the far northern sky there rose a black speck growing larger and larger; others came from east and west, beating the air with widely outspread wings, great beaks stretched forward. Out from their nests of foulness the desert scavengers were coming for their spoil.

CHAPTER XXXVII.
AT THE WATER-HOLE.

Up from the far dim south-west they rode slowly, silently, wearied still by the exertions of the past night, and burned by the fierce rays of the desert sun. No wind of sufficient force had blown since Keith passed that way, and they could easily follow the hoof prints of his horse across the sand waste. Bristoe was ahead, hat brim drawn low, scanning the horizon line unceasingly. Somewhere out in the midst of that mystery was hidden tragedy, and he dreaded the knowledge of its truth. Behind him Fairbain and Hope rode together, their lips long since grown silent, the man ever glancing uneasily aside at her, the girl drooping slightly in the saddle, with pale face and heavy eyes. Five prisoners, lashed together, the binding ropes fastened to the pommels of the two "Bar X" men's saddles, were bunched together, and behind all came Neb, his black face glistening in the heat.

Suddenly Bristoe drew rein, and rose to his full length in the stirrups, shading his eyes from the sun's glare, as he stared ahead. Two motionless black specks were visible—yet were they motionless? Or was it the heat waves which seemed to yield them movement? He drove in his spurs, driving his startled horse to the summit of a low sand ridge, and again halted; gazing intently forward. He was not mistaken—they were horses. Knowing instantly what it meant—those riderless animals drifting derelict in the heart of the desert—his throat dry with fear—the scout wheeled and leaped back to his party, quickly resolving on a course of action. Hawley and Keith had met; both had fallen, either dead or wounded. A moment's delay now might cost a life; he would need Fairbain, but he must keep the girl back, if possible. But could he? She straightened up in the saddle as he came spurring toward them; her eyes wide open, one hand clutching at her throat.

"Doctor," he called as soon as he was near enough, his horse circling, "that is somethin' showin' out yonder I'd like to take a look at, an' I reckon you better go' long. The nigger kin com' up ahead yere with Miss Waite."

She struck her horse, and he plunged forward, bringing her face to face with Bristoe.

"What is it Tell me, what is it?"

"Nothin' but a loose hoss, Miss."

"A horse! here on the desert?" looking about, her eyes dark with horror. "But how could that be? Could—could it be Captain Keith's?"

Bristoe cast an appealing glance at Fairbain, mopping his face vigorously, not knowing what to say, and the other attempted to turn the tide.

"Not likely—not likely at all—no reason why it should be—probably just a stray horse—you stay back here, Miss Hope—Ben and I will find out, and let you know."

She looked at the two faces, realizing intuitively that they were concealing something.

"No, I'm going," she cried, stifling a sob in her throat. "It would kill me to wait here."

Sh was off before either might raise hand or voice in protest, and they could only urge their horses in effort to overtake her, the three racing forward fetlock deep in sand. Mounted upon a swifter animal Fairbain forged ahead; he could see the two horses now plainly, their heads uplifted, their reins dangling. Without perceiving more he knew already what was waiting them there on the sand, and swore fiercely, spurring his horse mercilessly, forgetful of all else, even the girl, in his intense desire to reach and touch the bodies. He had begged to do this himself, to be privileged to seek this man Hawley, to kill him—but now he was the physician, with no other thought except a hope to save. Before his horse had even stopped he flung himself from the saddle, ran forward and dropped on his knees beside Keith, bending his ear to the chest, grasping the wrist in his fingers. As the others approached, he glanced up, no conception now of aught save his own professional work.

"Water, Bristoe," he exclaimed sharply. "Dash some brandy in it. Quick now. There, that's it; hold his head up—higher. Yes, you do it, Miss Hope; here, Ben, take this, and pry his teeth open—well, he got a swallow anyhow. Hold him just as he is—can you stand it? I've got to find where he was hit."

"Yes—yes," she answered, "don't—don't mind me."

He tore open the woollen shirt, soaked with blood already hardening, felt within with skilled fingers, his eyes keen, his lips muttering unconsciously.

"Quarter of an inch—quarter of an inch too high—scraped the lung—Lord, if I can only get it out—got to do it now—can't wait—here, Bristoe, that leather case on my saddle—run, d—— you—we'll save him yet, girl—there, drop his head in your lap—yes, cry if you want to—only hold still—open the case, will you—down here, where I can reach it—now water—all our canteens—Hope, tear me off a strip of your underskirt—what am I going to do?—extract the ball—got to do it—blood poison in this sun."

She ripped her skirt, handing it to him without a word; then dropped her white face in her hands, bending, with closed eyes, over the whiter face resting on her lap, her lips trembling with one prayer, "Oh, God! Oh, God!" How long he was at it, or what he did, she scarcely knew—she heard the splash of water; caught the flash of the sun on the probe; felt the half conscious shudder of the wounded man, whose head was in her lap, the deft, quick movements of Fairbain, and then—

"That's it—I've got it—missed the lung by a hair—d——n me, I'm proud of that job—you're a good girl."

She looked at him, scarce able to see, her eyes blinded with tears.

"Will—will he live? Oh, tell me!"

"Live! Why shouldn't he?—nothing but a hole to close up—nature'll do that, with a bit of nursing—here, now, don't you keel over—give me the rest of that skirt."

He bandaged the wound, then glanced about suddenly.

"How's the other fellow?"

"Dead," returned Bristoe, "shot through the heart."

"Thought so—have seen Keith shoot before—I wonder how the cuss ever managed to get him."

As he arose to his feet, his red face glistening with perspiration, and began strapping his leather case, the others rode up, and Bristoe, explaining the situation, set the men to making preparations for pushing on to the water-hole. Blankets were swung between ponies, and the bodies of the dead and wounded deposited therein, firm hands on the bridles. Hope rode close beside Keith, struggling to keep back the tears, as she watched him lying motionless, unconscious, scarcely breathing. So, under the early glow of the desert stars, they came to the water-hole, and halted.

The wounded man opened his eyes, and looked about him unable to comprehend. At first all was dark, silent; then he saw the stars overhead, and a breath of air fanned the near-by fire, the ruddy glow of flame flashing across his face. He heard voices faintly, and thus, little by little, consciousness asserted itself, and memory struggled back into his bewildered brain. The desert—the lonely leagues of sand—his fingers gripped as if they felt the stock of a gun—yet that was all over—he was not there—but he was somewhere—and alive, alive. It hurt him to move, to breathe even, and after one effort to turn over he lay perfectly still, staring up into the black arch of sky, endeavouring to think, to understand—where was he How had he come there? Was Hawley alive also A face bent over him, the features faintly visible in the flash of firelight. His dull eyes lit up in sudden recollection.

"Doc! is that you?"

"Sure, old man," the pudgy fingers feeling his pulse, the grey eyes twinkling. "Narrow squeak you had—going to pull through all right, though—no sign of fever."

"Where am I?"

"At the water-hole; sling you in a blanket, and get you into Larned tomorrow."

There was a moment's silence, Keith finding it hard to speak.

"Hawley—??" he whispered at last.

"Oh, don't worry; you got him all right. Say," his voice sobering, "maybe it was just as well you took that job. If it had been me I would have been in a bad."

The wounded man's eyes questioned.

"It's a bad mix-up, Keith. Waite never told us all of it. I reckon he didn't want her to know, and she never shall, if I can help it. I've been looking over some papers in his pocket—he'd likely been after them this trip—and his name ain't Hawley. He's Bartlett Gale, Christie's father."

Keith could not seem to grasp the thought, his eyes half-closed.

"Her—her father" he questioned, weakly. "Do you suppose he knew?"

"No; not at first, anyhow; not at Sheridan. He was too interested in his scheme to even suspicion he had actually stumbled onto the real girl. I think he just found out."

A coyote howled somewhere in the darkness, a melancholy chorus joining in with long-drawn cadence. A shadow swept into the radius of dancing firelight.

"Is he conscious, Doctor?"

Fairbain drew back silently, and she dropped on her knees at Keith's side, bending low to look into his face.

"Hope—Hope."

"Yes, dear, and you are going to live now—live for me."

He found her hand, and held it, clasped within his own, his eyes wide open.

"I have never told you," he said softly, "how much I love you."

She bent lower until her cheek touched his.

"No, Jack, but you may now."

THE END.

A POWERFUL AND EFFECTIVE CURE

For Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma.

Soothing Balsams Are Carried to the Sore, Congested Membranes — Cure Quickly and Completely.

Diseases of the breathing organs are, as you know, excited by germs so minute that only the microscope can reveal them; they are lodged in the tissues, develop there, and cause all the trouble. That is how consumption starts.

If the cause of the disease can be carried by air, why not the remedy? This conclusion lies at the root of the Catarrhozone treatment. The instrument through which you breathe fragrant, healing Catarrhozone splits up into minute particles this invaluable healing and curative agent, thereby enabling the air to carry it to the remotest ramifications of the breathing organs, and diffuses itself over their entire surfaces.

CATARRHOZONE ALWAYS CURES.

It would be absolutely impossible to breathe through a Catarrhozone inhaler without carrying this liquid to the remotest parts of the breathing apparatus. Upon healthy tissue it has no action, but upon diseased tissue and upon the micro-organisms which infect diseased tissues its action is so wonderfully curative that the disease is completely abolished. Then the tissue heals.

EARLY TREATMENT IS WISE.

Catarrhozone is an ideal remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. If you have catarrh, or bronchitis, or asthma, all are equally curable by Catarrhozone. These diseases are all modifications of an inflammatory condition of the lining membranes of the throat and nasal passages. Under these conditions we call it catarrh. When it extends to the bronchial tubes, we call it bronchitis. The condition is the same, the causes which produce the diseases are identical, and the remedy, Catarrhozone, acts equally promptly and emphatically upon the different forms of this disease. Your case is curable. Get Catarrhozone to-day; two months' treatment (guaranteed) price $1; small size 50c. Sold by all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

How Much Overtime Did You Work This Month?

ENOUGH probably to compel you to do some serious thinking.

You find that the necessity to work overtime becomes more and more imperative as your business increases and orders continue to pile up.

Lights burn in the flat until late at night, while the shipping staff work often two, three or four times a month, probably oftener.

Time dockets show heavy overtime. Overtime means excessive shipping cost, less profit on sales, soaring pay roll, tired, "played-out" employees, and bigger lighting bills.

Business men who have been situated just as you are have found the way out by the use of

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT ELEVATORS

By their practical and labor-saving service, they eliminate useless movements and concentrate energy at essential points.

An Otis-Fensom Elevator saves thousands of steps, prevents lost time and conserves energy.

It enables the employee to do more work and better work. It adds valuable hours to the business day by saving to the employer the time which was formerly wasted in unproductive labor.

Not only does an Otis-Fensom Elevator reduce labor cost, but it simplifies and scientifically systematizes the work of the Shipping Department, and places it on the lowest economical basis consistent with the highest degree of efficiency.

Where the volume or nature of the business does not require a power elevator, there is our improved design of Hand Power Elevator, which combines the practical advantages of a power elevator with its reliability and ease of operation. It can be run by anyone.

Please send me your book.

You'll find that our new illustrated book, "Freight Elevators and Their Uses" treats definitely, informatively, and impartially of the elevator in relation to your particular business. Your copy awaits your request. Where shall we send it?

A Glimpse At The Work Of The Bees

The country roads are edged with industry wherever the early fruit trees are in flower. Along some stretches, the "snake" and stone fences are almost hidden in a wealth of white bloom that scent the roadway as you pass along, and in among the blossoms are countless bees humming in a low tone that will escape you unless you stop to listen. There is an incessant toil, as they flit from blossom to blossom, and back again, sipping the sweet fluid that Nature has placed there, and all the time performing, unconsciously the duty of disturbing the golden pollen that impregnates every flower. Upon such does the harvest depend, and yet the whining farmer will question to-morrow's sky and sun with never a thought of the unfailing hand that has guided the unnoticed bees. The wonderful provisions and bounty of Nature become intensified the more they are studied.

Carpe diem is good advice for May days. The rich beauty of the sprnig will soon begin to fade. The chaste whiteness of the orchard's bloom will wither as the young fruit takes form. The flowers in the woods will disappear, the violets, lillies, the Jack-in-the-Pulpits dropping their petails until another Spring calls them back to grace another season. As the present season goes by one begins to realise that the plant life have their own serious business to perform. Mihadi Nature lays aside her nuptial garments, and in an ever yday garb sets about the task of keeping her house in order. The unsullied beauty of the Spring is but a symbol, the application of which to animate life becomes more apparent when there is a realization of the duty in which Nature is engaged. "Flowers preach to us if we will hear," mere the significant words of Christina Rossetti.

Was Mr. Bailey Responsible?

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—I understand that Mr. W. A. Bailey has written to the Provincial Board of Health or some Toronto papers about the condition of the cells at the old police station. I may be wrong in my opinion, but it seems that the following letter by the editor of Jack Canuck was prompted by Mr. Bailey's writing:

To His Worship the Mayor of Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—What business has your city to maintain a police station which is unfit for animals to stay in? Have you got the same dwarfed ideas about men who serve on a police force as the Toronto authorities? We presume you go to church on Sunday, say long prayers, and thank God that you are not as other men, "even as these poor constables," who are given a station which is unsanitary. Please humble yourself a little, and see if you cannot do something to make life at your police station a little more like what it ought to be for decent men.

JACK CANUCK.

The repairing of the police station has been under consideration for some months and the actual work is now well under way. Mr. Bailey should know that his writings upon the above letter or not. Mr. Bailey fails in his sense of patriotism and good citizenship when he permits himself to say derogatory things about the city in which he lives.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH NOTICES

Mr. R. Palmer, Student at Trinity, at Sunday Night Service

At the Sunday morning service at St. John's church, Rev. Canon Davidson made reference to the death of Mrs. Chas. Perry, who, he said, had been a member of St. John's for three-quarters of a century. A special hymn was sung in her memory, and an appropriate prayer offered.

The lesson at the Sunday evening service at St. John's church, was read by Mr. Roland Palmer of Peterborough, who has completed his second year at Trinity College. He will take charge of a mission at Emsdale, during the coming summer.

Rev. Mr. Gregg of Bradford, Eng., who is a guest of Mr. Buck, Perry St., attended the evening service at St. John's church on Sunday.

41st Regt. Coming To Peterborough

(Brockville Times)

There was a splendid attendance at the regular regimental drill last night and the officers and men enjoyed a good workout under command of Lt.-Col. Buell. During the evening the commanding officer made two presentations. The badge for the best shot of 1911 went to Pte. George Glover, while Sergt. F. Ling received a twenty-dollar gold piece donated by Major Robert Bowie to the non-com. or man doing the most consistent shooting during the year.

Subsequently the officers met and discussed a pressing invitation received from the Peterborough Rangers to visit that city on Dominion Day, which comes on Monday. A Belleville regiment has also been invited. It was unanimously decided to go, providing satisfactory train arrangements can be made which is quite likely. The regiment would leave here late on Saturday, June 29, spending Sunday and Monday in Peterborough and returning early Tuesday morning.

RESTAURANT CHANGES HANDS

Mr. Frank Jacobi, proprietor of the Peterborough Lunch, this morning sold his restaurant to Mr. Yee Yen, a Chinese resident of Kingston, who will take possession three weeks from to-day. Mr. Jacobi will move out to the North West, where he will carry on a similar business.

The Board of Diretcors will meet on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

RAILWAY NOTES

A despatch from Edmonton states that there are to-day no fewer than 6,000 men at work on the construction of the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from mile 28, west of the summit, to mile 58.

The new Grand Trunk Pacific shops at Transcona, Man., have now been completed and handed over to the railway by the contractors, Messrs. Haney, Quinlan, and Robinson of Winnipeg, and are undergoing inspection by the Government inspectors this week. Capt. Press of Ottawa, mechanical engineer, and Mr. George S. Hodgins, inspecting engineer for the Government, are going over the plant in company with Mr. M. J. Haney, who states that the big car shops will not be completed until late in the autumn, although the first buildings are fully equipped and practically ready to be taken over and operated. Owing to the enormous size of the plant, the work of inspection is expected to occupy considerable time.

More than a thousand articles were disposed of at the sale of unclaimed freight, which has just been concluded in the Toronto sheds of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. These included chairs, tables, beds, desks, steam-fitting and plumbing appliances, in addition to numerous odds and ends. Some of the furniture was of ordinary quality, but quite a few pieces were of oak or mahgogany and of good design.

The Grand Trunk Railway has started to put cement fillings in overhead on the new subway at the Queen street crossing in Sunnyside, a suburb of Toronto. Construction of this kind of subway marks the advent of a new era of bridge work. Instead of the former method, the sole cement is now poured between the iron girders and held in place by means of boards. When dry it forms a binding support to the girders, as well as preventing any refuse or dirt from falling on those below, thus doing away with the old tin guards which are in use at the King and Queen St. subways.

A resolution in favour of granting the Grand Trunk Railway the right to cross the State of New Hampshire in its extension to Boston was unanimously adopted by the Board of Trade of that State at its annual spring meeting held at Exeter. In discussing the resolution, members of the Board declared that the coming of the road should be expedited by New Hampshire as well as by Massachusetts. They declared that the greatest benefits would come to the State from the G.T.R. and that the work of extending its lines should be started as quickly as possible. The resolution is as follows: "Resolved that the New Hampshire Board of Trade is in favour of granting authority to the Southern New England Railroad Corporation to build across this State so that the transcontinental system of the Grand Trunk Railway may be completed and New Hampshire share in the benefits which shall accrue from this new force in the industrial edvelopment of New England.

During the past week just 2,225 steamship passengers from Halifax, St. John and Quebec, have passed through the G. T. R. Bonaventure station, at Montreal, on nine special trais, bound for points in Ontario and Western Canada.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Cooking is a pleasure when you have a "McClary" Gas Range in your kitchen

You wouldn't think of lighting the furnace during the intense heat of summer. Why persist in cooking on a coal range during the hot weather? GAS is a much cheaper fuel than coal—far more convenient and easier on the cook in the summer time. Any McClary gas range pays for itself very quickly in the actual money it saves.

The Model shown in the cut is "McClary's" latest production and therefore the greatest range value there is.

The first glance convinces you that your comfort and convenience have been studied by the designers and builders of this range. It is quite apparent that you can cook a big dinner on this range without being crowded. The big roomy Oven is placed high. The Broiler is also elevated. There is no "stooping or bending" over this range.

Like other "McClary" ranges, this model has the white enamelled broiler and drip pans. Also Anti-Rust linings which add to the life of the range. The body is finished in bright, black enamel, and is easy to clean.

Just see the many styles of "McClary" gas ranges at your dealer's. All "McClary" gas ranges can be changed from artificial to natural gas in a few moments if necessary—see them and pick out the gas range that suits you best. 503

TRAGEDY OF A GUST OF WIND

(Short Story).

"Look, Margaret!" said the girl in the toque, sitting up suddenly and starting intently across the crowded waiting room. "Look at that man—the one just getting into the elevator. It's too late. He's gone."

She sank back into her seat. "If he hadn't got away so quickly I should have rushed up to him and asked him to please pull my hair," she remarked pensively.

Her companion looked exasperated. "Helen, you do say the most ridiculous things. Will you kindly tell me why you should want to rush up to any man and ask him to pull your hair?"

The girl in the toque giggled.

"Why, yes, I was just going to tell you," she replied.

"You know two years ago last summer, after I had typhoid and had to have my hair cut off, I went up to a farm in Wisconsin to stay a month."

"I know you stayed only a week."

"That's part of my story. One day when I had been up there nearly a week I started out for a long walk in the woods. In the course of my wanderings I came to a lovely little lake with the most beautiful pond lilies floating on it. There was a canoe drawn up on the beach at one end and a little boathouse among the trees—"

"When does the man come in?"

"All in good time, my dear. I'm leading up to him. I looked all around for somebody the canoe might belong to, and then I decided to borrow it for a few minutes and paddle over and get some lilies, trusting to luck that the owner would stay away until I got back."

"Nice, high-principled thing to do."

"I paddled over to the lilies and was having a beautiful time gathering a great bunch of them, when I discovered that the paddle was floating around in the water just out of reach. I leaned over as far as I dared and was clawing for it, when I heard a shout from the shore. A man was gesticulating and gyrating on the beach. 'Hey, look out!' he yelled. 'Wait till I row out and get it!'

"He dashed into the boathouse and brought out a rowboat. He rowed over and pushed the paddle within my reach, and I paddled back with him in my wake, feeling the way I used to when I tried to play hookey and got caught—"

"And what has all that got to do with hair pulling?" asked the other young woman rather restlessly.

"Oh, I'm coming to that. After he had helped me out of his canoe and dragged the lilies out, we looked at each other and laughed. He had the most delightful laugh and dark blue eyes and broad shoulders. And then he wnted to know if he couldn't carry the lilies home for me, and the first thing I knew we were wandering along through the woods and having a beautiful time."

"You didn't think of asking his name or where he came from before you went strolling through the country with him, I suppose?" suggested the girl who was doing the listening.

"Well, everything went along delightfully," proceeded the girl with the toque, "until just as we reached the farmhouse where I was staying. Then a nasty little gust of wind came up—there hadn't been a breath of air stirring all day and blew my hat off. And, my dear, it took the wig with it! You know I had to wear one because I didn't have any hair, and there I stood looking like a sheared sheep."

"He must have known how it was."

"I don't know what he knew or what he thought, for the minute he brought my hat back I flew into the house and the next day I skipped the country and came back home. I was so afraid I would see him again. Now you know why I want to have him pull my hair."

"Oh, Margaret, here he comes back again, right toward us—look, the tall one with the grey overcoat."

"That man! Why, that's Sidney Hollister. I've known him for ages." Before the girl in the toque could stop her the other young woman had intercepted the young man and he was standing smiling down at them.

"Sidney, this is Helen Benedict, and she wants you to pull her hair, please," gurgled Margaret.

"Pull her hair—" the youth began amazedly, then a light dawned in his eyes as he held out his hand eagerly.

"Is it really you? Well, I think you ought to have your hair pulled for the way you treated me that day and then skipped the country afterward without leaving a trace. I tried to bribe the people at the farmhouse—" He broke off and then began again. "I won't pull it here in public, but if you'll let Margaret bring me up to see you some day I'll be glad to give it a little tweak and call it square."

"Didn't you really think-"

"That you always wore a wig? Not for a minute—and anyway," audaciously, "you weren't such an awful eyesore without it."—Chicago News.

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of the Bladder—intense pains in the back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor. My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once, and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me". JOHN HERMAN, Hamilton, Ont.

AFTER THE MOSQUITOES

Kill Them Before They Grow Their Wings, Says Dr. Higgins

Dr. Chas. H. Higgins, pathologist at the experimental Farm, has begun a crusade against mosquitoes, and in a letter giving advice for the abatement of the nuisance, says:

"Mosquitoes are pesky little creatures which annoy the quiet naps of grown-ups during the summer months. They are always present when a good breeding ground is handy. For the hatching of their eggs and their development before becoming winged denizens of the air, they require a ten days stay in a quiet pool of water. This pool may be in a bottle, an old tin can, or an ordinary roadside mudhole. When in such a pool they are known as wrigglers and these little black wrigglers can be seen to sink to the bottom when the surface is disturbed.

"Grown-ups either like or dislike mosquitoes. Children cannot express an opinion as they have to take what is given them by their parents. If you like mosquitoes you allow tin cans, bottles and mudholes to serve as breeding grounds. If you dislike mosquitoes you prevent their breeding in their favorite haunts close to your place of abode.

"Kill the mosquitoes while they are wrigglers and they will never grow wings to annoy you and your family. To kill the wrigglers never allow bottles or tin cans to be thrown out. Cover all mudholes or quiet pools of water with coal oil. A quart of coal oil will cover a pool ten feet square. The oil forms a thin film on the surface and smothers the wrigglers. Wrigglers come to the surface every few minutes to breathe and with the film of oil on the surface they cannot get their nose or breathing pore out to the air. Be wise! Kill your mosquitoes before they grow wings."

A HIDDEN RADIATOR

A Canadian Who Has Patented an Interesting Invention

Canadian inventors while not numerous are attracting increasing attention throughout the world. The latest Canadian who has worked out an invention successfully is Dr. G. M. Aylesworth, Collingwood, whose hidden radiator for heating dwellings is being recognized as a step towards perfection. The radiators through which the hot air from the furnace passes, though hidden in the partition, operates on the scientific principles used with hot water heating. The forward step consists of the facts that the radiators take up no room, are invisible, noiseless, simple, economical and having no moisture cannot be injured through carelessness. Dr. Aylesworth has obtained patents in the U.S. and Canada.

It would be an interesting task for some statistical enthusiast, with a little time at his disposal, to figure out how many columns of information—and occasionally, shall it be said, of misinformation—has found a place during the last decade in the columns of the world's press, dealing with some phase or other of life in the great Canadian West. Of the thousands of such articles, the greater number naturally, enough, are devoted to farming and the amazing fertility of the prairie soil, but it is interesting to note that, where they originally dealt almost exclusively with the wheat crops and the number of bushels of grain shipped east every year by the various railroads, an altered note is beginning to enter into this publicity: exhaustion of the soil is beginning to be hinted at and the advantages of mixed farming as compared with grain growing are pointed out. There should then be no question as to the interest or importance of drawing public attention to the exceptional opportunities for all classes of agricultural enterprise still largely undeveloped in the western territory pierced by the glistening rails of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Nowhere are found more productive and profitable farming lands. The soil is black and deep. The growing season presents a succession of long, sunshining days and is blessed with ample showers—a happy combination bound to make and mature crops to perfection. Transportation facilities over the G. T. P. lines are all that can be desired. And what more can a farmer ask?

From Winnipeg west, the Grand Trunk Pacific traverses some of the richest soils in that fertile area once traversed by the old glacial lake Agassiz. The alluvial deposits of this lake are the foundation of the deep fertile silt and clay soils of this region. Some of them even after twenty and twenty-five years of almost continuous cropping with wheat or other small grain, still produce in a favorable year 35 or 40 bushels of wheat and 80 or 90 bushels of oats per acre.

PREPARING THE SOIL FOR SEED

It would be no exaggeration to say that practically all the land along the entire distance traversed by this road is capable of furnishing homes to those who till them. The lands are of three classes. They may be classed first, as having special adaptation to the production of grain; second, as having such adaptation to mixed farming of which live stock will form an important feature; and, third, as being mainly adapted to the production of live stock only. Of the third class of lands the area is not very large; of the second it is much larger; and of the first it is by far the largest. Of course, the land that has high adaptation to the growing of grain may be made to have equally high adaptation to the growing of live stock, according to the way it is farmed. As soon as mixed farming of the character mentioned shall be generally adopted, lands that may now be obtained for from $8 to $15 per acre and even lands now open to homestead, will sell for $50 to $100 per acre.

A study, then, of agricultural conditions along the lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific reveals the fact that other crops than wheat are unquestionably not only possible, but even profitable. In soil and season, this entire section is admirably adapted to mixed farming operations. There is scarcely a crop known to the temperate zone that is not found growing luxuriantly in the Canadian West. Wheat may reign for a time, but heirs apparent are many. Other grain crops, oats, barley, rye, flax, and very likely indian corn, will eventually share, if not usurp, the sovereignty. Clover, alfalfa, peas, vetches, and other legumes are certain to find increasing favor on these rapidly developing western farms. Garden crops, including all varieties of table vegetables, small fruits, roots, etc., look exceedingly good to the progressive farmer. The opportunity now presents itself to those who desire to better their conditions in this wonderful last best west.

WATCH HER AT DINNER.

A Parisian Gourmet's Way of Getting at a Woman's Age.

A Parisian gourmet thinks he has discovered an infallible method for getting at a woman's age—watch her at dinner.

If she goes through every course, chattering all the time, and is equal to an ice after dessert, not to mention Chocolates and crystallized fruits, she is still in her teens.

If she makes a good start with the hors d'oeuvres, does well with the caviar, salmon and such delicacies, but shows no interest in the rest of the meal, she is between twenty and thirty and married.

When she declines every other kind of game, but takes some pheasant, she has passed thirty, but has not yet reached thirty-five.

After thirty-five she dotes on every kind of game, the more highly flavored the better.

If at the end of dinner she takes cheese, showing special partiality for the odorous Camembert, then, says the Parisian observer, there can be no manner of doubt about it—she is a lady of uncertain age.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

The Meanest Man Bill.

They were discussing the freak bills that get themselves introduced into congress every year when a Colorado representative said:

"Sometimes I think the greatest boon we could have in this country would be the adoption of a federal statute in accordance with a bill an odd character in Colorado once wanted me to offer to the state legislature. It was entitled the meanest man bill and provided for an election in every county each year to determine who was the meanest man in the county. The man receiving the highest vote was to be hanged. Think of the good such a statute would do! Just consider what decent citizens all the people would be who received a few scattering votes! And those who stood any chance of leading the ticket would move away. In two or three years every place where the law was in operation would become a model community."—New York Press.

WEIGHT OF A TRAIN.

The Dining Car Alone, Ready For Service, Weighs 140,000 Pounds.

The heaviest of all the cars in a "limited" train is the dining car, which is ordinarily of a weight in excess of the other cars by 10,000 or 15,000 pounds. Between the car construction and the necessary kitchen equipment and ice-box contents, a full size standard dining car tips the scales at 140,000 pounds when ready to make its customary division run.

Therefore, on the principle that in case of collision a passenger is safer in the strong, heavy coach in the center of a vestibuted train, the dining car is a good place to remain.

A sixteen section sleeping car may weigh from 110,000 to 125,000 pounds, while the buffet-library car of the transcontinental type comes next in weight at 107,000 pounds. The baggage car, weighing 85,000 pounds, may be the lightest in a train, but the postal car next to it weighs on an average 103,000 pounds, a reclining chair car is full weight at 87,000 pounds, while the ordinary passenger coach weighs 98,000 pounds.

With a locomotive and tender weighing 260,000 pounds, one may estimate by these figures the enormous weight of some of the through modern railway trains of seven cars.—New York Press.

TORONTO, May 20.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 186 carloads, consisting of 3476 cattle, 1359 hogs, 615 sheep and lambs, 119 calves and 18 horses.

Exporters

Mr. Howard bought for Swift & Co., 220 cattle for export, as follows: For Liverpool, 90 steers, 1215 lbs., at $7.35; for London, 107 steers, 1200 lbs., at $7.60.

Butchers

Steers of export quality, 1100 to 1200 lbs., sold at $7.15 to $7.35; loads of good, $6.90 to $7.10; medium, $6.40 to $6.75; common, $5 to $6.35; inferior, $5.40 to $5.90; cows, $4.40 to $6.65; bulls, $4.75 to $6.65; canners, $2.00 to $3.

Milkers and Springers

Fred Rowntree bought all on sale, 12 in number, at $40 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

Calves, sold from $4 to $8.50 per cwt., and in one instance $9 was paid. The quality was generally not good.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $6 to $7.25 per cwt.; yearlings, at $7.75 to $8.50; spring lambs, $5 to $7.50 each.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.85 to $8.90, but $8.85 was the ruling price, and $8.50 to $8.65, f.o.b., cars, was paid.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 20.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market receipts of live stock for the week ending May 18 were 800 cattle, 295 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 1300 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 450 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 150 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle since last Wednesday, the feeling being strong. Prices were fully maintained at the late advance, owing to the very limited supplies coming forward, which is attributed to the scarcity of finished stock in the country, on account of the fact that American buyers have been operating actively of late thruout Ontario for supplies for export account, on account of the high prices ruling in the Chicago market. Indications are now that supplies for the local market will run slow until grass-fed cattle are in fit condition to be marketed, and the prospects are that there will be a scarcity of beef for the time being, as all the surplus stock has been well cleaned up. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as they were all short of beef, the demand was good, and an active trade was done, with sales of choice steers at $8 to $8.25 per 100 pounds, while bulls of good quality brought as high as $7.

A much stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices advanced 25c to 40c per 100 pounds, owing to the small run and the keen competition between buyers for supplies, and the prospects are that they will go still higher in the near future, unless receipts increase. An active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $8.65 to $8.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs is very strong, owing to the fact that supplies of frozen stock that were put away in cold storage last fall are now pretty well exhausted, and the receipts of live stock at present are far from being sufficient to supply the local requirements. A few small lots of yearling lambs sold at $7.50, and ewes at $6.50 per 100 pounds. The demand for calves was made at firm prices.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7.25; do., medium, $6 to $7.25; do., common, $4.50 to $5.50; do., choice cows, $5.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5.75 to $6.25; do., bulls, $5.50 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $35 to $75; springers, $50 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $6.25 to $6.50; bucks and culls, $5.25 to $5.50. Lambs, $7.25 to $7.60.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8.65 to $8.75.

Calves, $1.50 to $8.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 20.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000 head; market active, 15c to 25c stronger; prime steers, $8.75 to $9.10; shipping steers, $7.90 to $8.35; butcher grades, $7 to $8.25; heifers, $6.75 to $8; cows, $4 to $7; bulls, $4.25 to $7.25; milch cows and springers, $35 to $75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 11,600; market fairly active, 25c to 50c higher; choice lambs, $8.30 to $8.50; cull to fair, $7 to $8.25; yearlings, $7 to $7.50; sheep, $4 to $6.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 17,000; market, trade light, 10c to 15c lower; yorkers, $7.20 to $8; pigs, $6.90 to $7; mixed, $8; heavy, $8 to $8.10; roughs, $6.50 to $7; stags, $5 to $6.25.

King Edward's Politeness.

The irreproachable politeness of the late King Edward was not only individual and relative to persons, it was human and general as well. Once at Marienbad His Majesty and a few friends were having tea in a restaurant in the pine woods near the town. At a table close by sat another party, the host of which was a well-known German prince.

The work of attending to the guests at both tables devolved upon a young English waitress, and the King did not fail to notice the rude, blustering manner of the royal German, who threatened to report the terrified girl every time she had occasion to answer his summons. Annoyed by this most unjustifiable behavior, the King said to Sir Stanley Clarke:

"You are to convey my thanks to the proprietor here for the prompt and admirable manner in which my party has been served at this restaurant."

The command was instantly obeyed, much to the disgust of the adjoining table, a disgust which was intensified when the King gave the timid young waitress a gold piece.

The Tsetse Fly.

How great a menace is the tsetse fly to the progress of certain regions of Africa is shown in the report of Sir William H. Manning, governor of Nyasaland. The prevalence of the fly has made it necessary to close many important roads against all forms of animal transport. One of the highways thus closed to animal-drawn vehicles is the road between Blantyre, the chief commercial centre of the country, and Zomba, the administrative capital; but 23 miles of it, or more than half, has been macadamised, in order that motor vehicles can use it; and work on the remainder is going on rapidly. The ordinary roads of the country are impassable for ox-wagons during the rainy season, which extends from November to May. For this reason a great increase of macadamized highways is desirable. Unless it is provided, the newly-developed agricultural settlements of the protectorate will suffer greatly.

London, May 21.—Arthur J. Balfour, the former Premier, speaking yesterday at the annual meeting of the Victoria League of the Empire, said he believed that at no distant date a scheme for an Imperial Parliament would be matured, by which Great Britain and her self-governing colonies would be united into one.

The whole trend of events, he said, was to bring closer the widely-scattered parts of the Empire. He was a profound believer in the truth that local patriotism properly understood was no obstacle to a larger patriotism.

RAILWAY BOARD WILL MEET IN PETERBORO' ON FRIDAY, MAY 31

Will Consider Appeal of Citizens for Protection at G.T.R. Crossing at King and Sherbrooke Streets—Council Will Oppose Being Involved in Any Expense if Application is Granted.

DISCUSSED BY ALDERMEN

The Dominion Railway Board will hold a session at the Court House in Peterborough on Friday, May 31st, to deal with an application for protection at the G.T.R. crossing on King street, presented to the Railway Commission by Mr. A. E. Birchard, 207 Reid street.

This was the announcement in a communication read at a special meeting of the City Council on Monday evening from which four aldermen were absent. Mayor Bradburn presided, with Aldermen Morgan, Anderson, Graham, Johnston, Brown and Gillespie present and the 57th Regimental Band doing itself full justice in the music room across the corridor.

King and Sherbrooke.

The secretary of the Railway Board wrote to the Council that Mr. Birchard's application for protection at the G.T.R. crossing on King street had been investigated and that it would be considered at the session which will be held here on the last day of May. The provision of protection at the G.T.R. crossing on Sherbrooke street will also be considered.

Mayor Bradburn stated that he had called the meeting for the purpose of securing the Council's opinion as to what action the city should take in the matter.

Mayor Bradburn—It is for you to decide whether you intend to oppose this application or to oppose the involving of the city in any part of the maintenance of this protection. The ratepayer evidently wrote the Board They sent their engineer and on h report they decided to consider application.

Ald. Johnston—If this request is acceded to, the city will be involved in the expense of providing the protection. This plaintiff might have mentioned his action to the Council. I think there are more dangerous crossings in the city than those.

Ald. Brown—King street crossing is quite dangerous.

Mayor Bradburn—The engine house, being so near the tracks, makes it dangerous when trains are approaching from the south. If the Board grants the request we want to try and shoulder the expense on to the railway.

Ald. Brown—The railway company should pay the cost. They have the right of crossing our streets, and surely they should meet whatever cost results from protecting the public.

Mayor Bradburn wanted a definite statement of what action the Council sanctioned. Did they want to oppose the application for protection of these crossings or merely that in the event of the Railway Board ordering protection that the Council should oppose the placing of any of the share of the cost on the city?

Doesn't Want the City Involved.

Ald. Brown—I am opposed to the city being involved in the sharing of the expense.

Ald. Graham—There should be protection on King street, anyway.

Ald. Johnston—It is too bad the city is held responsible for the financial outlay in these cases. We don't want to oppose the protecting of the people, but we should oppose the cost being levied against the city when the protection is ordered by the Board.

Ald. Anderson—I am opposed to the idea of the city assuming any part of the expense.

Ald. Gillespie—The C.P.R. crossing is one of the most dangerous in the city.

Mayor Bradburn— There is a man there in the day time.

Ald. Gillespie—But he is not there at night.

Ald. Johnston—I think we are clear on this now. We are not opposed to the provision of protection, but as a Council we are opposed to the city being involved in the expense.

Moved by Ald. Anderson, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that in regard to the communication from the Railway Board, the City Solicitor be instructed to oppose the involving of the city in any expense that may arise.—Carried.

Baby Show At Summer Fair

Not the least interesting feature of the Summer Fair next week will be the Baby Show to be held under the direction of Mesdames J. C. Davidson and Harry Rush. Three of our most esteemed citizens will act as judges, Messrs. W. G. Morrow, F. D. Kerr and G. C. Wainwright. Particulars as to time, place in armouries, age of babies, etc., will be given to-morrow. Look for the interesting announcement.

BUILDERS HELD UP

Continual Rains Have Had a Deterrent Effect in Building Operations—Work Practically Suspended

LABOURERS AFFECTED

An injunction has been served upon building contractors, and all outside workers, including base ball jugglers, by J. Pluvius. The aforesaid mentioned gentleman registered in Peterborough seven days ago, and when interviewed by the Examiner this morning, announced that his stay in the Electric City would be prolonged indefinitely. To no one sect has his presence here proved more undesirable than to the ball tossers. Speculative comment as to his probable departure is receiving deeper consideration than the prospects of apprehending the Canadian League pennant.

Teamsters find the going heavy, and a continuance of the wet spell will have the cumulative effect of increasing the present depth of the mud strata. Automobiles wind their way through the city streets, while the water churned up by the wheels falls away from the scuppers, where it later pursues its gurgling course into the sewer.

BUILDERS HELD UP

The principal sufferers are the building contractors, who are held up as a consequence of the wet spell. This involves the suspension of all outside building operations, with the enforced idleness of a large body of workingmen. This is a serious matter for the latter, many of whom had barely recovered from the effects of a severe winter.

Among the work affected is the new addition to the Canadian Club, the extension to the police station and the work of the new street railway extension. This is only a partial list of the work which has been suspended on the strength of the injunction taken out by J. P.

All work pertaining to civic improvements has been indefinitely called off, and it will be several days before a resumption of this line of work will take place.

DEATHS.

ROUNTREE.—At 418 Water street, on Tuesday, May 21st, 1912, Thomas Rountree, aged 24 years. Funeral, private, from 418 Water street, on Wednesday, May 22nd.

CHURCHILL IS AWARDED DAMAGES

Special to The Examiner.

London, Eng., May 21.—Hon. Winston Churchill, the first Lord of the Admiralty, has secured damages and a written and published apology from the Editors of Blackwood's Magazine, which recently printed a poem insinuating that Churchill broke his parole when he was a prisoner of the Boers in South Africa. In the witness box he stated he never broke parole because he never asked for it.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Grey and Faded Hair to Its Natural Colour

It is easier to preserve the colour of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have grey hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and colour restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, colour and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, colour and beauty, and makes it grow.

Get a 50 cent bottle from your druggist to-day. He will give your money back if you are not satisfied after a fair trial.

APPOINTMENT MERITED

The Peterborough Police Department is about to suffer a distinct loss in the person of P. C. Kidd, who leaves for Brampton on June 1st, to accept a position as Chief of Police of the Brampton Police Department.

The position, which has been vacant for several weeks, carries with it a remuneration of $850 per year, and the force comprises a night man, a special constable and two Provincial men. The latter are subject to call whenever the occasion requires.

Mr. Kidd received a telephone communication from Brampton yesterday requesting him to meet the officials of the town in person if possible. He acquiesced in their request and met the city fathers of Brampton last evening. His appointment was made upon the unanimous approval of the town council, who expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied as to the appointee's ability to fill the requirements of the position.

P. C. Kidd was appointed to the local force several months ago. Prior to this he had served several months on the regular force of the Fire Department. In both these capacities he has proved himself to be a conscientious, capable man, and in his going from Peterborough, he carries with him the best wishes of a wide circle of friends.

TO REPAIR OPS BRIDGE.

It is stated that a settlement will be arrived at between the municipality of Ops and the G.P.R. in reference to the straightening of Stewart's bridge, north of Lindsay. The railroad and government engineers have met and the former decided that a more suitable structure would be erected.

HOSPITAL REPORTS THREE MORE PATIENTS UNDER THE NEW LAW

Ald. Johnston Wants to Know What It All Means—Dr. Bruce Smith Calls Attention of Council to the Fact That the Law is Now Operative.

REFERS TO INDIGENTS

Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith has written the Council in regard to the new law respecting the municipality's liability for the maintenance of indigents in hospitals. This has already been referred to in the report of the last regular meeting of the Council. Dr. Smith simply drew the attention of the Council to the new law under which the maintenance of indigents, those who are without means, is to be paid by the municipality. Whenever patients coming under this class, are received at an hospital, the authorities of the hospitals are to notify the municipal authorities. They in turn have 14 days during which to investigate the cases in order to find out whether the patients are really indigent.

At the special meeting of the Council on Monday night the names of three more patients who had been received at St. Joseph's Hospital were reported. Richard Monaghan, Jas. Munro of Montreal, and H. J. Chard, Romaine street, were the names of the three last patients received and reported under the new law.

Ald. Johnston—What the Sam Hill does this mean, anyway?

Mayor Bradburn—I don't know.

The communication was referred to the Finance committee, following the decision that was made at the last Council meeting.

By indigents are meant those who are without means of support and without friends or relatives able or willing to support them.

Swept Over Dam

Special to The Examiner.

London, Ont., May 21.—Nine of the finest motor launches in the local fleet, valued at $15,000 were swept over the dam at Springbank and smashed to pieces early to-day when the river rose five feet in a few minutes as the result of terrific downpours of rain throughout the night. The boats were moored to a special dock and the whole structure was carried away in the flood.

ILL-ASSORTED MARRIAGES.

Differences in religion of an Ottawa married couple led to a tragedy, in which the husband shoots the wife and committed suicide. One was a Roman Catholic and one was a Protestant. Their religious differences were not adjusted by matrimony, and we have their culmination in a double death. Apart, altogether from the theological question—but such a thing is unthinkable, for where the parties take their religion seriously, there is sure to be trouble ;and the more serious the religious convictions, the more serious the troub There is incompatibility to begin with; and it rapidly becomes intensified. The only sure way to avoid such troubles is to avoid mixed marriages. This points to the advisability of surrounding marriage with greater safeguards — greater difficulty ;that is, lesser facilities for contracting ill-assorted unions. The experience of the world is that as a rule, though there are exceptions ,such marriages result disastrously. To join together the religiously incompatible, the morally or physically unfit, is to create the conditions of unhappy married life, ill-trained children or ill-balanced children, and all the train of evils that will naturally follow such conditions, domestic squabbles, separations, practically orphaned children, and in extreme cases, as in Ottawa recently, a wretched tragedy, involving the loss of two lives. A great deal of reprobation is visited upon what is known as the Ne Temere Decree. But apart altogether from its religious aspect, it is a blessing in disguise, or an open blessing, if it discourages mixed marriages, which in the main go wrong. In like manner, anything that will prevent the marriage of the unfit in any sense, is to be regarded as a good thing, not only for the happiness of the married persons, but for the good of the state. In the year 1909, Ontario buried every day, nearly twenty babies under the age of one year, or about 7,000 in the course of the year. Among the chief causes of this terrible infant mortality is the incompetence and ignorance of mothers. Allowing crude, unripe and irresponsible children to enter the marriage state and become mothers, when they have not the first idea of the responsibility involved in bringing into the world and rearing a mortal body, not to speak of an immortal soul, is to perpetuate Moloch slaughter of infants. What is generally indicated is greater care in the supervision of marriage, to insure that only the duly qualified shall contract marriage. We require of a civil servant—of a young man entering the post office service to lick stamps—a standard of qualifications—there must be a mental standard of qualification, and there must be a medical examination to insure sound physical condition. Yet the state throws open wide the gate of matrimony to the fool, the drunkard, the debased, the decrepit. The mentally and moral imbecile can find parsons to help them enter into the marriage state and reproduce their kind, to the detriment of society and the deterioration of the race. We don't take marriage seriously enough; we make courtship and love-making the preliminary canter to the entry for the great race for the stakes of life—a matter of jest and fun-making, instead of regarding it as the most solemn and serious matter that can engage the attention of men and women. As individuals, and as a state, is it not reasonable to pay greater attention to marriage, to surround it with safeguards to insure the union of the fit and not the unqualified? Instead of making marriage easy we should make it difficult; except insofar as the subjects are physically, mentally, morally and socially equipped for undertaking its responsibilities. If we did something like this we should have fewer unhappy and disastrous marriages, ending in tragedy, fewer children doomed to early death through incompetent and unqualified motherhood, ignorance of hygiene, and the fundamental laws of health and life.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto News severely criticises that city's management of the hydro-electric enterprise and predicts "a costly and unsatisfactory failure." Is the political mismanagement which spoiled public ownership in Manitoba to be repeated in Toronto?

The first trip of Hon. Frank Cochrane over the completed section of the National Transcontinental Railway in Quebec and New Brunswick has resulted in declarations by the party of expressions of gratification at the manner in which the road has been constructed. It is beginning to look (says the Ottawa Free Press) as if the best vindication of the Laurier railway policy will come from the men who criticised and misrepresented it.

Even the memebrs of the Dominion government cannot agree upon a matter of policy. Hon. Robt. Rogers as a sop to the Saskatchewan electors about to vote in a general election, announced that the government intended to lower the tariff by order-in-council. Now, his colleague, Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, declares that the government has no such intention ;the matter had not even been discussed. Hon. Bob. will have to think out another roorback.

WHY BOURASSA WENT AWAY.

It seems evident enough now why Mr. Henri Bourassa "folded his tent like the Arab and as silently stole away" after the late Dominion election. He had two reasons: disgust and disappointment at the attitude taken in the House of Commons by the three Nationalists for whom he obtained portfolios, and the condition that nothing he could do would weaken the position of Sir Lomer Gouin in the Quebec election.

In point of tact he was badly treated by Mr. Monk, Mr. Nantel and Mr. Pelletier. He was mainly instrumental, by his Nationalist agitation, in securing their election and almost solely instrumental in securing for them their Cabinet positions. This did not hinder them from taking up more than once an attitude of which he could not approve, and this was more than he could be fairly asked to endure. His fund of endurance is easily exhausted.

The Gouin victory he could not prevent, but he could, by going away, show the others that they cannot get along without him. Now that the expected has happened he will probably soon come back to resume his fight against Canada making any contribution to the British navy. He is welcome to come, for there will be a fleet in spite of him.—Guelph Mercury.

THE CALL OF THE WEST.

It would be well worth while for Hon. A. G. MacKay to arrange with a clipping bureau to furnish him with all the editorial references to himself which are appearing in the Ontario newspapers, Liberal and Conservative, in connection with his removal to take up the practice of law in Edmonton.

It falls to the lot of few men actively engaged in politics to have his abilities so highly rated during his own lifetime by the press of his own and the opposing party as is the present experience of Hon. A. G. MacKay. As a rule the reputation of a Liberal is not established with his adversaries until in the days of his grandchildren. It is to be hoped that the frank way in which the abilities of Mr. MacKay are conceded by newspapers which have been opposed to him politically in Ontario may be taken as a sign of the times, and that we shall hear politics discussed, as the country grows older, without animosity towards individuals.

Mr. MacKay goes West vouched for by the press of Ontario, both Liberal and Conservative, as one of the ablest men in the public life of Ontario, and it is safe to predict that noth in law and politics he will fill a large place in the life of the West.

More men of mark will go West. For some years young fellows who have gone West to seek a footing, but of late the field has invited men who have enjoyed secure positions in the old Provinces—lawyers, doctors, engineers, professors, preachers, editors. Hon. A. G. MacKay is one, Mr. A. H. Clarke, M.P., is another. We believe that strong inducements had recently been offered the late Judge Mabee to enter law practice in Calgary. The new country with its tremendous expanding business, with its widening areas of settlement, and its various institutions taking form, will inevitably call for men in the foremost rank and present them with opportunities scarcely to be found elsewhere. It is, as we say, inevitable, not only in the professions, but in business, and of late a great many aggressive young business men have left Toronto to scatter between Winnipeg and the Pacific.—Toronto Star.

NATIONALISM PETERS OUT.

The Quebec election as effaced the Nationalist party, for the time being at least. It was more an agitation than a party, a bubble blown up by the egoism and eloquence of Mr. Bourassa, an exhalation of one man's breath. It had no body or substance; it was merely a phantom conjured up out of the excitement which Mr. Bourassa manufactured over the naval issue. However, it served the immediate object of its creator, and his English fellow-conspirators. It furnished Mr. Borden with 27 Quebec followers, in place of 12 in the last Parliament. Without this reinforcement the present Government would not have a comfortable working majority.

It is noteworthy that of the 15 constituencies gained by the Conservative-Nationalist combination in September, 12 reverted to the Liberal ranks in the provincial election, including Mr. Bourassa's own riding. Another significant feature was the Liberal sweep of the English constituencies, except in the strongly-Conservative sections of Montreal. The Eastern Townships went unanimously for Gouin. Both French and English combined in repudiating Nationalism.

The Nationalist movement was not a movement at all, but a state of mind induced by the inflammatory speeches of Bourassa, Lavergne and company. Many of the simple habitants were led to believe that Laurier's naval law would render their sons liable to compulsory service on warships in distant seas. They have recovered from their fright; tney see that they were deceived, and, thanks to Laurier, the idea of Canada's duty to the British Empire in the matter of naval defence, finds increasing acceptance among them. The parliamentary leaders of the Nationalist party, Messrs. Monk, Nantel and Pelletier, "chained, bolted and padlocked" to their portfolios, have also personal motives for quieting the agitation which they fomented for their own purposes. Of course, Bourassa, who is still popular, may again raise a following if he can find an issue with which to play upon French-Canadian fears, or sentiment, or prejudice, but the naval issue will serve him no longer. Nationalism is a plant that can thrive only in an atmosphere of racial or religious excitement, and it is not possible even for Bourassa to keep his countrymen's nerves always on edge.—London Advertiser.

At Home Was A Success

The young ladies of theSodality in connection with St. Peter's T. A. S. spent a very pleasant evening in the rooms of the T. A. S. last evening. Various games were indulged in, the winners of the euchre contest being Miss M. O'Hearn and Miss Heenan. The prizes were a parasol and a china fern pot respectively. The musical element was supplied by Misses Sullivan, Giroux, O'Brien, Leahy, Tanguey, and Hurley.

Incompatibility Of Mr. Borden's Policy With Imperial Policy In Naval Matters

The speech made by Mr. Churchill the other day, in which he outlined his idea of how the naval dispositions of the British Empire should be divided, does not make it look as though Mr. Borden would have a very easy task when he gets to London to talk over the subject with the British ministers. Mr. Churchill's plan looks good enough, in a broad way. He finds that there has been an increasing necessity to mass the striking powers of Great Britain's navy in certain restricted areas in or near home waters. He assumes that the necessity will continue, or even increase, and that therefore, there is no prospect of the navy resuming the task so long discharged of keeping ships in all parts of the world. The outlying parts of the Empire, therefore, he concludes, must provide such naval equipment as is called for by their own sea problems, one of which is the safe carriage of commodities across the ocean to Great Britain.

It has been argued by lawyers that outside the three-mile limit, Canadian ships would have no status of their own ;Mr. Churchill would be for giving, or obtaining for, such ships, whatever guarantees would be needed to establish the adequacy of control by the governments owning them, but only in time of peace. In time of war he assumes the automatic passing of the colonial fleets under the direction of the British Admiralty. He assumes, and doubtless rightly, that participation would be eager. But, although he must know what Mr. Borden's difficulty is, he has not shown that there is any way out of it. His speech would have been easily applicable to the conditions of the Laurier navy act, but it is not at all applicable to the situation of Mr. Borden, because it leaves out of account the whole subject of the relation between Great Britain and Canada in regard to the making of war or the preservation of peace.

The key to Mr. Borden's speeches, policy and conduct, subsequent to the introduction of the navy act, is in the statement, made in his speech of November 16, 1910: "If Canada and the other Dominions of the Empire are to take their part as nations of this Empire in the defence of the Empire as a whole, shall it be that we, contributing to that defence of the whole Empire, shall have absolutely, as citizens of this country, no voice whatever in the councils of the Empire touching the issues of peace or war throughout the Empire: I do not think that such would be a tolerable condition. I do not believe the people of Canada would for one moment submit to such a condition." And, so thinking, Mr. Borden is pledged not to enter upon any permanent policy of naval development until the objection precedent has been removed. Will it be removed?

The answer, that must stand until changed, was given last summer, when Sir Joseph Ward made just such a proposal at the Conference in London. Mr. Asquith, Prime Minister of Great Britain, replied that in regard to "the conduct of foreign policy, the declaration and maintenance of peace, or the declaration of war," the authority of the government of the United Kingdom must not be impaired; "That authority cannot be shared," and to share it would "be absolutely fatal to our present system of responsible government."

If the British Government hold to the view that their authority cannot be shared, and Mr. Borden holds to his view that it must be shared with Canada as a preliminary to our doing anything, what is going to be the outcome of next month's conference?—Montreal Herald.

THE LABOUR PROBLEM

An Effort to Supply the Demand Has a Tendency to Create a Feeling of Misplaced Op Among the Farmers

REASON FOR SCARCITY

A special train from the east unloaded a number of immigrants in the city yesterday. Their numbers were swelled by the arrival of a few more this morning, and by three o'clock this afternoon the entire party had been placed in rural homes by Mr. Howson, local immigration agent. Since January, several hundred newcomers have found refuge in Peterborough county. The percentage of failures reported so far, is exceedingly small.

During the past week the number of applications for farm help have shown a slight falling off, which indicates that the demand is filling up. Several farmers have been heard to remark that another month will see the farm labour market overstocked. This statement is not substantiated by facts.

Demand Greater Than Ever.

The harvest season this year will see a larger demand for help than ever. The farmers are experiencing a dull period just at present, and that reason alone has a pronounced effect on the help problem. Farmers usually are extremists in the matter of engaging help. They will either wait until a hired man becomes imperative, or are content to tackle the ever-increasing work single handed.

What serves to accentuate the labour problem is the large influx to the west, particularly of new arrivals. Thousands of them are rushed through the vast immigration funnel at Montreal, weekly, and with the exception of a brief stop in Toronto, are hustled through to the western provinces whose cavernous mouth, is ever open to receive them.

An Instance.

Under the heading "Emigration de Luxe," the London Standard tells of a scheme now being arranged by a party of retired army officers, with Colonel H. G. Morgan, C.B., D.S.O., at the head of it, by which 13,000 acres on Nicola lake, B.C., are to be settled entirely on a co-operative basis by emigrants drawn from retired officers of the army, navy and civil service. At present they are calling for volunteers to do the first, and, naturally, roughest work of the settlement, and the rewards they offer these volunteers, apart from the free experience they will gain, are permanent positions on the administration staff of the estate when it is in full working order.

Eventually, when the estate is cut up into ten-acres fruit farms, houses built and furnished, clubhouse opened, and a golf course, a race course, and a polo ground laid out, emigrants will be able to take up a ready-made farm, pay for it by convenient annual installments, and work it under skilled and friendly advice. "But, greatest advantage of all," says the Standard, "particularly for the wives and daughters of the emigrants, will be the fact that they will become members of a select little overseas colony offering all the social advantages of at least an English garrison town Colonel Morgan told an interviewer that great prospects of enormous fortunes are not held out to emigrants.

"If a man has, say, a pension of £200 a year he will be able to augment it at least by another £200 a year and lead a comfortable gentleman's life. The qualifications demanded is service with the commissioned ranks of the army or navy or civil service, and even if he fall short of emigrants of this standing we insist upon a public school training."

Made A Garrison Finish But Lost By One Run

Peterboro' Team Beaten in St. Thomas Yesterday---Outhit the League Leaders, Getting a Triple, Three Doubles and Eight Singles But the Jinx is Still Sticking Around

St. Thomas, May 20.—St. Thomas won a free-hitting contest against Peterboro' to-day by six to five. Stewart's men were outhit, but brilliant fielding, especially in the last innings, when Peterboro' made a great finish, saved them. Each team used two pitchers. Turner, who started for the Saints, could not locate the plate, and Clement, who just arrived at noon from Quincy, Ill., held the visitors safe till the closing round. Baver for Peterboro' was derricked in the second in favor of Derr, who did well. Forgue gave a great exhibition of base-running and Kopp's catch in left field in the ninth was a corker. Umpire Johnson was roasted by the crowd on many of his decisions. The score:—

Canadian League Season Opens Here To-morrow League Leaders Coming

St. Thomas and Peterborough will open the local baseball season to-morrow, when they clash at Riverside Park in the first home Canadian League game. The greatest possible interest is being taken in to-morrow's event by the fans, despite the fact that the White Caps have lost four games on the road, and there will be a monster crowd out to see the game and incidentally the parade and other opening ceremonies. The game is billed for 3.45 o'clock, but the parade will be marshalled at the Y.M.C.A. at 2.30 o'clock, so as to give the teams plenty of time to practice before the hour to start the game arrives.

The procession will be made up as follows:

57th Regimental Band.
Canadian League officials.
Civic officials.
Officers of the St. Thomas Club.
The St. Thomas players.
Officers of the Peterborough Club.
The Peterborough players.
The Automobile Association.

The route will be down George St. to Hunter, over to Water, down to Charlotte St. and thence to Riverside Park via George and Hunter Sts.

At Riverside Park the remainder of the opening ceremonies will take place. Some changes have had to be made in the original programme. His Worship Mayor Bradburn will be out of the city and the task of pitching the first ball has been entrusted to Ald. Anderson, chairman of the Finance committee. Ald. Buller will catch and President Denham will endeavour to show his White Caps how they should slam the ball to all corners of the field. Vice-President E. G. Patterson will act as umpire.

Although the abnormally heavy rain has rendered work on the grounds almost impossible, the diamond will be in pretty fair shape for the opening although not nearly as fast as it will be later on. The downpour has interfered with the improvements and the ground will be heavy for a few days, although it should not prevent good ball being played. The same conditions have been met all over the circuit so far and it is hoped that the League will be favoured with a spell of warm, dry weather. It will benefit both grounds and players.

White Cap Notes

You remember what General Sherman said about war.

Another one run defeat. Where is the jinx?

And we had twelve hits, too. What do you know about that?

Thirty-seven hits in four games and yet not a win. Surely that hard luck can't hold on much longer.

St. Thomas are leaders of the League as the result of beating Peterborough yesterday. To-day's game may alter the position, however.

Brantford and Ottawa played a tie game yesterday, Donovan, who finished Saturday's game against the Petes, only allowing the Senators three hits. The other games scheduled yesterday were off on account of rain.

And it's damp in the cellar these days, too.

Well, they'll be home to-morrow. Some loyal rooting from leather-lunged local fans will make a difference.

The White Caps have eight games in a row at home, starting on Wednesday. By the time that series is completed, they should be well up the ladder.

We started well at St. Thomas, too, with two runs in the first innings, but the Saints came back with five in the second.

Lindsay Post: The Editor of the Post has received an invitation from the Peterborough Canadian League Baseball Club, to attend a baseball game in that city between Guelph and Peterborough on May 24th. Peterborough fans deserve a great deal of credit for the enterprise displayed in jumping into the Canadian League and local lovers of this popular game will watch their career with interest.

The League's opening game in Peterborough on Wednesday is with St. Thomas. The Calamity City has got together a pretty classy aggregation of ball tossers, so the opening game will be a good one. Manager Templin of the Electric City outfit has a team that will make a big hit for the championship, and here is hoping that they may figure as winners.

On Victoria Day a double header will be the feature at Peterborough and a big contingent from Lindsay will take in the games. Guelph team is scheduled to play the White Caps at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. on Riverside Park. This will be a battle royal and those from Lindsay who take in the games will see gilt-edged ball played.

By performances, Peterborough looks to be one of the strongest teams in the Canadian league. It kept Brantford busy Saturday beating the Quakes by 7-6.—Galt Reformer.

The Organ Recital At St. Paul's

It is not to be wondered that Mr. John Allan, the well-known organist, possesses the distinction of having played before the late King Edward VII. and other members of the Royal family, for he carries the feelings of his hearers whither he will. His playing is not only pleasing, but it sends a thrill through an audience which only the playing of an artiste of the first water can. And he possesses a style entirely his own. Last evening he delighted a large audience in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, where a recital, of which he was the principal artiste, was held. The programme contained many classical and, it is needless to say, pleasing works. Perhaps the most attractive were "Romance," from Saint-Saens', "Samson and Delilah," and "Star of Eve," from Richard Wagner's "Tannhauser". In the former the aria, played on the flute stop, with that of the vox humana worked in beautiful harmony with the series of chords which accompanied it, while the latter is, perhaps, too well known to be remarked upon. "Fantasia Pastorale" by Lefebure-Wely, is a composition of considerable magnitude both in latitude and grandeur. Here the sonorous chords give place to tumultuous crashes, ultimately dying away in the silvery ripple of a lighter melody, and each new movement, acting as a diversion from the last charms and fascinates. Lemaigre's "Capriccio," a work of a lighter nature, is also an attraction. Other pieces interpreted by Mr. Allan were the overture to Handel's "Occasional Oratorio" Morandi's "Offertorio in E Miner" and a grand Scotch selection containing a serious of Scottish favourite melodies arranged by the artiste.

Coming originally from Aberdeen five years ago, Mr. Allan occupied the position of organist at Knox Church, St. Thomas, for several years About a year ago he was called to Crescent Street Church, Montreal.

Miss Pearl Brock, contralto, and Miss Mary Chalmers, soprano, neither of whom need introduction to Peterborough citizens, assisted ably in the programme. The former sang in her usual fine style the sacred song "Save Me O God," by Randegger and the latter delighted her hearers by her interpretation of Ware's "The Cross". These vocalists were also heard to great advantage in the well known duet by Goetz, entitled "Calm as the Night".

Miss Lauro Logan rendered a good account of herself as a violinist. Her contribution was one of Joachim Raff's beautiful compositions, namely "Cavatina". She performed with great precision and expression and her efforts were greatly appreciated.

GOOD FOR THE P. R. R.

Rainy Days Make Business Good on Street Cars.

"Everybody may not be tickled to death with this rainy weather," said a Street Railway conductor this morning, "but it surely is a harvest for us. All day yesterday we carried full houses, and this morning we came back strong with the cars full again. We had the rainy day crowd. They are the people who ride only when the weather makes it miserable outdoors even for a dog. Then, they wait on the wrong side of the crossing through want of experience, and they probably forget that we have pay-as-you-enter cars on the George street line. The wet weather surely does make good business for us."

DOES INSURANCE INSURE?

To insure means to make sure and secure. Insurance that does not make indemnity certain is not insurance. GRAND OPERA HOUSE
PETERBOROUGH

May 24 and 25, Matinee Each Day at 2:30

Sarah Bernhardt has consented at last, after years of obdurate refusal, to become a film. "I am a film," she writes, in a recent letter. "I am immortal. I rely on the film for my morality."

This explains, briefly, why theatregoers here will have an opportunity in a few days of seeing Bernhardt once more. Through the medium of moving pictures of a type never before achieved, the great actress and her remarkable company will appear in "Camille," and all the great scenes of that powerful drama will be silently presented and silently make its appeal through the genius of Bernhardt.

The stage at the Grand Opera House, where these pictures will be shown on the afternoon and evening of May 24 and 25 with matinees on both days, will be the scene of a notable development in the evolution of the cinematograph, as well as in that of the modern stage itself. These pictures reveal the art of Bernhardt perfectly, for there is not a trace of flickering. "They are without mechanical fault," writes the critic of the Baltiore "Sun"; there is not the slightest suggestion of flicker."

Moreover, owing to the absolute steadiness and the brilliance of the pictures thrown on a specially prepared screen with an aluminum facing, the full significance of every action, every gesture, is conveyed; there is atosphere, passion, virility, extraordinary illusion in them. Audiences in Europe and in Londo have sat ad watched them and been stirred to remarkable demonstrations of enthusiasm. Men and women of authority in the dramatic world have conceded that they constitute a new and effective method of establishing a permanent record of an artist's work.

With the scenes of Bernhard as "Camille" will be shown others of Mme. Rejane, France's greatest comedienne, as "Mme. Sans-Gene." The latter, like Bernhardt, had a great antipathy to moving pictures, for years, but her scruples also have been overcome, and the result has been a film record of Sardou's comedy which shows Rejane at her best.

The two famous actresses displayed all the excitement of school-girls, on the occasion of the first private presentation of the new films. They could hardly contain themselves. And when they finally saw the picture thrown on the screen, and, for the first time in their respective careers, saw themselves acting roles which they have made world-famous, they were almost hysterical in their enthusiasm.

Edmond Rostand, the great poet and dramatist, told Bernhardt that she had ennobled the film. The verdict of the French and London critics is that the "Camille" pictures are unique. For this Canadian tour every care has been taken to ensure the same perfection of presentation as characterized those in Paris and London. The pictures give a faithful reproduction, of a vividness and an atospheric character wholly surprising, of the remarkable art of two of the greatest stage figures of modern times.

SPRINKLING SYSTEM FOR MATTHEWS, LAING CO. FACTORY

Request to Council For Permission to Install It—Peterboro, Girl in Redemptive Home—City Asked to Pay

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID

The Matthews, Laing Co. have prepared for the installation of a sprinkling system in their packing house on George street and will require the laying of an 8 inch pipe along the west side of the building, a distance of 175 feet. They submitted their plans to the Council at the special meeting on Monday night and asked permission to instal the system.

Mayor Bradburn said he had asked the City Engineer to report on the proposal, and he had found everything satisfactory.

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the request be granted.—Carried.

Too Many Absent.

Mayor Bradburn said it was the intention to deal with the by-law regarding the construction of sidewalks, but it required a two-thirds vote of the Council, and there were not enough members of the Council present.

Engineer Hay presented a report on the sewers that are proposed to be laid this year, but the Board of Works have to determine what streets are to be laid with sewers, and the report was referred to the Board.

A communication was received from Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, Secretary of the Board of Trade, conveying the thanks of the Board to the Council for the use of the Council chamber for meetings.

Girl in Redemptive Home.

A communication was received from Rev. J. G. Shearer, regarding a former Peterborough girl who has been receiving care at the Redemptive Home in Toronto. Because she came from an outside town, the municipality of Toronto will not pay for her maintenance, and Dr. Shearer asked that Peterborough pay the expense, which is $4.00 a week. The matter was referred to the Finance committee. The young woman was sent to the Redemptive Home for Girls through the kindness of the Moral Reform Association.

Rev. M. J. O'Brien wrote the Council that it was intended to improve the west side of the property of the Sacred Heart Church by building a cement curb outside the sidewalk and laying a water table. Dr. O'Brien asked for the City Engineer's levels. The letter was referred to the Board of Works with power to act.

F. W. Bates, F. McCracken and others requested that lights be extended along Stewart and Smith streets, north of Edinburgh street.—Fire, Water and Light committee.

NEWS FROM MOULDERS

Secretary Says Settlement Reached With Two Firms

Mr. Hugh Robertson, of the Moulders' Union, stated to the Examiner that a settlement had been affected with the G. Walter Greene Company. The request of the men, he said, has been granted, and they are given a nine hour day at the former rate of wages. mr. Robertson stated that Adam Hall, Ltd., had also met the demands of the men. There are 19 moulders employed at the former shop and 17 at the Adam Hall Ltd.

STREET CAR HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Ald. Morgan Relates an Incident and Asks a Question

Ald. Morgan had a question for Ald. Gordon at Monday night's council meeting, but the Alderman from the centre ward was not present to answer it.

Recently a whistling by-law was passed forbidding the wholesale whistling of engines in the city's limit, and Ald. Gordon gave considerable support to it.

Ald. Morgan said that a few days ago a street car, in crossing the G. T. R. tracks, near Auburn, had come to a stop, as usual, on the south side. The Conductor left the car, advanced to the railroad and then gave the signal to come forward. Just then a G.T.R. engine rushed around the curve going toward Auburn. The distance from the street car was diminishing rapidly and the street car motorman had started his car. The conductor then waved him to stop it. The car approached the railway until it was within but a few feet before it was stopped and just then the engine passed along in front of it, with only a few feet to spare from the front of the car.

"Now, what I want to know," Ald. Morgan said, "is what would have been the city's position if the engine had collided with the street car, with that by-law in force."

In reply to this, it might be stated that the intention of the by-law was not to prohibit a train's whistling when approaching a dangerous crossing. City Solicitor Hall pointed out that the city could not be held liable for accidents. The by-law was directed at what was termed the practice of incessant whistling while passing through the city that had been so frequently complained of.

Torpid Liver In The Spring

In the spring both the liver and kidneys are overworked in an effort to remove the poisonous impurities which accumulate in the system during the winter and in overcoming the trying effect of the changing temperature.

Once the liver gets sluggish and torpid, there are all sorts of troubles with the digestive system. Sour stomach, flatulency, wind on the stomach, acute indigestion, irregularity of the bowels and bilious headache are among the symptoms.

The liver must have assistance.

The process of restoration will be hastened if the Kidneys are also invigorated and strengthened, for on these two organs depends entirely the purification of the blood. Both these filtering organs are acted on directly and promptly by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For this reason there is no treatment which will more quickly rid the blood of poisonous waste matter than this great prescription of Dr. Chase. Put it to the test this spring and escape the tired, languid feelings consequent on a poisoned system.

The members of Sherwood Forest Camp No. 50 W.O.W. are requested to attend a special meeting in their new Hall on Wednesday Evening, at 8 p.m. Very important business.

COMPUTATIONS OF A TAILOR

Coat Has 32,937 Stitches—Makes Count to Satisfy Personal Curiosity

While the season was still slack in the tailoring business Herman Axene, a tailor in the Waldheim Building, took time to count the stitches in the last coat he made. He found 32,937—23,800 machine stitches.

The coat the count was made on was a four-button sack, thirty-two inches long and all hand-stitched. A frock or evening coat of a double stitched street garment of course, would require many more stitches. Here is the classification of the stitches:—

	Machine stitches.	Hand stitches.
Five pockets	6,297	428
All seams ,except sleeves	5,978	—
Inside work lapels, edge tape, etc.	—	2,940
Basting, trying on, etc.	—	2,151
Making sleeves	3,384	616
Collar and coat stitching	6,365	1,695
Putting in sleeves	756	706
Buttonholes and buttons	—	589
Miscellaneous	1,019	622
Total	23,800	9,137

"I learned the tailoring trade as a boy in Sweden," Mr. Axene said, "and I have worked at it ever since. I was taught not to spare stitches. And I have often wondered, as I sat cross legged and made my needle fly, how many times I had to push it through the cloth before a coat would be finished. I never had heard of a count being made and I kept thinking about it until I decided to count them myself.

"I kept a little tablet with me at my work and every time I counted a hundred strokes of the needle I made a mark. On my machine, I found four and a half stitches were taken at every stroke of the pedal. That was forty-five stitches to ten strokes, and so I put down a mark every tenth stroke.

"And those are the totals I found when I added all those marks up — 23,800 on the machine and 9,137 by hand. And for taking all those stitches a coatmaker gets an average of $10 here in America."

Chafed and Aching Feet

How far can you walk without suffering in one way or another from discomfort to your feet?

Modern footwear is a prison house and the result is chafed, scalded, inflamed feet.

You can get a world of comfort by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment when your feet give you trouble. This treatment is so delightfully soothing and healing that it helps you as soon as applied.

Unlike insanitary powders which clog the pores, Dr. Chase's Ointment makes the skin soft and smooth and prevents corns and bunions.

When the feet are chafed, scalded, itching and tired it takes out the stinging and burning and its benefits are both quick and lasting.

Supports Canon Davidson's Idea

(From the Galt Reformer.)

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Club of Peterborough, Rev. Canon Davidson made a plea for the celebration of Dominion Day. "Our national holiday is," he said, "celebrated in a half-hearted manner. The young manhood of our country is not thrown into the celebration of that day. As on May 24th, the Empire came before us, so on the 1st of July Canada should be brought before every one of her sons and daughters and her mission, her ideals and what she stands for should be brought out before them."

Canon Davidson is certainly right. The half-hearted observance of July 1st is a rebuke to the people of Canada; it is an evidence of a weak national vitality. Time was when July 1st was better observed than it is today; in fact, in the rural sections it is more loyally observed than in the centres of population.

Cannot something be done to remedy matters? July 1st ought to be the great day of the year in every municipality; Canadians ought to insist upon its being made so. What with our multiplied cadet corps, volunteer organizations, etc., it ought to be easier to make it more nationally joyful than ever in the past.

And Canada needs all the aids to an aroused pride in the country that come from the observance of such days as Dominion Day. Let us be up and doing; there is enough and to spare in the history of this country to be proud and celebrate over.

Should you be suffering no wfrom any stomach disorder you can get relief within five minutes.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no Indigestion or Sleepless nights or Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and, besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh. Pape's Diapepsin can be obtained from your druggist, and contains more than sufficient to thoroughly cure the worst case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. There is nothing better for Gas on the Stomach or sour odours from the stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

You couldn't keep a handier or more useful article in the house.

OBITUARY

THOMAS ROUNTREE.

In the passing of Mr. Thomas Rountree, at the age of 94 years, Peterborough loses its oldest citizens, both in the matter of years and continuous residence. The late Mr. Rountree was born in Clouthill, county Cavan, Ireland, in 1818, and came to Peterborough eighty-four years ago, at the age of ten years, and has resided here highly respected and esteemed till the time of his death. It is about 65 years since he entered into business in Peterborough, though he retired some twenty years ago. Mr. Rountree was well and favourably known to, especially the remainder of the older residents. He did not take a very active part in public matters, though he was a member of the town council for two or three terms, entering the council the same year that the late C. D. McDonald was appointed town clerk. In politics, the late Mr. Rountree was a Conservative and took an active interest in political matters in his years of health and strength. In religion he was an Anglican, a member of the congregation of St. John's. He leaves behind only one son, Mr. Arthur Rountree, 418 Water street. His death removes a veritable landmark, a president who has lived respected and esteemed in Peterborough nearly the span of two generations, fourteen years beyond the Royal Psalmist's limit of human life. The funeral (private) takes place May 22nd.

QUALITY OR QUANTITY

Which Do You Prefer?—Newbro's Herpicide Represents Quality.

Did you ever have a dealer offer you a large bottle of something and tell you it was a better remedy for the hair than Newbro's Herpicide and cheaper because in a larger bottle?

What? Certainly, we knew you had. Many other people have, too.

What would you say to that same dealer were he to tell you a silver dollar was worth more than a five-dollar gold piece because it is larger.

Such an attempt being a reflection upon your good sense you would probably say some rather pointed things to him. You would be justified. Your self-respect would demand it.

Well, there are just as many good reasons for the difference in size between those bottles as there are for the difference in size between the silver dollar and the five dollar gold piece.

The truth is that the larger bottle isn't half large enough.

There is more virtue in a half pint of Newbro's Herpicide than in a gallon of some of the so-called hair preparations.

There is a dollar's worth of results in the bottle of Herpicide, but do you know what is in the other?

No? Then why buy it? Your judgment, intelligence and the experience of your friends, if not your own, cry out against it.

You know when you go into that store that Herpicide is what you need and want.

You KNOW that Herpicide is the original scalp prophylactic.

You KNOW that Herpicide kills the dandruff germ.

You KNOW that Herpicide stops falling hair.

You KNOW that Herpicide makes the hair light, fluffy and beautiful.

You know these things in the same way you know that the five dollar gold piece, notwithstanding its size, is more valuable than the silver dollar.

The Record

TORONTO, MAY 21.—The month of May promises to hold the record for the greatest amount of rainfall in many years. The average rainfall for May, based upon the records of past years, is 2.85 inches. So far this month rain to the depth of 4.4 inches has fallen, and since Sunday evening, when the present steady downpour commenced, as much as 2.07 inches of rain has fallen; nor can the weather man promise any immediate cessation of the deluge. He reports that rains are general over the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and that at least two days more of unsettled weather are in sight. These next two days may be varied by occasional gleams of sunshine, but rain will be the rule and sunshine the exception.

RICHESON'S BODY CLAIMED

Boston, Mass., May 21.—The body of Clarence Richeson, who was electrocuted at midnight, was claimed this morning by his brother, and will be delivered as soon as the necessary legal formalities are completed for burial in the Virginia birthplace of Richeson. Those who witnessed Richeson's last hours say he went to his death sincerely repentant and hopeful of the mercy of God.

It surprised many people that Richeson did not take one of his fits of hysterical delirium as the death hour approached. They expected him to die like a coward. Instead of that, he was praying and singing softly when the prison warden called him to execution. He walked the death corridors more steadily than most of his escort. Richeson's last words were "For Jesus sake I am ready to live or die." This was in answer to the Catechism being given him by Rev. Dr. Johnson. Then a current of nineteen hundred volts passed through his frame for fifteen seconds, and the surgeons pronounced him dead. Rev. Herbert Stibbins, prison chaplain, who has officiated on many such grim occasions, said: "It was surely a revelation of God's power. Richeson died a far better man than he has ever lived."

Fought To the Death.

Neuss, Germany, May 22.—Two burglars were detected Monday night and dashed to their bicycles, which had been left outside the house. Confronted by a policeman, they shot him dead. People pursued them, firing as they fled. One burglar was wounded by a shot, and his comrade deliberately killed him to prevent his capture and possible betrayal. He then continued the battle against some hundreds of armed police and countrymen until he was shot dead.

Fort William, May 22.—A report has reached the city that the eastbound stock train and the westbound freight on the C.P.R., had a head-on collision 12 miles west of White River, at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Ed. Smith, an engineer of Schreiber, had his collarbone broken and was badly shaken up and two firemen were injured. Both engines were badly broken up and some of the stock killed, the cars being thrown off the track.

Amateur Aviator Killed.

Xenia, Ohio, May 22.—Fred. J. Southard, aged 40, of Minneapolis, an amateur aviator, fell 100 feet at the Wright aviation field early yesterday and was killed. Southard had just bought the aeroplane. He obtained the keys to the hangar, after he had been refused permission to take the aeroplane out without further experience. He fell six minutes after he had ascended.

ROOSEVELT TAKES OHIO

Defeats the President in His Home State—How a Crushing One

HAS THREE VOTES TO TWO

Columbus, Ohio, May 22.—On the face of the early returns in Ohio's first Presidential preference primary yesterday, Col. Roosevelt and the Republican ticket by three to two over President Taft.

Apparently Governor Harmon has carried 12 out of the 21 districts, giving him 24 of the 42 delegates to the national convention. If this proves true, it also will give him the six delegates-at-large from the state. In the call of the Democratic convention it was stipulated that the winner of the primary should name the delegates-at-large.

Only on the Democratic ticket does the count represent a direct Presidential preference vote. On the Republican, the vote completed is the total number of ballots cast in precincts counted for delegates to the national convention pledged to Col. Roosevelt or President Taft. It was impossible from the early returns to gather an indication of the number of delegates either President Taft or Col. Roosevelt has gained.

Out of 21 Congressional districts in the state, totals computed at a time when fewer than half the precincts were counted, indicated that Roosevelt will have 20 of the 42 district delegates, and that Taft will have 14, while the returns are so incomplete that eight delegates at present cannot be counted by either side.

President Taft appears to have carried Cincinnati by a large margin, and also Toledo and Dayton, among the larger cities. This was more than offset by the vote given Col. Roosevelt in Cleveland, Columbus and other cities. The Roosevelt lead in the north end of the state, it seemed, would give the former President an advantage which Mr. Taft could not overcome by his vote in the south end of the state, including Cincinnati, his home and the rural districts.

Governor Wilson, like Col. Roosevelt, was given his biggest vote in the city of Cleveland and the surrounding counties. Governor Harmon polled a heavy vote in Columbus, the capital, and also in his home city, Cincinnati.

Harmon's campaign managers, despite the early figures, declared that their candidate had carried the state through the heavy vote they expected had been given him in the country districts. Governor Wilson's chief strength, they say, had been in Cleveland, where Mayor Newton D. Baker had waged a strong fight against Harmon. Mayor Baker, however, in a statement issued by him at Cleveland, insisted that Governor Wilson had carried Ohio by a vote of 2 to 1.

Negro Revolt in Cuba.

Havana, Cuba, May 22.—Gen. Estenos, one of the Liberal leaders, and Gen. Ivonet are directing the movements of negro insurgents in the Province of Oriente, where the situation has become serious.

The Government disclaims any further knowledge regarding the uprising, but the opinion is spreading that conditions are rapidly becoming alarming.

Additional troops are in readiness to take the field. The newspapers complain that the Government is holding up all press despatches from the disturbed districts.

Their Knees Are Sunburned.

Dallas, Texas, May 22.—The necessity for absolute truthfulness in advertising was the keynote of yesterday's discussions in the eighth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

Baltimore's delegation Monday night put on a moving picture show in one of the down town streets, exhibiting that city's attractions.

The Toronto kilties, unaccustomed to the power of a southern sun, carelessly left their bare knees cooked up during the long automobile rides on Monday. To-day they are wishing for longer kilts.

March of C. T. P. to Tidewater.

Woonsocket, R.I., May 22.—Ascending a platform surrounded by pondering railroad building machinery and about 500 people, Governor A. J. Pothier, himself a native of Canada, pulled the lever of a giant steam shovel on a farm near here yesterday and the actual work of constructing the Southern New England Railway, which will bring the Grand Trunk System from Palmer, Mass., to tidewater in Providence, was begun.

It is the expectation of the company to have trains running over the new railroad next December

Motor Boats Wrecked.

London, Ont., May 22.—The sudden rise of the water in the Thames river, due to the heavy rains Monday and yesterday, played havoc with motors which were docked at the forks of the Thames. Eight valuable boats were swept away down the river three miles and then went over the dam at Springbank Park. Six were practically smashed to pieces.

Burglars Wrecked Ten Safe.

Merrick, N.Y., May 22.—Burglars for the fourth time in a few months blew up the safe of Postmaster Birch early yesterday and got away with $800 in cash and stamps.

The safe, a new one, weighed a ton. They wheeled it out into the street, piled bags of feed over it, and blew it to pieces.

Invited to Honors Columbus.

Washington, D.C., May 22.—For the three days' celebration in connection with the unveiling of the statue of Christopher Columbus here in June, invitations have been sent to Premier Borden and his Ministers, Sir Chas. Fitzpatrick, the Canadian Provincial Premiers and their Cabinets, the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec and Mgr. Stagni and members of the Canadian hierarchy. Hundreds of members of the Knights of Columbus in Canada are expected.

TO ENLARGE GERMAN NAVY

Radicals Give Their Assent if Rich Men Will Bear Large Share

WANT INHERITANCE TAX

Berlin, May 22.—The Reichstag yesterday passed the third reading of the bills increasing the German army and navy.

The navy bill provides for an extra squadron, for which three additional battleships and two cruisers are to be constructed before 1920.

The estimated additional annual cost is $24,260,000 this year, $31,750,000 next year and $28,500,000 yearly afterwards.

The army bill provides for an increase of 29,000 men, excluding officers, non-commissioned officers and other details of the peace footing in the army.

The contention that part at least of the cost of the increases in the army and navy should be borne by new taxation imposed on the wealthier class has prevailed.

The Reichstag adopted the two laws first on the condition that it would grant the necessary funds upon the introduction by the Government of legislation providing for some form of general property tax and its enactment before Oct. 1, 1913. Its second condition was that the Government should reintroduce the inheritance tax bill, the rejection of which overthrew Chancellor von Bustow and which was one of the principal issues at the last general elections.

The Secretary of the Treasury announced that the Government accepted the first condition, which was interpreted as demanding some form of taxation of wealth or inheritance, and would introduce a measure to that effect, but it was unwilling to bind itself to the inheritance tax contemplated in the second condition.

The Reichstag nevertheless adopted the second condition by a vote of 164 against 109. The majority comprised social democrats, radicals, national liberals, and anti-semites. The result of the vote was a clear victory over the old anti-Buelow "bloc," and a vindication of Adolf Wermuth, former Imperial Secretary of the Treasury, who resigned office because the Government's proposals for financing the army and navy measures were inadequate.

The Reichstag ran in two the expected revenue from the abolition of the distillery rebates, and found the additional revenues required by postponing the promised reduction of the sugar tax until after the enactment of the property tax demanded by the majority.

ONE QUARTER OF KEELEY MINE

George Wishart, of New York Refused to Pay His Share Said W. R. Travers on the Stand

BLOCKED RE-ORGANIZATION

Toronto, May 22.—As the investigation into the affairs of the Farmers' Bank proceeds before Commissioner Sir William Meredith at Osgoode Hall, more mystery is thrown about the conditions that existed before the collapse of the bank by the rather vague testimony of W. R. Travers, who is exceedingly reluctant to implicate any other person.

Under the examination of Frank Hodgins, K.C., ex-Manager Travers finally blurted out a statement to the effect that a note left in his private desk at the office when the failure occurred, bearing the signature of George Wishart, was there for blackmail purposes, but more than this he absolutely refused to say until he thought the matter over.

When Travers arose to testify Sir William instructed Mr. Hodgins to question him in regard to the check for $10,000. This check is No. 28, and passed from Travers to Lindsay. The sum of $10,000 was payable on its presentation. At previous sittings it was shown that Travers gave Nesbitt a check for $5,000 in exchange for the equivalent in cash.

"What became of the $5,000 cash?" asked Mr. Hodgins.

"The $5,000 went to Lindsay. I got the money and it was charged to my commission."

"Were there any notes or checks in your private desk when the failure occurred?"

"I think there were."

"What did you do with them?"

"I sent them over in a box with other books and papers to Mr. Owens' office."

These were grocery and livery accounts.

"Were there any checks in your private box, any checks or notes signed by somebody?"

"I think there were."

"Whose signature was on them?"

"I think Dr. Nesbitt's was there."

"How much was it for?"

"I think it was for $10,000."

"Was it in connection with the bank?"

"I think it was in connection with the Keeley mine; I can't say just how, though."

"Was George Wishart's there?"

"Yes."

"What was it there for?"

Travers hesitated for several moments, but finally exclaimed:

"Well, blackmail, if you want to know about the truth."

"Yes, we do; tell us about it," continued the examiner.

"Well, I was not expecting it and I am not prepared to answer, I want to think about it."

"Well, I was not expecting it either," remarked Mr. Hodgins. "I'll take that up later. Who was Wishart?"

"He was a New York promoter."

The manager then told how he had met the New Yorker while crossing the Atlantic Ocean on a steamer. Wishart represented himself as being a rich man who wanted to "be in" on any money investments that Travers knew about in Canada. He took Travers to his beautiful home on the outside of New York, which the Canadian banking man decided would be worth $150,000.

"What were the arrangements made between you and Dr. Nesbitt at the time?"

Travers stated that he would not answer unless ordered to do so by the commissioner, saying that as the doctor was on trial it was not fair to ask him these questions, which might prove harmful. The examiner reminded him that Dr. Nesbitt was not being held on any of these charges, so his case could not be damaged, but Travers proved unwilling.

"Dr. Nesbitt brought the proposition that we buy the mine for $300,000."

"He had an option on it?"

"Yes."

The intention was to organize a company to work the mine, said the witness, and the proposition was that Nesbitt and the bank were to float the mine, so that Nesbitt and the bank would reap the profits.

"How did Wishart come in?"

"Wishart told me on board ship that he was a rich man and said that if there were any propositions in Canada he would like to go in on them."

When Nesbitt got the option on the Keeley property, Travers went to New York to see Wishart, who agreed to make the first payment. Nesbitt and Wishart were to put up $50,000 each to help meet one of the payments, but when Wishart appeared in New York he did not have any money, so Travers was forced to accept his note for the amount. Nesbitt gave the manager a check for $25,000; which was turned over to the company as a loan. Wishart, Nesbitt and Travers were to compose the company, but the latter was to have equal shares with the others. Although he did not lay out any money he was doing most of the work.

Witness testified that he supplied $20,000 to both Nesbitt and Wishart, with which to make the payment. Out of the four shares allotted, the manager held one in trust for the bank, one for himself and Wishart and Nesbitt got one each. Wishart's note when it matured was defaulted.

"What did you do with Wishart's note?"

"I had to give it to him back."

"Why?"

"Well, it was necessary to reorganize the company and he refused to consent to the reorganization unless the note was surrendered."

"Why was it necessary to reorganize?"

"Well, if you must know, it was to unload the stock on the suffering public."

Travers then told how Wishart had got something for nothing, and how the New York promoter slipped out of all responsibility, but still retained his connection with the profit end of the scheme. The promoter demanded the note back and insisted that the bank become responsible for it, or he would not allow the reorganization. He finally got what he wanted and also held his quarter share in the company, although he never used any money to secure it.

Questioned closely, Travers said that he would have to see the minutes of the Keeley Mine Company before he could answer.

Boy Was Shot.

Port Hope, May 22.—Oliver Stevens, 12 years old, was shot and instantly killed by his companion, Ewart Yates, the same age, while the lads were shooting groundhogs on Dr. Corbett's farm, about twelve miles north of here, yesterday afternoon. The boys went fishing in the afternoon, but their luck was poor, and they got a rifle for the purpose of shooting groundhogs. Yates pointed the rifle at Stevens in fun and accidentally pulled the trigger. The boy fell and died almost instantly. Yates at once ran to his employer, E. Corbett, and Dr. Beattie of Garden Hill was called. The boy's body was taken to his father's home nearby, and Coroner Aldrich will hold an inquest.

Stevens was a home boy and was popular with the farmers' and other boys.

Boy Drowned In Etobicoke River.

Brampton, May 22.—Archie McKechnie, aged 11 years, was drowned in the Etobicoke River late yesterday afternoon. With three other little boys, he was endeavoring to secure by a pole drift wood washed down by recent rains, when he fell into the water.

He was the only son of the late Archibald McKechnie, who was a well known barrister of this town.

Every effort was made to secure the body, but without avail. The creek is greatly swollen by the rains, and the current is very strong.

CURED OF THIS HORRIBLE DISEASE

Edmonton Girl saved By "Fruit-a-tives"

EDMONTON, ALTA., Nov. 20th 1911.

"I had been a sufferer from babyhood with that terrible complaint, Constipation.

I have been treated by physicians and have taken every medicine that I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I concluded that there was no cure for this horrible disease.

Finally, I read of "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them, and the effect was marvellous.

The first box gave me great relief, after I used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that ever did me any good for Chronic Constipation and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—Try "Fruit-a-tives"—why suffer any longer when there is a perfect cure in this great fruit medicine"

WITH THE BURSTING OF BUDS

(Short story).

For three minutes Miss Grey lingered at the window, persuading herself that the leaf buds were swelling on the maple bough that came close to the wall. As she turned away, convinced that the buds were larger, there came to her the tinkle of the bell in No. 12.

"Oh, I am so glad it is you," said a man's voice peevishly, when her dark red hair and white cap showed above the screen at the foot of the bed. "My pillows are all twisted. No one can fix them as you do. I haven't a bit of strength to-day," he fretted. "I believe I am worse. Will you, just for once, tell me what you think?"

"What did the doctor say to-day?" Miss Grey parried.

"The doctor? Oh, the doctor be hanged. You know what he thinks as well as I. I want to know what you think."

Miss Grey moved away from the bed.

"Well?" he questioned impatiently.

"You can have no better authority than the doctor," she evaded.

After a moment of silence she was leaving the room.

"Wait a minute," he commanded. "You may as well tell me that you think I will not get well."

"You have burne dthe candle at both ends," she threw. "It is strange, but such men and women always expect to get well, and often do."

Then she left him. And all of the afternoon she was burdened with the thought of having been cruel. The next morning when she crossed the threshold of No. 12 she was hoping to leave some word that could take the sting from the words she had spoken the day before.

"I thought you would come," the man exulted. "Do you believe in

"You have burned the candle at telepathy? I wished with all my will that it would be you, and you came."

Miss Grey smiled, and for a moment saw the bit of light in a man's sick eyes.

"Now that you are here you may fix my pillow, but all I really wanted was to talk to you. I want you to know that I am going to get well. You told me yesterday that you thought I would die, or what you said came to that. You think that I am going to die, and—I won't."

He was looking up straight into Miss Grey's face, and for the first time in her nurse life she fumbled at her work.

"The doctor has given you some encouragement to-day," she said kindly.

"Oh, he told me what a wreck the fever has made of me, but he said that I had a chance—a fighting chance."

Miss Grey was preparing to leave the room. "That is as I think," she said slowly. "You have a chance if we fight—you more than anyone — for it."

"Don't go," he pleaded. "I want you to know that I am neither angry nor hurt because of the truth you intimated yesterday. It is true that I myself am to blame for my condition."

Miss Grey, confused, slowly came to the realization of things.

"You must not talk like this," she cried in consternation.

"Yes, I will," he cried doggedly.

And Miss Grey looking into his face moved nearer to him that he might be sure she heard.

"After this," he said, feebly striving to hide the effort it was for him to speak, I'll do as I am told. You do not seem to realize what agony it is for a man to lie here and think of lost time and strength. You haven't any faith in me. You think that I am too weak morally and physically to amount to anything. I don't know why I care, but I do. I am going to fight your unfaith in me. That is all."

Miss Grey went to him and smoothed his pillows, and so gently, he scarce felt the touch of her fingers, she caressed into place a strand of hair that lay upon his forehead. His forced strength was exhausted, and his eyes closed. When he looked out on the room again he was alone.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN TWENTY HAS A STRONG BACK.

THE KIDNEYS ARE TO BLAME NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The poisons that ought to be carried off are sent back into the blood, taking with them a multitude of aches and pains. There is no use of expecting relief until the kidneys are restored to health.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the quickest and most reliable remedy. Mrs. Ed. Baxter, Upham, N.B., writes:—"I take a good deal of pleasure in telling you what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I was troubled with my kidneys for a number of years, and my back was so lame I could not sweep the floor. A friend of mine advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and after using three boxes I am as well as ever. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from lame back or kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

A day later she brought to him some trailing arbutus. He did not open his eyes until she had placed the blossoms on his pillows.

"I knew it was you," he said. His eyelids were drooping again when he caught a waft of sweetness.

"Oh," he said, "it's—"

"Arbutus," she helped him.

"Leave it there," he pleaded. "I like it so. I am tired this morning."

She stood for a moment, looking down at him, and noted with conflicting emotions the fever-spent face and the dark hair above it.

Slowly his strength came back to him. He was very good, doing always as she told him and speaking little to her because she told him that he must not. Yet it was impossible for her not to feel the intensiveness of the gaze that followed her. A month passed, and one morning she found him pillowed up in bed. She gave an exclamation of unfeigned surprise. Then she held out to him a branch of apple blossoms.

"Where did you get them" he asked, reaching out for the branch.

"I went last evening out into the country for them. I always go." She bent nearer to the flowers and to him. "Oh," she breathed, as her strong, white fingers uttered among the blossoms, "did you ever see anything more beautiful? Don't you love them?"

Her full tones set the man's heart throbbing.

"Yes," he replied, "but not as you do."

Miss Grey straightened with a long breath. "No, perhaps not. I am rather foolish about such things."

The man looked at her wistfully. "Now that you are here I wish that you would fix my pillows."

She came back laughing.

"Thank you; that is good. You see, I am really getting well."

"Yes," she agreed. "You are getting well." But her voice was not as when she spoke of the apple blossoms. It was impersonal—hard—cold.

A flush of anger flamed in the man's pale cheeks. With the impetuous action of a child, he flung the branch of apple blossoms to the floor.

"I don't want your flowers," he flouted her. "You are hard—hard as adamant. I don't believe you have a heart. You are sorry I am getting well. You said that I would die, and because you said so, you wished me to die.

She raised her hands in protest. "No," she cried; "that is not true."

Nothing could stop the man now. "I thought you were a woman with a woman's heart. Such as we may think good mothers are. I never knew mine. I've fancied she was like you. I've fancied her holding her baby and looking as you might look. But my imagination lied and you are a lie. No! You are not, for you do not often pretend to be other than what you are—a block of stone chiseled into a woman. God breathed life into you, but he gave you neither heart nor soul. All I've ever known were like you. The woman with a heart never comes out of the books in which we read about her. It is strange that I could be fooled—"

"Don't — please," pleaded Miss Grey. "Someone will hear."

The appeal in her eyes caused the man to be silent. She took up the discarded branch and laid it gently on the white quilt.

"You are wrong—oh, so wrong."

She stood at the foot of the bed, her hands grasping its iron bar. Her voice, low and unsteady, came to him as one he had not heard. "I cannot have you think these things of me, and yet it is difficult to explain." The man's face relaxed and he would have spoken. By a quick motion of her hands she forbade him. A flush flamed and dulled in her cheeks; the hands upon the iron bar showed plainly their lines of blue veins. "I have seen men, and women, too, who have come here tired and worn with the way of their living. They have had health given them and have gone out thinking it would be a different life, and, oh, so often it has been the same thing over again, and they have come back here to die. And somehow I should rather—I—have felt that it would almost—be—better if—oh, I cannot bear to think of you going back to your old life."

She ceased speaking with a cry of protest and appeal. The man stretched out one arm until his fingers caressed the apple blossoms.

"Poor little buds," he said, "did I bruise any? But, you too," looking up into the woman's face, "I am not going back. You still have no faith in me, but some day you shall know. I am sorry about my temper just now. It was always beastly. You know that the bitter things I said were rubbish, that I could not possibly mean them. Sometimes when a man is feeling the most, he says the things that he least means. I am going to ask of you a great deal. Can you possibly forgive me?"

Her hand met his at once.

"Thank you," he said quietly.

"May I put the flowers in water for you?" she asked.

"If you please, he answered, and released her hand, but the trembling of it had given him strength and hope.—Springfield Republican.

CAR AHEAD

(Short Story).

George Verner entered a crowded surface car and found the last unoccupied seat. Only a casual observer would have known that the baby was hidden behind a very young woman and an infant.

Verner attempted to become interested in his paper, and the profile of the girl ahead of him stole his glances with every turn of her head. She was very young, very new to motherhood, apparently; the man behind knew this, because of the frantic, strained effort she made to keep the child in one position that it might not awake. A more experienced mother would have known that the baby would rest more comfortably in the easy relaxation of her arms. Verner remembered the fearful, breathless clutch with which he had first held his sister's baby, but gradually that feeling of holding a breakable toy had left him.

There was that same fear in the eyes of the young girl ahead of him, and Verner knew that she was living in momentary dread of the child falling to pieces in her arms.

He was beginning to sense the strain of her tense attitude when the car came to a stop.

"Car ahead!" yelled the conductor.

The passengers in various stages of peevishness, gathered themselves and their belongings and prepared to follow the conductor's bidding.

Not so with the woman and the baby. She cast one startled glance at the outgoing passengers, and then her eyes met Verner's. There was positive tragedy in their depths. Then it was that Verner saw the big suitcase on the floor beside her.

"How did she manage to get on the car if she couldn't get off with a suitcase and a baby?" Verner asked himself, while he raised his cap and addressed her:

"If you will permit me — I will carry—"

"Oh—if you would be so kind," she gasped, in a frightened little voice, and before Verner realized it she had put the baby in his arms and was about to pick up the suitcase. "I am more used to this," she said, with a half blush.

"I can easily take both," Verner told her, as he swung the tiny infant against one big shoulder and took the suitcase from her.

"Her eyes are decidedly coquettish for a young mother," was his inward comment as he helped her into the car ahead. He found it within his consciousness to condemn married flirts, even though they had shaded grey eyes and one elusive dimple.

When he had put her comfortably into another seat in the car ahead she made room for him beside her and sent up a smile into Verner's eyes.

Although he felt himself to be treading on dangerous ground, he accepted the offered seat. His destination was a few blocks beyond and he felt that his heart could not be hopelessly damaged in so short a time. He sighed as he wondered who the man might be who called this little beauty his own.

"You seem perfectly at home with babies," the girl remarked by way of breaking a more or less awkward silence.

"I have three of my own," Verner told her in a half-jesting manner, and wondered afterward why he wanted to convey that impression.

"Oh," was all the girl said, but her tone was noticeably colder, her attitude more aloof.

The girl's frigidity spurred on the man's imagination. He talked glibly of a beautiful wife and children whom he had never seen, of a home he had never known.

An inscrutable smile, not unlike that of the Mona Lisa, hovered over the young woman's eyes and lips. Verner wondered whether or not she was believing him.

A sense of irritation stole over him at the mockery in her eyes, and when his destination drew near he was half glad, half sorry.

"I regret I cannot go on with you and help you when you get off the car," he said by way of leave-taking. I have a business engagement."

"Thank you very much," she replied sweetly, "but baby's father will meet us at the end of the line."

Verner bowed formally and received a cool little nod in response. Nor did he give way to his desire to turn and watch the car as it whizzed off toward the end of the suburban line.

The young woman looked regretfully after him; then she sighed as she gazed down at the sleeping baby and drew him with greater tenderness into her arms.

'He is too good looking even for dreams," she murmured, and whether she referred to the small man in her arms or the big man on the street no one, perhaps not even the girl herself, knew.

Another meeting did not occur until some three months later. It was at a dance given by the Suburban Yacht Club.

Verner entered the ballroom with a stately beauty on his arm. Before they had made one turn of the room he knew that the little mother was among the guests, and that she was popular with a number of cavaliers. The stately beauty felt Verner's arms stiffen around her waist, and wondered at his sudden lack of interest in her breezy conversation.

She might be a widow, was the thought uppermost in Verner's mind, but the brilliance of her costume and the existence of the tiny infant practically denied this.

Together with his condemnation of married flirts, Verner felt irritated and jealous because of the men who dangled over the girl's dance order.

He avoided catching her eye as long as he could, but when she danced so close to him that he saw the mockery in her expression and her nod to him he could only return her greeting. After that Verner found that he was being introduced to her.

"The ninth and seventeenth dances are long year waltzes, Mr. Verner," she said, looking laughingly into his eyes. "May I please have both of them?"

"You may, if I may have two others," he put it quickly.

She blushed swiftly and handed Verner her card.

"Have you a dance left, Miss Gregory?" another moth about the candle questioned the girl.

Verner's startled, interrogative eyes searched the girl's face, and she laughed.

"You are not married—then " he questioned, without regard for the amused listeners.

"Not any more than you are, Mr. Verner." She glanced at him from beneath her lashes. "You know—I didn't believe, even for a moment, that you had three kiddies."

Verner had the grace to blush. "Just the same," he told her, laughingly, "you deliberately tried to palm that baby off as yours."

"I did not," she retorted, quickly. "You took it entirely for granted. I was merely carrying my brother's baby over to my home and somebody helped me both on and off the car. Of course—" she paused and glanced shyly at Verner—"none of us ever dreamed of my having to change cars."

"And yet," he looked deep into her eyes, "it was fortunate—in this case, wasn't it?" He waited with laughter in his eyes but a compelling note in his voice.

Alice Gregory looked up and the dimple came into play.

"Perhaps it was," she said.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MARKET ONLY EGGS YOU KNOW TO BE FRESH

Produce Section of Toronto Board of Trade Sends Out Timely Circular

The produce section of the Toronto Board of Trade decided to ask members to co-operate with them in the endeavor to give the consumer an egg fit to eat every day in the year. With a view to eliminating the shortage entirely the egg-producers will be asked to observe the following rules:—

(1) Provide plenty of clean, dry nests for your hens. (2) Gather the eggs daily in cold weather and twice a day in hot or rainy weather. (3) Do not wash eggs. Use the dirty, small, very long and grass-stained eggs at home. (4) Keep eggs in a cool, dry place, which is free from odors. (5) Market your eggs twice a week if possible. (6) Don't sell eggs which were found in a stole nest. (7) Keep the eggs out of the sun when taking them to town. (8) Don't keep eggs near oil, onions, etc., as they readily absorb odors. (9) Don't sell eggs known to be bad or which have been in an incubator. (10) It is dishonest. (10) Male birds should not be allowed with hens, except for breeding purposes. After that period kill roosters, save feed, and improve your egg product.

SECOND SIGHT AT 94

Remarkable Old Lady Growing Younger as She Nears Century Mark

A second growth of hair at ninety is a rare occurrence, but to receive second sight at ninety-four is a still more singular occurrence. Yet in the person of Mrs. Ellen Calverley, 349 Lippincott street, Toronto, both of these phenomena are presented.

Mrs. Calverley is hale and hearty as ever, except that she walks with a slight limp, as a result of a fall sustained a few years ago, and with the aid of a light cane she still takes her daily constitutional. Her sister, Mrs. Lavina Gill, who is also a nonogenarian, lives in the house with Mrs. Calverley, and is the mother of ten children, nine of whom are still living, the youngest being fifty-four years of age.

"Farming in these days may be all right," said the old lady, "but sixty years ago it was not so easy. First clearing a space for a house, my husband built a small log cabin, and then we started to cut a clearing around it. When I think of all the wood—oak and walnut—that we cut and burned, I feel envious."

Her son Joseph, now in Three Rivers, Manitoba, when the Fenian raid of 1866 broke out, joined a company at Cayuga and went to Ridgeway. Her eyes glistened as she commenced to speak of him.

"We got word that he had been shot, and father went down to Cayuga, but he was told there that a mistake had been made. He was shot through his knapsack, but was not wounded seriously."

READING IN BED

Not Injurious to the Eyes if a Few Simple Rules are Observed

To those addicted to the practice of reading in bed the remarks of Dr. Carl Seller will be of interest. He states that there is no valid reason to be urged against using the eyes in a proper manner in a recumbent position—such use is the least tiresome and can be persisted in for longer periods without damage than any other position. Three easily avoided errors cause all the harm possible from reading lying down, the first often leading to the other two. They are insufficient or wrongly directed light, short reading distance, and tipping the book out of a plane at right angles to the line of vision. If, however, every one reading lying down will so arrange his lounge or bed that the light comes over the head without striking the eye, and falls well upon the page; if he will hold his book at a long reading distance and take care that the line of letters shall be at right angles to the line of vision he can be sure of doing his eyes no more harm than if he were sitting up. More than this, there is much positively in favor of reading lying-down. Dr. Seller concludes: "The recumbent posture allows more rest of the bodily structures than the sitting posture, and there is greater possibility of resting and repair in that position."

Skin All Covered With Eruption

N. Heari Tardif.

Tried Many Remedies 3 or 4 Years. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

A Quebec man, N. Henri Tardif, of St. Casimir, writes in a letter dated Mar. 21, 1911: "I had a very bad skin, all covered with eruption, eight years ago. I have had all of both my shoulders covered with it, and the high part of my arms, and my face, but it was the worst on my shoulders. I tried many different remedies to cure it, but nothing was any good. At last I went to an apothecary. He asked me if I had ever used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I told him no, and I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, but I am glad of the same, for Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me of my skin eruption. I spread the Cuticura Ointment on all my sore parts, and I think that in washing my face with the Cuticura Soap, it hindered my eruption from itching and burning. I tried many remedies during three or four years but Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) N. Henri Tardif,

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. ADVICE TO IMMIGRANTS

Practical Pointers Relating to Success in Canada

Be determined to succeed.

Thoroughly test your strength and endurance before leaving home, and see that you are well stocked with courage and determination.

Make up your mind where you are going and go there.

Don't be persuaded en route to go anywhere else.

Don't take too much luggage.

Be vaccinated before you go.

Don't take a revolver with you. The money will be more useful, for there will be no one to shoot and many to pay.

dapt yourself to local conditions and prejudices.

Hold to your heritage as a citizen of the British Empire, but identify yourself with the country of your adoption as quickly as possible.

Don't be ashamed to take advice, but:

Don't be too ready to follow the advice of casual acquaintances.

Don't forget that your Canadian cousins are strong, self-reliant, energetic, kindly, large-hearted and hospitable and that you can learn more from them than they can from you.

Every Dominion has its own peculiar laws and customs, and they are not prepared to change them at the bidding of every newcomer.

Don't brag about the superiority of your own country.

Don't grumble and don't put on "side."

There is no leisured class in Canada, at any rate among the new comers. Everyone must be ready to work, and work hard.

A pioneer must take things as they come, and "cannot" must be replaced by "have to" in his vocabulary if he wishes for success.

Learn to milk, learn to ride a horse and harness it to a cart, and accustom yourself to the use of the pick and shovel.

Trained servants, turnpike roads, daily papers, and the right to grumble at small inconveniences all belong to the countries where chances are not. —ERNEST DEVEREUX.

THE CANADIAN RECORD

An Analysis of the Figures Regarding the Titanic's Passengers

A number of American newspapers devoted some attention to the ascertaining of the number of British and Americans on board the ill-fated Titanic when it sailed on the last voyage and also as to the number of survivors of each.

Whatever such figures may show, and the chances are that only approximate statistics can be obtained, the Canadian figures have been compiled.

There were on the Titanic when she sailed 36 adult Canadians. These were divided as follows:

Men	21
Women	15
Total	36

There were, of the Canadians, 21 drowned, and 15 saved.

The saved consisted of:

Men	2
Women	13
Total	15

The Canadians who went down with the ship were divided as follows:

Men	19
Women	2
Total	21

Of the two Canadian women drowned, one, at least—Mrs. Allison—was given an opportunity to go in the boats, but preferred to remain with her husband.

Two Canadian men were saved. One was ordered into a lifeboat that was insufficiently manned; the other Canadian was given a place in the boats only after all the women on his part of the ship had embarked.

About a record such as this Canada may well be proud. Her men died like men, after doing their best to save the women and children.

GROWTH OF WESTERN CANADA

Nothing in History to Parallel the Rapid Settlement of Provinces

In all the annals of world history there has been nothing to parallel the present settlement of the prairies and park lands of western Canada. Today from both the east and the south a concentrated river of humanity is pouring into the Canadian west and building up the country with phenomenal rapidity. The gain in population of the four western Provinces between 1901 and 1911, was 1,117,020 people, or an increase of 187 per cent. The gain in population of the five eastern Provinces was 568,640 people, or only 16 per cent.

Entering into details, the Province of Alberta, which had a population less than a good many eastern cities in 1901, or, to be exact, 73,022, now supports 374,633 people, a gain of 413 per cent. in the ten years. Saskatchewan was credited with a population of 91,279 in 1901. It now holds 492,432, and is the fourth Province in Confederation. Manitoba has grown in the ten years from 255,211 to 455,614 and British Columbia from 178,657 to 392,480. Compare these figures with the percentage gains in eastern Canada where Quebec advanced by 21 per cent., Ontario by 18 per cent., and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick by very small margins, and it will be apparent that western growth has been much more rapid than eastern growth.

GRANTS OF WATER-POWERS

Steps Taken to Safeguard the Rights of the Public

The water-powers of Canada are among the most valuable possessions the country has. To safeguard the rights of the public, the Commission of Conservation has adopted the following principles to guide it in formulating the opinions it gives on questions relating to the disposal of water-powers:

No unconditional titles shall be given to water-powers, but every grant or lease of powers shall be subject to the following conditions:

(a) Development within a specified rates.
(b) Public control of rates.
(c) A rental charge subject to revision from time to time.

WINDOW BOXES

A pretty idea for window boxes, for those who can afford it, is to make the color of a tiled box mingle or contrast with the plants; a torquoise blue is pretty with creepers of pale yellow, or the variegated ivy arranged to fall over the tiles; or a common wooden box painted a soft green, filled with thickly planted "Wandering Jew," and placed in a green tin is excellent for a window sill, and if the tin is large enough to have some pots of hardy ferns it makes a refreshing mass of damp green all during summer. The plants of anything can be put in close together, and if higher in the middle than the ends is very effective. Nasturtiums are always good if they are massed to fall over the edge; heliotrope is sweet and pretty, hardly begonias are nice; and a box of nothing but ferns, kept soft and damp, is a delight. Orange and lemon seeds make lovely miniature trees if kept in the house in winter, and brought out for verandahs, window sills, steps, or anywhere the sun shines, giving plenty of water.

FACE WAS LITERALLY COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

Four Different Doctors Did Her No Good.

Two Bottles of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS Cured Her.

Bad blood is directly the cause of the face breaking out in pimples, and it is impossible to eradicate them unless you put your blood into good shape

Burdock Blood Bitters is compounded from roots, herbs, barks and berries, and is without a doubt the best remedy procurable for the purpose of driving all the blood impurities out of the system.

Mr. Geo. E. Miller, Clavering, Ont., writes:—"Last fall I was very much troubled with pimples. My face was literally covered with them. I went to four different doctors, but they could do me no good. One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got two bottles, and before I had taken all the first one, the pimples had nearly all disappeared, and by the time I had taken all the second one the pimples had disappeared completely, thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I would advise anybody who is troubled with any blood trouble to use Burdock Blood Bitters.

DULL, SICK HEADACHE, BILIOUS BREATH, BAD STOMACH, CONSTIPATION—TAKE CASCARETS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purifying the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organisms are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

Unprofitable to Adulterate

A milkseller was fined $50 and costs at Dudley for selling adulterated milk. The chairman said an intimation had been received from the Home Office that in such cases a penalty should be inflicted that would make it unprofitable to sell adulterated milk.

$1,250 for a Bust by Donatello

A bust by Donatello of St. John as a child was sold at Sotheby's for $1,250. The bust stood for many years over a tablet above the new of the Buck family at Bideford Church. It is supposed to have been brought from Italy by Sir Richard Grenville, and by him given to Theobald Grenville.

Uninsurable Losses

Presiding at a meeting of the Waldorf Hotel Company, London, Mr. J. M. Henderson, M.P., said the directors had insured in every way possible against loss from fire, etc., but they could find no company which would insure against losses by people taking wrong coats or ladies losing muffs and other articles.

Trapping a Bookmaker

A smart capture of a bookmaker was made by a Birmingham constable disguised as a butcher delivering meat. So well did the ruse work that when the defendant, George Aldworth, was caught in the act of receiving two betting packets, he exclaimed, "What! You a policeman!" He was fined $50 and costs.

Long Firm Frauds

Convicted at Liverpool on sixteen charges of fraud, Walter Goldstein, twenty-four years old, a jeweller, was sentenced to twelve months; Joseph Littman, aged twenty-three, to nine months; and Frank Harvey, aged twenty-eight, to eight months' imprisonment. In the name of Walter Russell & Co. they applied to 367 firms for goods, pawning large quantities on the day on which they were received.

Cut Pit Pony's Eye Out

That he had thrown a piece of rock at a pit pony and cut one of its eyes completely out was the evidence against Clarence Bills, a young Cannock Chase miner, who was ordered to pay $12 for cruelty to the animal. It was further stated that the man drubbed some things out a hedge or ruin, and told the striking official that the injury was caused by the pony catching his head against the rock.

Pay of Royal Flying Corps

An Army Order fixes the pay of members of the newly-constituted Royal Flying Corps (Military Wing). Squadron commanders are to receive $4.25 a day ordinary pay, flight commanders $4.25 a day, and flying officers $2.25 a day. All will receive $3.00 a day additional as "flying pay." Warrant officers will be paid $2.25 a day, sergeants $1.50 a day, first-class air mechanics $2.00 a day, and second-class air mechanics 50 cents a day. They will also receive flying pay at the rate of $1.00 or 50 cents a day, according to their proficiency.

Pensions and the Poor Rate

At a meeting of the Athy, Ireland, Board of Guardians a letter from the Local Government Board called attention to the case of persons receiving indoor relief whose old age pensions were handed over to the Board of Guardians for their maintenance. It was pointed out that the pensions should be held at the disposal of the Crown. The clerk to the guardians said that the average cost of those old people in the infirmary would be $1.20 a week. There was an "infirmary ward" for some of those old people, and he held that living there would not disqualify the inmates for the pension.

Cattle Driving Depressing

During the hearing of a case at Mallingar, Ireland, in which William J. M'Cullough sought compensation for injuries alleged to have been caused to his cattle during a "drive," counsel for the applicant called attention to a threatening letter received some time ago by his client. "On the back of the letter," said counsel, "there is a rude drawing of a gun and a coffin." Under the gun was written. "We have lots of lead in this for you." His honor allowed compensation to the extent of $287 and costs. The local sergeant of the police said cattle-driving was on the decrease in Westmeath. In fact, public opinion had risen against it.

Butter Trade Developments

In a review recording the satisfactory expansion of the Cork butter trade, it is stated that there seems to be but one thing needed to increase the profits of the Irish farmer from butter making, and that is that he should continue to exercise care in the packing. Cheese-making on the Continent is making serious inroads on the shipments of butter, and should the Irish dairy farmer shake off his lethargy there is every prospect that in a few short years the fame of Irish butter will again be in the ascendant, and the Cork market in particular will have regained its prestige as an emporium for the collection and exportation of high class butters.

WIDOW AT FOURTEEN

Curious History of the Adoption of Sons by Indian Princes

How widowhood became the lot of an Indian princess when she was fourteen was told in a case before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at London.

The princess is the Rani Dharam Kunwar, and the widow of the Rajah Raghubir Singh, who died in 1862. At the time of her widowhood she was fourteen years of age, and subsequently gave birth to a son, who died in 1870.

The young widow afterwards adopted a boy, who also died, as did another boy taken for adoption. In January, 1899, the Rani adopted another lad (Balwant Singh), then represented to be about fourteen years of age, the son of a cultivator of the same tribe as her former husband.

A deed of adoption was registered, which, it was said, contained a clause that the Rani, so long as she lived, should remain the owner, as a Hindu widow, of the whole of the property to the Ladaura Estate. In the Indian courts the Rani, however, sought a declaration that she had no power to adopt Balwant Singh, that, in fact, she did not adopt him, and that the deed of adoption was null and void.

The Indian courts took the contrary view, and the question came up before the Judicial Committee as to whether or not the Rani was or was not estopped from questioning the validity of the adoption.

Their lordships held that the Rani had adopted Balwant Singh in the most solmen manner, and she could not now be allowed to get rid of her act without grave injustice to those who relied upon her good faith.

MONKEY STARTS RUNAWAY

Springs on Horses, Head and Creates Excitement in Wandsworth

The mischievous antics of a captive monkey gave rise to scenes of wild excitement in High street, Wandsworth. The monkey, which was being led by an organ-grinder playing in the gutter, suddenly leaped on to the head of a horse attached to a passing van, and threw the horse into a paroxysm of terror.

The animal dashed off at a gallop along the High street, which at the time was crowded with traffic. A policeman attempted to pull up the frightened beast, and raced beside it for some distance. Others went to his assistance, and the horse was brought to a standstill before any serious accident occurred. The organ was badly damaged, whilst the monkey, equally scared, let go its hold and fell off the horse in its mad career.

HUMAN HEADS AS PLAYTHINGS

Terrible Barbarities Inflicted by Moors on Europeans

Following on the mutiny of the greater part of the Moorish troops forming the garrison of Fez terrible barbarities were inflicted on Europeans, but French troops arrived on the scene, and, after fierce fighting, quelled the mutiny.

The first action of the mutineers was to kill their instructors. Then they ransacked the ammunition stores, and, calling upon the townspeople to join them in a holy war, set out on a mission of extermination against Europeans.

For some hours there were awful scenes. Wherever a European was found he or she was butchered. The bodies were atrociously mutilated, and the heads were cut off and given as playthings to the children.

Women on the flat housetops filled the air with their shrill cries of rejoicing at the killing of the Christians, while others in the streets urged the men to fresh excesses. For some reason the British colony was unmolested.

Meanwhile news of the revolt had been carried to the French camp three miles away, where 3,000 soldiers were encamped. They at once moved on the capital, and after bombarding the fort outside the town on the southern side, entered the city and began the task of rescuing Europeans.

It was difficult and dangerous work. Every housetop and window seemed to hold mutineers, and the scene was like a chapter from the Indian Mutiny. But the French troops never faltered, though bullets rained thick and fast. From house to house they drove the rebels, and succeeded in saving many Europeans who had been in grave danger. One company of Tirailleurs had every officer killed or wounded.

Two days later more troops from Mekinez arrived. The barracks, which the mutineers had made their headquarters, were shelled and the rebels [illegible]

A FATEFUL MEETING

Chance Meeting of Old Friends in Australia Brings Fortune to One

An officer on one of the mail steamers journeying between England and Australia, who is a native of Wolverhampton, was the medium through which a friend who emigrated to the land of the Golden Fleece about ten years ago, learnt of a piece of good fortune. Walking down a street in Sydney, he unexpectedly met his old schoolfellow, whom he at once recognised. The colonist, had lost touch with his friends at Wolverhampton, all his near relatives now being with him in New South Wales, and communication with the old country had been allowed gradually to lapse. When the two whilom comrades met the surprise was naturally great and the welcome mutually cordial. It suddenly struck the sailor that he possessed a newspaper cutting of an advertisement enquiring for the whereabouts of his friend, and setting forth the information that he would "hear of something to his advantage" by communicating with a firm of solicitors. He drew the cutting from his case, and showed it to the colonial, who had no doubt that he was the person advertised for. A cablegram, in answer to one from Australia, gave briefly the name of the testator and the amount bequeathed to him. So substantial was the legacy that the young man thought it worth while to make the journey to England, and sailed by the ship on which his companion was serving. The benefactress was an old friend of the family, who, many years before, had made her will in favor of the man to whom she had taken a fancy when he was a boy. The mariner was not forgotten; in fact, he says it was the best-paid service he ever rendered.

NORTHERN CANADA

Where Coal Can be Dug From the Surface With a Shovel

That the two largest coal fields in the world have been discovered on Canadian soil in the belief of Captain Janes, a member of the Canadian exploration party aboard Captain Bernier's "Arctic." The fields, Captain Janes says are located in Baffin's Land and the two are just 100 miles apart. In spite of their high altitude he declares they will be workable all the year round. The coal is so easily secured that it can be dug from the surface with a shovel.

"This northern part of Canada will be the greatest country in the world," said Captain Janes. "I believe that the report of the Arctic's last voyage when it is made public will be of great value."

Captain Janes spent eight months prospecting alone. He was hundreds of miles from the ship during that period. His discoveries show that thousands of years ago Baffin's Land was a very different piece of country from what it is at the present time.

Twenty-five feet under the surface he discovered an immense forest in a state of perfect preservation. The trees, pointing due east and west, are laid as flat as a wheatfield blown down by a cyclone. The timber, he declares, is in perfect shape. Even the cones from the tree tops are as fresh as the day they fell.

W. T. STEAD'S PROPHECY

He Wrote a Story, Which Foretasted in Some Respects His Tragic End

In connection with the loss of the Titanic, the curious coincidence is worth recalling that in the Christmas number of the "Review of Reviews" for 1892 a story appeared which bore the title of "From the Old World to the New," by Mr. W. T. Stead. In it he dwelt at some length on the perils of icebergs in the Atlantic.

The scene of the tale who laid on board the White Star liner Majestic, which was then commanded by the same Captain Smith who went down so gallantly in the Titanic, and a portrait of Captain Smith was given.

The Majestic in the tale drives through fog into a field of ice, when suddenly the fog lifts, and discloses near at hand a "dazzling array of icebergs, ever shifting and moving. Now and again a great berg would capsize with a reverberant roar." And on one of the bergs a little party of castaways are discovered, who have made their presence known to those on board the ship by telepathy.

There is a tragic note of prophecy in the words of the tale: "The ocean bed beneath the run of the liners is strewn with the whitening bones of thousands who have taken their passages as we have done, but who never saw their destination."

JUVENILE CRIMINALS

German Boys With Morbid Minds Affected by Criminal Stories

Germany is becoming alarmed at the wave of juvenile crime, attributed to the flooding of the country with cheap detective and criminal literature. A lad of 17 murdered a woman and her daughter at a village near Zittau, took flight, and shot himself when he found the police on his heels. No motive for the crime could be discovered, and, in its absence, the fact that the lad was perpetually reading "Schundliteratur" is suggested as the cause. At the inquest on a scullion, who committed suicide in Hamburg, evidence was given that he was perpetually reading "penny dreadfuls" and detective stories, and the coroner severely censured his employer for not stopping the practice.

Fraud on Domestic Servants

In Dumbarton Sheriff Court, Mary Wilson, or M'Cabe of Glasgow, and Agnes Wilson, a domestic servant, her sister, were charged with fraud. The complaint was that they pretended to three domestic servants in Helensburgh that they had been sent from a nunnery in Glasgow to sell religious pictures, that the proceeds from the sale were to be sent to England, and that purchasers of the pictures were to receive presents from the nuns. As a special inducement they promised that for buying two pictures the purchasers would have a special mass said for them. The servants were deceived into paying 60 cents for pictures which the accused bought at 25 cents each. Both received short sentences.

TRAGEDY IN BARRACKS

Soldier Accidentally Shot Dead by His Friend at Aldershot

A terrible barrack-room tragedy occurred at Talavera Barracks, Aldershot, Private John Benney, of the 1st Leicester Regiment, being shot dead by the discharge of a rifle held by a comrade.

It is stated that Benney was sitting on his bed when another soldier named Blakemore entered the room. Blakemore picked up a rifle and slipped a cartridge into the breech. A scuffle is said to have followed, during which the rifle was fired, and the bullet passed through Benney's head just behind the ear, and he fell dead on the spot. The bullet afterwards struck the wall on the opposite side of the room, and, glancing off, embedded itself in the ceiling.

Blakemore, who was arrested by the military authorities, states that after putting the cartridge into the breech he pulled over the safety catch of the rifle. This, he declares, must have been defective. The rifle did not belong to either of the two men, and Blakemore says he did not intend to injure his friend.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has a uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, and strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

SIXTEEN DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

Adventurous Englishman's Terrible Experiences Through an Unknown Part of South America

Mr. A. H. Savage Lander, the well-known traveller, has returned to London from an eighteen months' journey through South America, the whole of the travelling, with the exception of some thirty hours in the train, being done on mules, in canoes, or on foot.

"My journey," he said, "included the whole of the unexplored part of Brazil between Rio and Manaos, in the great central basin of the Xingu, Tapajos, and Madeira rivers, a region which the Brazilians themselves have always considered impenetrable. After crossing Brazil I went over the Andes through Peru, to Lima, thence to Cuzco and Lake Titicaca, to examine the Inca ruins. Next I went across Bolivia and Chile to Antofagasta, from this point to Valparaiso by steamer, and once more across South America to Buenos Ayres.

"I described enormous zigzags in order to visit regions which interested me by reason that they were absolutely unknown. For about half the distance we had to cut our own tracks trough the forest or proceed along the great campos or by prairies over vast areas of absolutely uninhabited country.

"The object of my journey was scientific, and the expedition was my own venture. At first the Brazilian Government took great interest in my plans, but it was unable to find any Brazilians who were willing to accompany me owing to fear of Indians and the density of the virgin forests, which they declared were impassable. I eventually succeeded in obtaining six native Brazilians, who only came as the result of the very heavy payment I offered.

"When I left Rio I took enough provisions to last for a year, but owing to wastage on the part of my men and loss, these eventually gave out, and towards the end of that part of the expedition through the unexplored portion of Brazil, we remained for sixteen days without a morsel of anything to eat. Happily there was plenty of water, but there was no game, and neither my men nor myself had sufficient food to cover a sixpence. Our experiences were terrible, and it was one of the most tragic marches I have ever had.

"At this time I had with me two carriers—my only companions—and they suffered even more than I did. Both wanted to put an end to their sufferings, and it was only with difficulty that I prevented them from committing suicide. For myself, though accustomed to roughing it, I nearly died. Starvation brought on anæmia, which was succeeded by beri-beri in the right leg, causing atrophy of two toes. Eventually we came through, but in a terrible plight. I lost 50 pounds in weight."

Mr. Savage Lander stated that he studied several new tribes, made vocabularies of their languages, and made some interesting geological, geographical, and anthropological observations. Even when travelling in unexplored regions he met with no hostility on the part of natives anywhere, and declares with pride that he did not even carry a revolver or a knife with him.

His zig-zag route over unexplored or little known country in Brazil was about 5,000 miles, and the Brazilian Government was so astonished at the success of what was regarded as impossible that Congress voted a grant of $20,000 to the explorer.

The expedition suffered a good deal from the presence of insects of all kinds, particularly mosquitoes, ants, the tiny piun, a species of gnat, which makes life almost unbearable, and from millions of bees which, although they do not sting, swarm over every uncovered portion of the body.

ADVICE TO CANADIANS

How to Obtain a Favorable Hearing in London, England

Canadians must realise that London lends money to the whole world, writes a correspondent to "The Times," and when one country has borrowed $1,000,000,000 within five years and wants more, she must accept the fact that while the British public will lend it to her, they will only do so at a price that will enable them to share in the prosperity of the country. A little advice to Canadians wishing to borrow money would do no harm, the great thing for them to realise is that the city is a small circle—and all know each other—and when borrowers from Canada come over here nothing puts up the back of the city more than for the borrower to go from one house to another trying to get a better price from each. That a loan is being hawked round various financial houses is soon known and in the end only results in making the city suspicious of that loan and closing the pockets of the British public. Business can be well and satisfactorily done through one of the financial houses that are known to have a thorough knowledge of Canada.

FEMALE BLUEBEARD

A woman arrested at Lippa, in Hungary, is stated to have confessed that she murdered four of her husbands. She is now married to an innkeeper named Kaprucsan.

Owing to the revelations she has made, five other women of the same town have been arrested for murdering their first husbands. From the admissions of Frau Kaprucsan, it appears that she made a regular business of helping her neighbors to get rid of their husbands in order to marry other men.

There appear to have been no monetary reasons for the crimes.

BIG DAY FOR WEST.

June 18 Is Date Set For Hearing of Western Rate Cases.

Ottawa, May 22.—The next session of the Dominion Railway Board, to be held on June 18, will be a big day for the west. On that day the general enquiry into freight rates west of Port Arthur will be proceeded with, as will the rehearsing of the Regina rates case. In both instances prima facie cases have been established against the railways and it will be up to them to indicate what line they are going to take by way of defence.

Both rates involve the serious charge of discrimination. In the general freight tariff enquiry the allegation is that there is discrimination against Western Canada and in favor of the east. In the Regina case the allegation is that the railways discriminate against Regina jobbers in favor of Winnipeg jobbers in the matter of rates on ten classes of goods carried.

The postponement of the general enquiry by the Railway Board yesterday was due to the illness of E. Beatty, chief counsel of the C.P.R., who is in a hospital and may have to go south, and to the fact that other counsel for the railways stated that they had not yet had an opportunity to fully acquaint themselves with the intricate question of rates involved

Log Men Demanded Rates.

Ottawa, May 22.—A strike of forty log distributors employed on the Eddy and Booth booms at the Chaudiere yesterday forced the closing of the saw mills of both companies. The log-men have been working 13 hours per day for $10 per week and demand $11.50.

Round Trip Across Channel.

Dover, Eng., May 22.—H. Crombers, a well-known Belgian airman, crossed the English Channel from Nieuport, whence he started early yesterday morning.

When he appeared over the little fishing port of St. Margaret's, near here, he dropped a visiting card on which was written: "I regret to be obliged to return to Nieuport, Belgium, without breaking my journey.

Then he made a wide, graceful sweep and started back across the channel towards Calais, France.

Wireless Saved 32 Lives.

Cordova, Alaska, May 22.—The United States' light house tender Armeria is a wreck near Cape Hinchinbrook. The thirty-two persons aboard included one survivor of the lost barge Hayden Brown, were taken off by a steamship which picked up the wireless distress signal.

The Hayden Brown, cut adrift by a tug in a storm in Prince William Sound, May 10, drifted ashore two days later, and only two of the eight men aboard reached shore. One died of exposure.

Some threats made by an Italian pedler on account of some money alleged to be owing him, and the fact that the money she was known to have in her possession cannot be found, have led to an investigation, which is being conducted by Coromer (Dr.) Teeter.

An Expensive Luxury.

Richard Harding Davis, who knows South America intimately, told at a luncheon at the Philadelphia club a South American story.

"The Florida in Buenos Aires," he said, "is very elegant and charming but in the past the young men were too prone to accost the beautiful women shopping and promenading there. Accordingly a law was passed which imposed a fine of $50 on any one who should dare to accost or annoy in the slightest degree any lady in Buenos Aires."

Mr. Davis paused.

"Since the passage of that law," he said solemnly, "the Florida has become quite safe, but when a beautiful woman walks in it the young men hover near her, murmuring in low and ardent tones, 'I wish I had $50.'"

A Happy Paraphrase.

The retort courteous in the paraphrase ingenious has seldom had better illustration than in the story that after the signing of the treaty of Berlin Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter presented M. Jules Cambon, with whom he had negotiated the treaty, a photograph bearing the inscription, "To my amiable friend and terrible enemy." To which M. Cambon responded by presenting his photograph inscribed, "To my terrible friend and amiable enemy."

Not the Right Kind.

A young bachelor who was beset by a sewing machine agent told the latter that his machine would not answer his purpose.

"Why," said the agent, with voluble praise, "it is the best on the market in every respect."

"That may be," replied the supposed customer, "but the sewing machine I am looking for must have flaxen hair and blue eyes."—New York Journal.

Might Do Worse.

"What's the trouble, old man? You look worried."

"I am. My son wants to start a chicken farm."

"Oh, well, try to throw it off! He might be wanting to buy or sell stuff on margins."—Chicago Record-Herald.

EDUCATED CONVICTS.

Chat With an English Warder About Gentlemen "Lags."

In the year 1879 a royal commission, presided over by Lord Kimberley, recommended that all first offenders should be kept entirely apart from those who had been convicted more than once.

The advice was taken, and so the "star" class came into being, and Portland became their prison home. Here all first offenders who are physically capable of hard labor are sent, and consequently Portland holds a larger number of well-born and well-educated convicts than either Dartmoor or Parkhurst.

According to a warder who has served in both Portland and Dartmoor, the gentleman lag is either the best or worst of prisoners. At Portland the first offender usually behaves well and gets full remission, and only two per cent. of the "star" class are reconvicted. "But," added the warder, "if there's one chap worse than another to handle, it is the educated lag who has gone absolutely to the bad and is beyond reform. It is their education that makes them so troublesome. They are always up to some mischief, but are generally too clever to be caught.

"There was one of this sort in Dartmoor who had originally been at a public school and a university. He got into trouble at college, and was sent to Canada. He came in for a little money, and was foolish enough to return to England, where he ran through every penny of his legacy and forged a friend's name to a large check. He was convicted and sent to Portland for five years. As soon as he was out he was at his old games again, and when I knew him was serving his third term as an old lag in Dartmoor.

"His favorite game was to stir up other prisoners to attack warders. He would get hold of some half 'balmy' chap and work on his feelings till he was ready for any violence. But he was far too cute to run his own skin into danger, and, although we warders knew well enough who was at the bottom of the trouble, we never could get evidence to convict him. His end was a curious one. A dupe of his who had been flogged for hitting a warder turned on him and stabbed him with a cobbler's awl. He died in hospital a week later, and we breathed more freely.

"Another type of gentleman convict was D—— who had been a solicitor before he was struck off the rolls for stealing trust money. Whether he had made a speciality of poison law or not, I do not know. He was up in every small point—knew more, probably, than the governor himself. In these days a convict has the right to complain to the governor or the doctor if he does not get 'his rights,' and to petition the Home Office almost as often as he pleases.

"D—— was always at this game. For instance, he seemed to know by instinct if his loaf of 'tommy' (wholemeal bread) was half an ounce short weight, and would complain at once. Nothing was too trivial to make a song about, and if he could only get someone into trouble he was happy. He is out at present, but we all dread his turning up again.

"No distinction is made between convicts, and there is no doubt that it comes hard on a man who has never done a stroke of physical work in his life to have to turn to and use a spade or a stone-hammer. Oddly enough, most of the gentlemen lags at Portland make no bones about this sort of thing, but what some of them do not like is cleaning out their cells. One chap offered me $250 (to be paid when he came out) to get this done for him. I believe he would have paid up all right."

Marriage.

"Don't sneer at the Chinese literature and the ancient Chinese literature."

The speaker was the Chinese consul general in San Francisco. He continued:

"Our ancient Chinese literature is wise. Take, for example, one of its epigrams on marriage. Could anything be wiser than this;

"'Marriage is like a besieged city—those without all want to get in, and those within all want to get out.'"

C.P.R. OFFICIALS GO OVER ROAD

Travelled Over the New Grain Route and Spent Short Time in Peterborough

HAD SPECIAL TRAIN

Monday evening about 7 o'clock a special C. P. R. train of three coaches, having on board Mr. D. McNicoll, General Manager of the C.P.R., and seven other railway officials, as well as Mr. McLean, of the Toronto Construction Co., visited the city. The train was piloted by Mr. Robt. McKay, and came from the west on a tour of inspection of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway.

It is learned that the line from Victoria Harbor to Lindsay was in good condition, although some ballasting would have to be done before it was formally opened for traffic. The ballasting crews were working from Bethany to Lindsay, and had been handicapped somewhat in their operations owing to unfavorable weather conditions.

In answer to a query regarding the taking over of the line by the C.P.R. it was stated that it would take place as soon as the finishing touches were completed. The C.P.R. has most anxious to get the line in operation.

In regard to the time table for passenger service on the line it was said that it was being drafted at present. Any schedule of a probable time table that had been published was merely guess work on the part of its authors.

Good progress was being made with the station at Orillia, but it would be some time before it was completed.

Improvements At Red Mill

Manager Clayton of the Red Mill Theatre continues to make improvements to that popular moving picture house. His latest innovation commenced this week in the shape of "day-light" pictures, for the showing of which it is not necessary to have the hall darkened. This improvement will allow the front and rear doors to be opened during the warm weather, ensuring ventilation.

NOT AN INDIGENT

Mr. Jas. Munro's name was included in the official list of persons reported from St. Joseph's Hospital to the Council as coming under the new delinquent law of the province, as published in Tuesday's paper. Mr. Munro stated to the Examiner that this was an error. He had paid his account in full to the hospital for attendance during five weeks' illness, and was unable to find out how such a mistatement could have been made.

SILK FLAG PRESENTED TO THE DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE

Interesting Ceremony Took Place at the Armouries Last Evening in the Presence of the Whole Regiment---Chaplain Davidson Addressed the Order.

During the drill last evening a pleasant instance occurred, in which the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire were signally honoured by the non-commissioned officers of the regiment. The Rangers were drawn up in front of the gallery, which was well filled with ladies, and Sergeants Dodds and McKay—the former bearing a beautiful silk flag on a handsome staff—came forward.

Chaplain Davidson gave a short explanatory address. He said that the non-commissioned officers greatly appreciated the interest shown by the newly-formed Chapter towards the Regiment as a whole, as well as the individual members. They desired to give expression as well as appreciation, and considered that an appropriate present would be that of a flag, which both the Regiment and Daughters of the Empire served under, and which they were organised, to protect and to give the respect due to it.

Colour-Sergeant Dodds then came forward with a handsome silk flag, which he handed to Colonel Clegg, who presented it to the Daughters of the Empire in the person of Mrs. Clegg, who, as Regent, gracefully accepted it, handing it on to Mrs. J. C. Davidson, standard bearer of the Chapter.

Following the rendition of the National Anthem by the band, the regiment continued its drill.

4. It being the intention of the Honourable the Minister of Militia to visit Peterborough to open the Summer Fair on Monday, May 27th, 1912. A guard of honour is hereby detailed to parade at the Armouries on May 27th at 7 p.m. The guard will consist of 25 privates and 2 sergeants from F Company and 5 privates from each of the remaining companies of the regiment, together with the Regimental Band and one bugler.

This guard will parade for a preparatory drill at the Armouries at 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 23rd.

Captain McLean is hereby detailed to command the guard.

To be Corporals provisionally, Pte. J. Simmonds and V. Elliott. To be Lance-Corporals, Pte. W. Lowingson, J. Miller, W. Gray and J. Crowe.

D. Walker, Brevet-Major
Adjutant.

The 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers held their weekly parade last evening in the Armouries. Col. Clegg was in command. Owing to the muddy conditions of the roads, the usual march out was dispensed with. A number of company commanders paraded their companies on the common adjacent to the Armouries, where the various drill manœuvres were performed to much better advantage than would otherwise have been obtained in the drill hall.

Sunday, June 2nd, has been set apart as the day upon which the annual church parade will be held.

The regiment was dismissed to the strains of the National Anthem. This feature of the parade, which is frequently overlooked, is a commendable one, and is a recognised rule that finds ready acceptance in all military centres where the British flag holds sway.

No. 6 Company, in command of Captain Langford, were entertained to a social hour at the conclusion of the parade last night. Refreshments were served, and the event, which was held in the company's quarters, took the form of a smoker. Lieut. Myers and Colour-Sergeant Dummitt contributed to the programme, which was enjoyed by all.

Victoria Day will be a very quiet day around Peterborough, as far as military affairs are concerned. This is an annual occurrence, Victoria Day usually being set aside as a day of special fete. Colonel Clegg states and there is too much on hand at present to permit of anything in the way of a celebration on the 24th.

"C" Company to Meet.

A meeting of "C" Company of the 57th Regiment will be held in the Armouries on Thursday evening.

TENDERS FOR TWO NEW SCHOOLS AWARDED BY SCHOOL BOARD

Tenders for Buildings Were All in Excess of the Appropriation---Plans Were Modified to Conform to Estimate

The Board of Education met in special session on Tuesday evening. There was present Mr. J. Crane (chairman), school trustees—Messrs. R. Fair, V. Eastwood, T. H. Adams, L. M. Hayes, and Dr. Morrison.

On motion of Messrs. Hayes and Morrison, the following report of the Building Committee was formally adopted.

FORMER PLANS MODIFIED.

Gentlemen,—Your Building Committee beg leave to report that, as authorized, we advertised for tenders for the erection of two new schools, and in response thereto received several tenders for the buildings, only four of which were in accordance with the regulations and provisions specified, but all of which, however, were greatly in excess of the appropriation. Your committee deemed it necessary to modify the plans and specifications, and the following are some of the changes: Natural stone was substituted for Roman stone, the length of the buildings was considerably reduced, but this did not make any material difference in the classrooms. Hamilton pressed brick backed by sand lime brick was substituted for Curtis Bros. brick. Some of the windows were eliminated and several other changes were made.

After the modifications were adopted by the architect, the four regular tenderers were invited to retender and your committee recommend that Mr. W J. Johnston's tender of $34,-080.00 for the erection of the King George School in the East Ward, and the tender of Messrs. Langford and Sheehy of $34,425.00 for the erection of the Queen Mary School in the West Ward be accepted.

That the tender of Messrs. Alexander and Miller of $172.00 for the wiring of the two buildings be accepted.

These are the lowest tenders.

Tenders for the heating and plumbing of these buildings have not yet been received, but will be considered in the near future.

Your committee recommend that the solicitors be instructed to draw up the necessary contracts and that cheques be returned to the contractors as soon as the bondsmen are approved by the committee and have signed the necessary bonds, and that the cheques of the other tenderers be returned to them forthwith.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. A. Morrison, Chairman.

Work on the two new schools will be commenced as soon as the necessary contracts have been drawn up, which will be a matter of a few days at the most. The new buildings will be twelve-roomed structures of modern design, and, the board claims, will be adequately equipped to accommodate the needs of the East and West Wards for many years to come. They will be named King George and Queen Mary respectively.

The sale of the old school sites will realize a substantial sum of money, which will be applied towards the purchase of the new sites. These have already been decided upon, and the final arrangements involved in the deal completed.

FATALITY AVERTED

Venturesome Canoeist Rescued in the Nick of Time From a Watery Grave

BOAT UPSET

Edward Stuart, who resides on Lake street, had a narrow escape from drowning to-day at noon. He was crossing the Otonabee at a point near the C.P.R. bridge, when the sudden whistle of an approaching train caused the canoeist to turn in the direction from which the train was coming. The result was fatal to Stuart, who was precipitated into the cold, dark waters of the Otonabee. Being a good swimmer, he immediately struck out for the land, which was but twenty yards distant, but would have had considerable difficulty in reaching it had it not been for the presence on the scene of a couple of young men who, seeing the man's predicament, put out in a boat to his rescue.

The victim grasped the stern of the boat and was towed to shore. It was nearly an hour before he recovered sufficiently to enable him to proceed to his home, none the worse for his unpleasant experience.

STRANGE CASE

Of Portland Woman—Could Not Even Eat Toast

Portland, Me.—The remarkable case of Mrs. J. Richard White has attracted much attention as she was in bad health for a long while.

Her husband says "My wife suffered intense agony from this dreadful sickness, indigestion, and could not even eat a piece of toast without suffering. Five doctors here failed to help her.

"While in Fall River, I met a gentleman who spoke highly of Vinol so I got her a bottle and before it was one-third gone she saw a vast change.

"She has just finished the first bottle and is feeling and looking better than ever before. It is certainly making her eat. Instead of eating one meal every three or four days she eats three or four times a day.

"She has gained nine pounds already and has improved 100 per cent."

We guarantee that Vinol will build you up, sharpen your appetite and give you new strength if you are weak and rundown. If it does not we pay back your money.—McDermid & Jury, Druggists, cor. George and Charlotte Sts.; also Payne's Drug Store, cor. George and Simcoe Sts., Peterborough, Ont.

Roosevelt Is Confident

Special to The Examiner.

SAGAMORE HILL, U.S.A., MAY 22.—Just before leaving for his usual morning horseback ride, Colonel Roosevelt was told of his undoubted success in Ohio. "That certainly settles the matter," said Roosevelt. "Our nomination is assured. We could have won without Ohio perhaps, but victory is surely ours with it."

THE RAIN DOES GREAT DAMAGE

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., MAY 22.—As the result of having rained every day during the month in this district and in torrents during this last two days, immense damage has been done to the crops. Large quantities of seed recently sown has been washed out, and in many districts the farmers fear that rot will destroy a large percentage of earlier crops. Added to these troubles is general scarcity of help.

HOTEL OPEN MAY 24TH.

Chemong Park hotel will be formally opened to the public on May 24th. Mr. R. Davis, proprietor, has spent a large sum of money in remodelling the hostelry, and when completed it will provide adequate accommodation for the tourists and others who may have occasion to visit this beautiful summer resort.

NINE MONTHS FOR SUFFRAGETTE LEADERS

Mrs. Pankhurst and Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence Are Found Guilty of Conspiracy and Are Sentenced To-day ---Mrs. Pankhurst Kept Court in an Uproar.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MAY 22.—Nine months each, without hard labour, was the sentence imposed this morning at the Old Bailey Sessions on Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and Mr. Pethick Lawrence, immediately after being found guilty of conspiracy following the trial in connection with the window-smashing operations some time ago. The ancient court was crowded with people who expected something dramatic, and they got it. Attorney General Sir Rufus Isaacs declared that the defendants had not attempted to defend themselves on the charge, but had introduced politics into the case to becloud the issue. Mrs. Pankhurst frequently interrupted the Attorney General by vehement and impassioned denials of his assertions, and kept the court-room in an uproar. Judge Coleridge repeatedly reproved Mrs. Pankhurst, but apparently she was unable to keep silent under the arraignment of the Prosecutor.

LONDON, ENG., MAY 22.—"May God defend us, our cause is just." This was the cry of the convicted suffragettes this afternoon as they were taken away to prison to serve nine months.

There was very little demonstration. Mrs. Pankhurst looked ill. The papers suggest that this will be a sad blow to woman suffrage.

DEFENDS ISMAY'S CONDUCT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MAY 22.—Third Officer Pittman, before Lord Mersey's Titanic Commission this afternoon, said that General Manager Ismay, whom he didn't know then, was the first to realize that the Titanic was sinking. "He told me there was no time to lose," said Pittman. "We must get the women and children into the boats at once." Immediately after this, Captain Smith gave this order and Ismay helped the officers carry it out.

OTTAWA MOULDERS DEMAND 9 HOUR DAY

The Ottawa moulders are agitating for an issue similar to that of Peterborough, namely a nine hour working day. At the present, however, it seems that a strike will be unlikely for most of the employers have already acquiesced and only four shops remain in which the conditions do not meet with the approval of the workers.

Local Barristers In Lindsay

Judge Haughton Lennox, of Toronto, paid his first official visit to Lindsay yesterday, when he presided at a session of the High Court without a jury.

Only one case was on the docket, that of Kearns vs. Kearns, which was settled out of court. It was a case in which the son owed his father a sum of money, the three promissory notes having fallen due with no payments being made by the son. The son gave as a reason for non-payment that his mother, sister, and brother had recently died, and that there was a life insurance sufficient to pay the debt he owed the father.

Messrs. Stewart & O'Connor, of Lindsay, appeared for the plaintiff, while the case of the defendant was looked after by the firm of Dennison, Peck & Kerr, of Peterborough. Mr. E. R. W. Wood, County Attorney, of Peterborough, and Mr. Kerr, being in attendance for the defendant at this morning's session.

WEDDING BELLS

POLLARD—LEGG.

A quiet wedding took place this morning at the parsonage of the Park St. Baptist Church, when the pastor, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, united in marriage Mr. George Pollard, of Peterborough, to Mrs. Clara Ligo, of Ottawa. Mr. and Mrs. Pollard will reside at 471 Mark St., East City.

SAME AS PETERBOROUGH

By-Laws Are on Files Where They Have Collected For Years

In London and New York, before a policeman goes on duty on his beat after joining the force, he is instructed in the laws that he is expected to enforce. It would also prove of value if the local police were given a copy of the civic by-laws—if such there be in existence — so that they would know what they are expected to enforce. There are on the files at the present time, by-laws dating for years back, and the only copy is that which is on the files.—Guelph Mercury.

The by-laws existing in Peterborough are in the same condition, and it was Ald. Gordon's idea to have them consolidated in order that they would be convenient, not only to the police, but also to the citizens in general.

The Liquor License Fund

The first division of the Liquor License fund for the year 1912-13, has just been handed over to the city treasurer, and amounts to $1650. The amount for the corresponding period of last month was $1590, making an increase of the present year over last of $150.

Will Endeavour To Raise $5,000

At the regular monthly meeting of the directorate of the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening, it was decided to endeavour to raise $5000.00 during the first week in June for the Association's work this year. The directors will call upon the business men and general friends of the Y.M.C.A. on the 4th, 5th and 6th of June for the purpose of enlisting their material aid for the Association this year. It is felt that the work of the Y.M.C.A. is thoroughly appreciated and that no difficulty will be experienced in securing this sum. The outlook for the present year is very encouraging.

LIVELY RUNAWAY

Frightened by an engine, a team of horses with a wagon attached, owned by White Bros., carriers, bolted northward from the G.T.R. Station this morning. When at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, one of the horses fell and was dragged some distance by the other, and on regaining its feet, it was discovered that the animal had sustained scratches and was a little lame. The vehicle was also slightly damaged.

RUNAWAY ON GEORGE STREET

Horse Made Bold Dash For Liberty —Driver Was Thrown to Pavement

RIG DAMAGED

The Lilliputian delivery outfit, owned by E. N. McWilliams, fruit and fur dealer, furnished a few minutes of excitement for a George street crowd this morning, when the steam of propulsion, in the form of a small pony of the circus variety, made a bold attempt to exceed the speed limit contrary to the rules and regulations governing traffic within the city limits.

The rig was overturned and the youthful driver thrown out. Beyond a few scratches and a generous coating of that adhesive substance with which George street is supplied, he was unhurt.

The shafts and other minor parts of the rig were broken, and it was necessary to send it to the repair shop before it could be commissioned for service again.

The horse, which was unhurt, found temporary lodgement in a stable adjacent to the Windsor Hotel.

Preparing For 12th

Grounds Being Secured for Use in Providing Meals

Preparations for providing meals on July 12th are already being spoken of. It is understood that the lot south of the Customs House has been secured by one organization, and Market Clerk Girven has been approached with a view to placing a big tent on the market square. There are other vacant properties mentioned as an evidence that a record crowd is expected. Representatives of a merry-go-round concern are also trying to secure the market for the occasion. This is just an indication of the fact that the crowd is expected to be a big one, but it is evident that ample provision will be made for their accommodation.

To Stamp Them Out

LONDON, ONT., MAY 21.—At a largely attended meeting of ministers in Barnie steps to stamp out unsatisfactory border marriages were taken and the following resolutions were passed unanimously: "That we, realising the great and growing menace to the purity and stability of the home and public morals found in improper marriages and multiplied divorces particularly with the adjoining republic, agree to refuse to marry any divorced person or persons except innocent parties divorced on scriptural grounds, and then only on presentation of the decree of divorce after reasonable time has lapsed. It is understood that the reunion of a divorced couple is excepted." Conditions in Detroit and other United States border cities were spoken of generally with great indignation.

Knights At Hamilton

Hamilton Herald:

Hamilton Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold its third annual initiation on Victoria Day. A large class of candidates will be admitted to knighthood, the exemplification of the degrees taking place in the new Oddfellows' temple. Solemn high mass will be celebrated at St. Mary's cathedral at 10.30, and will be attended by many visiting as well as local knights. The local degree team will exemplify the first and second degrees and Daniel O'Connell and staff, of Peterborough, will exemplify the third.

FARMERS NOT PLEASED

Some farmers are anything but pleased with the abundance of rain that has dampened their fields. In the low places the water has collected in the form of little lakelets and on the slopes seed has been washed out. Many farms have a system of modern drainage, but others are not so fortunate. At any rate, the gloom have been resting on the country farmer and even the farmers themselves have caught the spirit. The hired man is not a duck or a mud hen. The water goes through his coat, and he hates mud. Therefore, he is not drawn toward the fields these days. The dull mornings have the effect of keeping the hired man in bed, and what's the use of hiring a man to work around the driving shed? The potatoes have not begun to sprout as they should, quite a number of the clover fields will have to be plowed up and so on. Those who are prone to exaggeration have even worse stories to relate.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

GUELPH TEAM WILL BE HERE TO-MORROW FOR A FOUR-GAME SERIES

The Guelph team will be here to-morrow to commence a four-game series with the Peterborough team, and no doubt there will be a big crowd of fans on hand to see the opening game of the series. Manager Templin is determined to make every game a win this week, and he will have his strongest front in uniform, while Guelph are also anxious to climb the ladder, and may be depended upon to work all the way. Manager Needham has a classy club in the Maple Leafs, and, according to reports from the other end of the circuit, Peterborough will likely use Derr on the slab, while Needham's selection may be Schuman, their 225-pound hoaver, who stood Hamilton on their heads, last week. To-morrow's game is called for 3.45 o'clock. The Guelph team will be here on Friday for two games, and also on Saturday afternoon. The holiday games will be called at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. There will be an immense crowd in hand on Victoria Day, as everybody is talking baseball,

Peterborough will show the citizens of that burg professional ball for the first time, and a great demonstration is being arranged for the opening game there. There will be several side attractions, including M. M. Robinson and the band, and Bob's new 1912 pattern half bows are loud enough to drown any noise the Amazinite may attempt to make. At the time of going to press it had not been settled whether Bob or the band would lead the parade. James Patrick Fitzgerald will also take in the opening and liftlock but there will be something lacking that was prominent in the big opening here. That something is James Joseph McCaffery, of Toronto, who has put baseball on such a solid basis in the sister city.

ST. THOMAS HERE TO-DAY

The St. Thomas and Peterborough teams arrived in town together on the 1.01 C.P.R. train this morning, journeying in company from the railway town. Manager Stewart, of the Saints, has a likely looking bunch of ball players with him. They are at present tied with Ottawa for the leadership of the League, fine pitching by Jacobson, the big twirler, formerly with the Washington American League team, being chiefly responsible for their success so far. The big fellow has won two games for the Saints already, and looks like a real classy box artist.

The Saints team consists of Jacobson, Jaques, Turner and Clements, pitchers; Powers and Kisfel, catchers; Guiney 1b, Wilde 2b, Forgue short stop, Wright 3b, Stewart, Kopp outfield. Clements was billed to pitch this afternoon's engagement.

The White Caps are not a bit disheartened over their four defeats in a row. They say the luck cannot keep on leanking as badly as it has done during the past week, and feel that if they had got any of the breaks at all they should have cleared up. Manager Templin is especially pleased with the way the bunch have been batting. "I have the best hitting team in the League, bar none," he remarked to the Examiner, and certainly the club-swinging so far has been all to the good.

Templin yesterday released Boyd Heckbust, the Hamilton boy he has been carrying for a week. Hack was a sweet hitter last year, but failed to show any inclination to murder the ball this season, and, in addition, was handicapped by a bad arm. Under such conditions he was of little use to the White Caps, and Temp let him go, signing in his place Jim Graney, the St. Thomas outfielder, who played good ball for the Saints last season.

Although the rain this morning did not look very favourable for the opening game in the Canadian Baseball League at Riverside Park, the outlook at noon was brighter, and it was decided to go ahead with the game and the opening ceremonies. A big staff of men were at work on the grounds this morning and the infield will be in good shape, considering the downpour during the past few days. The greatest interest was displayed in to-day's event, and the Examiner telephones were overwhelmed with inquiries as to whether or not there would be a game. With bright weather this morning a record crowd would have been in attendance.

White Cap Notes

Hamilton Spectator: The Peterborough White Caps have lost four straight games, each by the narrow margen of one run. The Petes are leading the league in hitting, and have been scoring an average of five and six runs per game, yet are unable to break into the winning column. They are about due, and when they do get going, look out.

Brantford Expositor: Peterborough has a well balanced team, and they will be right in the race to the finish. They play a snappy game all the time.

Presentation To Mr. Law

Honoured by Fellow Employees on His Departure for New Ontario

On Monday evening several employees of the meter department of the C. G. E. Co. met at the home of Mr. Bruce Law, 186 DaHousie st., where Mr. Fred. Miles read the following address:

Mr. Bruce Law.—We, a number of your fellow-workmen of the C. G. E. Co., Peterborough, ask your acceptance of this fishing rod as a small token of our esteem for you, and hope it may afford you many pleasant hours' recreation to put it to use, and at the same time serve to remind you of your sojourn with us.

In the new field of labour you are about to enter, we trust every success will attend your efforts, and you carry the goodwill of a large number of friends, whose regard you won by your unfailing good humour and straightforward character.

Again wishing you "Good Luck," and, reluctantly, "Good-bye." We are, your old friends.

The address was signed by forty-nine employees of the department.

He was then presented with a beautiful fishing outfit, including four-piece rod, reel, silk lines and a hunting knife in a leather sheath, also a brier pipe.

Mr. Law, in his usual happy manner, suitably replied. He has been connected with the C. G. E. Co. for the past eight years, and is well known as an ardent fisherman and hunter.

He leaves next week for Earlton, New Ontario, where he will engage in saw-milling with his cousin, Mr. W. Law. Mrs. Law will join him in the course of a month or so. Their many friends in the city will wish them every success.

Minstrels At The Summer Fair

One of the features of the Peterborough Summer Fair in the Armouries next week will be a performance by Bobby Beach's Bugle Band Boys' Minstrels. This splendid organization, it will be remembered, gave several entertainments a couple of months ago, scoring an immense success. Their performance next week will be looked forward to. There will be a rehearsal of the minstrels to-morrow night, at which every member is expected to be present.

Student Hurt In "Frat" Initiations

Has Concussion of the Brain as Result of Brutal Hazing

PHILADELPHIA, MAY 23.—Edward Martin, 14 years of age, of Lansdowne, a freshman in the Lansdowne High School, is in the University hospital with concussion of the brain and internal injuries as the result of hazing he received at the hands of some of his fellow students.

Martin was about to be initiated as a member of the Delta Sigma Society. He had left school when he was seized by four or five of his friends, tied to a board and carried through the streets. Every few moments the hazers dropped Martin to the pavement.

He groaned at each drop, but his companions apparently thought he was shamming. Eventually he became dazed and the other boys cut the rope that bound him to the board and fled.

The boys who did the hazing are being protected by their companions and their names have not been revealed. Martin may die.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumber Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

The Alfalfa Competition

Almost the last call for the Peterborough County Alfalfa Competition! Alfalfa has been making a splendid growth lately. There are dozens of our farmers just near the city who have alfalfa fields that they might well be proud of. Why not enter these fields in the Alfalfa Competition being conducted by our local farm paper, Farm and Dairy? The rules of the competition call for the entry of three acres — the best three you have, of course—seeded a year ago this spring.

It will be necessary to judge these fields not later than the first week of June. The alfalfa will then be in the very best of condition and just right for judging. The time is getting short. The editors of Farm and Dairy who are conducting this competition would like to have a better idea of how many entries there will be and where they will be than they have now. They already have a nice bunch of entries, but there is no reason why they should not have ten times as many in a county so well adapted to alfalfa growing as Peterborough. Readers of this paper who have not yet entered their fields in the alfalfa competition should do so at once. Send entries to the Editor of Farm and Dairy, Peterborough, Ont.

"Why In The Name Of Common Sense Should Women Be Saved First? Save The Children" Says A Lady

Prominent English Women Express Their Opinions of Men's Actions on "Titanic"—Balance of Real, Every-day Chivalry is on the Side of the Women—Interesting Ideas Regarding This Question

DID VERY LEAST THEY COULD

LONDON, May 22.—While the men who make the laws of Great Britain are busy reviving the antiquated sea traffic regulations which were responsible for the terrible loss of life on the Titanic, the women who are unable to assist in this work—but who would like to—are engaged in an animated discussion of the collateral issue growing out of the disaster.

Were the men who sacrificed themselves to save the women and children entitled to special eulogy? Are men, in their everyday lives more chivalrous than women? Should women and children always be saved first?

"I see no especial reason to brag about the so-called chivalry of the men who permitted the women to get into the boats first," said Miss Winfred Mayo, one of the most prominent of the votes-for-women leaders. "It all depends upon what you mean by chivalry. I take it to mean the attention paid by the stronger to the weaker. It applies equally to both sexes, and you will find it very strong among women. Men, as a rule, misunderstand the word. They regard chivalry as a kind of reward to women for doing what the men want them to do. It should be borne in mind that all chivalry and heroism on the ill-fated ship were not displayed by men alone. There were many fine examples among the women of self-sacrificing during that awful time."

SIMILAR VIEWS

Similar views were expressed by Mrs. Cecil Chapman, another well known suffragist. "Right minded women are ever ready to share danger with their husbands," she added. "I believe that the general feeling among suffragists is that they would have preferred to meet death rather than face separation from their loved ones. However, there was no lack of chivalry on the part of most of the men on the Titanic. You must go to Parliament to find a dearth of that quality, where members actually laughed when told of the tortures of forcible feeding inflicted upon the women prisoners at Aylesbury."

"I do not want to seem ungracious," said Miss Nina Boyle, an official of the Women's Freedom League, "when I say that I think the men on the Titanic did the very least men could do. As we women have to put up with so many disabilities through life, we may at least expect to have some advantages in such a crisis. I do not mean to minimize the sacrifice of these men, but, on the other hand, I do not think that one can argue from this instance that the age of chivalry, in the highest sense, is not dead, as I believe it is. Women do not spend their lives expecting shipwrecks."

PLACED TOO HIGH

"It is possible to place heroism of this kind on too high a plane of chivalry," was the statement of Miss Annie Kenney, organizing secretary of the Women's Social and Political Union, of which Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst is chief. "It is so natural as to be accounted almost a natural law that women and children should be saved first—children because childhood is sacred, and women because they are so necessary to the race. At a crisis like this it must be admitted that the lives of the women are more useful than those of men. If it is insisted that for men to recognize this view and act upon it is chivalry—and I am not loath to admit it—then I think it is worth while to emphasize the everyday chivalry of women, which goes on always, but which is usually unrecognized. Women cheerfully starve for their husbands and children—I have lived among the poorer classes and know it—and starving is a much slower and more painful death than drowning. Say man is chivalrous at moments of great crises, if you will, but you must realize at the same time that in the aggregate the balance of real chivalry is on the side of the women."

According to, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the men were merely obeying, as a matter of course, the universal rule in cases of shipwreck that the women and children should be saved first.

LESS EXTREME TYPE

These frankly expressed opinions are vigorously combated by suffragists of the less extreme type. Said Miss Mildred H. Collyer: "I am sure there will be widespread disagreement with the views expressed by Miss Nina Boyle and others. The question of preference to women in danger is as old as the necessary preservation of primitive races. Now that we have reached a stage when the increase of population is indefinitely less important than its efficiency, we must reconsider our views on the subject. Nobody can pretend that the saving of an immense preponderance of women serves any longer to the good of the State. All honour to the men who stood back on the deck of the Titanic. We shall find it hard enough when our turn comes."

Mrs. G. Dyce Sharp believes it is all right to save the children first. "but," she asks, "why, in the name of humanity and common sense, the women? We live in a country where the proportion of women is something like 21 to 20, and where women are generally economically dependent upon men, and yet we make it a rule to add to the disproportion and increase the number of those who cannot be self-supporting, while we decrease the number of bread-winners. Why, for instance, should we prefer the life of a middle-aged well-to-do spinster to that of an able-bodied fireman with a wife and family at home? What sense is there in saving the wife and children of an emigrant, if you left the man on whom they are dependent, to drown? If we must, for practical purposes, have a rule, let us be done with the sentimental distinction of sex in matters of life and death, and cry: 'Youngest first!'"

ROOSEVELT SUCCESSFUL IN THE OHIO PRIMARIES

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, MAY 22.—President Taft has received complete returns from sixty or eighty primaries in his own state, Ohio, and this morning he was prepared to admit that Roosevelt had carried the majority of them. Far from being crestfallen over the result, however, Taft is preparing at once to go to New Jersey to campaign there. One of the disturbing features of this morning's reports to the Independent Republicans in the fact that Governor Harmon was very strong in the democratic primaries and appears to be practically sure of carrying Ohio for the Democrats when the final elections ensue.

WORTH KNOWING

1. That salt will curdle new milk, hence in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

2. That clear boiling water will remove tea stains and many fruit stains. Pour the water through the stain and thus prevent it spreading over the fabric.

3. That ripe tomatoes will remove ink and other stains from white cloth, also from the hands.

4. That a teaspoonful of turpentine boiled with white clothes will aid in the whitening process.

5. That boiled starch is much improved by the addition of a little sperm salt or gum arabic dissolved.

6. That beeswax and salt will make rusty flat irons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of beeswax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot, rub them first with the wax rag, then scour with a paper or cloth sprinkled with salt.

7. That blue ointment and kerosene mixed in equal proportions and applied to the bedsteads is an unfailing bed-bug remedy, as a coat of whitewash is for the walls of a log house.

8. That kerosene will soften boots or shoes which have been hardened by water, and render them as pliable as new.

9. That kerosene will make tin teakettles as bright as new. Saturate a woollen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from varnished furniture.

10. That cool rain water and soda will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

Of Interest To The Golfers

The game of golf, which usually becomes virulent about this time of the year, is a pastime in which a full grown man beats an inoffensive, white ball about 1-160th of his size around a refined and beautiful cow pasture with an iron-headed club.

There is seldom any excuse for this cruelty. It is not done in self-defence, for the ball does its best to escape, and will often crawl into a thicket and hide for hours, during which time its relentless owner will hunt for it, savagely emitting the most blood-curdling language. There is no more shocking sight than that of a golfer knocking a ball hundreds of yards at a stroke, pursuing it with grim energy in order to get another soak at it, addressing it in the most hostile terms and alluding to it with loathing when it finally falls, gashed and mangled into the creek and sinks to rise no more.

The reason for all this hatred is a mystery until we learn that each one of these balls cost 75c. But even at that, the golfer should beat the dealer and not the ball.

Golf was imported from Scotland about 25 years ago, and has become a great blessing, tearing prosperous business men away from the throats of their rivals in the early afternoon and giving the common people a chance to save a little money while captains of industry are hunting for a gold ball. The object of the game is to herd the ball into its hole in less strokes than the other fellow, which entitles the victor to take his rival's ball with a low gurgle of triumph. It costs about $11 a day to learn the game, payable in American golf balls and Scotch high-balls.

Golf is more fascinating than business or matrimony, but neither of these pursuits should be entirely abandoned on its account. When a man complains that his business is interfering with his game and that he could get a lower score if his wife did not annoy him by talking to him evenings he is indulging to excess. The game can be learned in two days by a man who is born that way, and about 2,000 years by a man who isn't.

* * * * *

In the spring with the lengthening of the days beyond the time of the second round, the golfer's fancy turns to thoughts of practising after tea. This he may do from three distinct motives. First, he may practice because he has nothing else to do and likes to be in the open air, in which case he may do much good to himself but little to his golf; secondly, he may wish to improve his mind by learning a new stroke and this may be highly beneficial so long as he does not fall a victim to that pernicious form of lunacy which dictates the playing of a complicated stroke when a straight forward one will do much better; thirdly—and this is the commonest and most depressing case—he may go out with the ambition, not of improving his play, but of preventing it from becoming worse—in short, because he is in more or less chronic condition of being "off" it with some particular club.

The practiser of this type may be sub-divided into two very different persons. The unimaginative player will take out a caddie to pick up the balls and will thump away doggedly with the recalcitrant club for a certain definite number of strokes. If he hits no more successfully than he did in his round, he will not greatly mind nor be tempted beyond the number of strokes originally prescribed; if he hits better he will neither know the reason of it nor will he inquire, but will wisely rest content with the mere fact of his improvement.

Getting Temperament.

The practiser of imaginative and poetical temperament, which is the worst of all possible temperaments for golf, will proceed on quite different lines. He will take no caddie with him, since the delicate experiments that he proposes to himself must be conducted in the most complete privacy; neither will he prescribe for his cure any definite length of time since everything must depend upon how many entirely different styles he will be compelled to try. The practiser of this turn of mind may, of course, rise to heights of ecstasy which are quite unknown to the less emotional; he has not only the intellectual satisfaction of having thought out his own cure, but if he stops at the right moment, he enjoys for the rest of the evening the touching belief hat he will never play badly again.

On the other hand there are terrible pitfalls which beset his path alone, and of these the most serious is that of trying more than a limited number of styles. It may be safely laid down that if a player has in the space of a quarter of an hour made three separate and important discoveries as to style, all of which prove perfectly futile in the matter of causing the ball to fly, he will be very ill-advised if he try to make a fourth, or think any more about style. It is abundantly clear that no one thing but rather everything is the matter, and that there is nothing for it but solid and prayerful thumping. Yet this is one of the most agonizing acts of renunciation can be asked from the genuine practiser. He cannot bear to go on with nothing to look forward to on the morrow but a round for which he has no theory ready. A circumstance which often makes it the more bitter is by some some circumstance which often makes it the more bitter is that by some curious fatality it always becomes too dark to play any more at precisely the moment when he was just about to think of the right remedy after all.

The Effect of Bad Greens.

This is more practically true, perhaps, of putting, since there is really no limit to the number of styles and attitudes of putting which can occur to anyone of restless fancy. If the majority of golfers are at this moment putting more execrably and wondering more hopelessly even than is their wont, they will be justified in laying some measure of the blame upon the summer of 1911. That summer has left behind it, at any rate on many courses, a ghastly heritage of bare, bumpy putting greens, and the barrenness and the bumpiness have shattered the golfer's nerve. To come even for a single day to a course which has so suffered is to have the confidence considerably undermined; but it is far worse for those who have to play on them regularly; they must come in time through a series of cumulative kicks and bumps to lose all faith in a providence that is not exactly fiendish. It is because faith is so essential in putting that bad greens make so bad a putting school. Lies of moderate badness through the greens are actually stimulating, and a man will not cease to hit his tee shots cleanly because he cannot be sure that the ball will not plunge into liquid mud. But on the putting green if once he ceases to believe that a truly struck ball will get its deserts by going into the hole it is almost inevitable that he should cease to hit the ball truly; one unlucky put brings several mishit ones in its train. Moreover, to make the picture a still more depressing one, the confidence will not necessarily be restored by a visit to good putting greens, for the habit of giving a frightened little stab at the ball is not one to be thrown off in an instant.

Pays the Penalty.

Some people whose fate it is to play for ever upon greens that are very muddy or very bumpy or very slopy overcome the difficulty of the situation by using curious and lofted clubs and by this means become on their native greens sufficiently formidable but they generally pay the penalty by acquiring some viciosu trick of striking quite inappropriate to the use of a putter on a putting green. So they can neither putt properly nor for some mysterious reason can they continue successfully to use their orthodox greens. If one can sometimes hole out most effectively on a thorough bad green with a mashie, it would seem that it must be much easier to hole out on a good green with the same club. There is no flaw in the argument, but the unaccountable fact remains that it is not easier, but much harder; the good green most effectively resents the insult offered to it.

It sometimes happens that on leaving a bad course for a good one, one experiences such a revulsion of feeling as to play for a while in a kind of ecstasy, wherein the hole appears to be distended to the size of a plate and no ball can possibly miss it. This is sadly rare, however, and on the whole the most perfect possible green makes the best school for the putter, subject only to the proviso that it should not be too slow. If a man can hit the ball firmly and truly on a fast green he may be puzzled by the difference in pace when he comes to a slow green, but he would hardly lose the art of hitting the ball clean.

The small town boy had been sent to a farmer uncle's to remain for two or three months, but at the end of the second week he showed up at home, much to the disapproval of his father.

"Why, Willie, what have you come back here for?" the parent inquired in no pleasant tone. "I sent you to your uncle's for a long stay."

"I know you did," Willie replied; "but you see, it was this way. The first week they killed a sheep and we et that; the second week they killed a hog, and we et that; and yesterday the hired man died, and I thought it was about time to come home."—Judge.

BABY BADLY SCALDED

Zam-Buk Brought Quick Relief

Mr. Alex. A. Cameron, of Fairmount, Antigonish Co., N.S., writes: "My little brother (three years old) had his face badly scalded by boiling tallow, and we thought if he ever got better he would be frightfully scarred. I never saw any person in such a shocking state as he was after the accident. The doctor who attended him gave us some lotion with which to bathe the scalds, and we followed this treatment for some time, but the little one did not get any ease. In fact, sometimes the preparations given seemed to make his pain all the worse.

"We at last stopped the medical treatment, and tried Zam-Buk, and after the first few applications the child seemed much easier. Zam-Buk seemed to draw the fire out of the scalds. In a few days the wounds ceased to cause him pain, and healing then commenced. In a few weeks he was quite well again.

"Not only so, but Zam-Buk healed the scalds in such a way that no scar or trace of the terrible injury has remained. A person, looking upon the child to-day, would never know that he had had such a terrible experience."

Zam-Buk is just as good for cuts, bruises, ulcers, piles, blood poison, festering sores, abscesses, pimples, eruptions, and all skin injuries and diseases.

All druggists and stores 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

OBITUARY

MR. HENRI HUDON.

Sad are the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Henri Hudon, of Kingston, who passed away in the Nicholls Hospital this morning.

The deceased young man had enjoyed good health until the last few days, and was able to walk to the hospital to submit to a second operation for appendicitis. He has been employed at the Royal Theatre for the past year in the capacity as operator, and during his residence in Peterborough he made many friends, who held him in the highest esteem. His demise will, therefore, be regretted by many.

The late Mr. Hudon was a son of Lieut.-Col. Hudon, C.M.G., of Kingston, late of the Royal Canadian Artillery. His parents were present during his last moments.

The remains will be conveyed by today's 1.40 C.P.R. train to Kingston, where interment will take place.

RECEIVED MESSAGE FROM POPE PIUS X.

This morning the Right Rev. Thomas Joseph Dowling, D.D., Bishop of Hamilton, and formerly Bishop of Peterborough Diocese, completed the twenty-fifth year that has passed since his elevation to the episcopate. The occasion was marked by impressive ceremonies at St. Mary's Cathedral to-day, together with the presentation to his lordship of illuminated addresses from the clergy and laity, the whole ceremony taking place before the altar at which Bishop Dowling was consecrated a quarter of a century ago.

One of the most notable features of the ceremony was the reading of letters from His Holiness Pope Pius X. and Cardinal Merry Dal Val, Papal Secretary of State and Apostolic Delegate to the Dominion of Canada. They were read in Latin and English by the Very Rev. Dean Mahony, V.G.

LECTURE BY REV. H M. MANNING

Rev. H. M. Manning gave a very interesting lecture in St. James' church last evening. A fairly large audience turned out and a couple of excellent solos were rendered by Mrs. Wells and Mr. Barton respectively. The subject of Mr. Manning's lecture was "A Trip to the Islands of Bermuda." Mr. J. J. Goodwin acted as chairman and an enjoyable evening was spent.

SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

Only nine passengers on British ships crossing the Atlantic last month lost by drowning in ten years, out of a total of 2,000,000, until the Titanic sank.

Public School Inspector Mount is right in regarding the Canadian Club prizes for the best essays on Canadian history, as one of the best means of intellectually interesting boys and girls in the subject.

It seems about time that the city fathers made, or made known, some preparations for paving George and Charlotte streets.

The rainy weather should be good for the grain crops—it puts them "in the swim" anyway.

Old Probs promises "higher temperature and scattered showers"—the more scattered the better.

The Chief of Police has received a letter from Toronto asking him to locate, if possible, relatives of Miss Cora Hall, who is said to have formerly lived in, or near, Peterborough. Chief Thompson will be glad to receive information.

When a woman is observed brushing the lint off a man's shoulder, it's a pretty sure sign that she intends marrying him.

Though telegraph, telephone and electric wires are "live," their proper place is with the dead men—underground.

There's too much water in the stock of baseball games these days to provide dividends or even draw interest.

A big spring seems to have opened in the heavens.

The name of James Munro, of Montreal, appeared improperly in the list of indigent hospital patients, for which the city is responsible. He is able and willing to pay for his treatment.

Mr. "Barney" McAllister was honoured last night by the presentation of a travelling bag by the Knights of Columbus.

The people last September thought they had too much of a good thing; and they "turned down" the Laurier government. Now they have too much of a good thing, in the shape of water, which they can't turn down or turn off.

RAILWAY NOTES

The railway lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific in western Canada are being increased about 10 miles in length each day at the present time and, with the arrival in less than a week of two more pioneers, this rate of progress will be doubled, which means that, with the pioneers working steadily day and night, the company will build 120 miles of track in a week. Telegraph lines are being kept well up with the construction.

The Grand Trunk Pacific announces that a through passenger service between Regina and Winnipeg will be put on by that Company next month. It is also stated that particulars with regard to the new Regina station will be made public in the near future. A sub-station on the north side of the city will soon be a necessity, but no decision as to location has been reached as yet.

Evidence of an increased national prosperity in Canada is to be found in the invasion of Ontario and Quebec by a quite unusual number of circuses. Usually not more than two of "The Greatest Shows on Earth" find their way into the Dominion in one season, but during this month and the next, no less than four are routed over the Grand Trunk Railway. Of these only the largest, Ringling Bros., of international fame, will visit Montreal. The others are Sanger's Greater European Show, Howe's Greater European Show, Howe's Great London Show, and the Haig's Show, which will confine their attentions to Ontario.

ELLIOT'S

TENNIS CLUB FORMED

A young men's tennis club has been formed in connection with the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart. At a meeting held recently attended by what was a large number of young men when the circumstances are considered, Rev. Dr. O'Brien was present and expressed the hope that the young men would take up tennis. The lawn on the east side of the church is in splendid condition, and nets and other necessaries have already been purchased. The officers elected were:

Hon.-Pres.—Rev. Dr. O'Brien.
President—Mr. John McDonald.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. A. Letellier.
Executive—Mr. Ed. Masterson, Mr. Jas. McNicoll and Rev. Fr. McAuley

The courts will be ready on Monday May 27 when the members will be able to ascertain the extent of the interest that is likely to be shown. Already, quite a number have expressed themselves as eager to get into the game, and from the present it looks as if the game is to flourish. The young ladies of the congregation are also preparing for their first game. There is every indication that the young people will take full advantage of enjoying the fine summer game.

BERNHARDT FILMS MECHANICALLY PERFECT

The motion pictures of Bernhardt in "Camille," which will be shown here on May 24 and 25, at the Grand Opera House, are unique, in that they are both technically and mechanically flawless. The testimony of numerous critics is available that the pictures do not manifest the slightest flicker. This successful attainment is due to the fact that special machines have been built for their exhibition, and the Canadian tour will be with one of these special machines.

Bernhardt herself is more astonished even than her friends at the results of her experiment. She is convinced that in this way lies her hope of living in the future generations as an artists and she has announced her intention of playing as many roles of her extensive repertoire as she possibly can, for reproduction in motion picture films.

Urging Hanna to Take Job.

Ottawa, May 23.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways left, last night for Toronto, and will to-day confer with Sir James Whitney. It is emphatically stated here on excellent authority that Mr. Cochrane will press Mr. Hanna to accept the position of chairman of the Railway Commission.

Isvolsky, the Russian ambassador to France, presiding at the annual meeting of the Russian Chamber of Commerce of Paris, last night, said that the efforts of France and Russia, acting in close collaboration with England, to put an end to the Turco-Italian war, or in any case to prevent the hostilities from disturbing the peace at other points, were being continued in complete accord with the other powers.

He expressed the firm hope that these efforts would shortly be crowned with success.

BETTER INSPECTION

Federal Government Plans to Protect Dairymen

WILL APPOINT OFFICERS

Ottawa, May 23.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, is just at present considering a scheme for the appointment of a number of special dairy inspectors for the Province of Ontario.

He is also working on a plan whereby he expects to prevent the losses sustained in the past by farmers and dairymen through the failure of dairy commission merchants. Heretofore, these commission men have been permitted to do business indiscriminately with the result that many of them who were without sufficient capital, became bankrupt. Thousands of dollars were lost every season in this way by the farmers of Ontario. In future the Minister will see to it that the farmer and dairyman is protected from loss of any kind.

Closer inspection of the cheese weighing system at the port of Montreal, which, it is charged, resulted in the loss of many thousands of dollars to the farmers of Ontario and Quebec, will also be inaugurated. For years past Ontario dairymen have complained that, owing to the weighing system at Montreal, they were losing heavily. Last session the matter was brought up in the House by Dr. Edwards of Frontenac. Mr. Burrell had the whole question investigated, and as a result he is taking immediate measures to grapple with the situation.

GOOD DAY AT WOODBINE.

Fine Weather Brings Out a Splendid Day's Racing.

Toronto, May 23.—The weather was cool and fine overhead for the fourth day at Woodbine Park, the track heavy and a splendid attendance for mid-week. The steeplechase having been declared off, left only six races, with the gold cup as the feature, and scratches reduced it to three. J. W. Schoors' Edda proved an easy winner over R. T. Wilson's Olampala, the public going woefully wrong in their support. In fact it was a bad day for the favorites.

The results were:

First race—Six furlongs, Howick Plate, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up, maidens—1st, Inspector Lestrade; 2nd, Flying Yankee; 3rd, Master Edwin. Time, 1.17 4-5.

Late Returns Give Roosevelt 3 to 1 in Ohio

WON IN ALL CLASSES

Columbus, O., May 23.—According to returns in hand to-day from approximately 4,500 of the 5,193 precincts in the state, Col. Theodore Roosevelt's delegates to the national Republican convention, carried Tuesday's Ohio primaries by a plurality of about 25,000 votes. It now seems scarcely possible that final results from the primary poll will change the number of district delegates for either side by more than one or two. The best figures available now show that Roosevelt has 32 of the 48 district delegates selected Tuesday, and that President Taft has 10.

Governor Harmon practically is assured a complete delegation of 48 delegates to the Baltimore Democratic convention. His lead now gives him control of the state Democratic convention, which will select six delegates at large.

The delegate at large situation in the Republican party will not be known or settled until June 3, when the state Republican convention is convened here. The Taft leaders claim that they will control the state convention, and designate the delegates at large for the President, but Roosevelt managers declared that late returns show the number of Taft delegates to the state convention to be dwindling, instead of increasing, as was announced early yesterday.

In only 23 of the 88 counties in the state were delegates to the state convention chosen. In the remaining counties the delegates will be named by county conventions.

An analysis made last night of the recapitulated Roosevelt vote shows that the Roosevelt strength was not confined to any particular section of the state or to any particular class of citizens. He carried mining and industrial sections, such as the Hocking Valley as well as some of the oldest and most conservative urban communities in the state. Added to these there was much strength among the farmers.

Stern War on French Criminals.

Paris, May 23.—As the result of a conference between the Premier and the chief of police authorities, a number of radical reforms will be introduced in French police methods.

Police Prefect Lepine advocates the installation of telephones, accessible only to the police, who, by means of pocket transmitters, could communicate with headquarters.

In view of the valuable services rendered at the siege of the motor car bandits by bullet-proof shields, the prefect favors their further use, supplemented by coats of mail.

He has also suggested that the use of sulphuric acid and capsules, which would render the air so poisonous that criminals would be obliged to come out of hiding places and surrender.

ATTACKING REBELS.

Mexican Federal Troops Launch Full Force at Orozco.

Bellano, May 23.—The main columns of the rebels fortified here were attacked by the federals under Gen. Rabago. The fighting is still in progress.

Gen. Orozco came down from Jiminez to take personal charge just before the federals attacked at four o'clock. Gen. Salazar was in command of the first rebel line. The federal commands of Gens. Trucy, Aubert, Rebago and Tellez, and Cols. Villa and Urbania are engaged. The federal force is estimated at 3,000, and the rebels at 4,000, with the advantage in fortified positions being in favor of the insurrectos.

While the federal artillery poured shell after shell into the rebel's positions, rebel cavalry moved to one side in a flank movement, at the same time pouring a heavy fire into the federal columns.

Casualties up to eight o'clock last night were few. There is every prospect that the battle, which has been so long awaited, will be decided to-night. There was no change in positions at night fall. The infantry fire after dark was desultory, but that of the federal artillery was almost continuous.

Denial From Cartwright.

Ottawa, May 23.—Sir Richard Cartwright sent the following letter to the press yesterday afternoon regarding the evidence of W. E. Travers in the Farmers' Bank enquiry Tuesday in Toronto:

"Sir,—I observe a very extraordinary statement in reference to an alleged conversation between myself and the late manager of the Farmers' Bank. I did not know Mr. Travers, and I very much doubt if I ever had any conversation with him at all. In any case, the statement is absurd on its very face—the circulation which a bank is authorized to issue has nothing whatever to do with the amount or character of the notes it holds. The circulation is based on the amount of its paid up capital."

(Signed) "R. J. Cartwright."

In his evidence Travers stated that he had asked Sir Richard if it were irregular for a bank to issue circulation against good farmers' notes.

He alleged that Sir Richard had said: "If you cannot issue circulation against good farmers' notes, what can you issue it against?"

UPROAR IN REICHSTAG.

Socialist Leader Says Kaiser Would Fare Ill In England.

Berlin, May 23.—The final session of the Reichstag yesterday was a most stormy one. The Social Democratic leader, George Ledebour, in referring to the Emperor's recent threat at a banquet at Strasburg that he would incorporate Alsace-Lorraine into Prussia, declared:

"A people like the English would in a parallel case either have smashed the throne to a fragment or have confined a monarch making such remarks in some quiet castle in the same way as had been done to the mad King of Bavaria and ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid."

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, rose excitedly from his seat and answered, declaring that the nation, which was devoted to the Emperor, would know how properly to resent such attacks. The Social Democrats, Albert Suedekum and Philipp Scheidemann, and the Conservative, George Schultz, increased the uproar by hurling charges and counter-charges at each other, the Socialists saying that it was a fine state of things when they, instead of the Imperial Chancellor, had to appear in defence of the constitution and citing the Conservative attacks on the emperor.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg then made another attack on the Socialists.

The session was adjourned to Nov. 29. Before reading the Imperial rescript proroguing the House, the Chancellor briefly thanked the members for passing the public defence bills, which, he said, "give evidence at home and abroad of the resolute spirit in which the nation asserts its power by strengthening the guarantees of peace."

Italian Shot Compatriot.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 23.—Because Ralph Marabello refused to pay $1.50 alleged to be due him, Vincenzo Salurio shot and seriously injured him while on his way to work yesterday. Scores of men on their way to work witnessed the shooting. The bullet lodged in the victim's head.

The assailant was arrested immediately.

Seized Beer in "Dry" District.

Brockville, May 23.—Four cases of beer shipped into Athens, which is a local option village, were seized by Constable Compo. One was addressed to a fictitious name, and the others to prominent men of the locality, who disclaim any knowledge of the shipment. An investigation is being made and prosecutions will likely follow.

WOMEN, AVOID OPERATIONS

Many Unsuccessful — And Worse Suffering Often Follows. Mrs. Rock's Case A Warning.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will show how unwise it is for woman to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when often it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Hear in her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has restored the health of thousands of suffering women. Why don't you try it?

The Termagant

(Short Story.)

The delivery man put the heavy basket on the porch, and, reaching around, struck the lower panel of the door a resounding thump.

A window in the adjoining house was raised. A sharp voice drifted over the fence.

"Leave it there!" the sharp voice directed. "I'll take it away presently."

The delivery man laughed. He was a brisk young fellow to whom laughter was a necessity.

"Thank you kindly," he called back, "but it suits me better to take it away myself." He picked up the basket and started back to his wagon. But a woman met him, a short, red-faced woman who ran out of the neighbouring house in a raging hurry.

"Here," she cried, "that's mine! What do you mean by taking away the goods that I paid for myself? You're too much of a smarty, young man. Put down that basket! Do you hear me?" And her voice rose to a screech.

The delivery man was unmoved.

He looked at the invoice slip closely.

"Are you Mrs. Jane Sampson?" he asked.

"You know well I am."

"And you live at 3,849 Cordova Place?"

"Idiot!"

"Then compare these goods with the order, ma'am, an' see if they tally."

His pleasant coolness still further excited the irascible one.

"As if an honest woman couldn't go into a decent neighbour's house without having her character impeached! It's a fine lot of clerks an' scufflings they're hiring nowadays. Rowdies that go about insulting honest customers. I'll report you the next time I enter that swindling old shop of yours—which, maybe, will never be again!"

"Everything all right, Mrs Sampson?" inquired the delivery man as he turned to his wagon. Then he threw back this question: "What part of England are you from, Mrs Sampson?"

"I'm not from England, I'm Canadian, from just back of Lunnon. And what business is it of yours, you grinning Yankee"

"I'm not a Yankee, I'm Irish," laughed the delivery man.

"What's th' odds? I'm Canadian and back of that I'm English, an' good stock too—from Broadwater-by-Worthing."

The delivery man, who had been looking over his route book, closed it with a slam and laughed. Then he picked up his reins.

idiot?"

"It's at Broadwater I'm laughing."

"What's wrong with Broadwater?"

He laughed again.

"That's the old place where they used to duck the scolding wives."

Mrs. Sampson was speechless. The delivery man threw up the lines. Then he leaned down.

"How's the bathin' just back of Lunnon?" he archly asked.

If potatoes hadn't been so high, and apples so much higher, Mrs. Sampson would surely have brained the saucy youngster with one or the other. Instead she picked up the basket and stamped into the house and banged the door—to the great delight of the livery man, who heard it half way down the cross street.

"Gee, but I'd hate a temper like that," he muttered. "Always raisin' merry brimstone in one form or 'nother. "It's sorry I am for her man."

And he drove along, a little chastened by the thought.

As for Mrs. Sampson, she stormed into the house, passing the infant Victoria, at her high chair close to the window, with scarcely a glance, and proceeded to make the kitchen resound with her noisy evidences of wrath.

The infaint Victoria, aged 3, was wise beyond her years. It was something like instinct that warned both the infant and her father to lie low when Ma Sampson was particularly given to tantrums.

And the infant Victoria, albeit she sorely craved for a drink, waited until quite sure her irascible parent was in an approachable humour.

With no one upon whom to vent her wrath the rage of the angered woman slowly cooled.

"Mamma," cried the diplomatic Victoria, "I wanna a dwink."

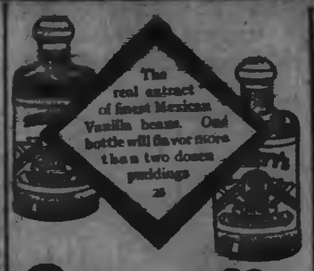
WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Miss Emma Read, Ludney, Ont., writes:—"I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.



Shirriff's True Vanilla

And then no mother could have been kinder.

And when John Sampson came home, tall, broad-shouldered, as became a retired royal artilleryman, the usual tongue-lashing awaited him. But John was used to it and had hardened under it, and went on with his washing and tidying in apparent unconcern. He knew there was a good supper awaiting him — there would be no better on the street—and that at the present was his main concern.

Presently the scolding voice died down, and the woman briskly called, "You're supper's waitin', man," and John sat down beside the smiling Victoria and ate like the hungry man he was.

"John," said the woman with bitter emphasis, "there's a man you are called upon to give a beatin' to."

John passed up his cup.

"Who is he, an' what's he done?" he calmly asked.

"He insulted your wife to her face and afore the neighbours. An' he's the delivery lad from the big grocer shop at the corners."

"I mind th' lad," said big John. "A likable youngster."

His wife stared at him.

"Didn't ye hear what I said?" she almost screeched. "The lad insulted me!"

"An' he has a long reach," John calmly continued, "an' a scrappin' eye, an' I'm past me fightin' time—an' I don't like the contract."

And then the termagant's phials of wrath were uncorked, and she scolded herself blue in the face. In the midst of the wild tirade the impassive John filled his pipe, took his hat, and went out, closing in behind him the merciless clack of that tireless tongue.

To say that the delivery man met with a warm reception at his next call at the Sampson home would be to put it mildly. But he accepted the verbal onslaught with unfailing good nature. He even chuckled when he realized that the woman continued her patronage of his hated employers so that she might have the opportunity to roast him.

"I come of a talkative family meself," he smilingly said, and went his way.

And what happened that day happened the next and the next. It seemed as if all the Sampson wrath bags were especially filled and waiting for his appearance.

But on the third day the delivery man was late and Mrs. Sampson went out to her front gate to look for him. And then she noticed that the gate was open and the small Victoria had disappeared. She anxiously looked up and down the street, and far away she saw a blue spot bobbing along the walk. And lo! It was the Victoria's blue dress and the little Victoria's hand was held tight by a big policeman, and a half-dozen small boys sedately followed.

The woman's ever smouldering wrath flamed up.

"Well, it's a fine idea if a decent woman's child can't get out for an airing without th' police draggin' her home!"

The big officer held up his hand.

"Is your name Sampson?"

"It is."

"Is this your child?"

"It is—an' what are you chargin' her with?"

"Steady, ma'am. This is no time for silly talk. Fifteen minutes ago the child here tried to cross Lincoln Avenue at th' corner of Pine. She ran from behind a street car directly in front of an automobile. Well, she wasn't killed, as you see. An' why not? Because a young man jumped down from a delivery wagon an' dragged her away. She didn't get a scratch, but the poor lad was badly hurt—they say he can't live. I was there, ma'am. Two jumps and he had her. It was th' quickest and bravest act I ever saw."

The woman's legs began to tremble. She caught up the child.

"Mamma," sobbed the little Victoria, "I's been velly naughty."

The woman did not heed her.

"Who is th' man?" she dully asked.

The officer took out his notebook.

"His name is Graney, Thomas Graney. He's the delivery man for Harney Bros., at the crossing."

A small mob filled the walk by this time. Mrs. Sampson turned to the nearest woman.

"Mrs. Thompson," she said, "will you look after th' little one in th' daytimes for a spell? My man is used to caring for himself."

The neighbour woman took the child in her arms.

"Gladly, Mrs. Sampson," she said.

The mother of Victoria turned to the policeman.

"Where did they take him?"

"St. Mark's."

The woman hurried into the house. "Come, come, clear th' walk!" said the big policeman. "There's nothing to see."

Just a half-hour later the superintendent of St. Mark's was confronted by a determined figure.

A stout woman, dressed in black, a stout woman with strong features and thick gray hair, looked down at him.

He stopped writing.

"Well?"

"You are Dr. Larned?"

"Yes."

"You have a lad here named Graney?"

"Yes. Brought in this afternoon. Are you a relative?"

"No."

"A friend?"

"None."

"Well?"

"I'm here to take care of him."

The superintendent stared at her.

"But he will receive the best of attention. Everything that medical skill and nursing can do will be done. Why should you interest yourself in this special way?"

Her anger was rising, but she gripped it back.

"Because I'm th' mother of the child he saved!" She drew a quick breath. "Do you hear that?" Her temper was slipping away again. And again she gripped it. "Th' mother of th' child," she repeated slowly, with her teeth biting her lips.

The superintendent instantly arose.

"Take the chair by the desk, madam. We must talk this matter over. It is fine and very commendable for you to feel this way, madam. It means that your gratitude impels you to go to any lengths to save this heroic boy. But consider, madam."

"Consider what?"

"Your unfitness, your lack of practical training."

Her temper was rising again. But she mustn't let it get away. That would spoil all.

"There's not a nurse under this roof of yours that isn't a child to me," she said. "You want the papers? They're all here—certificates, diplomas, resolutions, and two medals." And she pointed to the black bag on the floor at her side. "I'll tell you what they cover. Two years at Guy's, in gen'ral work; three years in th' accident ward in the Royal Hospital, Liverpool; a Red Cross year in th' Soudan; through the Boer war with the field hospital corps, gunshot wounds and fevers; two years at the Victoria Hospital at Alberta, accidents and fevers and general work. I'm sound as a trivet. Am I strong? I once held the biggest guardsman in the line, mad with jungle fever, for fully 20 minutes before help came, and him trying to slash himself with a knife." She suddenly bared her neck. "That's what he gave me, but I never let go."

The superintendent suddenly arose and put out his hand.

"Madam," he said, "I'm glad to know you. Kindly come this way."

And the termagant picked up her well filled bag and went where he led her.

Three days later the chief visiting surgeon came into the superintendent's office.

"Where did you get the terror who is nursing the Graney case?"

"Volunteer."

"She's a good deal more of a regular. I never saw such a woman."

"What's the matter with her?"

"Why, she knocks all the dignity out of me. She tolerates me as a surgeon, but when it comes to nursing, she's up and at me like a wild cat."

"Well?"

"I let her have her way. It's easier."

"And how's the boy?"

"By Jove, I believe she's going to pull him through."

There was very little chance for the exercise of that fiery temper in the sick room. It had to content itself with bare flare-ups with the head nurse and the younger doctors.

Once it almost exploded when a short, gray-bearded man came in and looked at the still unconscious lad.

"I am Mr. Rutgers," he said. "It was my automobile that did the damage. I want to offer every reparation in my power. If there is anything I can do to make this brave fellow comfortable, tell me what it is. If it can be arranged, I'd like to assume your salary, too."

The look she gave him drove him in a hurry from the room, and he hastily sought the superintendent.

"Is the nurse in the Graney boy's room crazy?"

"No. What makes you think that she is?"

"Why, I offered to pay her salary, and she gave me a murderous look that scared me from the room."

"No wonder. She isn't working for pay. She's the mother of the child."

One morning the patient opened his long-closed eyes and saw his old customer a little ways off. He looked at hr intently. Yes, it must be.

"Have you checked off the order, ma'am?" he faintly asked.

She whirled about.

"God save us!" she cried.

"How's the kiddie?" he softly inquired.

And at this the woman of iron suddenly burst into tears and turned to the window.

"What are you crying about?" demanded the sick man.

The termagant turned quickly.

"It's none of your business," she snapped at him, and went on crying, only more softly.

Early next morning the kitchen latch of the Sampson home was raised and the mistress appeared before her husband, who was making the best of a self-concocted breakfast.

"I've come home, John, an' I am very tired." He caught her in his arms and put her in her favourite chair. "The lad is getting well fast an' they're going to send him away, an' they don't need me any longer. How's Victoria?"

"Fat and rosy."

She looked around the room.

"It seems fairly clean."

"We were expecting you today," said John. "but not so early. See here, dear woman."

He threw open the door of the parlour, and the little room seemed filled with flowers.

"All for you, dear. Flowers from everybody."

She looked at them with a pleased smile.

"It's a good world, John, but I'm very tired, an' I think I'd like a sup of tea."—W. R. Rose in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Always wash dishes which have been used at once. Do not leave them lying about the sink.

Do not put the handles of the knives in hot water. See that the knives are well-washed and dried before beginning to clean them on the knife-board.

When the work is finished, rinse the dish cloths, wring them out, and hang them up to dry.

Try to do all the scullery work in a tidy and methodical manner.

Use as much soap as is necessary to make things clean, but do not waste it by letting it lie in the water.

When pots and pans have been used, put a little cold water into them at once, and let them soak for a short time. Then brush them well with the pot-range, and wash them thoroughly inside and outside with soap and hot water. Dry them with the dish cloth (do not use a towel for this purpose). If a pan has been used for anything of a greasy nature, put a piece of washing soda into it, add some water, place it on the fire, let it boil, then proceed to wash it in the above manner.

To clean iron spoons, scrape down a little bathbrick, dip a dry flannel into it; rub the spoons well with it, dust them with a dry cloth.

To clean pot lids and tins after they have been washed, put a little dry whiting in a saucer, dip a damp cloth into it, and rub it all over the lids and tins; then polish them with a dry cloth.

Love That's Kin to Hate

By Ruth Cameron

"No coward kills the thing he loves,
By every one let this be heard;"
—Oscar Wilde.

LOVE is the most beautiful thing in the world; hate is the ugliest thing; the two are commonly supposed to be opposite poles. And yet how often love is quite as cruel and just as much happiness destroyer as hate;

There is a woman in this town who loves her son very dearly — so dearly in fact that she is doing her best to spoil his home. Her son is married to a good woman whom he loves and who loves him. He has a comfortable income; he has children; he and his wife can enjoy good health. There is no reason why his home should not be a model of harmony and happiness, except that his mother loves him with this love—that is more cruel than hate. She is a widow and has lived with him since his marriage. His wife has always tried to make her comfortable and happy, but she refuses to be either, and everything that the wife does she misconstrues and often misrepresents to her son. Fortunately he is a man with a strong sense of justice and infinite tact and while he treats his mother with the utmost love and kindness, he refuses to let her spoil his love for his wife.

I am not forgetting that there are two sides to everything. But this is the description of a witness who has lived in the home for some years and who went there prejudiced in the mother's favour.

Again, a certain young man was in love with a sweet and desirable girl. His mother said he was too young to marry, and by clever intriguing actually succeeded in estranging him from the girl. Since then the girl has married another man, and the son, who never found any other woman he cared for, has become a "man about town" in the very worst sense of that phrase. I think his mother would give her life now to see him marry a good woman and settle down, but he does not wish to marry, and he is certainly not fit for any good woman. And his mother is to blame.

To be sure both these experiences are exaggerated cases of the cruelty of love, but I know of many homes where this jealousy, although less acute and ruthless, still spoils infinite happiness every day.

Of course there are a great many sweethearts and wives who are selfish in their claims on their lovers and husbands. I am not condoning their faults. But we all know that sex love is inclined to be selfish and exacting. Whereas mother love is universally supposed to be the most unselfish love in the world. Is it not more sad and terrible then when we find even this holy affection tainted by selfishness and jealousy? ?

Besides, the mother must have known what it is to be a wife. The young wife does not know what it means to be the mother of a man. The younger woman is almost always condemned most harshly in such cases. It seems to me that the older woman who has lived long enough to have greater sympathy and understanding, and who has a more selfless affection to live up to, is faithless to a greater trust.

Ruth Cameron

For Two Bishops.

The veteran cricketer, Dr. W. G. Grace, has probably been photographed and has given his autograph as many times as most celebrities. At a meet the other day a wee maidie approached him with notebook and pencil for his autograph, which was gracefully accorded with the cheery smile and good-natured manner for which the genial old champion is so well known. On another occasion a fortnight later, much to his surprise, the same little lady shyly sidled up to him with the necessary documents and the request for his autograph. "But I gave it to you only a few days ago," laughingly said the veteran. "Oh," came the answer, "I changed that one for two bishops."

A Queer Hermit.

Isaac Sheath, who has just died in the workhouse at the age of seventy-eight, lived the life of a hermit for nearly forty years at Newport, Isle of Wight. He occupied a mud-hut which he erected on a piece of waste land in the village of Chale, but the hut became so dilapidated that the rural district council ordered its destruction. Sheath was greatly exasperated by the council's interference, and before he left for the workhouse he burned the hut to the ground. Mice and birds had grown so accustomed to the old man and his lonely ways that they used to come and feed from his hand.

NASAL CATARRH

Responsible for Much Deafness, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and Stomach Trouble.

Medicated Air Will Cure.

These are common diseases, but not less dangerous and difficult to cure on that account. In our climate the weather changes quickly. We are careless. Disease attacks us before we know it. A large majority of our people have nose, lung, or throat troubles, and find it hard to get cured.

It's remarkable with what tenacity both the medical profession and the laity adhere to the old theory that these diseases can be reached and combated by dosing. And this despite the fact that failure to cure in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred attends this mode of treatment.

STOMACH MEDICINE CAN'T CURE.

At best it is a roundabout way of trying to reach the disease which is in the air passages of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs. Leave the stomach alone—use a remedy that air will carry into the minutest air cells, into the tiniest cavities of the affected organs.

LIQUID REMEDIES DANGEROUS.

Doctors say only "Catarrhozone" can cure—you inhale it along with the air you breath—it goes where the living disease germs are gnawing into your system—it kills these germs—it heals, soothes. It CURES.

CATARRHOZONE GUARANTEED.

Wouldn't it be wise to use Catarrhozone now—to-day—and be cured permanently?

You can send the soothing vapor of the pine woods, the richest balsams and healing essences, right to the cause of your trouble by inhaling Catarrhozone.

Little drops of wonderful curative power are distributed through the whole breathing apparatus in two seconds.

Like a miracle, that's how Catarrhozone works in bronchitis, catarrh, colds, and irritable throat. You simply breath its oily, fragrant vapor and every trace of congestion and disease flees as before fire.

So safe, infants can use it; so sure to cure, doctors prescribe it, so beneficial in preventing winter ills, no person can afford to do without Catarrhozone. Used in thousands of cases without failure. Try it yourself 25c, 50c, $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

POSTAL PRECAUTIONS

BRITAIN KEEPS CLOSE WATCH ON DISHONEST CLERKS.

The Government Clerk Who Tries to Rob the Mails Has Absolutely No Chance of Escape—He Is Under a Never-Ending System of Espionage and the Letter-Carriers Are Carefully Supervised.

If the postoffice official in London, England, is not a perfect type of honesty it is certainly not the fault of the authorities, whose watchful eyes are ever on the alert to detect the slightest straying from the straight path of rectitude; and it says much for this system of espionage, and probably much more for the innate honesty of this great army of public servants, that they are so seldom caught tripping.

When we consider that at least $500,000,000 passes every year through the hands of these men, many of whom are none too well paid, and that the letters they handle are counted annually in hundreds of millions, it is little short of amazing that so few of these valuables and missives fail to reach their destination. "Postoffice people," says the secretary of a large guarantee association, "are exceedingly honest. Although we have 28,000 of them on our books, the number of defaulters averages only twelve a year." One defaulter to more than 2,300 employes! Could any testimony to probity be more eloquent?

Of course, there are black sheep in every flock, however carefully chosen; and it is to keep an eye on these undesirables that the postoffice has devised its machinery of detection, of which the outside world knows so little, and which is so perfect in its working that the cleverest thief who ever drew Government pay cannot long elude it. Honest and dishonest alike are kept under a surveillance which never falters nor flags, and which keeps an unresting eye on them out of, as well as in, office hours. If an employe is found to be a borrower of money, or if his creditors summon him to the County Court, he becomes suspect at once. If it is discovered that he is living in a house and in a style beyond his apparent means; if his wife takes a sudden fancy to expensive finery; or if he himself develops extravagant habits—all these are danger signals, and he becomes an object of special attention to the postal detectives.

He cannot move a finger unseen by eyes whose duty it is to watch him, though he himself never sees them. Let us suppose that our suspect is a sorter. In this character he has naturally abundant opportunities of intercepting letters containing valuables. He may have been doing this for a considerable time without detection. Now that his honesty has come under suspicion, it must be put to the test.

The first test employed is to give him an ascertained number of letters to sort, and to count them afterwards. None are missing. Evidently our man has not been tempted, or the temptation has not been sufficiently strong. The next step in the detective process is to prepare a number of letters containing valuables — banknotes and postal orders. One of these is missing; but the most careful search of the sorter fails to reveal it. He has escaped this time, but suspicion has now become practical certainty.

Now, five hundred letters are addressed; each address being noted, and are given to our man to sort. This time there can be no failure if he yields to temptation. Immediately over his head as he works is a clock—(it is an actual case that is being described)—the works of which have been removed; and through the winding holes, the eyes of a detective concealed in the adjoining room are watching his every movement. The sorter works rapidly, unconsciously; only a few letters now remain and the hidden detective begins to think once more he has failed. But wait a moment. The sorter picks up one of the remaining letters, and feels it with his fingers; he hastily produces a large addressed envelope from his pocket, slips the letter into it, and fastens it down. A few minutes more, and his sorting is done—for ever.

The large envelope into which he has slipped the letter containing a bank note or postal orders, easily detected by his trained fingers) is found to bear the address of a relative. This man has probably received many a similar enclosure to convert into cash for the benefit of the sorter, who at last must pay the penalty of his dishonesty.

Such is a sample of the methods of the postoffice detective system, which rarely fails to run the dishonest employe to earth, whether he be sorter, postman or postmaster.

The postman is even more subject to temptation than the sorter, and with less chance of detection. Thousands of pounds pass yearly through his hands; and he is just as skilful as the sorter in discovering the letters that contain valuables. With the help of his fingers or his lantern he knows to a certainty which envelopes contain bank notes or postal orders, and it says much for his honesty that he is so seldom tempted to annex them. He knows, too, well enough—the advertising columns of the newspapers will tell him — which firms in his round are in the habit of receiving orders containing money. To intercept a few of these letters, to open them by means of a damped piece of felt or the steam of a kettle, is an easy matter. If they are found to contain nothing negotiable, it is equally easy to fasten them down again and deliver them.

But if he succumbs to the temptation, Nemesis is soon on his track; and by a system of test letters he is as surely caught as the sorter on whom keen eyes keep watch through the winding-holes of an office clock.

In a suburban postoffice a passage built between the walls has more than once served to catch the unsuspecting thief.

Rock Salt Discovered by Accident.

The great rock salt deposits of Louisiana were discovered by accident in May, 1862. Salt was very scarce at that time, and the proprietor of the Island's salt works, John Marsh Avery, determined to profit by it. With this end in view he commenced to deepen his wells. One negro workman, after going down sixteen feet, came to Mr. Avery with the news that he had struck a sunken log, and could proceed no further. Mr. Avery investigated and found, not a log, but the great rock salt deposit that has made Louisiana famous throughout the country. The discovery did not come altogether as a surprise, as Thomassy had predicted that a great rock salt deposit would one day be discovered in each of the five Gulf islands, and perhaps in other portions of the state. Since the close of the war, rock salt has been an important contributing factor in the mineral wealth of the state.—National Magazine

One on Sir Robert.

Sir Robert Ball, the astronomer, is fond of telling an amusing story against himself. He is a round-faced, jovial-looking man in appearance, not resembling in the least the ordinary conception of a famous scientist. Once he was engaged to lecture in a remote part of Ireland and found no vehicle waiting for him at the station. At last a typical Irish servant came up and said: "Maybe you're Sir Robert Ball?" When he found that he was correct in his surmise the man said: "Oh shure, your honor, I am sorry to have kept you waiting, but I was told to look out for a gentleman with an intellectual look."

"Truth" understands that the objets d'art and library at Sandringham have been settled by King Edward to pass as heirlooms with the estate, and it was his wish that the contents of the hall should remain intact, and that none of the collections should be removed to Windsor Castle or any other crown residence.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Mass, Lunenburg, N.S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never now, and I shall always say a good word returned. My skin is soft as a child's for this Ointment."

A Dangerous Dive.

In his reminiscences of fifty years of naval life Admiral Kennedy tells this: "An absurd adventure happened to two of our men at the opera. They were in the gallery and were both considerably the worse for liquor, when one of them fell over the railing into the pit. His chum, under the impression that he had fallen overboard, took off his coat and dived after him. Wonderful to relate, neither of them was killed. One broke his leg, the other was unhurt."

Prison For Apprentices.

Few Londoners know that there exists a special place of confinement in which the City Chamberlain has power to commit disobedient apprentices. In Bridewell Hospital, close to Fleet street, are, however, a few cells which are practically the sole remains of the old building that stood on the site of a one-time royal palace at Blackfriars. The Bridewell was given by Edward VI. to the Lord Mayor for use as a workhouse for the poor and idle, and the hospital, which resulted from this gift, is still governed by the aldermen.

These cells are occasionally occupied for brief periods by refractory apprentices, who are brought before the City Chamberlain in his court at Guildhall, and, if he finds that they are incorrigible, he commits them to Bridewell for a week, or, in exceptional cases, a fortnight or twenty-one days, the lads thus escaping the bad influences of an ordinary prison.

MAKE the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ attractive to red blooded men and normal minded women. That is the secret of success in getting non-churchgoers to come into the household of God. Deep down in the heart of everyone, from the society leader to the shoeblack, there is some sort of leaning toward God and goodness. If there is any one in the world devoid of such a feeling I have never met him, and I have met all sorts and conditions of men.

But what should be done and, more important still, what should not be done, to fan that small feeling into a great big flame of enthusiasm?

From the storm of criticism of methods that have made the Drexel Biddle Bible classes the success they are, I rise smiling to say, "Nothing succeeds like success." Our answer to all criticism is that we are getting hold of the men, and if others are not satisfied with us we are very well satisfied with ourselves.

The sole platform of some extremists in religion is "give up." Give up all your little simple pleasures. Cut off your friends if they do not agree with you in your views. Pluck out right eyes and cut off right hands if they offend you.

My idea is:—Make your right eye and right arm cease offending and such steps as the Scriptural quotation suggests will be unnecessary.

It would be foolish for me to go to one of my polo playing friends and say, "You should turn your thoughts to religious subjects, but before you can do that you must give up polo." It would be equally silly for me to say to a young lady who is prominent in social circles and a general favorite in her set, "You are neglecting spiritual matters. You should go to church. But before you will be qualified to go you must cut loose from your social connections."

I may sum up my attitude toward this question of popular religion by saying that I advocate linking the simple pleasures of life with a devotion to the cause of Christ, and certainly do not agree with those who say that to the religious man those simple pleasures should be taboo.

To illustrate what I mean by merging the gentleness of the Christian with the pastimes and pleasures that the normal minded, well balanced man or woman considers essential to happiness in this life, let me quote one of my polo playing friends:—

"Biddie," he said to me the other day, "we don't seem to play the game with the same Christian spirit that our friends the [illegible] do. In the most heated period of the game, when the American players have been cussing blue streaks and enlarging their vocabulary of swear words in condemnation of ponies, ball and mallets, all one hears from the members of the English team are such violent, terrifying outburst as 'My stars!' 'Gracious me!' 'Isn't that provoking!' And this from military swashbucklers who have won the D. S. O. and all kinds of honors braving death a hundred times. There is something wrong with our methods when the English in the wildest moments of an exciting polo game can behave in that gentle and gentlemanly manner."

That illustrates the point I am trying to make, that we should not condemn polo as wrong and unchristianlike because our players find they must be profane during the indescribably heated moments of a closely contested period, but, rather, we should get these players to become members of the big family of God and then say, "Now go ahead and play polo all you want to, and show the difference between a profane polo player and one who is a Christian and a gentleman."

I have been criticised because when I became a Christian I did not give up my polo. Men get men interested in a lady-like Christianity. Men and boys will never be attracted by a religion that is offered to them in effeminate guise. Such a wrong conception of Christ's character is due to man's error. It is not to be blamed on God.

One goes to a picture gallery. Among the beautiful works of the old masters is sure to be one depicting Christ in the hands of his enemies. There will be seen a Roman soldier in the foreground. He is always a man with great bulging muscles, huge shoulders and massive chest. With a spear he menaces the crowd, composed to a man of well fed, robust looking rowdies, full of misplaced energy for the condemnation of Christ. In the centre of the throng is the artist's idea of Christ. He depicts the King of kings as an anaemic, effeminate looking man, thin and sickly, a figure that arouses pity simply because it is so weak and womanly in the midst of a crowd of strong and robust men.

Now, where do the artists get their idea of a Christ that looked like that? Certainly the Christ who drove the money changers from the temple and upset their tables and flogged from the threshold the laggards who stooped to pick up the scattering coins was no weakling such as the old masters and their imitators delight to depict. Neither was the Christ who fasted forty days and forty nights a man of the physical condition that our painters imagine him. The Christ that the Drexel Biddle Bible classes uplift to the world is one of robust constitution, an athlete and a man.

There is proof in the Bible that we are right in this conception of Christ, the conception that is winning to our classes men and women of social rank and men and women of the workaday world, all equally attracted by the uplifting of a Christ who approves of the feats of the athlete if performed in a Christian spirit and of every form of pleasure and pastime that men and women count worth while, provided always that the predominating element is the gentleness, fairness and courtesy of the Christian and the gentleman.

We are not able to prove by the Bible that Christ's early life was passed in that of any other normal boy of good health and boyish instincts. But I have no doubt it was. A good deal of the early life of Christ is lost, but we know that he helped around the home carpenter's shop. It was through this early training that he later was able to use such illustrations as "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Now what did Christ know about yokes? He knew all about them, for he made them. When helping around that little carpenter's shop of his boyhood days he made the wooden yokes that the oxen wore, and working with the tools of the carpenter of that day it is not to be supposed that Christ grew up to be a thin armed, sickly boy.

In all reverence I suggest that Christ played the games that the village boys indulged in in that day. If basketball had been in vogue I think Christ would have played it with the other boys, but he would have played it in a Christlike spirit. That is the point I am trying to convey. That instead of condemning these healthy, manly sports and seeking to get men to embrace a religion that declares them wrong, the right way to begin the work is to Christianize the sports and the players. That is our Drexel Biddle Bible class method.

How completely illogical it would have been on my part had I, when I decided to devote my life to the work of building up a Bible class movement among men, turned to my friends in society and said:—"I am going to live a Christian life. Goodby! I shall attend no more society affairs. My list of acquaintances will be limited to those who go to church and take an interest in Christian work. No more dances. No more dinners. No more entertainments. Never again will I put on the gloves with a man. Everything that has made life worth living in the past is to be torn out of my life and thrown to the winds."

Is it possible that any one can be so absurdly illogical as to say that only in that way can a Christian hope to bring his friends to his way of thinking?

Bible Class Work.

I cut out some things when I started this Bible class movement, but I did not build a high wall around myself and my work and crown it with broken glass, as some seem to think it necessary to do. I have sought and am seeking to carry the Christian life into the world that I have always known. To my polo friends I say, "Play polo in a Christian way." To my pugilistic acquaintances I say, "Let the Christian spirit of fairness and absolute honesty guide you in the ring and out of it." To all the boys and men who comprise our big Bible class membership I say, "Go in for every manly sport you fancy, but let your games be played in the same spirit as though Christ were the referee."

We are a great deal behind the Old World in this matter of bringing the gentleness of the Christian faith to bear on things of everyday life. We seem to think in this country that it is necessary to be gruff and rough in order to show our manliness. We do not feel gruff and rough, but we assume it, partly because we are afraid to be taken for simpletons if we are courteous and polite. The combination of Christian and gentleman, so well understood in the Old World, is not much in vogue here. It is seen in queer walks of life in the older countries. I remember once riding in a cab in Threadneedle street, London. My cabby was unable to pass another cabby on account of the narrowness of that very important thoroughfare and when the wheels locked I looked for some entirely new flights of fancy in the matter of swear words. Instead, to my surprise, this is the awful denunciation that my cabby I urled at the other chap:—

"You great, big, silly stupid! Couldn't you see that there was no room to pass?"

Every ones knows what happens in an American street when two drivers clash. It is invariably the one in the wrong whose voice is heard above the other and who uses the choicest selection of sizzling language. We must strive to change this. Bring the Christian spirit to bear on the affairs of everyday life instead of living aloof from the world that we knew before we turned to Christianity; seek to get in closer touch with it with a view to elevating it and influencing it by the spirit of the Christian faith.

That, in my opinion, is the simple solution of the problem of Christianizing the world of men. Don't make the mistake of thundering denunciations against the perfectly innocent pleasures of life, but get Christ into the lives of men, and their pastimes and pleasures will be all right.

I really don't see why it should be deemed incongruous to begin and close grand opera with a prayer. Who could really believe that God frowns on the splendid art exhibited there? Many of our theatrical productions are sermons in themselves, and prayers that are actually uttered on the stage are quite in keeping and offend no one. Our contests of skill and s[illegible] could be as fittingly opened with [illegible] the debates of the United States Senate, possibly more so, for it sometimes happens that the Senatorial debates show that divine guidance is ignored. It was once the custom to invoke the blessing of God on all efforts. Men went to battle with the blessing and prayers of the priest ringing in their ears. Religion went hand in hand with enterprise wherever seen. We have lost much of that. We must try to bring it back.

The essential thing is to wipe out that unfortunate dividing line between professing Christians and the so-called worldly persons. Instead of saying to society, "You must come across that line and drop all your present form of living," the Christian world should say:—

Spirit of Fairness.

"We are coming to you to show you how much better you will be if you will let Christ predominate in your lives and your pleasures. We are going to show you how it is possible to give entertainments as Christ would give them. We are going to inject the Christian spirit into your games and into your social affairs. We can prove to you that there is no need to be frightened at the prospect of becoming a Christian. There is no necessity to cast aside all the innocent amusements and social pastimes that make life worth living. Christ does not call for this; He merely demands that they shall be conducted in a Christian spirit."

The instinct in the heart of every man and woman referred to in the opening paragraph as reaching up after God and the things of Christ's kingdom will respond to an invitation of this kind. We don't feel happy living heathen lives. From the society leader to the South Sea Islander every man and woman of us believes in an omnipotent being by whom our destinies are ruled. We must worship something and look up to some God. Human nature is the same in high and low circles of society.

Sensible methods will win men and women to Christ. We must go after them and not expect them to come to us. It isn't necessary to quote Scripture to show that it is thoroughly Biblical to mix with men and women in any walk of life, associate with them and do of them, all the time seeking by example to show them that a Christian can be a Christian under every condition and in any company.

The wisdom of this plan of attracting men and women to Christ is shown in the fact that some of the best known members of Philadelphia and New York society have become interested in our Bible class work. They have readily responded to invitations to sing and play at our Bible class entertainments. The men have come in numbers to my boxing matinees and have viewed Christianity in a different light when they have seen it without the forbidding sternness of the ascetic. We are very busy levelling barriers. We are linking the Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Congregationalist and the Episcopalian in one bond of Christian unity. We are joining the hand of the working man with that of the cotillion leader. Our broad minded religion fills a long felt want. It is the religion that commends itself to the manly man—it is a red blooded, robust religion, and that is what the world wants to-day, from "High Society" to the "Down-and-Outers."

What Doctors Say About Removing Abnormal Hair

WOMEN who are endowed by nature with growths of hair on the cheeks, chin or lips, and those even who have merely a few isolated hairs in the midst of a dark growth of down, are generally considerably troubled by the singularity which disfigures them and try by every possible means to get rid of it.

Some use various kinds of depilatory pastes, pull out single hairs by the root or shave off the hair. Others are content to use scissors to cut off abnormally placed hairs. All, however, obtain only a temporary cosmetic result. And they pay for this by aggravating the defect which renders them unhappy. For all these processes are followed by a regrowth in which the hair is thicker and closer than it was originally.

It is readily understood, therefore, that any radical method of treatment is eagerly welcomed by the numerous women who are anxious about the development of such unsightly growths.

The sole radical method for a long time was "intrafollicular electrolysis," a long, tiring and painful process, annoying for the patient and very difficult for the operator, and the process even when skilfully executed effected a cure only by leaving slight indelible marks on the skin, almost as disfiguring as the defect which it was intended to cure.

X-rays have since been tried. These have the curious property of causing the hair to fall out. When suitably regulated they bring about atrophy of the pilous follicles. Unfortunately the rays must traverse the skin to reach the follicles, and this sometimes leads to atrophy of the epidermis.

As a general rule, when the X-rays are employed great care must be exercised. When it is a question of the lips the precautions must be doubled. If the method be well applied the irritation of the skin may almost always be avoided, but when the radiation has been too intense the irritation occurs about a fortnight after the operation.

A more annoying effect is the pigmentation, which in the case of certain dark complexions with very sensitive skin occurs about ten days after the application of the rays. This pigmentation, however, is always temporary, and at the most lasts only a few weeks, though even if it were permanent it would be much less disfiguring than the pilous growths.

There is finally a method by means of which Dr. Ch. Amat, of Paris, is said to have obtained good results. He makes use of "actiniferous muds," which appear to exert an action on the pilous bulbs. This physician, taking into account the similarity between the effects obtained by the X-rays and radium on the one hand and on the other the difficulties encountered in the manipulation of the latter substance, especially when it is desired to achieve a good result without affecting the skin, conceived the idea of utilising radio-active muds, which are much more easily applied.

But in this case it is necessary to make a selection between the transient emanations and those which have a more enduring character. The former emanations consist of a kind of vapor or gas which may form a deposit on the surface of the enclosing vessel, but which undergo immediate disintegration. The second class of emanations is due to the presence of radio-active substances, which continue to maintain the radiations for an indefinite period.

The latter variety of muds, furnishing persistent emanations, is preferred by Dr. Ch. Amat. They are obtained in the form of residues during the process of preparing uranium compounds from their ores. They have the consistency and almost the same homogeneity as butter or clay. The variety used is extremely plastic and may be easily spread over the surfaces which are to be submitted to its action. These muds have a reddish brown color, due to their richness in iron. They may be readily diluted with water for the preparation of baths or radio-active plasters.

The chemical composition of the mud is very complex. In the first place there are various radio-active elements—actinium, polonium and radium. They also contain iron oxide, phosphoric acid, alumina, uranium oxide, manganese oxide, carbonate and sulphate of sodium, clay and calcium carbonate. All these substances, which form to some extent the excipient of the radio-active elements, cannot fail to be endowed with curative properties.

Polonium and radium exist only as traces in the muds, but this is not the case with actinium, which occurs to such a degree in the permanent radio-active muds that these are very properly termed actiniferous. As is well known, there is no more radio-active substance than actinium. It is calculated that the total radio-activity of the muds containing this constituent is fifty times greater than that of the most highly reputed thermal muds.

Like radium itself, actinium emits rays of varying penetrative power. To its action are ascribed the results obtained in the treatment of articular affections and those which result from persistent applications in the treatment of hypertrichiasis or the excessive production of hair. By means of cataplasms of muds reapplied persistently every night success is finally obtained in causing the hair to weaken and then fall without the least alteration of the adjacent tissues. This process is attended by no inconvenient effects, but demands the exercise of considerable patience.

GLAD HE CAME

An English Immigrant Writes to an English Paper About Canada

"A Sparkbrook Man" writing from Toronto to an English exchange, says: "I have been out here eight years and I can safely say that I have never regretted coming. I am a painter by trade, but I have not followed it up here. I have been farming for six years, and during the other two years have done all kinds of work. I have worked in the bush and on the railroads and also on large buildings in Montreal and other big towns. I have been all over Canada, and I think it a fine country for a working man. I can safely say I have not been out of work, except through my own fault. I have read a lot of the letters sent to you by some of the boys out here. Some of them are all right, but others are from fellows who say they are willing to work. I have come across a lot of them on the farms, and they are always running the farms down, though the farmer pays them good wages, while these men do not earn their board. The first year I got 70 dollars for eight months' work, but I can now get 30 dollars and my board per month. If the grumblers would only work for one year and get used to the ways of the farmer in this country they would get the same. As regards other kinds of work, I could always get on all right. If you are willing to do anything in this country you will get along. There are a lot of men from home about here who are always saying 'That's not the way we do it in the Old Land;' but they seem to forget that there is the water between them and the Old Land. I believe in the motto: 'When you are in Rome, do as Rome does.' We have have had a very long and cold winter this year, and it has been hard on some of the boys in the towns, but things are beginning to open up now. There is going to be lots of work out here this summer. I have not done much work myself this winter, as I have been taking a rest; but now the spring has come I guess I shall have to get busy, as I am going to start for myself in the cement business."

LABOR ON THE FARM

Farmers Are Advised to Hire Their Help by the Year

H. A. MacDonald who has charge of the Ontario Labor Bureau hands out the following advice to farmers:

(1) First and foremost, arrange to employ a man by the year. We have found that the farmer who employs his help by the year, especially if he is able to supply a house and a small piece of land, is the farmer who has the least trouble over the help problem. It is the better way for the man as well as for the farmer. If you feel your work does not warrant the employment of a man the year round, you might be well advised to consider the question of taking up a few more branches of farm work or handling additional live stock, and in this way we feel satisfied you would more than make up the extra cost of the help.

(2) Do not be too exacting about getting an experienced man. Experienced farm laborers are rare at the present time, as there is a large demand for them in the Old Country as well as on this side. If you take an inexperienced man, recognizing that he is unfamiliar with the conditions in this country, and devote a little attention to training him for a few months, you will find, in nine cases out of ten, that he will prove very useful to you. Being reasonably generous in the matter of treatment and wages is essential if hired help is to be retained.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

NEW COMPANILE OF ST. MARK'S

How The Great Historic Tower Was Reconstructed—Sixteen Hundred Fragments Pieced Together

The new Campanile of St. Mark's is an exact replica of the old one which collapsed ten years ago, and rises as proudly over the beautiful city of Venice as that which for over a thousand years was the admiration of all who beheld it. For seven years the difficult and delicate work of reconstruction was uninterruptedly proceeded with. The builders were confronted with two immense problems—to repair and strengthen by partial reconstruction, and not to alter even in the minutest particular the exterior aspect of the structure.

Before the necessary scaffolding was erected minute and accurate casts were taken of no fewer than 1,600 fragments. Every fragment removed was numbered and then put carefully away, wrapped in thick felt so that no alteration in colour or deterioration should take place. Discoveries made behind the outside coating of Greek marble were most unexpected and interesting. Traces of very old previous decorations were revealed, from which it was plain that the outside was made of fragments which had been part of the eleventh century basilica, and of decorated marble brought from the Orient.

Among the discoveries was a Byzantine work which showed two peacocks, one preening himself under his wing and the other devouring acanthus leaves. The former is a new decorative motive, unique in the story of Byzantine art.

After the necessary precautions referred to had been taken the ground was carefully opened, and it was found, as had been expected, that all the part dating from the eleventh century stood only on a thin stratum of earth or small walls lamentably decomposed, supported by wooden beams of little strength; some of the lower columns, on which rest the frieze and the upper columns, were even without foundations or supports of any kind. It was also found that, roughly, the foundations were non-existent, considering the enormous disproportion between their strength and the weight which they were called upon to support.

After having strengthened the strata underground, constructed the foundations of the decorative part, and reinforced those of the antique church, the architects began work on the "Arch of the Lambs," which was reconstructed and redecorated so that even the most minute observation cannot detect that it has ever been touched.

With equal care and skill and marvellous patience, the beautiful figures of Apollo, Mercury, Minerva, and Peace, all bronze, that filled the niches, were restored; and, more wonderful still, the sixteen hundred fragments of the famous terracotta group of the Madonna, with the Infants Saviour and St. John, were collected and pieced together.

Many Immigrants Arrive

In one week 2,225 steamship passengers from Halifax, St. John, and Quebec, have passed through the Bonaventure station at Montreal on 9 special trains, bound for points in Ontario and Western Canada.

MET IN HEART OF MOUNTAIN

The bore of the Loetschberg tunnel, which is nearly 9½ miles long, and the third longest of the great tunnels of Europe, was lately completed, the meeting of the two working divisions occurring in the heart of the mountain. The blast which opened a breach was followed by wild enthusiasm, the engineers and miners of both sides repeatedly embracing each other. Engineer Rothpletz, in charge of the Northern division, handed a bunch of Alpine flowers to Chief Engineer Moreau, then the chief engineer passed through the opening, followed by the workers. The tunnel is 3¼ miles shorter than the Simplon tunnel, and a quarter of a mile shorter than the St. Gothard. When the tunnel is officially opened next year, the time between London and Genoa will be shortened three hours.

One-Eyed Miner's Earning Capacity

A case under the Workmen's Compensation Act regarding the earning capacity of a one-eyed miner was decided in the Falkirk Court. Robert [illegible], miner, sued the Grangemouth Coal Company for compensation, having been struck in the eye by a splinter of coal, which flew off from the point of his pick. Sheriff Moffatt found the claimant entitled to compensation at the rate of $1.75 per week. It was held that through difficulty in accustoming himself to see with one eye, and owing to his remaining eye being defective, the man's earning capacity is much reduced.

FIRE AT A FUNERAL

Mad Rush Follows Flaring up of Celluloid Wreath

Several people were injured in a panic at a funeral service at a Carmaux (France) church.

On the coffin, which was surrounded with lighted candles, were several wreaths, among them one made of celluloid. One of the candles must have set fire to this wreath, for suddenly a long tongue of flame leapt up from the coffin. Most of the men and women present were seized with terror and rushed shrieking down the nave to the door of the church. Women fainted, and in the crush some of them were very seriously injured.

Meanwhile the few persons who had kept cool tore the pall and blazing wreath from the coffin and dashed water on the woodwork, which had begun to burn.

A POSTAL STORY

A visitor to Murren, Switzerland, was accosted by a dark-looking gentleman in the hotel lobby and asked what time a letter posted then would reach London. "I really don't know," he replied. "Perhaps the concierge will tell you." The stranger disappeared, but a little later on the other gentleman, thinking he had seen the enquirer's face before, asked the concierge who he was. "That," was the reply, "is Monsieur Samuel, the Postmaster-General."

REPORTER IS JAILED.

Report of Burlesque Show Called Immoral Literature.

Toronto, May 23.—Whether or not it is a criminal offence to publish in a printed pamphlet a report of a theatrical performance, will be decided in the Toronto police court, when the Rev. R. B. St. Clair of 209 Lisgar street, is arraigned on a charge of publishing immoral literature.

Mr. St. Clair is secretary of the Toronto Vigilance Association. A few months ago he attended the fifth performance of a show put on at a Burlesque theatre and took extensive notes on the dialogue and the actions of the play. These were printed and as they were denied the use of the mails, they were distributed privately to ministers and others interested in the suppression of vice and immorality. One was sent to the mayor, one to Judge Winchester, and several to other officials. Mr. St. Clair contends that as the pamphlet was not distributed indiscriminately and was issued solely for the purpose of assisting in the campaign which the vigilance committee is waging, no harm has come of it.

Mr. St. Clair heard yesterday that a warrant had been issued and he went to the City Hall and gave himself up. He was taken in custody by Detective Miller and was taken to the detective office. A police photograph was taken and Mr. St. Clair was then removed in the patrol wagon to Court street police station, where he was put in a cell. After remaining there three hours, he was allowed out on $1,000 bail furnished by James Patchett of 46 Lynd avenue.

Titanic Knew of Danger.

London, May 23.—That the iceberg with which the Titanic collided was one of those of which she had warnings from other ships is the conclusion reached by the Board of Trade enquiry after a careful examination of the wireless telegrams passed to and from the steamer on the day of the disaster, and hearing the evidence of the third, fourth and fifth officers.

During Officer Boxhall's examination the Solicitor-General, Sir John Simon, went at some length into the wireless despatches in regard to ice received by the Titanic, information which it was his duty to mark on the chart.

Boxhall could not remember all the wireless despatches received, but the Solicitor-General said from those of which they already had evidence, and others to be produced, it was plain the warnings received from the Baltic, the Amerika, the Californian and the Caronia, all related to icebergs in the oblong space where the Titanic met her fate.

Hot Politics In Hungary.

Budapest, May 23.—The Socialist Union, at a prolonged meeting last night, resolved to proclaim a strike of all unionist workers in Budapest, with the exception of municipal employes, as a protest against the election of Count Tisza yesterday as president of the Lower House, in succession to L. Navay, who resigned his chair in consequence of party troubles.

Count Tisza is an opponent of universal suffrage and was elected only after a stormy scene. All the inkpots and other articles that could be removed from the chamber before the voting began. Free fighting occurred around the voting urn and finally the whole party left the chamber, and Tisza was elected by the Government party.

Lost His Hair, Beard and Mustache

Terrible Plight of a Pennsylvania Man Reported by a Prominent Citizen

"About two years ago my hair, beard and mustache started to come out in spots. These spots were shortly bare of hair.

Seeing PARISIAN SAGE advertised, I purchased four bottles and after using two of the bottles the hair came in until now I have as good a head of hair as I ever had before this trouble started.

I can truthfully recommend this preparation to any one for what it is recommended for. Sam Galder, Jamison City, Col. Co., Pa. Oct. 11, 1911."

Please bear in mind that PARISIAN SAGE is not guaranteed to grow hair on bald heads.

In Mr. Galder's case the hair root was not dead, and there is no good reason why PARISIAN SAGE should not do just what he writes it did.

"The next time Mr. Galder came into my store after purchasing the PARISIAN SAGE," writes the druggist who sold him, "his appearance was so changed I did not know him."

PARISIAN SAGE is without doubt the most efficient hair grower, beautifier and dandruff cure in the world, and people who are wasting time with ordinary commercial tonics should wake up.

PARISIAN SAGE will banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp; will put life, lustre and beauty into faded hair, or money back. It is a most delightful and refreshing tonic for men, women and children. Large bottle, 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and druggists the country over.

Wagon Killed Child.

Toronto, May 23.—Charles Segar, a four-year-old youngster, whose parents live at 177 Palmerston avenue, was instantly killed about four o'clock yesterday afternoon by being struck by one of Eaton's delivery wagons opposite 89 Arthur street.

The little fellow was playing tag on the sidewalk with several other boys. He suddenly touched one of his companions and started to run across the road, and not noticing the wagon which was passing him at the time he ran into it, and his head was struck by the heavy iron step. W. F. Sheppard, the driver of the wagon immediately pulled up and carried the boy's body into a nearby house. The boy died a few minutes later.

This is the sixth death that has occurred in Toronto in the past four weeks of youngsters under ten years of age who have been killed by street cars or wagons while playing on the streets. Witnesses say Sheppard was in no way to blame.

Well Answered.

On one occasion a young British attache was one of the guests at a state banquet in St. Petersburg, and during the banquet he had the misfortune to upset his wine glass and make a huge red stain on the white tablecloth. The czar happened to be looking in his direction when the disaster occurred and, noticing the youngster's painful embarrassment, he asked rather cruelly, "Do they often do that sort of thing in England?"

The trodden worm turned.

"Yes, your majesty," came the swift reply, "but nobody takes any notice of it!"—London Answers.

Where Starlings Bring Ruin.

In "Quiet Days in Spain," the author, C. B. Luffman, describes the ravages of the starlings in a hacienda devoted to raising muscatel raisins near Malaga:

"Dogs and goats are very fond of grapes and are only kept off them by rural guards, but the greatest enemy of all is the starling. This bird flies over from Africa in such millions as literally to darken the earth. Wherever they camp for the night they leave a desert. Every particle of fruit, leaf, tender shoot and piece of soft bark vanishes. As the saying is, 'Many crops spell various fortunes; one crop of starlings spells ruin.' The blowing of a southern wind and the sound of wings in the air produces panic, men's faces blanch with terror. In despair, bells are rung, guns fired, torches lighted, and donkeys, mules and horses are galloped up and down and round about to scare 'los bichos'—the beasts—as they are termed."

Thumb Prints.

In the Argentine Republic the identification cards of policemen, coachmen, cab drivers, commissionaires and servants have since 1896 borne their finger prints. Upon all passports and bank receipts for deposits the imprint of the thumb must be made at the time of delivery. In Roumania since 1903 the thumb print has been substituted for the cross made instead of signature by persons who cannot write. In the Philippine Islands those who cannot write are not obliged to be identified by witnesses at savings banks, but have to make their mark with their thumb. The same system has been used in the banks of Bengal for fifty years. In France to put an end to the fraud of enlistment, desertion and re-enlistment for the bounty paid in the Foreign Legion, every man's finger prints are taken and kept on file.

The First Railway Gauge.

An interesting story was told by one of George Stephenson's biographers relating how the great engineer came to adopt the four foot eight and a half inch gauge for his railways. Some time previous to the building of his Newcastle and Carlisle railway Stephenson had an opportunity of inspecting some portion of an old Roman wall, through which the chariots used to be driven. Deep ruts made by the chariot wheels were still visible, and on measuring these he found their distance apart to be as near as possible four feet eight and a half inches. Stephenson thereupon came to the conclusion that if a world power like the Romans had made such use of the measure for its chariots he could not be wrong in adopting these measurements as a rule for his railway.

The Tribute of the Powhatans.

What is perhaps the most interesting ceremony to be witnessed in the United States takes place at the state capitol at Richmond on Feb. 16 of each year. It consists of the delivery of the annual tribute of the Pamunkey river Indians, representing a surviving tribe of the Powhatan nation, to the governor of Virginia. The manner of the presentation of the tribute is simple. The chief and the head men of the tribe upon the appointed day appear at the capitol bearing baskets of ducks and fish and lay the baskets at the feet of the governor. The few and simple words which are spoken are traditional and do not vary. Originally the tribute consisted of venison, ducks and fish, each of the finest and representing the dominion of the state of Virginia over the animals of the forest, the birds of the air and the fish of the waters, but the state law establishing a closed season for deer now prevents the Indians from including venison in the tribute.—Harper's.

Beck's Narrow Escape.

David Beck, the celebrated portrait painter and pupil of Van Dyck, while traveling through Germany was suddenly taken ill and to all appearances died and was laid out a corpse. His servants, sitting around the bed, grieved heartily for the loss of so good a master and, as grief is thirsty, drank as heartily at the same time. One of them, becoming more befuddled than the rest, then addressed his companions thus: "Our master when alive was fond of his glass. Let us out of gratitude, then, give him one now he is dead." Agreed was given. The head of the dead painter was raised up and some wine poured down or spilled about, the fragrance or spirit of which caused Beck to open his eyes, upon which the servant, who, being drunk, half forgetting his master was dead, forced down the remainder of the glass. The painter gradually revived and thus escaped a living interment.

To Escape Gold Bricks.

A man or a woman with funds to invest should make it a primary principle to first consult an experienced banking house of established reputation. The first step in the prudent investment of your money is the selection of your banking house. You should choose a banker not only willing but competent to serve your every need—one with the requisite patience and sympathy to study your investment problem from all angles, to make your problem his problem. Few investors realize that within the past few years there has sprung up a new guild in the banking business, bankers whose business runs well over $100,000,000 annually and whose success is largely due to the faithful and thoughtful attention given each serious inquiry or request for advice. If you can save and invest $100 or more each year you can command the best financial brains in America.—Charles E. Merrill in Leslie's.

Rector (puzzled)—I don't see how you could. Gamekeeper—Well, sir, you see, if I came to church the rest of the parish would go poaching.—London Telegraph.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 23.—There was a decided improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat at an advance in prices of 1½d to 2d per quarter, but owing to the advance at the per bushel in Winnipeg no business could be worked, but a lot of wheat was bought by exporters to fill freight. There was some enquiry for oats from European sources, but bids were out of line. The local business was quiet. Flour is firm, but business continues quiet. A stronger feeling has developed in the butter market, and prices have advanced 1c to 1½c per pound, owing to the continued good demand from the west. Cheese is more active and firm. CONVENERS OF COMMITTEES WHO HAVE CHARGE OF BOOTHS FOR NEXT WEEK'S SUMMER FAIR

The Purpose of the Fair and an Idea of What May be Expected —Ladies Have Given Care and Attention to Preparations.

HOW CITIZENS CAN HELP

What is the purpose of the Peterborough Summer Fair?

Much has been written about the preparataions for this event, but there seem to be many citizens who have but a hazy notion of the real nature of the Fair.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association, have undertaken to combat tuberculosis, and their first step is to secure a trained nurse whose work will be largely educative. This feature has been explained at length by Roy Gilray in special articleh for the Examiner. It is intended that she will visit homes of those who may not be in a position to meet the financial strain of securing specialists for the treatment of tuberculous persons. This is principally for the benefit of those whose means are limited. The nurse will devote particular attention, it is said, to incipent cases, and to education in methods of prevention. The idea that is becoming more and more general is that the best way of fighting the white plague is by instructing people in regard to means of preventing the spread of tuberculosis.

So much in a general way of the scheme outlined by the Woman's Auxiliary to the Health Association.

The Summer Fair was thought of as a means of securing finances, whereby the engaging of a specially trained nurse will be made possible.

The ladies who have thus worked so indefatigably and have devoted so much of their time and care to the unravelling of the details, have at heart the best interests of the public, and at the time their scheme is largely of a charitable nature.

They are now completing the arrangements at the Armouries, and beginning on Monday night the citizens, everyone, will have a chance of lending their assistance and thereby of making the Fair the success it deserves to be.

The four bare walls of the drill hall at the Armouries will be lost in the decorations, and the whole hall is undergoing a transformation from the drab, cheerless expanse to a series of delights. Many hands have been busy and the results are becoming more numerous every day.

Convenors of Committees.

It would be difficult to give in detail the arrangements made for the Fair, but a brief reference may be made. Many booths have been planned. Most of them are to be used by exhibitors at the Fair, and the rest are in charge of ladies.

The convenors of the Spring booth are Mrs. Cruikshank and Miss Burnham; Summer booth, Mrs. L. M. Hayes and Mrs. (Dr.) McNulty; Autumn, Mrs. Matthews; Winter, Mrs. J. G. Scott. The Rummage Sale convenors are Mrs. Coulthard and Miss Rubidge; the Doll's House, Mrs. Peter Campbell and Miss Halliday; the Orange Tree, Miss Revell; the Gypsy Encampment, Miss Archer and Mrs. Alex. Grant; The Cafe Chantant, Mrs. McLeod; the Theatre, Mrs. Hopwood; The Art Room is under the direction of the Women's Art Association; the Grand March, Mrs. Hasen Ritchie and Mrs. R. R. Hall.

Committee of Information.

The Art Room, Tea Room, Bowling Alleys and other rooms adjoin the main hall where the Fair is being held and in order that the visitors will meet with no difficulty in finding their way about, a committee of ladies has been apointed, with Mrs. A. Mowat as convenor, to act as ushers. They will wear distinctive sashes and will be readily recognised. If you find yourself lost in the rows of booths or unable to find a particular section, ask one of the young ladies with the sashes.

Tea Every Day.

Tea will be served every day at six o'clock and should be a feature of the Fair. More will be said of the preparations before the opening and from the present stage it seems that unless you are a real gloom, you are going to enjoy yourself and admit that the Summer Fair was the biggest event of its kind ever undertaken in Peterborough.

BIGGER THAN THE "TITANIC"

Examiner Special:

HAMBURG, MAY 23.—The world's largest ship, the Hamburg-American liner Imperator, ten and one-half feet longer than the ill-fated Titanic, today was launched here by Emperor William, in the presence of high officials of the German Government and a vast throng. The recent loss of the White Star Leviathan and 1,600 of her passengers gave rather a sombre tone to to-day's ceremonies, but, nevertheless there was a ringing cheers as of cheers when the monster vessel slid into the water. The Imperator is 893 feet long, 95 feet wide and 108 feet high. From the captain's bridge to the water line the distance is 81 feet. The top mast of her eleven decks is as high as a five-storey house. She will have a tonnage of 50,000, and accommodation for five thousand passengers. There will be life boats and life-saving apparatus for every person on board. The Imperator is under the subsidy of the German Navy, and in time of war can be pressed into transport service.

KNOWS NOW.

Doctor Was Fooled By His Own Case For a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when d ctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me although I had palpitation of the heart every day. (Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee—and is just as harmful as coffee.)

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation except on one or two occasions when I tried a small quantity of coffee which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes which gives it the proper rich flavour and the deep brown colour.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients.

There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

DOCK WORKERS WILL STRIKE

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MAY 23. — The dock workers and lightermen have been ordered out on strike to-night in this port. It is expected to spread to other ports to-morrow. The original cause of the grievance was the fact that a man on one of the docks here refused to join the union, and his fellow-dockmen declined to work with him.

President Asquith and his Cabinet are considering the situation, and it is agreed it is serious.

Garbage Not Collected

On Tuesday of This Week Contractor Reported to be Without Sufficient Assistants for the Work

SOME COMPLAINTS HEARD

From several reports it seems that the collection of garbage is uncertain at times. It has even been said that it was worse than uncertain on some occasions for the collections were not made at all in those cases. For instance, it was reported on Tuesday that in the section east of Water street, the collector had failed to make his rounds. It was not known whether the rain was responsible, but some of the citizens object to gathering garbage when the collector fails to appear for several days.

The collector, it is stated, has been unable to keep the three waggons with which he began, at work. The beginning was auspicious, Mr. Scriver had three waggons and two men to help him. Since then his staff has by no means been at its full strength every day, and it is just possible that the contractor has changed his idea of the work. Far away fields look green, but as you draw closer you wonder where the green hue has disappeared to. Mr. Scriver secured the contract at $9,750, but had been at work only a short time when he expressed his opinion that it was worth $5,000, and his latest estimate of what should be paid for the work is $8,000.

With only the collector at work, as is the case at times, it is hardly expected that the work would be completed expeditiously or in one day and Sanitary Inspector Spence has threatened to engage carters to do the work in such cases and withhold the money from the collector. The truth of the situation seems to be that if the collector is dissatisfied with his lot, there is considerable dissatisfaction in regard to the collection.

With three men and three waggons it is claimed that the work can be well done. This is the staff that the collector began with and which, it is felt, is needed for the work.

When the city established the scheme, $2,750 was considered a fair price. It was also believed that the people would appreciate the collection of garbage. That the latter has been fulfilled may be judged by the amount of garbage collected. The citizens object to haphazard methods and there have been other improvements suggested that must be apparent to those who direct the department under which the collecting scheme is conducted.

Business Sold

Mr. Lendrum has sold his photograph business to Mr. W. H. Orme, who comes to Peterborough with an excellent reputation for high-class work. Mr. Orme was with Lyonde, the king of Canadian photographers for over three years and besides being a clever workman is a born artist. He is known among photographers, to be one of the best workmen in this country. Previous to coming to Peterborough, Mr. Orme was in business in Ingersoll, where he was unfortunately burned out. While there Mr. Orme photographed some of the leading men of the country, among whom were Hon. R. L. Borden and the late Postmaster General, Sir William Mulock. Also the leading athletic people, such as Tom Longboat and Alf. Shrubb.

Mr. Orme specializes in every branch of the business, and is an expert in platinum work. An inspection of his work, or even a glance at his window, which is the best dressed photograph window in Peterborough, will speedily convince anyone that his work is such as has never before been offered to the people of Peterborough, and although he has only been here a short time; the way he is pleasing his customers points to the fact that his success here is already assured

POLICE DEPT. PROVIDE CELLS FOR DELINQUENTS

Steel Cages Have Arrived and Will be Installed in Temporary Police Headquarters on Simcoe Street

A VENTURESOME ALDERMAN

Homeless vags, the common-place inebriate, and other representatives of the lawless element of the city will find little solace in the fact that the Police Department have made special arrangements for their accommodation during the time that the alterations are being made to the central police station. Three steel cages, the product of a Hamilton, Ont., firm, have arrived, and their erection, under the supervision of Detective Newhall and P. C. McGinty, removes the possibility of escape for the future occupants, practically nil.

The cages, which are being placed in the temporary police station, will eventually find their way into the new quarters, where they will be used in regular service.

Accommodation For Two.

The entrance to the temporary station was found to be too small to allow the side pieces of the cages to be taken in, and as a result it was found necessary to dispense with them for the time being. Detective Newhall is confident that he will be able to construct a couple of temporary cells without the use of the steel side walls. They will be so situated that the walls of the building will serve the desired purpose.

Alderman vs. Gaol-Breaker.

Ald. Graham visited the station this morning, and was ready and willing to bet $100 that he could find a means of escape from the improvised cells, should the opportunity present itself.

Detective Newhall offered the would-be gaol-breaker the cages as a present should he succeed in performing the feat. This had the effect of diverting the alderman's conversation to matters of business, and the question of pulling off a gaol delivery stunt was abandoned.

"WE WILL SELL THE EARTH"

On Saturday afternoon at 2.30, there will be sold, by public auction, on the premises, choice lots situated on Lock street, on the George street car line. These are all choice building lots, with 40 foot frontage, a good depth to a 12 foot lane. The lots are all high and dry, and are in the centre of a well-built district. There are five fine brick houses on this property, all occupied.

Two special free street cars will leave the office of C. J. Carroll & Co., 412 1-2 George street, at 2 o'clock, and at 2.30, and will land you right at the property. No walking after you leave the street car.

There will be an opportunity for people to buy lots at their own price, and with the steady growth in the south end of Peterborough, these lots should increase in value. They are situated close enough to all factories, and are just bearing county taxes. Any working man or woman can own a lot by making a small payment down at the sale and the balance of terms will be arranged to suit the purchaser.

The sale will commence sharp on time, so be on hand when the first lots are sold. It will cost you nothing to see these lots and you are perfectly welcome on the grounds, whether you buy or not.

Don't forget the free car to the grounds.

IS STANDARD OIL IN CANADA?

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., MAY 23.—Financial men in this city are puzzled over the activity of the Standard Oil Company at Sarnia, Canada. It is not clear just how the Standard Oil Co. will avoid the effect of mandamus of dissolution by locating its headquarters in Canada, so far as its American business is concerned at least. The fact is that "dissolution" has been the joke of Wall Street, and the position of "Standard interests" never seemed more secure than under the new order.

CITY IN STATE OF SIEGE

Special to The Examiner.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, MAY 23.—This city is in a state of siege to-night, following strike riots. Troops hold every corner and civilians are not permitted to leave their houses. The Government has undertaken provisioning of siege districts while the trouble continues. Four more killed and one hundred and fifty wounded to-day. Crowds marched on Parliament House three times to-day to close up the sessions, because that body refused to legislate in favour of the strikers. Soldiers charged each time and drove the mob back with heavy loss. Reinforcements are being sent in from other cities

TELLS OF CURES MADE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Thos. Griffin, of Peace River Landing, Tells How He Got Rid of His Rheumatism — Honestly Earned Popularity.

Cold Springs, Peace River Landing, Alta., May 23.—(Special.)—Just why Dodd's Kidney Pills retain their wonderful popularity is easily shown by a trip across the prairies. Every town, village and post office has at least one man or woman who is ready to tell of pains relieved and health restored by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy. Let Thos. Griffin of this place add his statement to the hosts already published.

"When I came to this part of the country," says Mr. Griffin, "I was troubled with a bad back and Rheumatism in my shoulders and hips. I sent for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief at once. I also recommended them to my eldest son who was confined to his bed from Rheumatism.

"Now I know that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine for Rheumatism and the Kidneys. I recommend them to every person I hear complaining of not feeling well."

Dodd's Kidney Pills made their popularity by curing sick Kidneys. They keep their popularity by keeping on curing sick kidneys.

OBITUARY

REV. R. B. DENIKE.

Rev. R. B. Denike, of Campbellford father of Mrs. Edw. Fennell, of town, passed away at his daughter's residence here very suddenly on Sunday morning from the effects of heart failure. The deceased gentleman, who was a retired Methodist clergyman had not been in the best of health for some time past, but on Saturday night was apparently destined to live for many years yet. He was taken ill about 2 o'clock a.m., and passed into the Great Beyond about an hour later. The remains were taken to his home in Campbellford, where the funeral took place from the Methodist church in that town on Tuesday afternoon. He leaves a widow and a family of four to mourn the loss of a loving husband and indulgent father. They are Mrs. Fennell, of town, Howard of Dartford, Hayden, of Stirling, and Mrs. F. W. Wood, of Campbellford. Montreal Standard.

The late Rev. R. B. Denike was well known in Peterborough, and his sudden demise will come as a great shock to his many friends here.

MR. FRANK FLOOD.

Word was received in the city last evening of the death of Mr. Frank Flood, who passed away with tragic suddenness at Lakefield the previous evening

The deceased gentleman was employed by the Peterborough Lumber Company, and was apparently in good health until recently. A few days ago he complained of indisposition and passed away after only a couple of days' illness. He was fifty-eight years of age.

The late Mr. Flood carried on the farming industry in Peterborough about twelve years ago. He is survived by a sorrowing wife, five sons and five daughters, namely: Mrs. Gilman, Teresa and Amelia of Peterborough, Mrs. Coleman and Mary, both residing in the States, William, Joseph, Hugh, Francis and Michael, all of Peterborough. Deceased was very well known in this vicinity and those who regret his demise are not a few.

The remains arrived in Peterborough to-day and the funeral will take place to-morrow. At nine o'clock the cortege will proceed from the family residence, 128 Perry street, to the Sacred Heart church and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

VICTORIA DAY HAPPENINGS

Prospects Indicate a Quiet Holiday With Chief Interest Centred on Ball Games

THE OUT-OF-TOWN TRIPS

Victoria Day is one of the first holidays of the summer season, and coming as it does, on Friday this year, will enable many persons to get away for several days.

The small boy will have his fireworks, but to him and the budding generation, the significance of the day may be hazy. The veneration of British subjects for Victoria the good, was the inspiration of the celebration of May 24th, and the intervening years since her death have dimmed, especially for the young, the real meaning of Victoria Day.

The steamer Geneva goes to Rice Lake, leaving the city at 9 o'clock. The "Stoney Lake" makes a round trip of the lakes, connecting with the G.T.R. train, and many citizens are going up for the week end. There is also an excursion from the city to Stoney Lake to-morrow.

The main event in Peterborough will be the Guelph-Peterborough ball games, morning and afternoon. Fine weather will bring out a great crowd.

FIRST TRIP DOWN THE OTONABEE

The Steamer "Geneva" will run its first trip down the Otonabee this season on the 24th of May, leaving the Wolfe Street Wharf at 9 o'clock and the Street Railway Wharf at 9.20, calling at Idyl Wyld, Gores Landing and Harwood.. The river is beautiful at the present time, and no doubt there will be a large number taking in this trip. 16-18-23

BIRTH.

CUTTING.—On May 21st, in St. Joseph's Hospital, to Mrs. A. D. Cutting, of 176 Kingston Road, Toronto, a son.

The ninth [illegible] parade will be held on Sunday, May 26th, to George street Methodist church. Members will assemble in I. O. F. Hall at 6.15 p.m.

Excursion Steamers To Be Sold

Prospects for a Steamboat Service From This City Are Not Very Promising

Present conditions would indicate that Peterborough is to be without an adequate boat service this summer. It is reported that the Steamer Otonabee will ply on the waters of Lake Simcoe this summer, and that the sale of the Water Lily is pending. This is practically the only connecting link between Gore's Landing and the city.

The Manita will go to Lindsay, and unless some local parties step in and purchase one or more of these boats, a poor steamboat service on the river Otonabee and the connecting waters, will result.

High Death Rate In The Spring

At the very time of year when all nature is awakening to new life human beings are overcome by lassitude and distaste for physical activity, and the death rate mounts higher than at any other time during the year.

What can be the cause? It seems to be due to the mode of life during the cold winter months. By living cooped up in overheated, ill-ventilated rooms the lungs are deprived of the life-giving oxygen, the blood becomes loaded with impurities which are not eliminated from the system as they should be by the liver and kidneys.

These filtering organs are torpid, sluggish and inactive, and need Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to restore them to health and activity. There is no way by which the blood can be purified except by the eliminating process carried on by the liver and kidneys. Hence the effectiveness of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a means of purifying the blood.

WAS TENDERED A FAREWELL

Peterborough's Y. M. C. A. General Secretary in Batavia, N.Y.

The following from a Batavia, N.Y., paper refers to Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, the new general secretary of Peterborough's Y.M.C.A.:

Several Batavia pastors and their wives attended a farewell reception at the Y.W.C.A. cafeteria on Thursday evening, given by the Rev. C. F. Collett, retiring pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, and Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, retiring general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and their wives. Both Mr. Collett and Mr. Hainsworth will conclude their labours in Batavia on Wednesday of next week.

Those present, who acted as hosts and hostesses, were the Rev. Alfred Brittain, the Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Degen, the Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Gardner, the Rev. C. A. Johnson and Rev. and Mrs. D. B. MacQueen. Supper was partaken of in the cafeteria, and some time was pleasantly spent afterward in conversation and with music.

Brantford Ball Park Inundated

Special to The Examiner:

BRANTFORD, MAY 23.—The Grand river, as a result of recent rains here, is so high that the water has backed through Mohawk, behind the Agricultural Park and completely inundated the Canadian League baseball field. The games scheduled here for to-day and to-morrow have been consequently postponed.

TENNIS.

Owing to the condition of Nicholls Oval, St. John's Tennis Club will not be able to meet there to-morrow. As soon as practicable the courts will be marked out for play, and an announcement will be made in the papers.

THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1912

VICTORIA DAY.

To-morrow is the ninety-third anniversary of the late Queen Victoria's birth. For nearly a century the "Queen's Birthday" has been celebrated, and its observance is now as universal in fact and in spirit, as it has been any time for the past half century. She has left two worthy successors on the throne, but they never have, enshrined, and never will enshrine themselves, so warmly in the hearts of the millions of British people as the late Queen did, and still continues to do. She combined the attributes of the model queen, the model woman and the model mother. And to this is to be attributed the continued observance of her birthday, and to-morrow we shall live it over again. We have had weather of a trying kind this year, but to-morrow we shall probably have "Queen's weather," The "oldest inhabitant" cannot recall a "twenty-fourth" that did not bring fine weather.

UNEQUAL ASSESSMENT.

Toronto affords examples of the inequalities and consequent injustice of assessments. The Star gives instances of residence property worth $4,000 assessed at $2900. It gives examples of business district property assessed at $38,000, but recently sold at $143,000—assessment about one-fourth of the selling price. This means that the householders assessment is three times higher than that of the wealthy owner of down-town property Wouldn't even a "checker-board" assessment system be better than injustice like this? Is it possible that these typical and not exceptional instances of inequality of assessment may be duplicated in Peterborough? One thing is certain, that our assessment system in this province is susceptible of very great improvement. It is wrong some way in principle. To fine a man for making improvements, does not seem to be a good way of stimulating public spirit.

CHANGE OF PRINCIPLE.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden before, and when, he gained office, was exploited as the political chevalier Bayard, without fear and without reproach, with the courage of his convictions, and with an unbending probity, a directness of vision that did not permit him to see around corners. But he has been spoiled by office. He was elected on an extreme pro-British and loyalty cry and his first action was to ally himself with an anti-British and disloyal element. He advocated out of office, abolition of the scandal of placing by-election dates in compliance with party considerations. Now he has brought on the bye-election in South Simcoe by itself with Macdonald, Manitoba and Richelieu, Quebec, vacant much longer and no by-election ordered. Mr. Borden was to have all by-elections on the same date. Mr. Borden has appointed Mr. J. S. Carstairs, Conservative organizer, Inspector of Customs. This is the same Mr. Borden who declared in Halifax in 1907—"the power of filling such positions (places of emolument) as a reward for party service, is a gross breach of a solemn public trust." Mr. Borden commits "a gross breach of a solemn public trust," with Pechanffian complacency. In his case opportunity modifies principles.

KILL THE CATERPILLARS.

Prevention, better than cure, applies to caterpillars as well as to other pests. It is a little too late in the season to deal with the greatest effectiveness with the prevention of the existence of caterpillars; we must now address our efforts to preventing the immense damage caterpillars will do within the next few days if prompt measures are not taken. The worms are now so far advanced in growth, that it is hopless to destroy them in their tents. They will have to be watched and crushed, the chief feasible way now available. It is the habit of the maturer caterpillars, after devouring all they can at one time, to change on the trunks and branches of their trees, in a state of gorged quiescence. A good way is to take the well-worn stump of a broom and crush the worms outright. Circumstances may suggest other ways, but any way is good that will kill the pests. Every caterpillar destroyed now, means hundreds and perhaps thousands fewer next year. Last year was the first that the worms appeared in any number. This year, there are more, and next year many more will come, unless—The caterpillars come in periods. After freedom from their visits for several years, they return, growing worse and worse, till they culminate in a ruinous scourge, such as we had ten or fifteen years ago, when the caterpillars, like the locusts, left no green thing in the way of leaves, and destroyed many orchards and much good forest. We should keep up the fight from this on. The Horticultural Society is warrantably alarmed at the danger from caterpillars, and are taking steps to interest public cooperation in destroying the worms. Every good citizen will work with them to the end of destroying something that will otherwise destroy us in proportion to the freedom with which we permit the pest to operate.

DISCREDITING CANADA.

We should like to live up to the motto, "Canada first," that is, to give preference to Canadian productions of all kinds. But Bonar Law, the Canadian leader of the British Tory party, makes it hard. He sets the example of depreciating Canadians, possibly as good, probably better Britishers, than himself. He disparages and insults Canadians. Here is an example of the reckless style of speech he permits himself to indulge in. In his latest address, he said:

"Mr. Winston Churchill spoke the other day of what the colonies could do in the way of defence. How much could they do? If the Liberal party had had their way in Canada would they have dropped out of the Empire and formed an alliance with the great nation on the other side of the Atlantic."

The imputation upon the loyalty of the Liberal party, composed of the better half of the Canadian people, is a gratuitous insult. Without making so much fuss, Canadian Liberals are just as loyal as the other party, and more so, because they live their loyalty. It was the Liberal party that gave a preference to British products in the Canadian market. It was the Conservative party that imposed a discriminating tariff against British goods. And it was the Conservative party that, through its leading journal, met the reproach that such a tariff would imperil British connection by the cynical reply—"so much the worse for British connection." It was the Liberal party that took practical steps to share the burden of imperial defence by establishing a Canadian navy to cooperate with the British navy. It was the Conservative party that, in compliance with the degrading demand, of an anti-British element, rescinded the naval bill and have provided no substitute. It was the Conservative party that formed an alliance with the only disloyal, the only anti-British element in the country, gave a place in the government of a loyal Dominion to a political clique whose watchword was, "We have enough of England and the English." There is not much merit in the tu quoque argument—not much merit in contrasting the loyalty of parties, but when one party is assailed with charges of disloyalty, and the charges welcomed and applauded by the other party, the first law of nature, self defence, comes into legitimate play. If Bonar Law could know, as we in Canada know, how the stale appeal to loyalty has been discredited and even made ridiculous, in this country, he would be more careful in his wholesale impeachment of better imperialists and more loyal Britons than himself. His attitude tends to disruption of the imperial bond, rather than to strengthening it. Canada has as little reason to be proud of an ex-Canadian, as the Tory party of Great Britain has to congratulate itself in selecting a leader so lacking in the dignified restraint and poise of the chief he succeeded.

HELPING THE CHHILDREN.

Despite the strenuous opposition of the Conservative party, the Liberal government has just put through the British House of Commons a measure which may in years to come be known as the children's charter. It is to limit, and, if possible, abolish the evils of child labour. The new law provides that no child shall leave school for any portion of the day until 13 years of age, and the local education authority must see to it that any child under 14 is entering an occupation which will lead to permanent employment and afford useful training.

The necessity for such legislation is shown by the mere fact that there are 30,000 children under thirteen working in the textile mills of Lancashire and Yorkshire, with thousands more in other occupations throughout the country. The labour members urged that the age limit should be raised to 14, but accepted the bill as a step forward.

During the discussion it was pointed out that if Britain expects to maintain her industrial and commercial supremacy she must follow the example of Germany. There a boy or girl must give a certain number of hours a week to school attendance up to the age of 18, even though at work for a part of the day. The British bill takes no thought for the future of the child who goes to work after 14, but neither does the bill for any increase of education, and especially for technical education, and every step forward in that direction is calculated to advance the interests of the nation as a whole. —Ottawa Free Press.

It is with reluctance that we break the news to an anxious public that Mr. C. Templin and his hired help have dropped another game. Yesterday afternoon, the St. Thomas club dropped off in Peterborough on their way to Ottawa and stayed long enough to pry off the lid off the local baseball season and incidentally to help themselves to a 9 to 6 win over our fitfully-trained athletes.

Mr. Jupiter Pluvius, whose irrigation work during the past ten days has been the subject of much unfavourable comment, suspended his sprinkling operations during the latter part of the afternoon and eight hundred of our best people took a sporting chance of being drowned by a cloudburst and hied themselves to the ballyard across and, lately under, the river. They were amply rewarded for their bravery, as almost everything in the line of baseball and side-dashes was handed out during the affray.

In addition to the game, they had an outburst of eloquence from J. Ham. Burnham, a display of twirling by Ald. Anderson, some neat batting by President W. H. Denham, a catching specialty by W. McIlroy and some umpiring by E. G. Patterson.

Mr. C. Stewart and his band of Saints cleaned up the pastime in workmanlike manner. During the early stanzas of the engagement, it looked as if the White Caps had swatted the jinx in the neighbourhood of its Adam's apple and that it had taken the count. True, the enemy started out with one run, but in the second round, a single by Mr. Tully and a four-ply swat by Mr. I. Trout, our catcher, gave us two runs, and Mr. Trout a picture of the devouted leader. Great doings.

There was more joy in the third session, when the home-run athletes chased another counter over the plate, and with the sun breaking through the clouds everything looked to the merry. Mr. Schaeffer, a shrinking little thing of 197 pounds, was doing the slab work for the White Caps and at this stage of the engagement had the invaders stopped completely. In fact, until the sixth innings, it looked as if the Petes had broken into the win column at last, and the bugs in the stand had commenced to figure where we would be on Saturday night after taking four in a row from Guelph. Just here the Glooms started a procession. Our Mr. Tully, who usually shortstops with accuracy and class, hurled the ball in the direction of the rolling Otonabee after their Mr. Wright had singled, whereupon Mr. Dolan obligingly tried to throw it back into the grandstand. Meanwhile Mr. Wright kept on circling the bases and eventually scored. Sad event. Then Mr. Dolan neglected to cover first base when our energetic leader had trapped a low drive. Their Mr. Powers obliged with a timely sacrifice and the game was tied up.

There was nothing more doing until the eighth, when some more painful occurrences happened. Their Mr. Keifel singled to left. Mr. Turner did likewise. Mr. Forgue did ditto. Our Mr. Trout lost a perfect throw to the plate and Mr. Keifel crawled home in safety. Mr. Gurney watched four bad ones float by and walked, choking the stations. There was a moment's relief when Turner was forced at the plate, but alas, their agile third baseman, Mr. E. Wright, stabbed the Spalding to the left field fence and Messrs. Forgue and Gurney cavorted in.

Our athletes failed to do anything in their half. Not so with St. Thomas when they came back in the ninth. Mr. Kopp, who incidentally is some left-fielder, started in with a two-bagger. "Everybody's doing it," remarked Mr. Powers as he poked out a single. Then our Mr. Tully failed to clutch another grounder and with an infield out and a half circuit drive by Mr. Stewart, the dashing commander of the hostile forces, three large runs were added to the already swollen run column.

A deficit of six runs stared our braves in the face when they came to bat for the last time. Mr. Templin introduced a pinch-hitter at this stage, Mr. J. Derr, who hurls the pill from his port side was the selection ,and Mr. Derr made good with a single. Mr. Schwartz followed suit. Our latest acquisition, Graney, who has other claims to distinction besides having a brother on the Cleveland team, missed three, but Mr. J. Beard, our centre gardener, made himself solid with the multitude by picking out a good one and driving it into the brewery yard for a home run. Delirious joy, and by the way ,our respects to Mr. Beard. Then Mr Templin died on a grounder, as did also Mr Tully with a safe one by Mr Dolan sandwiched in.

As might be expected, our ball yard was not in mid-summer form. Although an attempt was made to disguise it with sawdust, there were a few acres of mud around the basepaths and the going was heavy and slippery. It was a difficult feat to do any fast fielding under such conditions and the bad going had an especially bad effect upon the work of Shortstop Tully, who could not get any footing around short at all. The big fellow has been pulling off some sensational fielding around the circuit, and the fans will forget his boots yesterday when they see him in action on fast ground. There were some good fielding stunts on both sides in spite of the terrible condition of the field. Hartman had one of the feature plays, a one-hand pick-up of a wicked grounder down the third base line. Peggie Schwartz pulled off a beautiful catch when he went back to the fence for a long drive. The Saints fielded very snappily, the work of Wright at third being an outstanding feature.

Turner, who pitched for St. Thomas, was no mystery to the White Caps, who combed him for fourteen hits, but he was steady in the pinches and was helped out by air-tight fielding when it was needed most. Schaeffer pitched grand ball up to the sixth when he weakened, the errors behind him helping to reduce his effectiveness.

The season was started with the usual ceremonies. There was a parade of both teams in carriages, headed by the 57th band, and at the grounds the two teams marched across the field, after which Mr. J. H. Burnham made a short address. Ald. Anderson pitched the first ball, with Mr. McIlroy behind the bat, President Denham batting and Mr. E. G. Patterson umpired. Mr. Denham, amidst great applause, got a clean single.

Umpire Johnston handled the game most satisfactorily. He keeps the game on the move and the crowd liked his work. The story of the affray by innings follows:

First Innings.

Schaeffer could not get the ball over for Forgue and the Saints' shortstop walked. Gurney sacrificed, Templin covering first on the play. Stewart came through with a two-base drive down the first base line, Forgue scoring. Wright lifted a long fly to Beard and Wilde died on a grounder to Hartman. No hits. One run. No errors.

For Peterborough, Schwartz poled a pretty single to left and was sacrificed along by Graney. Wright made a lovely pick-up of Beard's hard smash and got the runner at first and Stewart took care of Templin's drive to right. One hit. No errors. No runs.

Second Innings.

Hartman grabbed Kopp's puzzling bounder to third with his bare hand and threw him out at first, Dolan handling the low throw in clever fashion. Powers missed three. Keifel was walked. Schwartz went away back to the fence and grabbed Turner's long fly. No hits. No runs. No errors.

Dolan was easy, Turner to Gurney. Tully singled and Hartman sacrificed him to second. Trout came through with a drive that cleared the left field fence for a home run, sending Tully in ahead of him amidst great applause. Schaeffer grounded out to third. Two hits, two runs, no errors.

Third Innings.

Forgue was safe when Tully missed his grounder, and Gurney got on when Trout fumbled his bunt. Stewart sacrificed neatly, advancing the base runners. Wright hit to Tully, who nailed Forgue at the plate. Wright and Gurney tried to pull off a double steal but Tully's quick return of Trout's throw to second caught Gurney cold at the counting station. No runs, no hits, two errors.

Schwartz grounded to third. Graney straightened one to the left field fence for two bases. Templin hit safely to right and Graney slipped in rounding third, losing a chance to score, as he was forced to hold the bag. Dolan, however, was there with the needful safety, cracking out a beauty to right which scored Graney. Tully grounded to Turner. One run, three hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Templin made a nice running catch of Wilde's fly. Kopp fanned and Powers grounded to Tully. No runs, hits or errors.

Hartman lifted a fly to Kopp. Trout fanned. Schaeffer dropped a Texas Leaguer over second, but was forced at the middle station on Schwartz's drive to Forgue. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Keifel took a slant in the ribs. Turner fanned. Forgue was walked. Gurney lifted a long fly to Beard and Jimmy's quick throw to third, kept the base-runners anchored. Stewart grounded to Templin. No hits, runs or errors.

Graney died at first. Beard singled. On the hit and run play, Templin drove a single to right, sending Beard to third, beating Stewart's splendid throw by a hook slide. Dolan, however, fanned, and Tully was out on a drive to Forgue. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Sixth Innings.

There were dark doings in the sixth. Wright led off with a clean single. Wilde hit to Tully, who threw wildly to first. Dolan returned wide to the plate ,Wright scoring and Wilde going to third. Kopp hit a low one to Templin ,who trapped it neatly, but Dolan failed to cover first and the runner was safe. Wilde scored on Powers' sacrifice fly to left. Tully gave Keifel a life by fumbling his bounder and Turner fanned. Two runs, two hits, three errors.

Hartman grounded to third, Trout was walked, but was doubled up on Schaeffer's grounder to Turner. No runs, hits or errors.

Seventh Innings.

Gurney led off with a single. Stewart, attempting to sacrifice, bunted the third strike foul and was out. Wright drove a single through the box, but Schaeffer extricated himself from the hole by fanning Wilde and Kopp. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Schwartz grounded to right. Graney fanned. Beard was safe on Gurney's fumble and Templin singled over second. Stewart grabbed Dolan's fly to right.

Eighth Innings.

Hartman went back into left field and made a nice catch of Powers' fly. Keifel singled on a line to left. Turner repeated. Forgue drove a beauty over third base. Trout missed Schwartz's perfect throw to the plate and Keifel scored. Gurney was walked, filling the bases. Stewart hit to Dolan, forcing Turner at the plate. Wright bounced a double off the left field fence, Schwartz almost tearing off the catch. Forgue and Gurney scored on the play. Wilde flew out to Schwartz. Three runs, four hits, one error.

Tully lifted a fly to Kopp, Hartman's high one was easy for Keifel and Kopp grabbed Trout's fly to left, after the catcher had lifted one over the fence that went foul by a foot or two. No hits, runs or errors.

Ninth Innings.

There was more trouble in the ninth. Kopp started it with a double and went to third on Powers' single. A passed ball scored Kopp. Keifel died on a fly to Templin, and Turner on a bounder to Schaeffer. Tully's miss of Forgue's grounder scored Powers. Gurney hit to Hartman, whose throw pulled Dolan off the base and the runner was safe. Stewart doubled, scoring Forgue. Gurney was out at the plate on an attempt to steal home. Three runs, three hits, two errors.

Derr batted for Schaeffer and singled. Schwartz dropped a safety over Turner's head, Derr going to third. Graney fanned, but Beard walloped the pill over left field fence for a home run, driving in three runs amidst great excitement. Templin died on a bounder to Wright. Dolan singled to right, Wilde almost robbing him of a hit, and Tully ended it with a drive to Wright. Three runs, three hits ,no errors.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE WHITE SISTER."

"The White Sister," presented at the Grand last night was greeted by a small but appreciative audience. The play, adopted as it is from Marion Crawford's well known novel, is a strong one, and in places very touching. It tells the story of how a girl, learning that her lover had been killed, enters a convent. Five years later, however, the latters re-appears having escaped from the enemy, by whom he was taken prisoner, and not killed, as first understood. Then ensues a period of drama—a fight between the nun and the lover woman the former ultimately gaining the victory.

As Sister Giovana, Miss Jeanne Fowler was superb, her portrayal of the character of the nun being marked with great strength. Her's was a difficult role, having to show her audience that she was, as it were, two distinct women. One was her spiritual self, strong and self-reliant, and the other a woman loved and beloved. Mr. Vernon Wallace, as Capt. Giovana Severi, performed the role of the lover in a most masterly fashion and the yielding of the soldier and the man to the vows of the nun evolved itself splendidly. Mr. Daniel Gilfether made a splendid Monseignor Sarcamesca, possessing a strong, resonent voice, and a dignified appearance. All the other members of the cast maintained the standard set by the principals.

His Hand Cut Off By Train

Special to The Examiner:

SMITH'S FALLS, ONT., MAY 23.—John McCoy, of this place, when walking along the C.P.R. track here last night, was overtaken by a freight train. In stepping aside, he tripped and before he could get clear of the rails his left hand was cut off by the train. He was taken to St. Francis Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate his arm at the shoulder.

PETERBOROUGH'S LEVEL CROSSINGS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I understand that a Railway Commission will, on May 31, hold a court of enquiry here as to the danger attending out of the many level crossings in this city.

The King and Sherbrooke street crossings are to be considered, but I would call attention to another level crossing, over which there is a considerable traffic. I allude to Hunter street, where Bethune street is intersected. This latter street, over which the G.T.R. has right-of-way, is between Charlotte and Brock streets, practically a shunting yard. Surely such a use of Bethune street was never contemplated by the Patres Conscripti of this city, when a right-of-way was granted to the railway company as a means of entry into the city.

I assume that in bygone days the powers that were were so anxious to give railway facilities that they forgot to safeguard the inhabitants; possibly they had formed no idea of what an important city was to arise from the then comparatively small township.

The sins of the fathers, we learn, are visited on the children. Now I note that the ruling powers of this fair city, while welcoming some safeguarding of their inhabitants, object to being mulcted in any way in the cost of such safe protection, in which case the inhabitants have to suffer. Surely here is an instance of the laxities of the fathers being visited on the children. One of these days, some terrible accident will happen at the Hunter street crossing. I am informed that there have been not a few narrow escapes. Cannot something be done to protect this crossing, which, surely, is an artery of quite as much traffic as the Sherbrooke street crossing?

Apologising for having intruded so much on your valuable space.—I am, etc.,

A HUNTER STREET RESIDENT.

FIREMAN BURNED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ONT., MAY 23.—Pere Marquette Mogul No. 204, running light from Chatham to Sarnia, left the rails near Courtright, and with Engineer Williams and Fireman Russell, both of Chatham, in it, plunged down a 15-foot embankment, turning over twice, while the tender rolled down the other side. Fireman Russell was horribly burned about the face, neck and arms by red hot coals. Engineer Williams escaped with a few slight burns and a general shaking up. Cause, spreading rails.

TREBILCOCK BROS

CALLS T.R. A MADMAN

LOUISVILLE, KY., MAY 23.—Col. Watterson, writing in the Courier Journal, says to-day that Roosevelt's success in Ohio is an invocation to civil war. He intimates that the United States is losing its democracy, that Roosevelt has assumed the role of dictator, with an idea of life tenure and executive office. Watterson calls Roosevelt a frenzied paranoiac and madman, whose bawling up and down the land, a good, clean gentleman like Taft should have left unanswered.

Low Vitality In The Spring

Vigour comes from good, red blood. Almost everyone's blood is thin and watery in the spring. Hence the tired, languid feeling, loss of energy and ambition and general weakness of bodily organs.

You can feel yourself getting strength and vigour when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used. The blood is made rich and pure, the appetite is sharpened, digestion improves, and every organ in the body feels the benefit of the rich, red, life-sustaining blood.

Mr. W. J. Venner, clerk, 20 Blower street, Halifax, states:—"This spring I felt that I needed a tonic. My health was very much run down and my system generally in a weakened condition. Soon after beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I could see that it was doing me good, as I felt very much better. This medicine gradually toned up my nerves, cured me of headaches from which I used to suffer, and I now take pleasure in recommending it as a nerve and general tonic."

WEDDING BELLS

CONROY—CARVETH.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at 9 o'clock, when Mr. Francis C. Conroy, son of Mr. David Conroy, Hunter street east, and Miss Marion Carveth, daughter of Mr. Henry Carveth, of 320 Charlotte St., were united in marriage by Rev. Fr. McColl.

The bride, charmingly attired in white satin, entraine, with pearl trimmings, and carrying a shower bouquet, walked up the aisle leaning on the arm of her father, by whom she was given away. Miss Veronica Carveth, dressed in white embroidered voile, with hat to match, was bridesmaid, while Mr. Herb Conroy, acted as best man. As the bridal party left the Church Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the organist, Miss Doherty. A large number of friends were present at the ceremony.

After a dainty wedding repast the young couple left for New York, Atlantic City, and other points, the bride wearing a travelling costume of Persian tan with a black hat trimmed with tan plumes. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Conroy will spend the summer in North Bay, where the former has secured a contract, and at the expiration of that time they will return to Peterborough.

The Grand Opening of the Peterborough Summer Fair will take place on Monday Evening, May 27th at 8 o'clock. d-t-

Is Our Showing of New Summer Millinery

Particularly pleasing is our assemblage of the new millinery creations now ready for your choosing. Never has a millinery season offered greater variety—more becoming or more graceful productions than fashion has selected for this year. And the "Cressman" millinery salon is fairly glowing with the beauty and freshness of these beautiful, artistic creations.

Whether you prefer a dainty hat of lingerie, a handsome new dress hat to correspond with dainty summer frocks, a sailor to wear with wash dresses or a trim ready-to-wear hat; whether you prefer the wide sweeping brim or small close fitting effect, you will find your favourite style here in such pleasing, extensive variety and smart, becoming creations, that selection will be made extremely easy.

We call particular attention to our showing of trimmed hats at moderate prices and for Saturday's selling we have prepared a table with about 25 of this season's smartest ready to wears; lines which we have used as department leaders at $5.50 and $6 50, completed with productions from our own workrooms, marked for a great millinery snap at only $4

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE WEBBER OF "STONEHEDGE," MONAGHAN

In the death of Mr. George Webber, of "Stonehedge," North Monaghan, there is removed one of the best known and most highly regarded men in the county of Peterborough. The late Mr. Webber has been suffering all winter from an affection of the head, and his death was not unexpected.

The deceased gentleman was 70 years of age, and was born in Charnley, Devonshire, England. He was eight years of age when he came to Peterborough with his father, the late Mr. Giles Webber, and family. This would be about 1850, so that Mr. Webber has spent the full three score years in Peterborough. He resided in the city till about twenty years ago, when he acquired and entered into possession of the "Henry Collins' Farm," North Monaghan. In his earlier years Mr. Webber entered into the cattle dealing business, and has been practically occupied with it the whole of his adult life. This occupation brought him in contact with the farming community in every part of the county and adjoining district, and it is probable that no single man in the county was as widely known as Mr. Webber. And it is certain that no man in the county was ever held, or deserved to be held, in higher respect for the invariable fairness and squareness of his business and personal dealings. His business prospered, and he amassed a considerable fortune; and in later years he has owned and conducted one of the best and best conducted farms in the county or country.

Mr. Webber, while conducting a successful business, did not sacrifice any of the higher qualities of heart or character to the pursuit of wealth. He was the soul of kindness and consideration as his late parents and other relatives can testify. But not only they but any who were in need, sorrow, sickness, or any other adversity had a helping hand promptly extended. An appeal to him in behalf of any church or good enterprise met with prompt and liberal response. No man was ever turned hungry away from him or his door, and hundreds have not only been fed and clothed, but sent on their way rejoicing with material help. Mr. Webber was a nobly big-hearted man, countless deeds of kindness unknown to the world at large, are placed to him credit by grateful beneficaries.

Mr. Webber was married about forty-five years ago to Miss Elizbeth McKee, of Smith, who predeceased him by several years. He leaves behind him two sons and one daughter—the sons are Mr. Harry G. and Frank Webber, both on the homestead farm, and one daughter, Mrs. H. C. Wright, (Lelia), Martinsburg, West Virginia. One sister, Mrs. H. McClennan, 328 Charlotte street, also survives him, besides many nephews and nieces. In religion Mr. Webber adhered to the Baptist church, and in politics he was a staunch, but fair-minded Conservative.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30—religious service at the family residence, Stonehedge, Gravel Road, North Monaghan. Interment in Little Lake cemetery.

RAILWAY NOTES

Impressed by the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission concerning the number of railway employees killed and injured each year the large roads of the United States are organizing a "Safety First" movement, with the idea of reducing the number of casualities of this character, and, incidentally, of reducing damage claims as far as possible. It is likely that a general conference of claims agents will be held in New York, either next month, or in July, to formally open the campaign. Here in Canada the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways have kept in close touch with the movement, and a scheme is at present under consideration which should, when fully matured, and with the co-operation of the men themselves, greatly minimize the possibility of accidents, fatal or otherwise.

Mr. W. B. Spaulding, general claims agent of the 'Frisco System, who has been in New York recently, conferring with the representatives of other roads about the project, has already devised such a campaign for safety on his own lines and it is believed that the national organization will be patterned after his ideas. On each of the ten divisions of his railroad, he has organized a committee, the members of which are constantly on the lookout for conditions by which life and safety are endangered on their territory. Those committee-men are supplied with blank report cards printed, "I have noticed"—to be filled out with suggestions for remedying defects in road-bed, station platforms, or the operation of rolling stock, which might some day cause the loss of life or limb. Each member goes over the main line and terminals once a month, his expenses being paid by the Company. Some of the Division men inspect the shops and some of the shop men inspect the Divisions each month, while a central committee of all the Division and Shop committees meet once a month, goes over the reports, and, in turn reports to the railroad officers, recommending whatever action should be taken.

Figures show that most casualities result form the careless coupling of cars, jumping on cars as they approached, ty tripping over rails and frogs in the yard sb.y uncoupling cars while riding on them, and by being struck by objects along the rail while holding on to the side of moving cars. Just how great is the need for some such innovation can be seen from the following statistics: Of the 235,911 trainmen employed on the railroads of the United States in 1911, one out of every 194 was killed, and one out of every eight was injured. Taking all the railroad employees, including trainmen, yardmen, bridgemen, track men and crossing watchmen, a total of 1,648,033 in the United States in 1911, 1 out of every 456 was killed, and 1 out of every 8 was injured. In 1911 again 257 trainmen were injured by adjusting the couplers of cars with their feet, alone. A great mass of information of this kind is now being accumulated by those interested in the scheme.

Axe to Fall Again.

Ottawa, May 25.—The report of the commission headed by Hon. Dr. Sproule, which has been investigating certain charges against the conduct of officials of the House of Commons' staff, was placed in the hands of Premier Borden Thursday.

While the substance of the report has not been made public, it is understood that it recommends the dismissal of at least one prominent official, and that other drastic reforms are advised.

During the investigation, which was conducted under oath, some rather startling revelations were made, say the investigators. Acute differences along religious lines between the officials of one of the most important departments, according to the evidence, reached such a pitch at one period that two of the men had applied for permission to carry firearms, with which "to protect themselves."

Held International Cockfight.

Brockville, May 25.—Sports gathered in large numbers at Old Man's Island yesterday to witness a cockfight between Brockville, Kingston, Gananoque and Ogdensburg birds. Several battles were fought without the slightest molestation. The island is situated in American waters on the St. Lawrence, directly opposite Brockville, which precluded the local police from interfering.

SUCCESSOR TO C. M. HAYS

E. J. Chamberlain is Appointed Head of the Grand Trunk

WAINWRIGHT MOVES UP

Montreal, May 25.—Announcement was yesterday made by Chairman Alfred W. Smithers of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, that the vacancies caused by the death of the late Charles M. Hays had been filled. The announcement was couched in the following official statement:

"Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co., has been appointed president of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Companies, to succeed the late Mr. Charles M. Hays. Mr. Chamberlain has also been elected a member of Grand Trunk board in place of Mr. Hays.

"Mr. Wm. Wainwright, second vice-president of the Grand Trunk Railway, has been elected first vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Mr. M. M. Reynolds has been elected a director of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and second vice-president."

This decision was reached at a meeting of the Grand Trunk directors yesterday morning.

Mr. Smithers was asked if any action would be taken shortly to appoint a general manager for the Grand Trunk Pacific, the newly-elected president having held the dual position of vice-president and general manager, but Mr. Smithers, while replying that the matter would, of course be taken up later on, did not commit himself to any further statement.

He will leave Montreal about June 8, returning the beginning of August. He also stated that no statement concerning the companies' plans in the matter of steamships on the Atlantic or Pacific could be expected for some time.

CONVENTION OF WOMEN

National Council of the Women of Canada in Session at London, Ontario

MANY WOMEN REPRESENTED

London, May 25.—The Normal School yesterday morning was alive with the officers and delegates of the National Council of Women of Canada, who are holding committee meetings prior to taking up the work of larger scope.

Above the platform on a white ground rises a shield with the motto of the council: "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you," outlined in immortelles of light blue and purple. The whole is wreathed in evergreens, the finishing touch being given by a handsome knot and streamers of satin ribbon, also in blue and purple, the colors of the council.

The day was given over for the most part to meetings of standing committees. It is through these committees that the work of the council is largely accomplished. The woman most interested in the special work of a certain committee is appointed convenor and it is the mission of herself and those associated with her to gather and spread information regarding the subject in which they are interested. Committees meet and discuss in separate rooms, but the results arrived at will be given to the public when the regular open meetings scheduled in the agenda take place.

The Duchess of Connaught, honorary president of the council, is expected on Wednesday. A message was also read from Lady Aberdeen, first president of the council in Canada. "His excellency and myself," said the message, "wish we could fly across the ocean to be with you."

Lady Aberdeen requested that a little bouquet be given each delegate as a souvenir of her continued interest.

The welcome of Mrs. Boomer was replied to by Mrs. Bullock of St. John, N.B.

At the conclusion of the addresses, the mayor invited all present to refreshments served in another part of the building. A fine orchestra was in attendance and the reception was a most auspicious and cordial beginning for the work the council has in hand.

The committees in session yesterday were those on vacation schools and supervised playgrounds, peace and arbitration, agriculture for women, laws for the better protection of women and children, public health, the custodial care of feeble-minded women, education, the suppression of objectionable printed matter, citizenship, employments for women, immigration, suppression of the white slave traffic, care of the dependent poor, and the press and advertising committees. This covers a wide field but it practically epitomizes the greater part of the work of the council.

Twenty-five thousand of the women of Canada, members of affiliated societies, are represented by the delegates present, and it goes without saying that those selected as representatives are the cream of the intellect of our country.

The council is an outcome of a meeting held in Washington, U.S., five years before the World's Fair at Chicago. At the great exposition a second gathering at which twenty nations were represented took place. The outcome of this was the establishment of the council in many countries of the world. A provisional vice-president, the late Mrs. McDonald of Toronto, and a provisional secretary, Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, were appointed for Canada, and Lady Aberdeen gave the necessary impetus to the movement by consenting to become its first president.

The National Council of Canada is now composed of the following councils: Toronto, London, Hamilton, Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Kingston, St. John, Halifax, West Algoma, Victoria and Vancouver Island, Vancouver City, Regina, Vernon, Brandon, Nelson, New Westminster, East Pictou, Lindsay, Ingersoll, Renfrew, Walkerton, Chapleau, Sudbury, and Copper Cliff.

Mrs. Torrington of Toronto, president of the general meeting, and Mrs. Cummings, who has been associated with the movement as secretary for eighteen years, is recognized as the best informed woman present on all that concerns the technicalities of council work.

Train In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, May 25.—The most striking welcome those in charge of the "Made in Canada" train have received so far was given last night when four hundred representative Winnipeg citizens gave a banquet in the Industrial Bureau, the elaborate menu card containing only "Made In Canada" products. W. J. Bullman presided.

Ald. Wallace extended a civic welcome, seconded by W. Sanford Evans, T. A. Russell, chairman of the Canadian Home Market Association, H. D. Scully, manager of the train, and T. H. Race, lecturer, replied to the various toasts.

Mexican Rebels Repulsed.

Mexico, May 25.—Again Gen. Orozco's army retreated before the artillery fire of Gen. Huerta commanding the Government troops. As at Conejas, a week ago, the rebels were unable to withstand the hail of shells that poured into their ranks, and retired north from Bufano, this town, which several weeks ago was the scene of a rebel victory.

For nearly twenty-four hours the two main forces of the Government and rebel troops were engaged.

The losses could not be estimated, but casualties will be numerous on both sides. Even in the darkness the federals persisted in their artillery fire. Gen. Orozco was himself weakened by bursting shells. The night attack was a surprise.

British Liberal Elected.

London, May 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The South Mackey bye-election caused by the retirement of Horatio Bottomly, resulted in the return of a Liberal, H. Morrison, who secured 5,339 votes against 4,839 for W. C. Gibson, Unionist.

Horatio Bottomly, who sat in the House of Commons as an independent, gave up his seat as the result of heavy damages being found against him in a suit brought by the estate of a retired Government official. Bottomley is the editor of "John Bull."

ROYALTY AT BIG BANQUET

H.R.H. and Duchess Attend Empire Club's First Annual Banquet

PRINCESS PATRICA THERE

Toronto, May 24.—Rarely, if ever, in Toronto has such a distinguished assemblage gathered around the festive board to celebrate a day of national thanksgiving, of national remembrance and of imperial aspirations, as that which graced Convocation Hall last evening at the first annual Empire Day dinner of the Empire Club of Canada.

On the day forever sacred to the memory of "Victoria the Good" her illustrious son, Arthur, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, Canada's royal Governor-General, joined with those foremost in the political and social life of Canada in a speech brimming with optimism for the future greatness of this Dominion and of confidence in her playing a worthy part in the upbuilding and defence of the Empire of which she is proud to form a part. Not only was the duke present as guest of honor, but added eclat was given to the occasion by the presence of the Duchess of

H.R.H. DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

Connaught and the Princess Patricia of Connaught.

The banquet was held in the large examination hall to the west of Convocation Hall, and the walls were gaily decorated with alternate broad bands of blue and white bunting, while the electroliers were softened with golden draperies.

Under a canopy of royal purple and gold at the centre of the head table sat H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught. On his right sat Mrs. Fred B. Fetherstonhaugh, and on his left Mr. Fetherstonhaugh, on whose left sat the Duchess of Connaught, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and H.R.H. the Princess Patricia. Behind the chairs of Their Royal Highnesses were draped the royal standard and the Union Jack, superimposed on which was a large copy of the royal coat of arms.

The others at the head of the table with the royal guests were: The Lord Bishop of Toronto, Lady Gibson, Hon. W. T. White, Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Mrs. J. F. Sweeny, Hon. Robert Jaffray, Mrs. Sam Hughes, Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, A.D.C., Lady Pellatt, Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Mrs. Riddell, Mayor Geary, Lady Walker, Col. G. T. Denison, President Falconer, Mrs. Falconer, Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt, Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, Mrs. Geary, Mrs. Meredith, D. J. Goggin, M.A., D.C.L., Sir Edmund Walker, Mrs. Denison, Gen. Cotton, Mrs. N. W. Rowell, Hon. F. H. Phippen, K.C., Mrs. Clark, J. J. Small, K.C., Mrs. Cotton, Sir Wm. Mackenzie, Mrs. W. T. White, N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., Mrs. Phippen, Lieut.-Col. Hendrie.

The toast to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, was proposed by F. B. Featherstonhaugh, K.C., president of the Empire Club.

His royal highness in rising to reply was greeted with prolonged cheering, all present rising and waving their serviettes enthusiastically.

"I thank you most warmly," said his royal highness, "for the manner in which you have received my health and especially for the kind allusions you have made to the duchess and to my daughter.

"Having now for eight months had the honor of being His Majesty's representative in this great Dominion, I could like to take this opportunity of telling you how deeply interested I am in all important questions affecting Canada, and how I rejoice at the great prosperity at present existing throughout all portions of this vast country.

"My one wish is to be able to aid in every way in my power the best interests and the soundest projects in the many spheres of activity throughout the provinces of the Dominion.

"It is my earnest hope and belief

"I congratulate Canada on the number of good class emigrants who are coming into this country, whose presence will greatly aid in developing the great resources with which nature has provided you.

"On this great anniversary dedicated to the memory of that gracious and glorious sovereign, under whose reign the British Empire made such vast strides, one's thoughts naturally turn to the significance and meaning which the word 'empire' has for ourselves. Probably never in our time have the thoughts of those who are leading it up been so deeply centred on the problems which we have to face.

"For Canada these problems have the deepest significance from the prominent position she so rightly holds amongst the great self-governing dominions of the Empire.

"May the various races who have built up the Dominion be strong and loyal to themselves, and above all may the unity of Canada be the foremost wish of all its people, and of those who are called on to direct its destinies.

"I feel convinced that if Canada is true to herself she will be true to the empire, of which all Canadians, of whatever station in life, are equal members, and in whose integrity all are equally interested.

"Never let us forget that the British Empire has always been foremost in promoting the liberties of its populations, while at the same time maintaining those traditions which have made its past so glorious.

"I am sure that in no portion of the Empire is there more loyalty and devotion to our gracious sovereign than in Canada, and nowhere in the Empire will there ever be a stronger sense of the duty we owe to the flag under which it is our privilege to live."

Sikh Women May Remain.

Ottawa, May 25.—The wives of the two Sikhs who were detained at Vancouver for deportation because they had violated the immigration act and whose case has been under consideration by the Government and before the courts for several months, will be allowed to remain in Canada.

This has been decided upon by Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of the Interior, as an act of grace and as the husbands of these women are now in Canada, but without establishing a precedent. In view of this decision all proceedings will be dropped.

Rector of Stoke-on-Trent Startles His Congregation.

Never in the history of the Church of England, or, indeed, of Christianity, has a more astounding ceremony been witnessed than that presented on a recent Sunday for the "edification" of the congregation assembled in the Church of St. Michael's and All Angels," Stockton, Warwickshire, says an English paper.

At the close of the evening service the rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Colley, took his place in a coffin which had previously been prepared, and, carried by four of his parishioners, was exhibited to the gaze of his worshipers. He was clad in the canonicals he had worn during the service, and his features were plainly visible through the glass covering of the wooden oblong, in which he was inclosed as if for burial.

Some of the congregation were obviously seized with consternation at the weird spectacle. Others knowing their rector's amiable idiosyncrasies, giggled half hysterically. And a few shocked at the mockery of death, hastily left the church.

Returning to the music desk, which is a special feature of the church, and facing the large congregation, the rector made the following extraordinary statement:

"Not feeling to be getting any younger every day, I have had my coffin—which many of you for some eight years have known has been made for me—brought over from the rectory music room, and now is before you in the chancel. In the year 1906 (on the 14th day of May) I left my body to be given up to the University of Birmingham for medical students' use, and to be cut up in the interests of anatomical and surgical science when I have done with it."

Having got so far in his strange address, the archdeacon called for his "bearers" to come forward. Still clothed in full canonicals, consisting of cassock, surplice, stole and hood, with the Canterbury biretta, he stepped into the square box-shaped coffin, which had been reared on end, and the glass cover was fixed in front of him. Then he was borne through the church.

Charity Dogs.

Prince, the five-year-old black retriever at Reading Station, collected £45 last year for the Great Western Railway Orphanage in London. Altogether since he started he has added over £150 to his record, at the rate of £1 a week.

Prince generally begins work at 8.30 in the morning and has a twelve-hour day of it. He has an hour's sleep between twelve and one. Every train that comes in he meets, and stands on his hind legs at the carriage doors begging for coppers. He knows every train on which there is a restaurant car, and always expects a bone or a scrap of meat.

Prince by no means holds the record for collecting. Anywhere near it, as a matter of fact, Tim, an Irish-Airedale terrier, [illegible] stuffed and on view at Paddington Station, collected over £1,000. The Great Western Railway have many dogs like Tim collecting for them. The forerunner of all these canine collectors is supposed to have been Help, a Scotch collie which belonged to a guard named Climpson. Help started collecting in 1883, and died nine years later, after wheedling over £1,000 out of passengers. Like Tim, he is stuffed, and still manages to collect about £20 a year.

White Island.

What is perhaps the most extraordinary island in the world is that which lies thirty miles to the northeast of New Zealand. White Island is an enormous mass of rock nearly three miles in circumference, rising 900 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds that are visible for nearly 100 miles. This island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small percentage of gypsum. Some years ago, an attempt was made to float a company to work the sulphur, which is of high quality, but sufficient capital was not subscribed. The export of sulphur from White Island is, therefore, still very small. In the interior is a lake fully fifty acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark clouds that envelop the island.

Siamese Elephants.

It is estimated that there are 3,000 domesticated elephants in Siam; but there is a fear that the elephant is showing a tendency to disappear. The price is $2,500 for a male and $1,800 for a female. The animal, an adult at 25, is not in full vigor until ten years later, and the longevity of the elephant is well-known. The capture of the wild elephant is both dangerous and costly. Elephant hunting is under the control of the state, which imposes a duty of $150 on each animal taken. According to an official return the value of ivory exported from Siam last year was $22,000.

A New Star Discovered.

A telegram has been received at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, from Kiel Observatory announcing the discovery of a new star of the fourth magnitude near Theta Geminorum. Theta Geminorum is a fourth magnitude star. Its right ascension is 6hr. 47 min., and north declination 34deg. 4min. It lies on a straight line drawn northwards through Beta and Alpha Orion (the two brightest stars in Orion) and is rather more than 1 1-2 times the distance between these stars from Alpha Orion the more northerly.

Oriental Divers Barred.

After Jan. 1, 1913, only white men can act as pearl divers in Australian waters. Up to this time the divers have been chiefly Malays and Japanese, it being supposed that white men could not endure the work.

Just Hold the GILLETTE Naturally

Shaving with the GILLETTE is not a fine art, nor does it require skilled labor. You may be "no good with tools," yet you can shave yourself easily and well with the Gillette Safety Razor.

Hold it lightly, as illustrated, and it falls naturally into the right shaving position, blade edge just touching the skin. Then draw it across the face, not hoe fashion, but with the Angle Stroke shown, and the keen GILLETTE blade will cut smoothly in any direction—with the grain, across it, or against it.

If you want a light shave, or if your skin is tender, screw the handle tight.

If you want a close shave, loosen the handle about a quarter turn. This allows the blade to spring away from the guard a little and take more hold. Buy a GILLETTE and forget your shaving troubles.

Standard Sets, $5.00. Pocket Editions, $5.00 to $6.00. Combination Sets, $6.50 up.

It's no wonder Maple Buds taste good, and it's no wonder mothers everywhere are encouraging the little folks to spend their pennies for them.

Maple Buds are nothing more than the best of chocolate, pure milk and sugar—things the doctor would recommend to build up a sickly child. The most delicate child can digest them.

The distinctive flavor of Maple Buds is entirely due to the use of only the best chocolate. The fine velvety texture comes from grinding and grinding through innumerable steel rollers.

MINING FOR DIAMONDS

HOW JEWELS ARE TAKEN OUT AT KIMBERLEY.

The Home of the Precious Stones Is a Grey Rock Called "Blue Ground," the Origin of Which Remains a Mystery — Kaffir "Boys" Dig Out the Lumps and Get a Percentage on Their Finds.

At Kimberley, Cape Colony, is probably the biggest hole in the world—the old "Central" Mine—with a space measurement at the surface of 14 acres, and a depth of some 400 feet. There are, in addition to several smaller ones, four other enormous excavations, all witnessing to the tireless energy of men in a hurry to be rich.

The diamonds are found in a grey rock called "blue ground," which fills a "pipe" or natural shaft of unknown depth, widening towards the surface into funnel shape. Below the few feet of red sand on the surface comes the "yellow ground," — lime — for fifty or sixty feet.

Underneath that is the "blue ground," which, although the "yellow ground" is not without diamonds, is the true diamond-bearing rock. Scientists believe that these "pipes" are the craters of extinct volcanoes, and that at some time when the surrounding country was under water, this diamondiferous rock was forced up in the form of volcanic mud. How and when and where the diamonds were formed remains a mystery, but they are undoubtedly of earlier date than the rock which encloses them.

The first mining operations were restricted to digging and scooping out the earth. But, by degrees, as the hole got wider and deeper, troubles came in the shape of accumulation of water and falls of "reef." In gold-mining the "reef" is the gold-bearing rock; but the "reef" of the diamond mines is the surface shale and basalt surrounding the "pipes."

This was the cause of great tribulation to the early miners, as it caved in again and again, and overwhelmed the working below. After various experiments had been tried without permanent success, it became impossible to work the mine any longer in the old way, and many thought the industry was absolutely ruined.

Here was the opening for the capitalist, who soon superseded the "digger."

The larger claim-holders banded together, and sank shafts outside the area already operated upon with galleries running towards the centre, until the "blue" was tapped. In 1888 Messrs. Rhodes, Barnato, and Beit, having bought out the smaller holders, formed the De Beers Consolidated Mines, Limited, that great corporation which has ever since controlled the diamond mining industry.

The main shaft at the "Central" connects with the "pipe" of blue ground by means of several galleries, the distance from shaft to "pipe" being 1,134 feet.

Armed with the necessary permit, obtained at the De Beers offices, we make for the "Central," and seek the courteous manager, who shows us into a sort of dressing-room. Here we strip ,and re-clothe ourselves in a special suit in which we may more suitably face the heat and dirt of the descent.

The outfit includes flannel shirt, and coat and trousers of "duck," or some such material, the articles being decidedly the worse for wear. Instead of braces or belt, a looped leather thong does duty. An ancient sou'wester with ear-flaps, and tied under the chin, a pair of socks that have seen service, and rubber Wellington boots complete the costume.

Accompanied by the manager, we get into the cage at the top of the shaft, and after a few seconds of swift motion, step out at the 1,000 foot level. Each supplied with a composite candle—but no candlestock—we proceed to explore the workings on that level. We pass stalwart natives at work, with here and there a white overseer. Some drill holes in the rock ready for blasting; others gather up the fragments into small steel trucks, which are pushed along on rails to the "shoot" which conveys the "blue" down to the 1,200-foot level.

These "boys" handle many a lump with a fortune hidden in it. Sometimes their quick eyes detect the "stone," and not being without the desire for self, they covet, like Achan, and, like Achan, take—if they can do so unnoticed. They will make an incision in their flesh as a secure hiding-place for their "find," and even swallow stones. To encourage the "boys" to give up what they find, they are allowed a percentage on the value of the diamonds.

We descend the remaining 200 feet in stages of twenty feet by means of perpendicular ladders. The utter blackness into which one steps is friendly to the nervous man who shudders whenever he looks at masons and carpenters at work on scaffoldings.

Nevertheless the ladders have to be negotiated with care for the rungs are slimy, and the candle has to be carried, while the approach of your friend above you is heralded by lumps of mud dropping from his feet to your sou'-wester. Water also occasionally falls from the roof. But we emerge safely at the 1,200-foot level into comparative light, greater dampness, a cooler atmosphere, and deafening din.

The noise is caused by the constant running of two sets of steel trucks—the one carrying the "ground" from the bottom of the "shoot" to the foot of the shaft, the other returnign empty—and the mechanical emptying of the full trucks into the "skip" for conveyance to the surface.

Willingly enough, after an hour and a half underground, we re-enter the "cage" and speedily measure the 1,200 feet to the surface. Resigning, without a sigh, our be-sludged disguise, we enjoy the thoughtfully-provided bath, and return to life in the sunshine.

Sore Chest Croup

You often have pains in the muscles, in the side, the back, the neck, or chest. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense.

Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation, so thoroughly drives out pain, as "Nerviline," which is without an equal for penetrating, soothing, pain-relieving power.

Nerviline simply can't fail to cure, because it's a perfect antidote for all the pains and aches that invade the family.

Nerviline

"For ten years we have used Polson's Nerviline in our home," writes Mrs. M. E Graves of Freeport. "For hard. croupy colds there is nothing better. In case of a chill, sudden cold, or neuralgia, Nerviline cures before the trouble gets serious. I have used Nerviline for chronic rheumatism and lame back and find it a wonderful remedy."

All dealers sell Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

The Moon's Mission.

Some partisans of final causes have imagined that the moon was given to the earth to afford it light during the night, but in this case nature would not have attained the end proposed since we are often deprived at the same time of the light of both sun and moon. To have accomplished this end it would have been sufficient to have placed the moon at first in opposition to the sun and in the plane of the ecliptic at a distance from the earth equal to the one hundredth part of the distance of the earth from the sun and to have impressed on the earth and moon parallel velocities proportional to their distances from the sun. In this case the moon, being constantly in opposition to the sun, would have described round it an ellipse similar to that of the earth. These two bodies would then constantly succeed each other, and as at this distance the moon could not be eclipsed its light would always replace that of the sun.—Laplace.

The Transforming Touch of Genius.

The genius in tailoring accomplishes without effort things that refuse to yield to the most determined efforts of the ordinary mortal. He apparently creates out of nothing. His touch transforms the shape of the customer and the set of the garment. He molds the ungainly form into an Apollo, and the misfit garment falls into natural place in his hands. The lines of his draft are unapproachable, and his system is infallible. He knows just when the shoulder is to be advanced or receded; he understands intuitively just how much the waist is to be suppressed or filled in and how much spring is required. He never makes a mistake, and if the journeyman ruins a garment beyond repair in the making the genius sets it right with a few touches, even though to repair it is beyond the ordinary cutter's skill.—Tailor and Cutter.

NATURAL LACE.

Marvelous Tree of Jamaica Whose Bark Is Used For Garments.

Many instances of the marvelous in nature are supplied by the vegetable kingdom. Though our knowledge of the mysteries of plant life are limited, we have abundant evidence that many plants are as wonderful in their way as certain members of the animal kingdom. Take, for instance, that specimen of a little known tree whose inner bark is a very perfect example of fine lace, which seems to be valued by native races on the island of Jamaica where it grows. Nowhere else on earth has this singular tree been found, and even in Jamaica its growth is confined to a small part of the island. It was discovered and permanently introduced to the botanical gardens of England and Europe as early as 1664. In fact, a half century earlier, in 1713, a young lace-bark tree was brought to the Kew Gardens of England by Rear Admiral William Bligh, but it did not live long in its new home.

The inner bark of this singular tree consists of reticulated fiber in layers, one for each year of its life, and when properly prepared this material exactly resembles well made lace. The ladies of Jamaica are extremely dexterous in making caps, ruffles, nets, bonnets, veils and complete suits of lace with it. It bears washing extremely well, with common soap, and acquires a degree of whiteness equal to that of the best manufactured lace. The wild negroes have made apparel with it of a very durable nature, but the common use to which it is applied is rope making. The Spaniards are said to have worked it into very strong ropes, and the Indians employ it in a variety of different fabrics.

The trees grow to a height of 20 to 30 feet and present a beautiful sight when in blossom. The flowers closely resemble those of the lily-of-the-valley, while the leaves are of good size and glossy, forming a good setting for the pure white blossoms which grow in spikes.

Where Peter Worked.

On the wall of a barn in the Foreign Cattle Market at Deptford on the Thames is a tablet in Russian and English to the memory of Peter the Great of Russia, put up by the Russian agriculturists on their visit to Great Britain. The original shed in which he worked has long since disappeared, with its rough tablet recording that:

"HERE WORKED
As a Ship Carpenter
PETER
Czar of all the Russias
Afterwards
PETER THE GREAT
1698."

This period spent in acquiring practical knowledge in a foreign country is indicative of the energy and determination which played so great a part in this interesting character — interesting especially when viewed in conjunction with , setting. Wild and undisciplined as a boy, and with the savagery of a race then a full century behind its time, he yet had the breadth of concept and the far-seeing determination to lift his country out of its frozen sleep and set it on the road to civilisation. Although his methods were sometimes drastic, savoring of that very absence of civilisation which he desired to remedy, he achieved his purpose.

Serious Shocks.

A comparison of the recorded dates of earthquakes seems to show that they have occurred most frequently in the winter half of the year. Three-fifths of those chronicled in France took place during the winter months, and the proportion seems more marked in Switzerland, while the same law has been observed with regard to earthquakes in Britain. The most severe of the 200 earthquakes recorded in England were those at Lincoln in 1142, at Glastonbury in 1274, when the original abbey was destroyed; and the shocks of 1580, which damaged Old St. Paul's and the Temple Church, and of 1750, which frightened to death the postaster, Aaron Hill. Of recent years the most serious English earthquake was that of 1884, which did considerable damage throughout East Essex, but luckily caused no loss of life.

Nile Sudd as a Fuel.

One of the most curious phenomena of the Nile is the dense floating masses of vegetation known as sudd. In certain parts of the river it accumulates in block so dense and elastic that steamers cannot force their way through it, and dense enough to support cattle. To effect a passage for a vessel the sudd must be cut up, and floated down the river. Sir Samuel Baker, in 1870, had to cut through 50 miles of sudd on his way to Gondokoro. It has now been found that the sudd can be converted into a useful fuel, and a concession has been granted for working it on the first 92 miles of the Bahr el Jebel.

The Sporting Spirit.

An adverse criticism of the Rugby football team of the Aberystwyth College of Wales in a local paper brought severe punishment upon the head of the writer, says a London paper. At the close of lectures the students seized him and marched him to the castle ruins, where he was bound, and upon his head was poured the contents of a can of syrup. Bags of confetti were flung at him from all sides until he appeared like a human kaleidoscope. Thence he was borne on a truck through the streets of the town, which were filled with people.

Noah's Ark Dinner.

An amusing freak dinner has just been given in London by the Irish Literary Club and Association. The guests, forty in number, were all dressed to represent animals — lions tigers, birds, and dogs being among the number. The dining-room was designed to represent a stable, and the meal took place by candle light. The waiters were dressed as cats.

Not What He Expected.

She—Say, are those poems in the paper signed "Oedipus" yours? He—Yes. She—Well, the girls persisted said they were, but I always spoke up for you.—Pittsburg Blatter.

SHREDDED WHEAT and Strawberries

Being made in Biscuit form it is so easy to prepare a delicious, wholesome meal with Shredded Wheat and berries or other fruits. The porous shreds of the Biscuit take up the fruit acids, neutralizing them and presenting them to the palate in all the richness of their natural flavor.

Heat the Biscuit in the oven to restore crispness; then cover with strawberries or other fruits and serve with milk or cream, adding sugar to suit the taste. More nutritious and more wholesome than ordinary "shortcake" and so much easier to prepare—requires no baking and no cooking.

"MARVELOUS" CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION

Four Children Constantly Scratching, Nearly Tore Limbs Off. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"Two of my daughters and two of my sons were suffering from very bad heads, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to rub some ointment, which he gave them, well into the sores. These sores started in small blotches which got larger and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said it was eczema, but they seemed to be daily getting worse. The sores formed like little boils, then filled with matter, and looked like abscesses. They became all inflamed and irritated, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores burst, and the matter flowed all over their heads. We had to cut their finger nails and at times to put gloves on their hands, the irritation was so bad, to keep them from digging into the flesh, and at night they would nearly tear their limbs off. The bolsters would be literally covered with blood.

"The teachers would not let them attend school for fear of infection spreading among the other children, so I resolved to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I found to benefit my children greatly. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for one month, and the result is a marvelous cure." (Signed) George Arthur Robinson, 27, Fitzwilliam St., Hoyland Common, nr. Barnsley, Yorks., Eng., Jan. 3, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., 46 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

GOOD ROADS NEEDED

Interesting Ruins in Far-off Cambodia, a French Protectorate

There are no roads to Angkor, in Cambodia, a kingdom and French protectorate on the Gulf of Siam, except a wretched bullock-cart road, and consequently few persons have ever heard of the splendid ruins that are in that vicinity. Yet they possess a strong appeal for the artist and the architect, and no less for the archæologist, since the language of the builders is still undeciphered.

The Angkor Wat, or Temple, is the most recent of the buildings, the best preserved, and the most ornate of them all. Standing in front of it, you see a central tower and two or more four-cornered towers, these towers being at the top of a forty-foot stone stairway, and the whole area being surrounded by a moat some thirty rods wide. At a distance the effect is of lateral magnitude only, because the entire structure or group of structures is resting flat upon a plain. Nevertheless, the central tower rises 213 feet in the air, and the others, on nearer view, are sufficiently lofty. Almost every square foot of the whole edifice, outside and inside, bears some exquisite design, carved in stone. A few blank spaces in the main temple seem reserved for masterpieces that were never made.

Probably most interesting of all the decorations are the several series of bas-reliefs, which in quantity also exceed the rest. They include: a battle between men and monkeys—a favorite theme—160 feet long; battle between Hindus and unknown enemies, 160 feet long; hunting procession, 324 feet; procession of the seven-headed snake, Naga, 136 feet; procession of Paradise and Purgatory, length undetermined, but over 160 feet. Both sides are armed with spear, shield, cuirass, and war-club; the leaders, however, have swords, bows and arrows, and are protected from the sun even in battle by enormous umbrellas.

CASTLE FOR PRINCE

Future King May Have Home in His Own Principality

There is a likelihood that the Prince of Wales will have a home of his own in his own principality. The recent death of the Dowager Lady Penrhyn makes it possible to put through the scheme which has been on foot for some time to purchase Penrhyn Castle for him. The castle stands on an eminence, two miles from the Town of Bangor, in North Wales. It is a very imposing affair, with a high Norman tower and turrets. Its interior is notable for its fine old furniture, sculptured chimney pieces, oak carving and paneling. There is also a bedstead constructed entirely of slate, which is exquisitely tooled and finished. It took fourteen years to build the castle and it cost $2,500,000.

SETTING THE TABLE ON AN OCEAN LINER

Four Millions Expended in a Single Year on North German Lloyd Vessel

The many cafes aboard modern liner have the atmosphere of the boulevards. The old, long, baronial board, presided over by the captain to which passengers were summoned by bell or trumpet, has given way to separate tables at which one is free to dine, lunch, or sup alone, at any hour, in any seat, at any one of a hundred small tables seating two, or to join a party at a table seating seven, all surrounded by decorations that rival those of the best restaurants ashore. And as in any first class hotel, the guest is not restricted to a table d'hote menu, and can order from an epicure's bill of fare—but on shipboard all meals are included in the price of the passage. Cafes for those who do not smoke, a new convenience, have the air of such places as Vienna. These are distinct from the open-air verandah cafes with their teakwood tables.

Instead of the salt meats of 20 years ago, both cabin and steerage passengers have fresh meat daily. Twenty-eight thousand pounds of meat and 15,000 liters of beer were consumed by the passengers of a single North German Lloyd liner on one recent voyage, while on the same ship the cost of setting the tables for a single year was $4,000,000.

Ah, it is the expense, then, that deters you? This talk of de luxe accommodation sounds expensive? But you do not need to take these expensive cabins unless you are willing to and can pay for them. All of the other comforts, conveniences, and luxuries are as free to the poorest traveler as to the richest, and not the least interesting fact about ocean travel is that its cost is constantly growing less.

The voyage to England now costs on the best ships about half the rate charged by the Britannia, the first mail steamer to cross the ocean, 70 years ago. One can go first class for three cents a mile; second class for half that, and third class—with better accommodation than the best in the Britannia's day,—for about 80 cents a hundred miles, and these rates include meals. Compare them with the standard railroad passenger costs and meals in the dining cars or station eating-houses extra.

WAR ON POTATO CANKER

Efforts to Save Canadian Tubers From European Disease

The Canadian potato will be saved from the danger of canker, threatening from Europe, if the Department of Agriculture can save it. Potato canker is declared by departmenal experts to be the most dreaded enemy of the potato, being practically in eradicable. It stays in the soil for years. It is a fungus growth, and is very prevalent in Continental Europe and in England, where it has wrought havoc with the tuber crops.

The disease was discovered in Canada in an imported shipment of European potatoes, and the consignment was destroyed. Since then the regulations have been amended, and circulars will be issued broadcast over the Dominion warning potato planters against the use of seed potatoes from Europe. In buying their seed potatoes they are required to obtain a certificate that the potatoes are not diseased and have not been imported from Europe. The new regulations will be rigidly enforced.

BIG GAME COUNTRY

Hunters' Paradise in the Grand Canyon District of British Columbia

Some seventy miles up the Fraser River from Fort George, B. C., the Grand Canyon is reached and from there a magnificent moose country extends as far as the Little Smoke River. From reliable reports received it is probable that there are more moose here to the square mile than there are in any other part of the continent, and every year their numbers seem to increase. Whether the horns attain the large size of the Cassiar moose has yet to be determined but some very fine heads have been seen. In this district caribou are also very plentiful on the higher plateaux and, at places, both grizzly and black bear are numerous. It is beginning to appear, in fact, that, with the exception of antelope and musk-ox, British Columbia has every species of big game that exists on the continent, even the rarest of them being found in fair quantities. In addition there the wild fowl and game birds of various species, some native and some acclimatized, that furnish sport, while the waters afford unequalled salmon fishing.

Shots at Rehearsal

A theatrical assistant named Albert Conway, forty-six, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment at Leeds, for a common assault on Omar Nath Dutt, Indian illusionist.

It was stated that Dutt had been financed to the extent of $2,500 by Conway, and that at the Palace Theatre, Halifax, Conway took Dutt aside and said if he did not repay the money owing he would put a bullet through him.

At rehearsal, later, Conway drew a revolver and fired several times. Dutt was not hit.

DOUBLED IN YEAR.

Grange Young Britons Report a Remarkable Growth.

Brockville, May 25.—The 31st annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Orange Young Britons of British North America opened here yesterday with one of the largest representations of delegates in its history. Points as far west as Sault Ste. Marie and east to Quebec City were present. After a civic welcome by Acting Mayor MacKennie and a deputation of the town council and a complimentary address from the local Orange lodges, the reports of the grand officers were received.

Grand Master Gordon Black of Toronto made an appropriate reference to Brockville as the birthplace of Orangeism on this continent and expressed his satisfaction at the continued growth of the Young Britons.

Touching the question of home rule for Ireland he said: "As your grand master I feel I voice the sentiment of this grand lodge when I say that our brethren in the old land have our undying sympathy in their efforts to prevent the passage of the home rule bill for Ireland, and that our hopes and prayers are being exercised on their behalf, and, if need be, our personal and financial assistance, in their noble fight to uphold the British crown in Ireland, and to prevent the country from getting into the hands of the Roman church."

Grand Secretary Hashaw reported the membership at 10,000, which is almost double the figures one year ago. Ten new lodges were instituted at Regina, Sask.; Bracebridge, Ont.; Portage la Prairie, Man.; Victoria, B.C.; Rivers Man.; Nippers Harbor, Nfld.; Moosejaw, Sask., and Toronto.

The grand secretary touched upon the change in the Dominion Government of September last, and attributed the defeat of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the Protestant people of Canada arising in their might to wipe out a ministry which, he asserted, was fast being closed upon by the Church of Rome.

"As on previous occasions," he said, "the people decided that a halt should be called upon a Government which had abused the trust reposed in them. This should be a lesson to the Asquith Government in their attempt to force upon the Protestant people of Ireland a form of government that will be controlled entirely by the Church of Rome."

Grand Treasurer T. R. Caracadden of Russell presented a satisfactory financial statement. The receipts from all sources reached $2,500, and, after meeting all obligations, there remains a balance of $1,472. At the afternoon session the reports of several of the standing committees were considered and a special committee was appointed to draft a resolution setting forth the opposition of the grand lodge to home rule. Following adjournment the delegates were tendered a complimentary river trip and last night the local committee banqueted the grand lodge.

SICK HEADACHE

A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible—they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Biliousness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, banishing sick headaches and restoring vigorous health.

GIRL IS KILLED.

Toronto Auto Crashes Into Excavation at Street Corner.

Toronto, May 25.—One young woman dead, another severely injured and four men and a boy in a more or less serious physical condition, is the toll caused from a motor car driven by Philip Kaufmann crashing over Queen street at the southwest corner of John street at 2.15 yesterday afternoon. Leaping into an eight-foot deep building excavation at this corner the machine carried with it two women who were walking past on the sidewalk at the time and the occupants of the car. It buried two beneath it after turning over on its side. The dead woman, Miss Lilian Stein, 323 West Queen street, and 25 years old, was on her way to the theatre with a friend, Miss Jennie Weinstein of 36 Sullivan street, when the car swept them from the pavement. The occupants of the car were Sol and Josiah Kaplan, sons of Rabbi Kaplan, 166 John street, and the driver, Philip Kaufmann. None of these were seriously injured although all were bruised and suffered from hysteria. The driver escaped almost unhurt but was in a serious nervous state. He was arrested on a charge of manslaughter so soon as word of Miss Stein's death was received at police headquarters. The machine has been confiscated. This was done to eliminate the possibility of a recurrence of conditions as in the Brintnell case of some time ago when, after an auto accident, the machine was fixed before it had been examined as evidence.

Wireless For North Land.

Ottawa, May 25.—That the distant northern and western wilderness may be placed in almost immediate communication with Ottawa is something more than a probability, it is said. The author of the scheme is C. A. Magrath of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission. The proposal, if carried out, as seems likely, will mean the thorough exploration of the great unorganized territories of Canada with every step reported to and recorded at a central office by means of wireless telegraphy.

The plan as outlined would involve the establishment of wireless stations at various points in the far north and east. To these stations exploring parties would report and all information of importance would be communicated at once by wireless to the central bureau. A map has been prepared showing proposed stations at Cape Chudleigh and Charles Island on the north edge of Ungava, 1,100 and 1,700 miles from Ottawa respectively; at Lake Garry, 1,700 miles; Norman, on the Mackenzie, 2,200 miles, and Fort Resolution on Great Slave Lake, 1,830 miles. The scheme has been encouraged by the Royal Society and other bodies and individuals.

DOCTORS ADVISE MEDICATED AIR

It Cures Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Throat Troubles, Hoarseness.

For diseases of the lungs, throat and nasal passages mountain air has always been deemed salutary because of its pureness and freedom from disease germs. The air of pine forests, laden with minute particles of volatile germ-destroying principles, has enjoyed an almost unexampled reputation in these diseases also.

A MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY.

After years of exhaustive study a chemist devised a means of supplying right at home a healing balsamic remedy that is even more effective in catarrhal diseases than the air of the pine woods. Of course, this remedy was copyrighted in every civilized country and was at once offered to the public under the name of "Catarrhozone." Its success has been phenomenal.

Just think of it! A healing, soothing substance capable of destroying these noxious organisms which excite and maintain disease. Capable, also, of allaying congestion and of stimulating the healing processes of nature, which are combined in that invaluable compound so well and so favorably known to the medical world as "Catarrhozone."

CATARRHOZONE CURES.

Catarrhozone is simply the concentrated qualities of the air of pine woods. If you breathe it you will derive more benefit in one hour than you could possibly get from the woods in a year.

This great advantage arises from the fact that, in addition to those healing emanations from pine, other ingredients distilled from the vegetable kingdom are so united as to give results that could not possibly be derived in the simple form in which nature supplies medicated air.

20,000 PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT

For all diseases of the nose, ear, throat, bronchial tubes and air passages—for catarrh in every form—cure is certain with Catarrhozone, which is not a nostrum, but a high-class scientific treatment. Large size, sufficient for two months' use (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size 50c, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

PETERBORO' BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH WHILE ATTENDING INJURED MAN

Dr. Ken Overend Nearly Smothered at the Bottom of a Trench When Earth Caved in on Top of Him.

A PRIEST WITH HIM

The many friends of Dr. Kenneth Overend, son of Mr. W. J. Overend, Lock st., Peterborough, will read with interest the following from the New York World, which tells of a very narrow escape he had had recently:

As Father George Gardiner said mass at St. Finbar's Roman Catholic Church, on Benson avenue, Brooklyn, last Sunday morning, he gave thanks for his remarkable escape from death. Twice while he was giving the last rites to an entombed labourer Father Gardiner had to be rescued himself from being buried alive. Dr. Overend of Coney Island Hospital shared the peril with him.

While a man known to his fellow labourers only as Dominick was shovelling sand at the bottom of an eighteen foot sewer trench in Nineteenth avenue near Eighty-fourth street a cave-in buried him beneath five feet of sand and lumber. His frightened comrades were led to the rescue by J. F. Kerrigan, a contractor of No. 137 Bay Eleventh street, who was passing.

Fifteen patrolmen from Bath Beach station under Capt. O'Connor and Hook and Ladder Company No. 148, with Battalion Chief Donohue, helped make the sand fly. When they had uncovered the man's head Dr. Overend was lowered on a rope. He shouted back that Dominick had only a few minutes to live, and Father Gardiner was summoned.

On another rope the priest was lowered into the pit and had just administered the last rites to the dying man when there was an ominous rumbling and another portion of the treacherous sand wall caved in. The men holding the ropes were carried off their feet by the tons of sand, which rolled into the trench, burying the priest and the surgeon nearly up to their necks.

But the rescuers held on, and the two were being hauled out when there was another cave-in. By violent tugs on the ropes Father Gardiner and Dr. Overend, who had only been gripped by the sands as far as their knees this time, were dragged clear. The rescue was made just in time, as the two had only scrambled to their feet when a fifteen-foot section of the ground they were standing on slid out from under them, but they managed to leap out of harm's way.

The attempt to rescue the entombed man was then renewed. Three times the firemen and police, who were working frantically, almost reached Dominick, but each time the wall of the trench caved in and they had to begin all over again. Twice several of the rescuers were trapped by the sand and had to be dug out. Finally, after four hours' work, the buried man was dragged out. He was dead.

Witnesses Swear That Clarence Darrow Had Arranged to Bribe Jurors in MacNamara Case

NO CONFESSION

Special to The Examiner:

LOS ANGELES, CAL., MAY 25.—Sensational evidence was given to-day before the Superior Court in the case against Clarence Darrow, counsel for the MacNamara dynamiters. It was sworn to-day that Darrow arranged for the attempted bribery of certain jurors long before the trial commenced. The prosecution attorney stated to-day he would make no conditions for the acceptance of Darrow's confession, which is said here to have been offered.

Destroy The Caterpillar

"Arbor-Culture" Calls Attention to the Danger That Exists

To the Editor—

It must be apparent to everybody that we are to have this year a veritable plague of caterpillars unless immediate steps are taken to destroy the nests. In a few days it will be too late and the opportunity to fight them will be passed. To those who remember the havoc wrought by these loathsome creatures ten or twelve years ago, no warning should be necessary. Let us all do our part to exterminate the caterpillar while the opportunity presents itself. Every householder, every boy scout, every school child, should aid in the work. Cut down and burn the nests in the evening when the caterpillars gather. If we wage war against them without any further delay we may yet be able to avoid what may otherwise prove the destruction of our foliage this summer. Let everyone do his or her part.

RINGING THROUGH QUEBEC PROVINCE

ANOTHER MARVELLOUS CURE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Ludger Cote's Backache Had Developed Into Bright's Disease and Pains and Aches were His Portion —Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

St. Yvon, Gaspe Co., Que., May 24. —(Special).—Once more a wonderful cure has sent the name of the old Canadian Kidney Remedy ringing through the Province of Quebec. Mr. Ludger Cote, a well known resident of this place, is the man cured and the story of his cure in his own words is as follows:

"For four years I suffered from Backache, stiffness of the joints and finally Bright's Disease. I could not bend my right leg on account of the pain in my hip and knee. I had terrible pains in the region of the bladder. My eyes were swollen. I was always tired and nervous and took no pleasure in life.

"Finally, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and the effect was marvellous. Six boxes cured me completely."

Backache, neglected, developes into Bright's Disease. The one sure way to escape its tortures is to cure the Backache when it first starts with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Capt. of Lake Ontario Tug is Knocked Unconscious But Escaped With His Life

CLOTHING WAS BURNED

Special to The Examiner:

WHITBY, ONT., MAY 25.—To be struck by lightning and to escape with his life was the experience of Capt. Harvey of the tug "Tudor," yesterday morning. The tug was off Whitby Harbour, towing a dredge from Toronto to Newcastle, while a thunderstorm was in progress Capt. Harvey relieved the man at the wheel, and shortly after there was a flash and a sharp report, and Capt. Harvey fell unconscious in the wheel house. The mate took charge, sent a boat ashore for a doctor and Dr. Frank Warren was secured. The Captain's clothing was badly burned, and for some time he was unconscious, but at length he revived sufficiently to say that he was in great pain, the seat of the trouble being his left shoulder blade. The sufferer refused to leave his tug to be sent to Oshawa Hospital, and the vessel continued on her journey.

Items of Interest Regarding the Week of Events That Opens on Monday Evening.—The Biggest Event of its Kind Ever Held Here

HOW CITIZENS CAN HELP

If you can bring up before your imagination a pleasant throng of people in a setting of bright lights, music, tasteful decorations and interesting exhibits you will form some idea of what to expect at the Peterborough Summer Fair.

At the west end of the hall a band stand has been built, and on the opening night a specially selected programme will be rendered by the 57th Regimental Band, under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon. This in itself will be worth far more than the price of admission, and music will be a feature of every evening's entertainment. The Conservatory orchestra has also promised to play several times, and will be heard on other evenings. In this respect, therefore, the visitors to the fair should find everything of the most pleasing nature.

Visitors to the hall yesterday stated that they felt it would be impossible to make the rounds on one night, and that is just what the situation is likely to be. The rows of booths will have innumerable interesting features, the various companies that are exhibiting being determined to get the best results from the displays.

One of the essentials to the success of the Fair is the hearty co-operation of the citizens. Many of the ladies have given their time and efforts to making this a success, and for the reason that the purposes of the Fair are in the interests of the city, and are largely charitable, it is hoped that the financial returns will be as heavy as they are expected to be.

Every evening tea will be served in one of the large rooms off the main hall. The ladies from various churches have combined to take charge of this work, and from the fact that the ladies will be anxious to uphold their culinary reputation, there should be a friendly rivalry from which the visitors will be the beneficiaries.

Then there is the theatre, which will be held in another of the adjoining rooms, and which will have almost a whole show in itself. The bowling alleys and shooting gallery are on another side, and if you have any difficulty in reaching them, ask one of the young lady ushers, whom you will readily distinguish.

Be sure to visit the dolls' house at the Summer Fair. The prettiest dolls' house ever seen, with dolls of every kind. White dolls, nigger dolls, boy dolls, girl dolls, baby dolls, lady dolls, sailor dolls, peasant dolls, flirty dolls, fairy dolls, chauffeur dolls and Campbell kids. Dolls in beds, dolls in cradles, dolls in hammocks. The greatest display of dolls' hats ever seen. Lace hats, muslin hats, velvet hats, straw hats, sealskin hats, dolls, eider downs, carpet sweepers, hand mirrors, everything for dolls will be in the dolls' house at the Fair.

Offer a Cook Book.

The ladies in charge of the Autumn Booth have prepared a 100 page cook book of 300 recipes that will prove of value to every housekeeper. Mrs. Matthews is in charge of the Autumn Booth, where this cook book can be secured.

FAIR NOTES.

All those who have promised donations for the supper to be served in the winter booth at the Fair on Tuesday evening, are asked to have them

LIGHTNING KILLED HORSES, CATTLE AND THREE PIGS

One Horse Killed in Stall and Its Mate Was Rendered Deaf by Thursday's Electric Storm

FREAKS OF THE LIGHTNING

A freak of the electric storm on Thursday night was the killing of a horse and deafening of another in the stable on Mr. William Andrews' farm, about four miles from the city on the gravel road. The electric current pierced the roof and killed outright a horse in one of the stalls, and rendered another deaf. Strange to say no other damage was done to the barn.

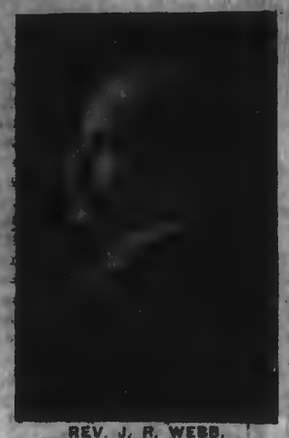
Mr. Bert Blodgett, who resides near Jackson's Park, had three pigs killed in a similar manner. They were in one end of a stable and were instantly killed by lightning, entering the barn, according to a report of the affair. In this case no other damage was reported to the barn.

Two head of cattle were killed in a field on the farm of Mr. Newnham, near Selwyn by the same storm, which swept over the northern section of the city.

Election in Douro

Nominations for Reeve, to succeed Mr. Frank Moher, the late Reeve of Douro, who resigned to go West, took place in the Town Hall, Douro, on Thursday last, when the following men were nominated: Messrs. Frank D. Leahy, Michael Walsh, B. Leahy, and Michael E. Sullivan. The first two gentlemen preferred to have no election, giving the office to some one by acclamation, but the latter two would not agree to this and consequently the election is on for Thursday next.

OPENING OF NEW MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH WILL TAKE PLACE TO-MORROW



REV. J. R. WEBB,
Pastor of the Murray Street Baptist Church Congregation, Who Will Occupy Their Splendid New Church To-Morrow.

Splendid New Edifice Will be Occupied for the First Time To-morrow.

DR. GILMOUR TO PREACH

To-morrow the new Murray Street Baptist Church will be opened and dedicated to the worship of God. Doubtless the people of the city, of all denominations will wish to express their interest by visiting the noble edifice, which has been under construction for the last fourteen months.

We are assured that arrangements are completed to care for congregations of nine hundred, morning and evening, and the church will, in all probability, be taxed to its capacity. The most sanguine of its friends are more than pleased with their efforts. The church is beautiful. The congregation, which has had a most interesting and worthy history, has for some years needed both a new location and a new building, but have tarried until they felt justified in doing well what is intended to serve the denomination in this city for many years to come. It is peculiarly fitting that Dr. J. L. Gilmour, the grandson of the first pastor, should be the preacher of the first sermons. Dr. Gilmour arrived in the city this afternoon, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Water St.

On Sunday afternoon the public will be welcome to an open session of the Sunday School, which will be held in the school hall; one of the most modern buildings for this purpose in Ontario.

There will be no special week evening meetings on account of the Peterborough Summer Fair, but the week following, Sunday, June 2nd, an opportunity will be given the people to visit every part of the structure. Full announcement of these gatherings will be made in these columns.

The building is not only a credit to the congregation, but a real contribution to the centre of our city, and on Monday a full description of the edifice will appear in this paper.

DOES LOCATION AFFECT PRICES ON THE MARKET?

A Citizen Claims That There is Often a Slight Difference Between Prices on North and and South Side of the Market Hall

ONLY STAPLES TO-DAY

"Have you ever noticed that you can buy butter and eggs a little cheaper on the south side of the market hall than on the north?" said a Hunter st. business man this morning to a reporter. He had just made his purchases of butter and eggs, and in conversation with the Examiner he expressed the opinion that there was a difference, at least at times.

"Up here," he said, pointing to the north half of the hall, "they seem to hold together better than on the south side. I have found that whenever the price is going down it begins down here on this side. It may not be a general experience, but it is my impression of the market." His claim was that the farmers' wives on the north side were stand-patters in regard to price, whereas on the south side there was no semblance of concerted action.

It is mentioned here as showing one man's ideas of the market after many visits there.

Shortly after this conversation the reporter was on the north side of the market hall. The general price of butter was then 26c, but almost the first woman spoken to asked 25c. This does not bear out the citizen's claim.

Pigs and potatoes were the features of the outside market. There were no fresh vegetables offered, and potatoes sold as per usual, $2.25 a bag.

CHICKENS SCARCE.

Chickens of last year's vintage were sold at 75c and 85c each, with but a few offering.

Butter was fairly plentiful, but the fact was that the number of country people was not large. Some asked as high as 27c, but it became general at 25c toward eleven o'clock.

Eggs held at 21c, with good supplies and a sharp demand.

As usual there was the man selling oranges, or apparently almost giving them away, judging by the price named. The fish merchant was absent this morning, and there was not the usual collection of freshly-painted harrows, wheelbarrows, etc., that are sold by auction on the square from time to time.

It might be again remarked that buyers and sellers would appreciate the visits of the watering carts around the market and the streets leading to it on Saturday mornings.

Take Soundings In Hudson Bay

Special Wire to Examiner:

QUEBEC, QUE., MAY 25.—Prof. W. E. W. Jackson of the University of Toronto, will command the expedition which will be sent on the Canadian Government steamer Arctic to make soundings in Hudson Bay with the Canadian Government steamer Minto for the benefit of the Canadian Navy. Mr. Stewart, Chief of the Federal Hydrograph service, may take the command of the Minto, but the matter is not settled yet.

GIRL TRIED TO STOP RUNAWAY

Young Horse Was Being Broken In—Bolted and Ran For Three Miles

GIRL BADLY SHAKEN UP

As Mr. J. Galvin was breaking in a colt, which he had recently purchased, this morning the animal broke loose, and when the lines snapped, both he and Mr. Corrigan were thrown from the vehicle. Miss Hayes, of Downer's Corners, pluckily ran out into the road attempting to stop the runaway, but was knocked down, sustaining a bad shaking up and minor injuries. She was taken to her home nearby. Meanwhile the horse was careering south at full speed, but, after covering about three miles, it was stopped and returned to its owner. The buggy was not damaged and both the occupants escaped injury.

TRANSPORTATION IN LONDON TIED UP

Carters' Union Joins With Dockworkers in Strike and 130,000 Men Are Out

PERISHABLE FOOD DECAYING

LONDON, ENG., MAY 25.—The dockworkers' strike to-day was further complicated by the walk out of the Carters' Union, and it is now estimated that more than 130,000 men are out. London's transport industry is almost completely tied up and the situation is menacing because of the steady rise in prices of food stuffs. There are now at the docks more than one hundred and fifty vessels loaded with food supplies. With perishable foods decaying on the docks, and heavy wagons taken from the streets, London slowly has come of the appearance of a besieged city. A long and bitter struggle is apparently in prospect.

Daylight Motion Pictures at Red Mill Theatre prove a big hit, making the theatre the coolest and best ventilated in town.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

CENTRAL PARK.

The season is advancing and it is time the public had some intimation of the manner in which the various authorities interested, propose to deal with the disgraceful condition of Central Park. Is it to be maintained as a park, or for a series of cow paths? The people want it to be made a park and not a thoroughfare, a "short-cut"—at the expense of beauty and park like conditions. It is rumoured, though the rumour is hardly believable, that the authorities propose making it hideous by placing a couple of diagonal concrete walks across it. This should not be. The park is now surrounded by excellent concrete pavements for the use of the public, and it cannot continue to be regarded as a park if it is made a thoroughfare, like a street at large. A hard unyielding—prosaic, commercial-looking thing like a concrete pavement, is entirely out of harmony with the park idea; as unsuitable for a park as cocoa matting would be for a drawing room carpet. A good loam or fine-surfaced cinder walk, with the edges provided with a concrete border, would be as far as it would be possible to use cement consistent with the park idea. It would be available for use in fine weather, and if not quite comfortable in wet weather, there are good, concrete pavements, on all sides of the park. It is very nice and convenient, no doubt, to shorten distance by crossing the park in all weathers, but public-spirited citizens will not mind taking a few extra steps to have a park maintained for the public enjoyment from being degraded to a common thoroughfare. But the comparatively few people that find it a convenience to use Central Park as a thoroughfare, should, when this use works injury to it, refrain from public spirit and practical altruism, as others who would like to make "short cuts," but cannot, have to do. A man at the corner of George and Hunter streets, wanting to reach the G. T. R. station, would find it a convenience to have a path—"a short cut"—opened through the square to the Queen's Hotel corner, but he cannot have it and he takes the usual way.

If the authorities have no authority; if we are to have no law and order; if the public are to do what they like in the way of destroying beauty spots; if the few are allowed to outrage the rights of the many, we should know if we have come to this pass. If we can't coax or make the public respect public places and refrain from destroying their beauty, we should know it, and then we need not waste our time and our money in trying to contribute to making the city beautiful.

"NO OLD COUNTRYMEN NEED APPLY."

An advertisement like this, with the restriction stated, is a remarkable one to appear in the Mail and Empire, which joined the "noble eighteen," representing the big manufacturing interests, and the extreme loyalists in roping in the "British Born" to save the Empire and British connection. The "British Born" were stampeded into shouting themselves purple in the face in the interests of saving their adopted home, to the Empire, saving it from falling into the clutches of the United States. The British Born showed more zeal than knowledge; they allowed themselves to be led by the nose, by the agencies of a spurious loyalty, to support a cause that was merely trading upon its loyalty, for party advantage; a party that combined the most contradictory elements. The big interests, the manufacturers especially, used the British Born, and by their help, won large support for their cause, especially in Peterborough. Now, the "British Born" see how they were made a catspaw of; how they are regarded by those same big interests which they helped strengthen in their own interests. A representative of these "big interests", the Manufacturers' Association, prints an advertisement, offering employment to the unemployed, but with the distinct intimation that no "British Born" need apply; they were good enough when their votes were wanted in the interests of the "big interests," but they are "turned down" when they want a chance to earn an honest dollar.

We have often adverted to the strange combination. The extreme Protestants were working hand in glove with the extreme French-Canadian religionists; the "British Born" were led to make common cause in the interests of saving the Empire with the French Nationalists, the Empire wreckers, who declared as the prime article of their faith—"We've had enough of England and the English"; the "British Born" were made a tail to the kite of the "noble eighteen," representatives of the big interests, and when the kite is sailing successfully in the upper air, the tail is dropped and the British Born are insultingly told—"no old countrymen need apply"—as much as to say, "we got your vote, we made you march in line with the declared enemies of the English, who had had too much of England and the English"; we made you shout loyalty and saving the Empire, in the big manufacturing interests. You helped us and our political allies to power. You did us a good turn; you helped us win; but now we have no use for you. We don't need your votes now, and don't want your work. "No old countrymen need apply." Stand back! Be off!"

Mr. Borden profited by the combination of the "British Born," the French Nationalists and the Manufacturers' Association. This combination put him in power, and so far only the "British Born" have been "turned down." Yet while the Conservative organ was printing such an insulting and heartless advertisement, Mr. Borden was airing himself in the London Times, in academic praise of the opportunity Canada presented to the British to find a home. He says:

"Let no one forget that by their removal to Canada, British subjects are not lost to the Empire."

But their jobs are lost—"no old countrymen need apply."

The "British Born" are not the only ones disappointed over the discrepancy between the many-sided policy upon which the Borden government got power and the fulfilment of expectations.

HASTY MARRIAGES.

Churchmen in Ontario and in Canada generally may well lend a sympathetic ear to the remarks made by Judge McDonald at Brockville last week. Judge McDonald took occasion to call the attention of ministers to the importance of taking more care in marrying young people who come to them unattended.

Two examples of the failure of the present system to provide against fraud have been noted in Ontario recently.

One occurred at Toronto. The parents of the girl were horrified one day to find that their daughter had become the wife of a Chinaman. The marriage was performed by a clergyman, Rev. J. D. Morrow, without the parents' knowledge, let alone their consent.

While it is not inconceivable that the parents may have been at fault in allowing their young daughter to fall into such company, they yet have a fair quarrel with the system which permits such a compact without opportunity to the parents to say anything.

The second instance resulted in the case which Judge McDonald disposed of at Brockville, when he made the observation alluded to above. Here was a case wehre a young man and a girl aged respectively 19 and 16 went alone to a minister and were married without enquiry on the minister's part. To procure a marriage license the young couple swore falsely as to the age of his youthful bride. But even the presentation of a license could hardly warrant such a ceremony.

Surely here is a matter that may well receive the earnest consideration of all those who have at heart the welfare of the church and the people.—Ottawa Free Press.

THE WEATHER WE ARE HAVING.

A reader, who, although he does not say he is a Liberal, may be one, writes us to point out that the weather in this country has not been normal or satisfactory since the 21st of September last. He does not mention politics, and it may merely be a coincidence, but we recall that on that exact date a change in Government occurred at Ottawa.

And, indeed, the weather has not been right since. Never was there such a winter within memory of the oldest inhabitant. For the first time since confederation we were deprived of the January thaw. For three solid months after New Year's Day winter kept at us with never a let-up. Since the introduction of the Natsional Policy in 1878, no April was so unsatisfactory as this April. Ontario had a snow-fall on May 13th. Now we are having a solid week of rain. In the city gardens, plants and shrubs hesitate, as uncertain what to do as merchants were in the old days when Mr. Foster was juggling his budget. The lilacs will not bloom to celebrate the 24th. They are afraid to risk it.

It would be unfair to blame the weather on the Ottawa Government—although much of the weather is of a kind that the people would be glad to market abroad, but cannot. Politics, it may be frankly admitted, do not affect the climate, although the climate affects politics. Yet, still in the spirit of fairness, it is necessary to point out, regardless of whatever inferences may be drawn, that we get our weather from the West, and the West is quite displeased with the Government. Men have been convicted and hanged on presumptive evidence of that kind.—Toronto Star.

BRITISH JOURNAL'S TRIBUTE TO CANADA'S INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISE

The Financial News, London, England, speaking of Canada, says:

Though, in an industrial sense, this great land is yet in its infancy, it must not be supposed that Canada has made no advance in the great career which Nature has clearly traced for her. So far from that being the case, Eastern Canada, and particularly the great Province of Ontario, has made no little progress in the paths of industry. As far back as 1906 Canada possessed not far from 16,000 factories and workshops of all kinds, employing over 350,000 hands, and producing good valued at over 715 million dollars. The capital sunk in those enterprises was valued at 540 million dollars. Ontario's share of that investment and output was then roughly 50 per cent., a ratio which has probably not since been widely departed from. In one branch of manufacture —namely, agricultural machinery — Canada has already made a name in the world. Some five yers back this essentially Canadian industry represented an investment of about 27 million dollars producing goods valued at nearly 12 millions. Canadian threshers and other agricultural machines have found markets all over the globe, and are competing with British made goods in the Motherland herself.

Iron and Steel.

In metallurgy Canada has already made marvellous progress. The Steel Company of Canada, at Hamilton, Ont., has one blast furnace of 400 tons of pig-iron—the largest, if we mistake not, in the British Empire—with another furnace of 200 tons capacity. From a technical point of view, the organisation and equipment of these works are acknowledged to be second to none on the North American continent. The Montreal Steel Works of Canada, recently taken over by the Canadian Steel Foundry, have, or will soon have, a total output of over 30,000 tons of steel castings. There is no need to dwell at further length on Canada's industrial progress, which is making almost daily strides.

Flour Milling.

But reference cannot be omitted to Canada's flour-milling industry, which bids fair, before many years are past, to be the greatest merchant milling industry in the world. Owning in the three Western provinces a fertile area capable of raising sufficient wheat to feed a considerable fraction of the world's population, Canada already possesses some of the largest and best-equipped flour mills in the New World. Her flour-milling capacity, already at least double the consumptive needs of her present population, has within a few years found markets abroad for somewhere over 3,000,000 sacks of flour; and no one can doubt the possibility of infinite expansion for this essentially Canadian industry in the years which lie immediately ahead of us.

Aid of British Capital.

It is difficult to realise that the land which has done these great things is possessed of a population of barely 8,000,000 souls. That these results have been achieved in face of great difficulties must be credited to Canada's immense wealth of natural resources and to the abounding energy of her "vitalised" people—to borrow a Canadian expression. The crisp air of the Dominion seems to breathe fresh life and energy into all who draw it; men and women, apathetic and listless in the Old World, generally develop into live human beings in Canada. But it would be idle to ignore the fact that neither Canada's vast natural resources nor the energy of her people could have brought this Dominion to its present stage of economic and industrial development without the potent aid of capital. Without the great scheme of railway building, which has already linked, and is yet more closely linking, Canada together, from Atlantic to Pacific, the smiling wheatfields of the West would be no more than unbroken prairies, while British Columbia, to-day one of the Dominion's provinces of the greatest promise, might be languishing in obscurity. Britain may be proud of the fact that the vivifying and fertilising of Canada's trans-continentals is almost solely the work of British capital. The 500 million and more of British money laid out in Canadian railway building is probably the best investment, using the adjective in its highest sense, that the world has ever seen.

AWAITING SENTENCE AT COBOURG

TORONTO, MAY 25th. — Dr. Matheson Douglas will think some time before he speculates on his wits and the credulity of other people. He is now awaiting sentence at Cobourg under a conviction of false pretences. He was arrested last week by Inspector A. B. Boyd of the Provincial Police on a complaint made by Mr. Walter Crews, a former a few miles out of Port Hope, one of a number of complaints that have come in during the past two years.

Douglas came on the scene in 1909 representing himself as a Scotland Yard agent sent over to Canada to look for heirs for large estates. He told Crews that his grandfather's brother had died in Australia leaving a fortune of $125,000, which he would get for him. On the head of this information Crews took Douglas in and drove him around the country for a week on the pretext of business, for which he received nothing. Meanwhile Douglas spied some cloth for a suit of clothes in Crews' house worth about $15, and assured him that it was stolen and a warrant had been issued for Crews' arrest, which an officer was on the way to execute, but promised if he would give up the goods there would be no prosecution. He took the cloth and charged Mrs. Crews $60 for treating her eyes with some kind of powder he possessed.

Douglas was prosecuted in 1896 at Belleville on a charge of swindling. He used an alias then of Ronald G. N. Douglas, while his real name is said to be Ronald G. M. Douglas.

OPERATED NEAR HERE.

It is alleged that Dr. Matheson Douglas once operated throughout the Omemee and Manners districts, where he succeeded in flim-flamming a number of farmers. He purported to be a representative of the government, sent out to inspect look-out towers, one of which is located near Omemee, on the farm of Mr. Sheridan, and another near Manners Station. It is alleged while in the Manners district Douglas approached a farmer named Ephrain White, and told him that a rich relative had died in England, and that he was a direct heir to a large fortune. Douglas then disappeared. Before leaving he told White that he would communicate with him, and forward him full particulars as to how he might get in touch with the parties who were handling the estate. Weeks passed and nothing more was heard from him.

VERY RETICENT.

He stayed long enough at the White farmhouse to get a free meal, and was conveyed to Manners Station in White's buggy, where Douglas is purported to have stated that some business awaited him in connection with the lookout tower, which is located there.

He was very reticent in regard to his work in connection with these towers, and refused to be questioned in respect to the matter.

APPOINTED CARETAKER OF THE ARMOURIES

It is understood that Mr. George Grange, deputy fire chief, will enter upon his new duties as caretaker of the Armouries at the beginning of next week. Mr. Grange succeeds Mr. W. Metheral, who has held the position for a number of years.

Mr. Grange's appointment will leave a vacancy at the Fire Hall, and as yet, nothing is definitely known as to who his probable successor will be at the booth before three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

Do you need new aprons? If so, you will find the ones you want at the Spring booth, for there is an endless variety of them offered for sale. There are kitchen aprons that are the very things to cover the pretty light dresses when you have to get supper ready, than the sewing aprons, with pockets for your darning cotton and wool and your scissors and thimbles, and a dozen other trifles.

Then you will need some pretty, fancy ones, some with lace frills and bows of ribbon, others with embroidery design in eyelet and shadow work, all pretty, as well as useful They may all be had for a reasonable sum at the Spring booth.

In J. C. Turnbull's window may be seen the handsome table centrepiece which is offered as a prize for a bean guessing contest at the Spring booth The centrepiece is a very handsome one, being worked in bright shades and edged with real Torchon lace.

OBJECT TO SALE OF CIGARETTES AT FAIR

A meeting of the Ministerial Association was held this morning, when a discussion was entered into regarding the sale of cigarettes at the Peterborough Summer Fair. The Imperial Tobacco Co. of Montreal have taken a booth at the Fair, but some objection was raised in regard to selling tobacco. The question was discussed at the meeting of the Association today, but it was not learned authentically whether a communication would be sent the ladies in charge or not. The feeling of the meeting, it was said, was opposed to the sale of tobacco.

Hamilton Creamery Co. Are Now In a Position To Supply Customers Again

The ice-cream department of the Peterborough Creamery Company commenced operations on Thursday, and made an auspicious beginning with a surprising demand. The Company has a splendid equipment for providing ice cream in large and small quantities, and is looking forward to a busy season. The success of last season's operations are expected to be surpassed. The Company has a thoroughly qualified maker and the quality of their ice cream will not only hold their former patronage, but should also increase the number of customers during the coming summer months, when ice cream is so much in demand. It can be secured in splendid condition for home use and at a price to accommodate the average purse.

New Store Opens Monday

The store lately vacated by Huff, Special Tailors, Limited, Number 325 George street, near corner Charlotte, will be opened on Monday next as an exclusive men's wear store.

The formal opening will take place a week from to-day, on June 1st.

The store has undergone a complete change in its interior within the last two weeks. The most of the furniture and fixtures are being supplied and installed by the Peterborough Show Case Co., and it is intended, when completed, to be the most modern and up-to-date men's wear store in the city.

Mr. Neil Cameron is the new proprietor and is not a complete stranger by any means, as he has spent four years here, making Peterborough his headquarters while travelling in Eastern Ontario.

Mr. Cameron has had considerable experience in high-class merchandising within the last five years. He has also associated with himself the services of Mr. E. J. Bensted, who has had 12 years' London, England Experience, as well as 2 years on the American side. This is sufficient proof that these men are thoroughly acquainted with English, American and Canadian goods, and should make a success of their undertaking here.

The new store will be open all next week.

HAVE BEGUN MAKING ICE CREAM AT FACTORY

On Tuesday May 28, at 8 P.M. Carpenters' open meeting. Trades and Labour Hall 435 George St.

HOW ALCOHOL LATE WAS SAVED

[Jake was told that he should drink no more beer, but should drink barley, malt and hops. He asked what was meant. He was told that "Nature" was meant.]

Under Alcohol the "Nature" was corroded and ruined.

The idle phrases of the street were foreign to his mind.

He never stooped to vulgar slang. It gave him quite a shock.

The words that he muttered to one were those that strutted a block.

There was one human failing, though, which sorely he nursed—

At times his soul was tortured with an all-devouring thirst.

And once when he had changed to sojourn from out his wonted sphere

He dropped into a corner saloon and ordered up a "beverage made of barley, malt and hops, yeast and potable water."

"Nell's Kitchen" Jake, whose brawny arms became a fistic star,

Was busy with the vessel throwing that kissed his opulent bar,

His temper, never of the best, had just begun to shake

At the insistent hurry calls for "suds" and "whisky straight."

And when he saw sweet Algernon come tripping through the door

His snapping eyes were longing for the sight of fight and gore.

But still he paused in wonder and could scarce believe his ear

When Algernon demanded "just a tiny glawss of a beverage made up of barley, malt and hops, yeast and potable watter."

The hardened crowd about the bar in silence held their breath.

They knew the air was freighted with destruction, woe and death.

They saw "Nell's Kitchen" Jake reach out and grasp a gas pipe thick,

A mallet and a demijohn and eke a heavy brick.

And then they gasped in wonder, for he stopped and ceased to frown,

He smiled a smile compassionate and laid his weapons down,

And, leaning idly o'er the bar, he drew sweet Algy near

And smote him with the rag he used in mopping up the beverage made up of barley, malt and hops, yeast and potable water.

Why She Blushed.

A very pretty but extremely slender girl entered a street car and managed to seat herself in a very narrow space between two men. Presently a portly colored mammy entered the car, and the pretty miss, thinking to humiliate the men for their lack of gallantry, arose.

"Auntey," she said, with a wave of her hand toward the place she had just vacated, "take my seat."

"Thank you, missy," replied the colored woman, smiling broadly. "But which gen'man's lap was you sittin' on?"—Judge.

Close Mouthed.

When Austin Lane Crothers was governor of Maryland he had the reputation of being harder to get information out of than any man the Maryland reporters ever knew. He wouldn't talk about any official matter.

A reporter who knew him very well was trying to find out whether he would call a special session of the legislature.

"Mr. Crothers," said the reporter, "in your conversations with Governor Crothers what does the governor say to you about a special session of the general assembly?"

"My son," whispered the governor, "the governor never talks to me on the subject. I can't get a word out of the close-mouthed old rascal."—Saturday Evening Post.

It had been explained to a man that mathematics, politics, ethics and gymnastics "is." The plural form bothered him until somebody said: "Well, did you ever hear of a mathematic, a politic, an ethic or a gymnastic?"

Shaftesbury's Retort.

When a member of a church congress at Manchester argued that the introduction of the custom of cremation would endanger belief in the resurrection of the dead the reply of Lord Shaftesbury silenced any further doubt when he asked, "What, then, has become of the holy martyrs who were cremated?"

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WILL WAGE VIGOROUS WARFARE ON THE CATERPILLAR

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Horticultural Society it was decided to appeal to the members and the public generally to assist in the destruction of the caterpillar. The City Council, the Township and the County Council are to be asked to assist in this object and the matter is to be brought before the boy scouts and the children in an effort to enlist their aid in exterminating this destructive insect. On every hand one sees warnings of the coming plagues and drastic measures must be taken without delay to stamp out the danger of destruction to our trees. The City Council should appoint one or two men to make a thorough inspection of the trees in the city and destroy the nests before it is too late.

White Caps To Strengthen Three Players Are Released

The Peterborough Canadian League Ball Club is to be strengthened immediately. Eight defeats in a row are considered enough, and the wires are hot in every direction for players to build up Manager Templin's machine so that better results may be looked for in the near future. The first step in increasing the efficiency of the squad was taken last night when Outfielder Jim Graney of St. Thomas, Pitcher Harry Scull of Reading, Pa., and Pitcher Elmer D. Baver of Leesport, Pa., were released, and other "cans" may be attached in a day or two. Peterborough is bound to have a winning team and the local management is determined to give the fans what they are looking for. The local baseball enthusiasts have supported the team nobly so far, and the players and management appreciate the attendance and the spirit the crowd have shown in the face of defeat. They want to give Peterborough winning baseball, and no effort is being spared to provide a team that will climb up the Canadian Leagueladder. Yesterday afternoon's crowd was a demonstration of just how good a ball town Peterborough is if there is any kind of a winning team. Over 3,000 saw the two games yesterday, a remarkable crowd considering the fact that the team was not going good. A new pitcher from Detroit is expected to-day, and other players are coming to strengthen the White Caps.

Ottawa League Leaders Will Be Here Monday

The much-heralded Ottawa team, who are leading the league at the present time and who celebrated Victoria Day by taking two games from St. Thomas, will be here on Monday for a three-game series with the White Caps. The Senators are playing great ball at the present time and will prove a big attraction here. So much printer's ink has been used in describing the work of Louie Cook's team that everybody is anxious to see them perform. The rejuvenated and strengthened White Caps should be in shape next week to give them a battle royal.

FABIAN LECTURER VISITED CONVENTION

Mr. Hubert Beaumont, Journalist and Lecturer, Represents a Type of Young Britishers

STUDY SOCIAL QUESTIONS

Mr. Hubert Beaumont, lecturer, organizer and journalist, of London, Eng., was one of the visitors to the Labour convention, held in Peterborough on Friday. Mr. Beaumont is a lecturer for the Fabian Society, which numbers among its members such men as Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Graham Wallace, Grenville Barker, the Webbs and others. Those who follow the trend of affairs know the aims of Fabian Society; it would take too much space to explain it to those who have not followed current events.

Mr. Beaumont is a type of the young Englishman to whom the principles of the Fabians appeal. Holding to a high ideal of Socialism, he is one of the many young students who are studying social questions and lecturing on the principles which they regard as idealistic. Many of the young universi y men, Mr. Beaumont stated, are being drawn to Socialism which he considers the logical issue of the present conditions of society.

Last winter his series of lectures were under the following headings, The History and Economic Basis of Socialism, Socialism and Morality, Socialism and the Ratepayer, The Coming of Socialism.

An interesting fact is the activity of those who follow the ideal through theoretical principles represented by the red flag. At the same time there are societies of young men, principally, forming, especially in the cities on this continent, whose aims are to oppose Socialism. There are cities in Canada where considerable has been accomplished in interesting young men in this subject. Their plans are to study economic and social questions with the ultimate object of platform work throughout the entire country. The movement is still young, but where it has been begun it has caught the minds of serious young men.

Naturally, the Fabians, with such men as those mentioned, have attracted a great deal of attention. Mr. Beaumont came to Canada with the English Brotherhood party and is spending several extra weeks studying conditions here.

There was an interesting ceremony on Thursday afternoon when the 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, decorated the graves of the departed members of the local militia. URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

The Ministerial Association raised a little smoke this morning, over the question of selling cigarettes at the "Summer Fair." Why not? Cigarettes are a legitimate object of commerce, no more under ban of the law than gum drops; and if the ladies can do good by selling them, let them do it. Those who want straw smokes will have them, and if the gratification of their appetites can be conducive of some good to others, let them buy the weeds. This reasoning is good commercial morality, anyway.

They say that the "Gypsy Girl" to be seen at the Summer Fair are really be-witching.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams writes to the Examiner to say that he did not go on a conservation tour with Mr. McLaughlin, C.E. The Examiner merely reprinted a paragraph to that effect, taken from the Bobcaygeon Independent, and if there was any erroneous statement the Examiner is not responsible.

The steel cages erected in the temporary police headquarters, had the first occupant this morning. A man who had made his loyalty too spirituous and spirited, was cut short and caged.

No, "Bachelor," it's "Summer Fair," not "Some are Fair". All the ladies connected with it are fair, not some of them only.

SYLVIA AND THE SUFFRAGETTES

All women found on the equal franchise side are not necessarily suffragettes. Many otherwise sensible women and girls are being temporarily misled by the sophistries of the suffragette leaders. Time has not modified the audacity of the real suffragettes. These are best described by Artemus Ward: "I pitched my tent in a small town in Injianny one day last season, and while I was standin' at the dore takin' money, a deppytashun of ladies came up and said they was members of the Bunkumville Female Moral Reformin' and Wimin's Rites Associashun, and they axed me if they cood go in without payin'."

"Not exactly," sez I, "but you can pay without goin' in."

"Dew you know who we air?" sed one of the wimin—a tall and ferosh us lookin' critter, with a blew kotton umbreller under her arm. "Do you know who we air, Sur?"

"My impreshun is," sed I, "from a hersery view, that you air females."

"We are, Sur," said the ferosh us woman—"we belong to a society whitch beleeves wimin has rites—whitch beleeves in rasin her to her proper speer—whitch beleeves she is indowed with as much intelleck as man is—whitch beleeves she is trampled on and aboosed—and who will resist henso 4th, and forever the incroachments of proud and domineering men."

Durin' her discourse, this exsentric female grabed me by the coat-koller and was swingin' her umbreller wildly over my hed.

"I hope, marm," sez I, startin' back, "that your irtenshuns is honorable? I'm a lone man bear in a strange place. Besides, I've a wife to hum."

"Iyes," cried the female, "and she's a slave! Doth she never dream of freedom — doth she never think of throwin' of the yoke of tyrinny and thinkin' and votin' for herself? Doth she never think of these here things?"

"Not bein' a natral born fool," sed I, by this time a little riled, "I kin safely say that she dothunt."

"O whot—whot!" screamed the female, swingin' her umbreller in the air—"O, what is the price that woman pays for her expeeriunce!"

"I don't know," sez I; "the price to my show is 15 cents pur individooal."

"And can't our Sosiety go in free?" asked the female.

"Not if I know it," sed I.

"Crooil, crooil man!" she cried, and bust into teers.

"Won't you let my darter in?" sed anuther of the exsentric wimin, takin' me afecksh unitely by the hand. "O, please let my darter in—shee's a sweet guahin child of natur."

"Let her gush!" roared I, as mad as I cood stick at their tarnal nonsense; "let her gush!" Whereupon they all sprung back with the simultanious observashun that I was a beest.

"My female frends," sed I, "be4 you leeve, I've a few remarks to remark; wa them well. The female woman is one of the greatest institooshuns of which this land can boste. It's onpossible to get along without her. Had there been no female wimin in the world, I should scacely be here with my unparalleld show on this occashun. She is good in sickness—good in wellness—good all the time. O, woman, woman!" I cried, my feelins worked up to a hi poetick pitch, "you air a angle when you behave yourself; but when you take off your proper appairel and (mettyforically speaken)—get into pantyloons—when you desert your firesides, and with your heds full of wimin's rites noshuns go round like rearin' lyons, seekin' whom you may devour someboddy—in short, when you undertake to play the man, you pla the devil and air an emfatic nocsance. My female friends," I continued, as they were indignantly departin', "wa well what A. Ward has sed!"

SYLVIA.

TENNIS

With the recent advent of summer weather, affairs in the local tennis world have become decidedly active. The courts at the Golf Club, Bowling Green, Y.M.C.A. and Oval have all been repaired and put in first-class shape, and together with the various other courts around town, will undoubtedly be in continuous demand from now on.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association was held at the Y.M.C.A. during the early part of the week, and was the occasion of a large turn-out of the followers of the game. The principal business was the election of officers for the current season. The results of the election were as follows:

Hon. President—Mr. H. Cluxton.
President—Mr. S. E. M. Henderson.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. G. R. Hall
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. G. R. Langley.
Asst. Sec.-Treas.—Mr. C. L. Whitby.

Mr. R. J. Devey was re-elected manager of the annual ladies' tournament, while Mr. F. D. Kerr was re-elected as a committee of one to arrange for matches with out-of-town teams.

The annual city championship singles tournament will be played off in the usual manner. It has not as yet been decided in what form the matches will be played to decide the club championship. In both of these contests it is the aim of the Association to make the tournament thoroughly representative, and it is hoped that the various tennis clubs and individual players themselves will cooperate with the executive of the Association to this end.

LABOUR EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION HELD CONVENTION IN PETERBORO'

Over One Hundred Delegates From All Parts of the Province.—Important Business Discussed and Resolutions Passed. — Compensation For Workmen.

FAVOUR EQUAL FRANCHISE

The 10th annual convention of the Labour Educational Association of Ontario was held in Peterborough on May 24th, and was attended by over 110 delegates who came from all parts of the province. The sessions were held in the Labour Temple, which was the Mecca of the numerous delegates and local men prominent in labour affairs.

Mr. H. J. Halford, of Hamilton, presided, and formally welcomed the delegates. Mr. Dave Moore, on behalf of the Peterborough Trades Council, extended a cordial greeting to the assembled delegates at the opening of the morning proceedings.

Mr. P. M. Draper, of Ottawa, secretary of the Trades and Labour Congress, addressed the convention. He reviewed the position and advancement made by labour in Canada, and stated that there had never been such virile activity manifested as at the present time. The future promised even greater possibilities for the furthering of the interests of the working man in this country.

FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

Mr. Fred. Bancroft, of Toronto, submitted the labour brief as appertaining to protective legislation for the compensation of workingmen in Ontario. Strenuous efforts, he said, were being made by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to influence the adoption by the Ontario Government of the principle which would make it compulsory for workmen to contribute for the provision of such compensation. Mr. Bancroft declared that this would be an injustice and that in the United States, Germany and Great Britain there had been refusals to place on the statutes, what he termed, such a pernicious principle. Strong efforts would have to be made by organized labour to defeat the efforts of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in this sphere of political activity. Every workman, he said, in this province should be brought within the scope of any compensation act that may become law. He appealed to the delegates to voice their sentiments in no uncertain manner on such an important subject. He made special reference to the lack of knowledge which organized labour received in reference to methods adopted by the commission for the taking of evidence in cases of claims for compensation that were heard. Sufficient intimation of the meetings of the commission had not been given to organized labour in Ontario.

A resolution was moved by Mr. Jas. Simpson, of Toronto, seconded by Mr. T. A. Stevenson, that this convention unanimously endorse the care as presented for a new compensation act by the Trades and Labour Congress, and register an emphatic protest against the proposal of workmen contributing to a compensation fund for accident compensation, this resolution to be sent to Sir William Meredith to be placed on the records of the commission.

Mr. H. Beaumont, one of the lecturers for the British Fabian Society, who was a visitor to the convention, was invited to give an address. He He dwelt on the mission and solidarity of labour, and expressed the hope that the deliberations of the convention would further and make more fruitful the just and humane claims of the working classes.

HAVE OFFICIAL PAPER.

The executive report, containing several important recommendations, was dealt with. Mr. Jos. Marks, editor of the Industrial Banner, reviewed what had been accomplished by that paper. It had met with many discouragements, but of late had shown distinct improvement and advancement. The most important industrial centres in the province had pronounced in favour of it. Toronto District and Labour Council had appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the Labour Educational Association, and steps had been taken to form a Labour Educational Publishing Company and to issue its prospectus. Continued support and unity of action was necessary to insure the success of this movement. The company has its head office in Toronto, and is capitalised at $40,000.

It was moved by Mr. Rymill, of London, and seconded by Mr. Worthell, of Toronto, that the recommendation of the Executive Board that the Labour Educational Association officially endorse the Industrial Banner as published by the Labour Educational Publishing Company, Ltd., and establish it as the official organization of the association; and also that the question of adjustment regarding Mr. Marks' interest in the Banner be left to the provisional board of directors. This motion was enthusiastically carried.

PROVINCIAL FEDERATION.

The convention also acceded to the executive's recommendation that a referendum vote of all the local unions in Ontario be taken as to the advisability of organising a Provincial Federation of Labour, and that the Executive Committee be empowered to carry out the wishes of the said unions as indicated by such vote.

A resolution was passed endorsing a pension scheme in Canada. The strike of the garment workers of Toronto against the T. Eaton Co., and the structural steel workers' strike, were also endorsed. A resolution was passed insisting that union men demand the union label on all goods purchased.

FAVOUR EQUAL FRANCHISE.

The convention also placed itself on record as favouring an equal franchise for men and women. The convention expressed its deep sympathy for the relatives of the victims in the Titanic disaster, and in a resolution called the attention of the Dominion Government to the necessity of rigid inspection of vessels at Canadian ports for the protection of the lives of the seamen as well as the passengers.

It was decided to hold the convention next year at Ottawa.

THE OFFICERS

The officers elected for the coming year were as follows:

President—W. Driscoll, Ottawa.

First vice-president—J. D. Jacobs, London.

Second vice-president—Hugh Robertson, Peterborough.

Third vice-president — T. Hall, Guelph.

Fourth vice-president—W. Stokes, St. Thomas.

Fifth vice-president—S. M. Gamble, Toronto.

Secretary—Jas. H. H. Ballantyne, Toronto.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Peterborough District and Labour Council and to the retiring officers.

TWO YEARS SUFFERING

Brought on by a Severe Strain

—How a Cure Was Found

Mr. Joseph Stephens, Rosemount, Ont., is one of the great host who continually sound the praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he has much reason to do so as they brought him from suffering to health, after he had spent much money and two years of time experimenting with other treatments. Mr. Stephens tells his experience as follows: "In the month of January, 1908, while working in a logging camp at Creston, B.C., I got my back badly injured. I suffered a great deal of pain and was almost helpless. I tried plasters, thinking they would help me, but they were of no use. I took several medicines, equally without benefit. Then I was advised to try electrical treatment and did so for a time, but without getting any permanent relief, and it began to look as though I was going to be permanently crippled. Then I was advised to undergo treatment with a specialist at Spokane, Wash. After examining me he said I was in a very bad shape and that the trouble was likely to result in Bright's disease. However, he told me that he felt sure he could cure me. At a heavy expense I was under his treatment for three months, but did not get the least benefit. I was almost in despair; work was plentiful and wages good, but I could not work, as I was quite unable to bend. I was in this condition for about two years, when my brother, who was with me all the time, came across one of Dr. Williams' pamphlets and read of the great work Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing. He urged me to try them, but I thought it would be useless to spend more money after all the other treatment had failed. He insisted, however, and got a dozen boxes of the Pills and I began to take them. Before I had used a half dozen boxes I felt relief, and I continued taking the Pills until every vestige of the pain was gone, and I could raise my hands above my head and then bend until I could touch my toes with my fingers, something I had not been able to do for over two years. My cure was a great surprise to my comrades, and you may be sure I told them what brought it about. I am now a swell and strong as any man in the country and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Supt. Lynch was in the city yesterday.

Mr. John Penrose of the Diamond, was in Stirling over the holiday attending the Old Boys' re-union.

SHE GAINED 25 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a complete invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 25 pounds in weight."

Kept In The Dark

Solitary Confinement at Kingston For Four Desperadoes Who Recently Escaped From Penitentiary

BREAD AND WATER

Special to The Examiner.

Exclusive to the Examiner:

KINGSTON, ONT., MAY 25.—It was learned this morning that Bonner, Brown and the two Mecum brothers, the four desperadoes who were brought down to the penitentiary from the Stoney Mountain, Man., prison for safe keeping, and who made such a daring escape on April 29th, have not seen daylight since they were brought back to the prison after their re-capture the same day they escaped. This is their punishment, and the prison authorities declare that it is the only effective method to make docile these desperate criminals, who might, by their vicious behaviour, cause a revolt among the other prisoners.

McNeil, who was sent here from Woodstock, and who was the ringleader in the escape of April 29th, was removed from the dungeon last night and set to work in the penitentiary blacksmith shop, where W. A. Travers is employed when not off on little jaunts to Toronto. McNeil, it is said, begged so earnestly to be given another chance that the authorities decided to accede to his request. It is believed now that he was the tool of the western outlaws who remain sullen and obdurate in the dungeon. They will stay in the darkness until their trial next month at the Sessions on charges of breaking prison and assaulting guards.

McNeil, being still in the desperate class, wears what is known as the Oregon Shoe. This is a sort of an iron splint which prevents him from moving his legs except very slowly. It would be impossible for him to run.

The life of McNeil and his four companions in the dungeon during the last four weeks has been anything but agreeable. They cannot hear each other's voices. Every five days they are given a full meal, consisting of boiled beef and cabbage. The rest of the time they are on bread and water. It may be hard, but it was their own fault.

Dulman, the Welland Canal dynamiter, in the "pen" on a life term, is reported well. He is sleek and fat, and apparently good for some time to come.

WHERE WOULD YOU BE IN CASE OF A FIRE

When you pay a Company to assume your risk, you want to be sure that the Company is financially able to take care of it. Do not be satisfied with a statement that shows enough assets to pay any loss you may individually sustain. If a conflagration occurs at the time your own fire comes along and the Company is heavily involved, you may find, as thousands of others have found before you, that your policy is of little value. Make yourself secure by taking a policy of the Manitoba Assurance Company which is conflagration proof. Agent, Davis-Thompson Co., Limited.

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

The following letter of appreciation was forwarded to the President of the Sergeants' Mess of the 57th Regiment:

Peterborough, May 24th, 1912.
The President, Sergeants' Mess,
57th Regiment.

Dear Sirs,—I wish more fully than was possible on Tuesday night, on behalf of the 57th Regiment Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, to extend to you our sincere thanks and the expression of our keen appreciation of the great kindness you have shown us in presenting our Chapter with so beautiful a flag.

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire have adopted the Union Jack as their Standard, and it is one of the main objects of the Order to try to instil into the hearts and minds of the people of Canada and the Empire as a whole (for our work is Empire wide) a greater love and respect for our national flag, a greater pride in the grand traditions that are associated with it, and a fuller appreciation of the liberties and freedom that are ours, who are privileged to live under its protecting folds.

I am sure that it is the wish of every member of the 57th Regiment Chapter that our work may be of assistance to the Regiment, and an encouragement to all ranks, and that so long as this flag lasts you may be proud and pleased in the remembrance of this presentation as we shall be always grateful. Allow me again, on behalf of the Chapter, to thank you.—Faithfully yours,

H. L. Clare.

A Clean WATCH

Your Watch, like your house, should be thoroughly overhauled, at least, once a year.

A Meeting
On St. Patrick's Day

By MARY MULCAHEY

Toward the end of the last century a couple named Monahan came over from Ireland to settle in America. They had a son and a daughter, the former being thirteen and the latter ten. The son's name was Dennis and the daughter's Mary. Dennis was a fine boy, tall for his age and strong, with sandy hair and an honest eye in his head.

On the same ship was another family of emigrants for America, the Kellys, in which there was a girl, Eileen, the same age as Mary Monahan. The children came to know each other, and the two girls played together on deck constantly. Dennis preferred to spend his time in the engine room, where the engineer, seeing that he took an interest in machinery, made him welcome. Dennis asked a great many questions as to what this and that were for, and before the voyage was over the engineer would let him do little things for him in connection with the engines.

One day Dennis was on deck talking to one of the sailors, who was doing some polishing of brass. His sister, Mary, and Eileen Kelly were playing hide and seek. Dennis saw Eileen in the act of climbing up to hide in one of the lifeboats, swung to its davits over the deck. Just as she was about to get into the boat the ship gave a lurch and the child was tossed overboard.

The cry Dennis gave attracted the attention of the sailor he was with, who shouted, "Child overboard!" and the man on the bridge ordered the ship stopped and backed. But before this was done Dennis, seeing a life buoy tied to the rail, whipped out his knife, cut the thongs and, throwing the buoy over his head, jumped overboard, striking the water but a few hundred yards distant from Eileen.

Now, the Monahans had lived on the banks of the Shannon, and Dennis had been from the time he was seven or eight years old used to the water. There was a cove near the house where it was comparatively safe for the children to bathe, but Mrs. Monahan would not permit her son to go into the water there. No mother can restrain the adventuresome spirit of a manly boy, and while the lad was not supposed to go into the water at all he was jumping off a dock into a depth of twenty feet, and, though his mother did not know when they left Ireland that he could swim a stroke, he was a leader among his companions in aquatic exercises.

When he saw Eileen plunge into the ocean he knew that an attempt to save her would be a very different affair from his experience in the Shannon; that there was a strong likelihood that any one leaving the ship would be left far behind before it could be stopped and backed, and even when reached it might be difficult to find the lost one.

Springing, as he did, far above the water's surface, he sank some distance beneath it, then rising, with the buoy under his arms struck out in the direction as near as he could tell to where Eileen would be. Rising and falling with the [illegible] he caught on a crest he cast the [illegible] in every direction for the girl. It happened that she came up on a crest [illegible] at the same time that he rose on another wave. He straightway swam for her and reached her to find her unconscious.

For some fifteen minutes he held her head above water. When tossed up on a wave's crest he could see the steamer at a distance, lying to, and could hear the steam escaping. Then settling to the trough, he heard a mingled sound of oars and shouted orders and when he was again on a crest saw a lifeboat between him and the ship. He shouted to guide [illegible] Then [illegible] and in a few minutes were alongside of him.

Dennis and Eileen were taken aboard [illegible] the girl was not for some considerable time until she had been worked over for an hour by the ship's surgeon. There was not the slightest doubt entertained by any one that without Dennis' effort she would have been lost.

When Eileen returned to consciousness and found herself aboard the ship she remembered that she had been out alone on a boundless ocean and wondered how she had been saved. Dennis was brought to her, and when she was told what he had done she took his hand in hers and looked into his eyes, but said nothing with her lips.

And then and there in her little heart was born a love that was destined to strengthen with the years, though she did not ask him.

When the two families landed in America they separated, the Monahans going on to a farm near New York city, the Kellys going west. Dennis Monahan was not fitted for farming, and his taste for machinery soon led him to the metropolis, where great manufacturers furnished employment for so many skilled mechanics. There he became an engineer. The Kellys settled in a city, where the father engaged in merchandising and Eileen entered a parochial school. She was a good scholar, and when she came to be sixteen years old she decided to become a teacher. So her father sent her to a normal school, where, at nineteen, she was graduated with honors.

But the seed that had been planted in her heart for the boy who had saved her from the merciless ocean budded with herself. In her there was an unsatisfied something—what she could not tell—that never left her. A few letters written at different times had passed between the Monahans and the Kellys, but these had ceased within a few years after their landing in America, and the families had lost all trace of each other.

One winter Eileen, who had become a teacher, worked too hard, and, since her health was giving way, her father decided that she must rest, with a change of scene and climate. She was to go to a southern seaport and as the warm weather came on proceed northward to New York and thence home. She started late in February, remained a few weeks at a sea beach in Virginia, then proceeded through Washington, where she spent a few days, striking the metropolis in the middle of March.

The spring came early that year, and New York's skyscrapers and monuments of engineering skill glittered in a warm sunshine. Eileen stopped with acquaintances who told her that within a few days a celebration of St. Patrick's day would take place for which greater preparations had been made than ever before and she must surely see it.

Eileen was not only a good Catholic, but her father and mother had brought her up with a keen reverence for the patron saint of her native land. She was not averse to seeing him honored by the Irish Americans of a great city like New York. Her friends rented a window under which the parade would pass, and on the morning of the gala day they all took possession of it.

It is the waiting for something that is coming that sharpens the zest for it when it arrives. The party remained at the window an hour before there came a faint sound of drums and martial music far up the street, suggesting a vision of prancing horses, glittering banners and uniformed men marching in line. Then came a platoon of policemen, followed by a brass band, behind which caracoled the fractious horses of the grand marshal and his staff.

Society after society passed, each bearing its banner surmounted by the sacred emblem of the cross. Then there was one of those halts that occur in parades, and right under the window where Eileen and her friends were sitting the marshal of one of the societies waited, soothing his horse, which seemed impatient at the delay.

As Eileen sat with her eyes fixed upon this young man with a green sash across his shoulders and a baton in his hand something strange grew up within her. She seemed to have been touched by a wand which had eliminated years and placed her back on the ship at the moment she had regained consciousness after her accident. And between the man on horseback and her there was something akin to that which passed between her and the boy who had saved her.

At the moment some one beside her said in reply to a question, "That society is the United Engineers under Dennis Monahan."

A moment later the young marshal looked up at the window and saw a pair of eyes fixed upon him which were saying, "Come to me." There was something familiar in the girl's face, though he did not remember to have ever seen her before. Then her face broke into a smile, and he knew there must be some past meeting between them. Casting a glance ahead and seeing the way blocked for some distance, he dismounted, left his horse with a man in the ranks and, going to the window which was on the ground floor, looked up at Eileen.

"You know me," he said, "but don't place you."

"I am the girl you saved from that awful ocean."

Eileen remained in New York till summer came, then returned to the west, but not for long. When the school broke up for the season it was announced that Miss Kelly would not teach the next year since she was to be married.

ROSEDALE LOTS

Most citizens of Peterboro' are aware that Rosedale, of Toronto, is the High Class Residental District of that city. Where naught but blue blood is to be found, and where residence therein is a passport to high society. It was sub-divided and put on the market by a Scotch syndicate about 55 years ago, at $2.00 per foot, and it is now selling at from $75.00 to $250.00 per foot. About the same time the high-class citizens of Peterboro' determined to keep step with Toronto, quickly selected and sub-divided that beautiful block of land north of Smith Street, east of Jackson Park, west from Normal School, and Chemong Road. Having gone so far, they resolved well doing, leaving the task of putting on the market to your humble servant, in the late afternoon of life, and because of that lateness, and of the superior High Class Property, I am offering at a fraction of its value five years hence. I most respectfully solicit your early investigation, believing that when you see the property, hear my price and terms, you will be pleased to accept at once. And as I want the assistance of every good man and woman in this meritorious work of furnishing home-foundations and the safest and most profitable way to invest and save, small or large sums of money. And in return for this assistance I agree to pay 5 per cent of the net price, at which each lot is sold, to the Treasurer of the Church to which the buyer belongs. I will do this as a precedent for others to follow my example. Payable out of half money received from buyer. Bear in mind, I only own 38 lots in what I have properly named "The Heart of Rosedale", and you or your descendants will buy that property soon, or later at 5 or 10 times my price. It is not in your interest to buy now, and use or sell later at big profits as many others have done? It is always safe to buy wheat or gold dollars, when they are offered at half value, and that is what you are doing when you buy lots in "The Heart of Rosedale."

Unavoidable delay compels me to name June 15th, as the opening day for sale of those lots. In the meantime, I suggest that every auto owner in the city, in his own interests, not only to go himself, but to take all his big friends with him, to carefully inspect and fully verify my statements.

How to find it—Second block north of Smith St. and west of Dixon, marked by small flags, and five minutes walk from car line at Jackson's Park.

Plans, and further information will be available in a few days.

ROYAL BILLIARD ROOMS.

That at Buckingham Palace Is Small Beside the Kaiser's.

The billiard room at Buckingham Palace, though a small one, is extremely comfortably arranged. There are small deep tapestried settees ranged round the table, and two big armchairs by the fireplace.

Neither the King nor Queen are however, particularly fond of billiards, and the room is consequently not very often used, except by a few members of the household. One of the hall pages act as marker. When the King plays, however, the score is called out by a member of the Household, and not by the marker.

King George has never practiced enough to become a good player, but His Majesty understands the theory of the game very thoroughly.

The Duke of Connaught is by far the best billiard player in the English royal family. The billiard room at Bagshot Park is the finest in any royal residence in Europe, with the exception of that at Potsdam, erected some three years ago by the German Emperor.

The walls and ceilings of the billiard room at Bagshot Park are exquisitely decorated in light cedar wood from designs which were prepared at the Mayo Art School, under the direction of Mr. Lockwood Kipling, the father of the famous novelist.

The designs were subsequently sent out to Lahore, where the carvings from them were executed by a famous Indian artist.

One of the most valuable billiard cues in the world is to be seen in the billiard room at Bagshot Park. It is made of pure black ivory, with a handle a foot in length of 24 carat gold. It was presented to his Royal Highness by two Indian princes, but it is intended rather more for ornament than use.

The billiard room at the Royal Palace at St. Petersburg is quite a small one, and is only used by the Tsar and a few intimate friends of the Emperor who are good players. The scoring board is made of silver, exquisitely carved, and the figures are of blue enamel let into the silver; but beyond this beautiful scoring board there is nothing of special interest about the Tsar's billiard room. The Tsarina and her ladies-in-waiting are forbidden by the custom of the Court to enter the billiard room.

The German Emperor's billiard room at Potsdam is a magnificent one, and is the largest of any royal residence in Europe. It contains three tables. At one end of the room is a large raised dais, where the German Empress and the ladies of the German Court often sit and watch the play after dinner.

The Kaiser frequently plays, and is extremely fond of the game. The room is never open for play during the day, and even on wet days it is against the rules of the Court for any member of the household to enter the billiard room until after dinner.

Before this room was built the billiard room consisted of a comparatively small apartment in the private rooms of the Emperor, containing one table. It was in this room that King Edward played a game of 500 [illegible] my Emperor, which the late King won, and subsequently His Majesty wrote his name and the date of the game on the cue, which is carefully preserved by the Kaiser. The cue has never been used by anyone since.

The only royal residence in England without a billiard room is Marlborough House. There is a splendid billiard room, of course, at Sandringham.

Napoleon's Nicknames.

Napoleon Bonaparte had many nicknames, many of them bestowed in admiration and devotion by his soldiers, such as the playfully ironic "Little Corporal," while on the other side of the silver streak he was known by less complimentary sobriquets. "Old Boney" was then a bogy at the mention of whom more than merely children were terrified and grew pale, while many pious persons even believed that he was the "beast" mysteriously referred to in the book of Revelation under the name of "666," and many ingenious attempts were made to show that the letters of his name could be transmuted into this number.—London Globe.

Stale Bread Day.

A traveler says that a curious weakness of grown-up Moors is the love of eating newly baked bread. The caid of Azemmoor, in Morocco, discovered that old bread was thrown away as waste. To waste food is a serious offence in the eyes of a Moslem. The caid of Azemmoor therefore issued a bylaw prohibiting the baking of bread upon one day in each week. The citizens, he declared, must eat up the bread already baked, and be fined Wednesday as the "bitalah," or holiday.

It Would Keep.

The colonel beckoned to his orderly. "Smith, I wish you'd ride into that town yonder and get the correct time."

"Why, sir," Smith hesitated, "I haven't got a watch."

"A watch, a watch!" the colonel bellowed. "What in the name of sense do you want with a watch? Write it down on a piece of paper, man!"

Boiling Potatoes.

There is a simple way to prevent potatoes from burning and sticking to the bottom of the pot. An inverted pie pan placed in the bottom of the pot avoids scorching potatoes. The water and empty space beneath the pan save the potatoes. This also makes the work of cleaning pots easier, as no adhering parts of potatoes are left to be scoured out.

The Family Meal.

I consider the family meal to be something much more sacred than merely an act of satisfying hunger. To me it is the meeting ground of all family joys and all family sympathies.—Prof. Von Herkomer.

Wearing of Clothes.

To endure injustice without answering it with hatred, to endure grief without having the spirit broken, to endure disappointment and yet to go on cheerfully—these things make character.

An Astronomer's Wit.

Professor Adams of Cambridge university, England, who discovered the planet Neptune, was a distinguished proof that a man may have his head among the clouds and still keep a ready wit for mundane occasions. At a dinner of the Philosophical society, runs a contribution to the Cornhill Magazine, one of the company was concluding an after dinner speech about the activities of the society for the past year. He pointed to the book of the proceedings lying on the table near him, adding:

"But of all the proceedings this year, gentlemen, you will agree with me that one of the best is this [waving his hand at the assembled diners] philosophical proceeding."

"Illustrated with plates!" flashed out Professor Adams to his neighbor at the table.

"Ma," said little Harry, "I'll tell you what you ought to do."

"What, dear?" his mother asked.

"You ought to go over to live in some country where the people are Mohammedans."

"What on earth ever put such a thought as that into your dear head, darling?"

"'Cause over there they think all fat women are beautiful."

"Harry, if you dare to open your mouth again this evening you will be sent to bed with nothing to eat!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tried and Found Wanting.

"I've had so much bad luck," said the gloomy man, "that I lie awake half the night thinking about my troubles."

"The cure for that," they told him, "is to quit thinking of your own troubles. Think of other people's."

"I'll try it," he said.

Three months later they met him again.

"Well, how did it work?" they asked.

"Didn't do any good," he replied. "I lie awake all night now thinking of other people's troubles."

Slingers of Greece.

The Aegmanians were considered the most skillful slingers of Greece. These weapons were used not only to throw stones, but balls of lead, and in some localities, especially in the plain of Marathon, many of these metal projectiles have been found. The relics are interesting from the inscriptions and devices cut upon them, which consist of the names of persons and appropriate epithets, the legend in many cases meaning when fully translated "Look out!"

Spendthrift.

Uncle Ezra—Do you think the money young Eph Hoskins made down in New York will last him long?

Uncle Eben—You bet it won't! He's going at an awful pace. I was down in the general store last night, and young Eph was writing $100 checks and lighting his cigars with them.

GUELPH MAPLE LEAFS TAKE THREE GAMES IN A ROW FROM WHITE CAPS

Invaders Won Both Games Yesterday Before Big Holiday Crowds —Quinlan Worked for Peterborough in the Afternoon.

2,500 PEOPLE THERE

Three in a row is our record in the present series against the Guelph Maple Leafs—all three losses. The Thursday game was captured by Manager Needham's outfit by 5 runs to 4, while they gathered in both holiday games by 8 to 4 and 11 to 4 respectively. The three wins boosted the invaders up to third place, while the White Caps still stand pat. The nearest thing to a win was yesterday afternoon's game, which marked the debut of Pitcher Albert Quinlan of Peterborough into the Canadian League. The local boy has had little pratcice, but showed fine form. Had he been in condition to go the route, he would undoubtedly have had the honour of pitching the firstwinning game of the year for the White Caps.

The Afternoon Game.

There were over 2,500 people at the afternoon game, and it was a hard one to lose, with such a magnificent attendance. For seven innings the teams had battled along with one run each. Then the Petes drove three over the counting station in the eighth and it looked as if the losing streak were broken at last. But you never can tell about baseball. Quinlan who had pitched a splendid game up to this stage, weakened. Two bases on balls, a double by Freyer and singles by Behan and Brady gave Guelph four runs before a man was out. Baver was sent in, but had nothing, and after being bumped for three hits and passing one, four more runs coming in, he was derricked and Cresswell sent in. Two more hits and a complimentary, added two more runs to the Maple Leafs' score before the nightmare of an innings was ended.

It was a grand game of ball up to the ninth, with plenty of snappy fielding. Quinlan who has had very little preparation, pitched a fine game for eight innings, allowing only five hits until the ninth, while his support was good in the pinches. The timely hitting of Hartman was again in evidence, while Schwartz kept up his good work at the bat. A feature was the cutting off of two men at the plate on attempted double steals, Trout and Tully working the play to perfection.

Orth, who twirled for Guelph, was not a mystery and was in difficulties half a dozen times, but snappy fielding kept the score down.

Peterborough started the scoring in the third. Schwartz started with a single to left and went to second when Foersch let the ball roll away from him. Derr grounded to third, advancing the runner and Beard's single sent the first run over.

Guelph tied it up in the fourth. With one out, O'Connor singled and went to second on a balk, scoring on Quinlan's bad throw to first on Hemlock's grounder.

There was no further scoring until the eighth. Beard was safe on O'Connor's error, but was an easy out at second when the hit and run play failed to come across. Templin was walked. Dolan hit to centre for two bases. Templin drew a throw from Hemlock and the Indian backstop hurled the sphere to left field, Templin scoring. Tully was passed and both base runners moved up on a passed ball. Hartman uncorked a timely single over second, scoring Dolan and Tully.

Then came the fatal ninth, as already described. Here are the figures:

Attendance—2800. Umpire—Johnston.

The Morning Contest.

Needham's homer over the left field fence, with two on bases in the ninth innings removed any doubt as to the result of the morning game. Up to that stage it was a nip and tuck contest. Guelph used three twirlers to win the game. Nehr, the first selection had to be hauled out in the first innings after the Petes had scored twice with only one out. Mason was sent in and held the Petes until the eighth when, with the bases full, two out and the score 5 to 4 in favour of Guelph, he was taken out, Behan being sent in. The wrecking crew proved equal to the task and got out of the hole by fanning Schwartz.

Bartlett pitched a good game for the homesters, although he was wild at the start. He was not hit hard and air-tight support would have kept the score down.

There was a lot of snappy fielding. Foersch, the Guelph left fielder, had the feature play when he picked Templin's fly off the left field fence. He crashed into the boards under a full head of steam, but held on to the ball. Hartman, Templin and Tully pulled off a fast double play that pleased the fans.

Bartlett was wild at the go-in, walking Swartmier. Needham sacrificed him to second and Fryer was walked, a wild pitch sending him to third. Freyer and Swartzmier tried the delayed steal. Swartzmier hit to ing by Trout and Tully nailed the former at the plate. Isaac ended the innings by grounding to Bartlett.

Peterborough got two in their half. Schwartz was hit and Graney drew a pass. Beard sacrificed neatly and Templin came through with a single to centre, scoring Schwartz. Dolan singled along the third base line, filling the bases. Needham derricked Nehr at this stage, substituting Star Mason, the spit ball artist. Tully flew out to Foersch, but Hartman was there with a line drive to left, scoring Graney. Trout fanned.

Guelph took the lead in the second. Bartlett walked Brady and Foersch, and O'Connor sacrificed. A wild pitch scored Brady. Foersch scored on Daniels' sacrifice fly to centre. Mason beat out a hit to Hartman, the throw striking him as he reached the bag and rolling to the stand, the runner going to second. He stole third, making the delayed steal. Schwartzmier hit to Bartlett, whose throw pulled Dolan off the bag and Mason scored. Hartman grabbed Needham's vicious drive, ending the innings.

Dolan was walked with two out in Peterborough's half, but was out stealing. There was nothing doing for either side in the third.

Guelph added two in the fourth. Foersch was safe on Hartman's error. O'Connor hit safely along the third base line, although the ball looked from the side to be foul. Daniels flew out to Schwartz, but Swartzmier singled through short, scoring Foresch and O'Connor.

There was no further scoring until the seventh, when the White Caps bagged one. Trout led off with a single to left. Bartlett was walked. Schwartz singled, scoring Trout and sending Bartlett to third. Graney drove a liner at Needham who doubled Schwartz at first. Beard drove a liner to O'Connor. Mason started with a double to centre in Guelph's half. Swartzmier and Needham were easy outs, but Fryer singled. Mason was nailed at the plate on an attempted double steal.

The Petes added another in the eighth with one out. Dolan was safe on O'Connor's fumble and Tully was hit. Hartman hit to Isaac who tagged Dolan on the line. Trout took a slant on the bean and the bases were filled. Bartlett was passed, forcing a run. Exit Mr. Mason. Behan, who saved the game on Thursday, was once more sent to the rescue and fanned Schwartz.

Guelph made it safe in the ninth when Daniels and Behan singled and Needham drove the ball over left field fence for a homer, sending in three runs.

Graney was passed and Beard singled in Peterborough's half, but the next three were easy.

Thursday's Game.

The invaders opened the series by taking the first game by 5 runs to 4. Derr pitched a nice steady game for the White Caps and deserved to win out, but his support was bad and the errors were costly. Ryan started on the rubber for Guelph, but had nothing on the ball but his glove, and after the Petes had scored three in the third and had the bases full, with only one out, he was chased and Behan substituted. The latter flinger had the White Caps buffaloed for the rest of the game. He was helped out of the hole in the third when Dolan hit into a double play and after that three hits, one a homer by Hartman, were all that the Petes could collect, while seven went down by the swivel route. Guelph scored one in the second on Isaac's single, a sacrifice and a safety by O'Connor.

They rung up two more in the third on errors by Tully and Trout and singles by Swartzmier and Needham.

Derr's single, was followed by Hemlock's miss of the third strike on Swartz, bases on balls to Beard and Dolan, while Templin was hit, giving the White Caps two runs. Then Behan took up the pitching. Tully drove one to right which Freyer captured, Templin being doubled at second. Beard scored on the play.

Hartman's homer over the left field fence, his second of the season, gave the Petes the lead in the fourth, but the visitors tied it up in the fifth on Behan's single, Swartzmier's sacrifice and Needham's timely single. They won out in the eighth on a base on balls to Needham and Freyer's double to centre.

FOOTBALL.

C.G.E. vs. Bethany.

The C.G.E. team defeated Bethany on their own ground yesterday by one goal to none. The game was an exciting one, and some really good football was witnessed by a large crowd. Many friends accompanied the team from Peterborough, including a number of lady enthusiasts. There was no score at half-time, but in the second half the C.G.E. team managed to get the ball home, thus winning a well-played game.

LAWN BOWLING

Owing to the rain yesterday morning the Port Hope lawn bowlers were unable to come to Peterborough and as a result the friendly contest had to be called off, much to the disappointment of the local players. However, the latter had some interesting games in the afternoon.

TO-DAY'S GAME

The White Caps met Guelph for the fourth of the series promptly at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Leafs batted first but failed to score, and the White Caps met with no better success in their half. The second innings resulted in a similar manner, as did also the third. In the fourth however, after dismissing the Leafs for none, the home team scored the first run of the game, securing the lead. Guelph recovered in the fifth and scored two runs. Score—Peterborough 1, Guelph 2.

In the sixth Peterborough equalised. In the seventh brought no score. The score at the end of the seventh, Peterborough two, Guelph two.

Guelph scored two in the eighth. Score—Peterborough, two; Guelph, four.

HARD AND SOFT PENCILS.

What makes a pencil hard or soft? Graphite, which composes the writing crayon in the pencil, is, as everybody knows, so soft that it will not scratch the most highly polished surface of burnished gold. Yet there are pencils so hard that they actually scratch the paper. A pencil is hard or soft in proportion to the amount of clay added to the graphite. A pencil cannot be composed wholly of graphite, for the reason that it would fall into a powder. Hence the use of clay as a binding element. Sometimes the clay is not evenly distributed through the mass and then one strikes a place that sets one's nerves on edge. That does not happen so much as was the case a few years ago. Graphite is pure carbon, like that contained in the diamond. The clay used is the finest that can be found and without grit. —Harper's Weekly.

BRIDE-CHOOSING DAY IS STILL A CUSTOM IN QUAINT BRITTANY

Might Prove Popular For Some Here—Girls of the Community Gather Near Church Once a Year and Wait Until Chosen by the Young Men.

GIRL MAY REJECT HIM

PARIS, MAY 20.—Saint Jean du Doigt, an old-fashioned town of Brittany, still keeps up its curious custom of "Bride Choosing Day," after Easter. The day is a sort of religious festival, and is called a "Chinadeo." It consists in all the marriageable young girls of the town and the country places for a long distance round about coming to a special mass and religious service, and remaining near the church all day waiting to be chosen as brides of the young men of the district.

The custom dates back to the Middle Ages, when, it is said, the laws of the Church were so strict that no marriage between relatives to within the eleventh degree was permitted. The result was that young men could not find brides even in neighbouring villages, and rather long journeys had to be made to find eligible girls elsewhere. It was then that the Church, after an understanding with the feudal lord of the place, who had a right to a fee for each marriage, arranged a common bridal day every year after Easter, and the custom has been maintained to the present day. The day is observed as one of great religious solemnity. There is no music or band, no dance of any kind—as, in fact, dancing has always been forbidden at St. Jean du Doigt because of the story of St. John the Baptist having been ordered to be beheaded by Herod after a dance.

THE CEREMONY.

From one to two hundred girls attend mass in the morning, and at 3 in the afternoon they again attend vespers in the old Gothic church. They are dressed in Bretggne fashion of all colours, and wear long embroidered shawls reaching to their feet, and carry a mass book and an umbrella. The umbrella, curiously enough, is an important factor in the transaction. It is the handing over of the umbrella that the "chinadec," or acceptance of the bride, consists. The girls stand in long rows on the steps of the church or in the square in front after vespers. They are very quiet, and observe a sort of religious gravity, waiting patiently for a young man to choose one of them. The young men stroll about some distance away on the walks, and seem to be rather indifferent. From time to time one of them leaves his friends and goes to the girl whom he has chosen. He salutes her ceremoniously and speaks to her.

Then the quimilli plays an important rule. If it is handed over to the young man the proposal is accepted, and it is seen that it is not. The girl remains standing for a few minutes in the midst of silence. The young man goes over to give the girl a present of sweets and still retains his air of indifference. Finally, after a few minutes of waiting, which seem to be only a traditional delay, the girl leaves the ranks and follows the young man, who then invites her to a small collation.

BRIDAL SUPPERS.

Little by little the inns become crowded with young couples, who are then partaking of a sort of frugal bridal supper. When night comes the couples return to the house of the chosen bride, and a real supper is then given by the parents.

The girls who have not been chosen do not seem to be disappointed. They remain about the church till dusk, and sometimes still do so when it is perfectly dark. If their parents are kind to them nothing is said, but it often happens that the unfortunate girls who failed to be chosen are roundly scolded when they return home without an intended husband.

Tyrolean Peasants Still Leave Their Children For The Summer Months

They Rent These Little Tots to Farmers—Radicals Are Condemning This Ancient Custom in Old Bavaria.

LITTLE WHITE SLAVE MARKET

BERLIN, MAY 23.—"I'll give 150 marks for him!"
"1 bid 175!"
"200!"
"210!"
"225!"

The competition was keen, for the boy was a sturdy looking lad. Despite his poverty-stricken appearance, he seemed to be stronger and healthier than many of the other children. Around him swarmed a score of peasant farmers, scanning the child as they would the points of a horse. There was little sentiment in their demeanour. It was business. They were buying him; to be exact, "leasing" the boy. They expected to make a "profit" on their investment, hence they did not want a boy who possibly would be ill and could not work hard. He was "knocked down" at 240 marks, or $60. The next boy was younger; he lacked the robustness of the other lad; he was pale, thin and did not look as if he ever had a full meal. He went at $30.

CHILDREN MARKET.

This is not a scene from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," but from the annual "Children Market." "Little White Slave Market" some of the German radical press term it, in the pretty town of Friederichshafen in Bavaria. Here in this quaint little town in sight of the Tyrolean Alps, made famous as the place where Germany's big Zeppelin airships are built, is held the annual "sale" every spring of the poor children of the Tyrolean peasants. Orphans, half-orphans and children of poor peasants in the Austrian Tyrol region, who thereby profit a little, are turned over to the "Tyrolean Children's Society," which in turn leases them out for the summer months on the German side of the border at whatever they will bring.

The annual "market" has just been held. The Austrian steamer Maria Theresa brought 125 boys and 30 girls, ranging in ages from 11 to 16 years, across the Boden Sea. They were quartered at the Golden Wheel Hotel, an appropriate place for this children's lottery.

WAGE SLAVES.

More than 500 peasant farmers from Wurtemburg, Baden, Hohenzollern and the Bavarian region along the Boden Sea, were on hand to "bid" for these youthful wage slaves. Competition was keen. The demand this year was greater than the supply and prices considerably higher than last spring were offered for the labour of the children for the summer. The children had nothing to say about their fate, whether they liked the looks of the "lessee" or not. The "market" was held under the auspices of the Rev. Baim of the Tyrolean Children's Society, who had charge of them for the society.

From daylight to dark and after, the children labour, which in south Germany means about 17 or 18 hours daily. It is but natural that the "lessees'" chief interest is to get as much out of them as possible. What the fate of some of the children is is indicated by the Tyrolean Grenzboten, a paper which has started an agitation against this "child market." It says:

SOME RETURN.

"The children return to their parents and homes on Oct. 26, if they do not fall a victim to the heavy labour, long hours, intense longing for father, mother and brothers and sisters, during the summer and are buried in the regions where they were 'leased.'

"We ask, in what land or country would the authorities permit such a 'slave trade' to exist? That many of these children have a hard time of it under the strangers to whom they have been leased is evident from the fact that the Children's Society has a number of farmers on its blacklist to whom they refuse to 'lease' children again. But what good does that do the little ones whom they may have ruined physically and morally?"

The Morgenpost of Berlin also marvels that the authorities of Bavaria, Wurtemburg and Baden would tolerate dealing in "little slaves."

GOOD SHORT STORIES.

Mr. Jones believed that no one need ever fall down. It was pure carelessness, he said. Any one who walked straight, and did not dawdle round, was in no danger of losing his balance. He said so to Mrs. Jones many times, but she had only smiled in a provoking way.

One bitter cold January morning he changed his mind. Everything outdoors had a coating of ice. The path leading from the barn to the house was smooth as glass and slanted treacherously on either hand. On one side of it was an old cellar, where the house had once stood. Jones was coming from the barn, after doing the morning chores, with a pail of milk in each hand. He was just opposite the cellar when—must!—out flew his feet and down he went on his back. The next instant he had slid in a shower of milk over the edge of the cellar hole, and landed on the bottom with a thump that fairly took away his breath.

He looked round in a dazed way for a moment, and then crawled to his feet. After making reasonably sure that none of his bones were broken, he climbed out and went limping to the house to tell his wife.

"Matilda! Matilda!" he called. "Come out here!"

Obediently she came. "Why Hiram, what has happened? Are you hurt?" she exclaimed, startled.

"Yes," answered Jones. "I fell down that old cellarway.' Come here and I'll show you."

Mrs. Jones followed her husband gingerly.

"See, Matilda," he said, as he reached the spot and turned. "I stood right here like this when'——

Once more Jones's feet flew up, and in precisely the same manner as before he landed in the bottom of the cellar. Silence reigned while Mrs. Jones gazed at the spot where her husband had stood. Then she saw his head appearing over the top of the bank.

"Hiram," she said, "you needn't explain any further. I understand exactly how it was done."—Youth's Companion.

When Richard Olney was Secretary of State he often said that appointees to the consular service should speak the language of the country to which they were appointed.

An enterprising Western politician who desired to serve at a Chinese port presented his papers to Mr. Olney. The secretary remarked: "Are you aware, sir, that I never recommend a consul unless he can speak the country's language? Now, I suppose you do not speak Chinese?" The Westerner grinned broadly.

"If, Mr. Secretary," said he, "you will ask me a question in Chinese I shall be happy to answer it." He got the job.—The World To-day.

"Exceeding the limit?" cried Dawson. "Why, Judge, your roads around here are so rotten a man couldn't go faster than ten miles an hour without endangering his life."

"That's the p'int," said the justice of the peace. "You was exceedin' the limit o' safety and we find ye guilty of attempted suicide. Ten dollars, if you please."—Harper's Weekly.

One hot summer day a Kentucky boss stopped at a florist's to order a box of flowers sent to his lady love. At the same time he also purchased a design for the funeral of a friend. On the card for the box he wrote:

"Hoping these may help you bear the heat."

The other card bore the one word, "Sympathy."

Very soon the girl telephoned: "Thank you so much for the flowers, but why did you write 'Sympathy' on the card?"—Louisville Post.

Indoor Winter Life

The way we live in winter time is not conducive to health. There is too much living in close, stuffy rooms, and breathing over and over again the impure air. Too much artificial food and too little exercise in the open air.

All this tends to make the blood thin, weak, watery and impure. The nerves are starved, exhausted and weak. The nerve force required for the proper workings of the heart, the lungs, the stomach, the liver, the kidneys and other organs is not forthcoming, and the whole system becomes weakened and run down.

When spring comes vitality is at low ebb, and nine persons out of ten require restorative treatment, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to form new, rich blood and revitalize the wasted nervous system.

Disease lurks on every hand in the spring time, and finds lodgment in the weak, rundown and exhausted system. You can protect yourself by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Rich red blood is the greatest of germicides. People with pure blood throbbing through their arteries need have little fear, for disease germs seek out the weak and exhausted for their easy victims.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The Greatest of Spring Restoratives

Makes the blood pure, rich and red. It fills the blood with the red corpuscles which go to build up and restore the system and fight off disease.

This great food cure is a wonderful help to every person in the spring. It does away with headaches, tired feelings and the extreme lassitude which makes life miserable to so many people at this time of year. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she would not be without them. They are the only medicine for little ones guaranteed by a Government analyst to be free from those opiates and other harmful drugs found in so-called "soothing" mixtures. Concerning them Mrs. J. C. Wood, Underwood, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the last four years and would not be without them, as I have found them beneficial every time I have given them to my little ones." The Tablets are sol dby medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rockbound Rafferty

It Is Sometimes Possible to Melt Even a Stone

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"And you won't change your mind?" demanded Miss Honoria Rafferty of her bachelor brother.

"Divvie a bit," returned that gentleman, puffing calmly at his pipe.

"Then you're a blood thirsty old pagan!" cried Honoria wrathfully, and she rushed from the room.

Later the door opened gently and Honoria's ruddy head was thrust in. The sun shone on her curly hair until the locks burned with added fire. Honoria's eyes were a tender brown, and her smile was heavenly, and her disposition was—well, Rockbound Rafferty knows what he calls it.

"You haven't"— began Honoria ingratiatingly, when Rockbound jumped to his feet and tossed his newspaper aside.

"No; I haven't changed my mind and I never will! I'll have no more palaverin' with ye over hirin' 'lady help' in me kitchen."

"Yes, Richard," said Honoria, with astonishing meekness, but if Rafferty had only looked he would have seen that her smile was dangerous.

Rockbound Rafferty warmed to the discussion.

"A lady help may be an ornamint to me kitchen, Honoria Rafferty, but I kape me ornaminta on the parlor shelf and I know the likes of her kind. She'd be servin' me a pea soup perfumed with veylet and she'd be flavoring the corned beef and cabbage with vanilla to drown the vulgar smell of the cabbage. No! Lady help for the parlor, says I, and a good Irish cook for the kitchen."

"If you please, I am Irish," said a timid voice. And Rockbound withdrew his eyes from the ceiling to find that another girl had replaced his sister in the doorway.

"NO, I HAVEN'T CHANGED MY MIND."

"You heard what I said?" he demanded fiercely.

"Oh, yes," she breathed.

"Well, I meant it," he growled, and, turning, flung himself into a chair and picked up his paper.

"You are the rudest man I ever saw!" cried the girl in a sharp voice. And again the door closed, this time with a decided slam.

Rafferty reddened to his generous ears. "Rude, am I?" he asked himself ruefully. "Well, you've got some spunk yourself, my lady!"

He saw her pass his window, her chin in the air, and he was horrified to see her secretly wiping her eyes with a handkerchief. She was crying, probably at his brutality for one thing and because she could not fill the position of cook and laundress in his household. He had advertised for such a servant that morning, and his door had been besieged all day.

"Cook!" he sniffed scornfully, smoothing out the sheets of his newspaper. "She looks more as if she could play the pianner or teach school. What is she thinking of?"

Honoria flew into the room an instant later, her eyes dancing and her cheeks red.

"There's a woman out here who is just the sort you're looking for, Richard. No one could ever mistake her for anything save a cook, and she says she can cook a boiled dinner."

He turned and looked. Before him was an immensely fat woman of no uncertain age. Her strongly marked features were of an unnatural redness, and she occasionally mopped her face with a large cotton handkerchief and then surreptitiously scanned the handkerchief as if fearful that her wonderful coloring might come off. A large black hat with a broken willow plume and a red rose dangled lopsidedly on her iron gray hair, and a green and gray ulster completed her costume.

"You are Irish?" inquired Rockbound Rafferty, giving the woman a chair, into which she sank heavily.

"I am not!" she answered with decision. "I was borrun under the starrs and stripes. Ol'm an Amurican lady."

"Oh, well! Can you cook?"

"Yis."

"Any references from your last place?"

For answer the woman brought forth a bundle of soiled letters and gave them to him. At the same time she arose and shook herself out of the big coat.

"Ol'll be going down to see about dinner," she said calmly, and before her prospective employer could hinder her she had left the room.

"Well, I'll be dashed!" muttered Rockbound Rafferty, opening the first letter at hand.

A half hour later Honoria found him buried deep in the evening paper.

"I smell cabbage," sniffed Rockbound suspiciously.

"Isn't it awful?" complained Honoria, wrinkling her pretty nose in affected disdain. "Still, I believe she will suit. She says her name is Hannah Muldoon."

"She told me that she was an American lady," remarked Rockbound meekly. "I may as well tell you that I didn't hire her, Honoria."

"Well, who did?"

"She hired herself. If she suits we can arrange about wages later. I've read her references, and they are scandalous, but I do believe she can cook."

"I wish you had tried the other one," grieved Honoria, throwing herself into a deep chair. "She said she had tried everything and she is not strong enough for factory work, and she does know how to cook. Her folks are all dead, and her husband was killed by the railroad a few months after their marriage. She's had a hard time of it."

Rockbound Rafferty was looking very much chagrined. That was always the way when he tried to exert hard heartedness. He made an example of the wrong person. It would have done no harm to have given this charming widow a chance to prove her culinary powers and to have given her a start in the world. He was angry at himself for his gruffness. He might have been kind to her at least. It was his creed to be kind.

"What is her name?" he demanded.

"Rose Brian."

"Did she get damages from the railroad for her husband's death?"

"You ought to know. You are the railroad's counsel," retorted Honoria coolly.

"Was it the J. J. and B.?"

"Yes."

"I'm going downtown awhile," said Rockbound, and, without noticing Honoria's quiet smile of understanding, the big brother crammed on a hat, shrugged himself into an overcoat and went out.

Down in his private office he made havoc among the document files until he discovered the records of the case of Rose Brian versus the J. J. and B. railroad. A rereading of the records convinced him that only his own cleverness as a lawyer had prevented the destitute little widow from gaining her rights in the matter. It was certainly up to the company to make good to Mrs. Brian.

"If they won't do it, it's up to me to move out of this office as corporation counsel. I can't have that injustice laid against me," he said with a wry frown, and he at once proceeded to put matters in line for taking up the case with the proper officials.

Rockbound Rafferty had a fight for it, but at last he won. It was a case of the railroad giving up a cool thousand dollars or losing their counsel, and in some way or another it was managed that Rose Brian received the damages from the railroad, only the newspapers [illegible] anything about it.

She came up to thank him personally, astonished to find him the great, great man who had turned aside her plea for a situation as cook in his family. She was looking lovely now with hope in her blue eyes and a pink, with rose that in her cheeks that becoming, her really.

"Oh, Judge Rafferty," she sighed gently, "if you only knew how grateful I am! It seems as though everything was coming out all right after all. I have a situation as private secretary to a lady who is going to Ireland for the winter, and I am too happy for anything. I owe it all to you."

"Going to Ireland? What steamer?" demanded Rockbound Rafferty impulsively.

"The Rania."

"Now, that's strange enough. I'm sailing on the Rania myself. Saturday, is it?"

"Yes. That will be splendid. And, Judge Rafferty, do tell me why they call you 'Rockbound' when you're the kindest hearted man I ever met?" Rose Brian looked up at him from brimming blue eyes.

Rockbound Rafferty took both her small hands in his and patted them tenderly. "I expect it's because I was hard and rockbound until the lightning of love for a woman struck the rock and split it."

There was no mistaking the meaning in his kind eyes, and Rose Brian hastened away so happy that she was glad it was not yet to be put into words.

In the meantime Rockbound Rafferty called up the steamship office and demanded a stateroom on the Rania for Saturday, and the joke of it was that all they could give him was a bridal suit, and he grinned as he accepted it.

"It's the best omen in the world," he said to himself as he went home to break the news of his departure to Honoria.

Of the Largest Jack Manufacturer in the Whole World About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

Jack Frost's Master

McCLARY'S

"Sunshine" Furnace

Jack Frost had the time of his life last winter. He warred against all elements and froze them stiff. Lakes and rivers he turned into solids; he also put a razor-like edge on the wind. He even bit into steel rails making them as brittle as burned glass. Outside, Jack reigned supreme, but his chilly majesty was licked to a frazzle inside by "The Understudy of the Sun"—McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace.

Think of the past winter when the mercury swung timidly below the freezing point—not for a day or a week, but for months at a time. How you shovelled coal, and how you talked about the appetite of that poor old furnace in the cellar. It simply ate up coal and then fell down when it came to heating the house evenly and comfortably.

McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace makes the most of very little fuel, and distributes a much greater percentage of heat throughout house than the ordinary furnace.

Ashes cannot bank up between the active fire and the walls of the Fire-pot in the "Sunshine" Furnace. It is an absolute guarantee of balmy June weather in the home, when Jack Frost's icy garments are jingling in the Arctic cold without. That's why the "Sunshine" is called "The Ice King's Master." The "Sunshine" Furnace is an excellent investment—It will last a life-time with ordinary care—and return you a handsome interest on the investment every year by the actual saving it effects.

Now, we want you to do us a favor—we want you to call on the McClary agent and ask him to prove every claim we make for the "Sunshine" Furnace—ask him to prove every claim true.

Ask him to show you—The fuel-saving features of the "Sunshine" — The mechanical reasons which make balmy healthy June weather possible in the home when Jack Frost is in his element without—Why the "Sunshine" saves money which other furnaces burn up, and—Why the largest makers of furnaces in the British Empire so amply and so fearlessly guarantee the "Sunshine"—The Understudy of the Sun.

Your decision will please us and pay you. If you don't know the McClary agent, write us at our nearest address.

He Died Many Times

To Save Himself From Actual Death

By HARRY VAN AMBERG

Peter Arkadyvitch reached his home in St. Petersburg at 11 o'clock at night. There he found his young wife waiting for him. She knew that he had attended a meeting of a revolutionary circle to which he belonged, and the moment he stepped out of the darkness into the light she saw that something dreadful had happened.

"Oh, Heavens, Peter, what is it?"

"The lot has fallen upon me."

"Did the drawing take place tonight?"

"It did. I drew the fatal ballot."

"And you are to kill the minister?"

"I am."

Neither spoke for some time. Peter threw himself on a lounge, and his wife sat beside him, clasping him in her arms. There could have come to them no greater trouble. An order to assassinate one standing in the way of the revolutionary cause meant almost sure death for the assassin. If he obeyed the order he would likely sacrifice his life with that of the man he killed; if he did not obey the order some member of the circle that had given it to him would be deputed to kill him. There was no evasion by flight, for he would be followed wherever he might go. In such desperate cases it is often the woman who is the more hopeful. Anna Arkadyvitch not only regained hope, but, being a very ingenious woman, while she was sitting by her husband, began to revolve in her mind plans for getting him a respite if not saving him from the fate that hung over him.

"When must this thing be done?" she asked.

"There is no date fixed. I may have what time I deem necessary, only I shall be watched by members of the circle that they may be sure I am laying plans and making preparations. In these cases we are expected to study the habits of the victim in order that we may know when and where to find him with reasonable certainty. All this requires time and delays are likely to occur."

"Very well. Begin, or at least pretend to begin, these preparations and observations and leave the rest to me."

Peter and Anna went to live in a small house in an unfrequented part of the city. Peter reported to the circle that his wife would make and keep the bombs to be used for the assassination while he obtained a knowledge of the habits of his victim. In the house to which they moved they could make and keep bombs without running much risk of being observed.

One morning about a month after their removal Anna, apparently in great distress, appeared in the house of Alexis Kardoff, one of the members of the circle that had ordered the murder, and asked to speak with him in private. As soon as they were where they would not be overheard she told him that her husband had been handling a bomb. It had exploded and killed him. She wished Kardoff to help her get rid of the bombs and the body without the knowledge of the police. Kardoff promised to consult with other members of the circle and let at once.

Anna went back to her home, where she later received a visit from Kardoff. She showed him the body, but the bomb had so disfigured the face as to render it unrecognizable. However, what little hair was left was of the same color as Peter's, and parts of the clothes were plainly those belonging to him. Kardoff noted also the damage done to the interior of the house and, being convinced that the remains were those of Anna's husband, gave her means with which to leave Russia. She was to go away from the house at 10 o'clock that night, and members of the circle would enter as she passed out, bury the body and remove all evidence of the house having been used for revolutionary purposes.

Anna was also furnished with a pass port (forged), and with this she entered a train leaving St. Petersburg early the next morning and in due time reached Berlin. From there she went to Genoa and took a steamer for Bombay. There were several natives of India on board, and one evening after the ship had passed out of the gulf of Aden into the Arabian sea one of these, partly dressed in the costume of his country, was leaning over the taffrail, quite alone, when he was joined by Anna Arkadyvitch.

"Do you think it safe for us to travel together?" asked the Indian, who was none other than Peter, alive and well.

"No. We must bury ourselves in a country where you will not be known. You must retain your dusky color. There is no reason why we may not live together as man and wife, for such connections are common in India. But until we are in Bombay we must not be seen together. I don't think we are or will be watched, for Kardoff was convinced that the body shown him was yours. Our danger will be meeting those who have known you. Once in the interior of India I think there will be little danger of even this."

The ruse that had been practiced was a very simple one and easily carried out. Anna had a brother who was a medical student. From the dissecting room of the medical college he attended he stole a corpse about the size and with the same colored hair as Peter and conveyed it under cover of the night to the Arkadyvitch house. There it was dressed in a suit belonging to Peter and propped over a bomb which was exploded in its face. Peter, disguised, had left the house before the explosion took place and, having been provided with a passport to be used in case of flight after assassinating the minister and what means he would need, had no difficulty in reaching Genoa, where it had been planned that he should meet his wife. He procured on the way a stain for his complexion and when he entered Genoa put his name on the register of the hotel where he stopped as a citizen of Bombay.

Peter and Anna lived together four years in a small town in India and might have lived there till they died had Peter not got restless and desired to see something of life. So, contrary to Anna's wishes, the two went to Calcutta for a visit with the intention of remaining indefinitely if the danger of being recognized seemed slight.

By a strange fatality Ivan Vasalief, the man who had been chosen to take Peter's place in the matter of the assassination, had been arrested with documents on him to incriminate him and been sent to Siberia. He had escaped from Kara, reached Lapland by sea and thence down through Sweden to the Mediterranean. From there he had sailed to India. One day he met Anna and her Indian husband in the principal street of Calcutta. In the man Vasalief at once recognized Peter, whom he supposed was dead. He passed the couple without speaking to them, but Anna recognized him and saw him look in astonishment on her husband. She did not appear to notice him, passing him with assumed indifference.

The couple made up their minds to leave Calcutta at once, and, after some thought Anna, who foresaw that she must invent a new scheme for her husband's second demise, decided that there might be some advantage in going to the place where they had been living. They managed to get away secretly, but Anna, believing that Ivan Vasalief would leave no stone unturned to find them, as soon as she arrived at her former home gave out that Peter had caught a plague which shows itself in blue spots on the body of the person attacked, and Peter was seen, spots and all (Anna had painted them) by several persons. Anna was deserted in her trouble, for no one would risk catching the dreaded disease by helping her, and poor Peter, who had once been blown up by a bomb, now died of the plague.

Anna concluded to make a funeral pyre of the house she lived in and succeeded by large payments of money in getting two or three persons to help her pile the furniture around the bed on which the corpse lay. Fortunately for her, the Indian custom of the burning of a widow with a husband's body had by this time been suppressed by the British government. So Peter was burned alone—or a figure representing him—and after all was over the widow returned to Calcutta.

One day on the street she met Vasalief. The latter by his expression that he was well pleased with the meeting, but she pretended still not to know him. She knew he was following her, and she returned to the home she had left. Vasalief, who wished to be revenged on Arkadyvitch for having relegated to him the assassination he should have done himself, followed her. This was what she had gone to Calcutta for—that he might be convinced that her husband was this time really dead. He found witnesses to convince him of this fact and gave up the chase.

Anna met her husband in Australia, and the couple sailed from there together to America. A new danger must have confronted them, for Peter fell overboard, to turn up at San Francisco. During the next few years he committed suicide in Canada and hara-kiri in Japan. But in time he and his wife settled down to a quiet life in Brazil, though this was not till the revolutionists had succeeded so far as to gain a constitution for Russia and the circle to which Peter belonged was disbanded.

DR. JOSE PAS DEAD.

Owner of the Greatest Journal in South America.

Dr. Jose Paz, the multi-millionaire proprietor of the famous Buenos Ayres paper, "La Prensa," died recently at the age of 69 in his villa at Monte Carlo.

The organ, which he founded, far and away the most important in South America, had a very modest beginning of four pages in 1865. It now numbers 40 to 50 pages, and among its contributors are the most famous French writers, Jules Lemaitre, Jules Claretie, etc.

The advertisements along bring in just under half a million sterling yearly. Dr. Paz loved to tell how, when he began, he was so hard up for advertisements that, on more than one occasion the members of his staff had to play the part of advertisers. They filed past him, each lending his name and address in order to swell the "wants" column. One would advertise for a nurse, another for a second-hand piano, etc. The answers, of course, always arrived "too late."

During the Franco-German war, when the European mail was due at Monte Video, Dr. Paz, in order to beat his rivals, would get possession of the wire from that port to Buenos Ayres and keep it at work on the Bible until the "copy" was ready for transmission. These feats, common enough nowadays, were, of course, marvels of enterprise forty years ago. The "Prensa" building at Buenos Ayres cost $3,000,000, and is a veritable palace. Illustrious persons arriving in the city were invited to be guests of The "Prensa," and had a splendid suite of rooms, a staff of servants, and a motor-car at their disposal. Among the most recent guests was M. Clemenceau.

Of late years Dr. Paz—who had represented the Argentine Republic as Minister Plenipotentiary at Paris and Madrid—had lived almost exclusively in France, having passed the management of his journal to his son.

It is estimated that he leaves a fortune of $20,000,000.

Why We Shake Hands.

In the old days, when every man who had any pretensions to being a gentleman carried a sword, it was the custom for men when they met to show that they had no intention of treachery to offer each other their weapon hands—that is, the hand that would be used to draw the sword, and to withhold the hand was usually the signal for a fight. So fixed did this habit become that long after men ceased to wear swords they still offered the weapon hand to a friend and declined to offer it to an enemy. To this day when you refuse to shake hands with a person it signifies that you are at war. Among savages, who never carried swords, the practice of shaking hands is unknown, and it affords them amusement to see the white men do it.

The Burglar's Talisman.

Coal is used for other than heating purposes. For centuries a piece of coal carried on the person has been held to bring good luck. This belief still survives among burglars. They invariably carry a small piece of coal with them when they start out on an expedition. The more successful they are and the greater their good luck in avoiding capture the more highly do they prize their talisman. This belief in the virtues of coal is accounted for in the old superstition, traceable to sun worship, of regarding any object associated with fire as an emblem of the solar rays and a preservative against evil spirits.—London Chronicle.

Dickens and a Face Ache.

Dickens wanted to be an actor before he was an author. He would have been but for a face ache. When he was a lad and a lawyer's clerk he had attained a trial of his power of reproducing "character and oddity" before Mathews and Charles Kemble. But a face ache kept him at home, and soon after he "made a great splash" as a newspaper reporter. Thereafter he reproduced "character and oddity" at gatherings instead of the stage.

Suffered With Nerve Trouble For Two Years.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR HIM TO SLEEP.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nervous system alone may be diseased, therefore it is necessary for anyone suffering from any nervous trouble to procure a remedy which will at once quieten the nerves and build up the system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do this for you, providing you give them a fair trial.

Mr. Chas. W. Wood, Montreal, Que., writes:—"For two years I had suffered with nerve trouble, and it was impossible for me to sleep. It did not matter what time I went to bed, in the morning I was even worse than the night before. I consulted a doctor, and he gave me a tonic to take a half hour before going to bed. It was all right for a time, but the old trouble returned with greater force than before. One of the boys, who works with me, gave me half a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took them and I got such satisfaction that I got another box, and before I finished it I could enjoy sleep from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m., and now feel good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE CASE-BOOK OF A PRIVATE DETECTIVE

Inside History of the Methods Employed in Criminal Investigation, Embracing True Narratives of Interesting Cases by a Former Operative of the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

BY DAVID CORNELL

7—Wheels Within Wheels

NIPPING A NEW YORK BLACKHAND CONSPIRACY IN THE BUD

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.)

(Editor's Note—In order that no annoyance may accrue through the publication of these narratives to persons involved therein, other names and places have in many instances been substituted for the real ones.)

Pasquale Leoni came near to being one of the smoothest blackhand chieftains in this country. But not quite. He failed at the very outset of what would have been, had it succeeded in getting started, one of the most successful blackmailing and robbing conspiracies that ever emanated from the evil minds of the Italian Black Hand men who live by terrorizing their fellow countrymen in American cities.

Leoni ran a little private bank for the accommodation of his own countrymen in Elizabeth street, in the lower Italian quarter of New York City. He made no pretense of doing a big business, nor of securing his depositors and patrons against loss by any great capital of his own. He had started in as a steamship agent, selling tickets for a couple of the lines that make a specialty of carrying the cheaper class of passenger trade between New York and the Mediterranean ports. That was ten years before the events here to be related ever began.

From a seller of steamship tickets Leoni began to branch out, and soon he was running a little Italian employment agency in conjunction with his original business. He satisfied everybody concerned with his dealings in this, and soon the Italian emigrants who had found work through his office began to entrust to him the task of conveying safely to the loved ones back in Italy part of the funds earned by the newcomers in America.

The private bank was the next step. The newly arrived Italians were loathe to trust their hard-earned money with any of the strange bankers in this strange land. Leoni was one of them, a son of their own beloved Italy. He had welcomed them upon their arrival at Ellis Island, he had brought them up the bay and found them rooms in the crowded quarters of the east side. Work they had secured through him, and their steps in the new land had been generally guided by his advice. What more natural than that they should turn to him when they began to accumulate little sums of money which they wished to save?

Leoni took care of their money with great satisfaction to them and considerable profit to himself. His power and influence, and the prosperity of his little private bank—so private that the state bank examiners had nothing to do with it—grew until in March, 1911, he had on deposit in his Elizabeth street office over $150,000 placed in his care by his trusting countrymen.

I had never heard of Leoni until he came to the office of the Burns Detective Agency and asked for protection.

"It is the Black Hand—the Mano Nera—that is after me," he said. "They have threaten me. Me, Pasquale Leoni, whom all good Italians trust—these bad men have threatened that they shall take my life or I am to give them $25,000."

He dove into his pocket as he spoke and showed us a letter written in Italian and addressed to him. Translated it read:

"Dear Prosperous Brother:

"Many of the countrymen are out of work. Times are not as rich with all as they are with you. Those who have much should help those who have little or nothing. Brother, you have much; we have nothing. You should be glad to help. There are many of us. That we all should get a little you must give much. But it is not much to you, who has so much. Brother, you must have $25,000 to give us in two weeks when we ask for it, or we will remove you as a traitor to your poor countrymen.

"The Beautiful Society."

It was a typical Black Hand letter, except that the amount was away beyond the usual demand.

"How did you have the nerve to come here about this?" asked the office manager. You know Italians usually are afraid to speak even to their wives about communications of this sort.

"To the police I would not go," said Leoni. "But you I think I can trust. Anyhow, I will die before I give up this money. I want you to protect me by finding the writer of this letter and putting him in jail. I have heard that you do such things very well."

The office manager turned to me.

"Want to take the case, Cornell?" he asked. "We don't usually touch anything of this sort."

"Certainly," I said. "It's all part of the game to me."

Leoni and I got together then. I took the letter and examined it carefully. It was in a fairly good handwriting and carefully punctuated and phrased. Apparently it was the work of an educated man.

I reasoned that this letter probably was the work of one of the men whom Leoni had had dealings with in one way or another. Probably somebody who had deposited money with him and who knew how prosperous the private banker was becoming.

"How did the letter come to you?" I asked.

"It was shoved under the door at night," he said. "I found it when I open store in the morning."

I put the letter under a microscope and examined it carefully.

"Did it come just the way it was?" I asked.

"Yes."

"No envelope?"

"No, nothing but what you have there."

That didn't sound good to me. Under the microscope the letter failed to show any of the dust or dirt that would have adhered to it if it had been carried uninclosed and, without a cover, pushed under the door of an Elizabeth street store. The letter was crisp and clean, as if it had been taken from an envelope that had sheltered it in its travels until very recently.

"Is this the only letter of this sort you have?" I asked.

"No, no," he laughed. "There were others. I tore them up. I paid no attention to them until this one came. It names a time when I must have the money ready. That is why I came here."

"Were the letters all in this handwriting?" I asked.

He was a little slow in answering. "Yes," he said, finally. "Yes, all the same hand-writing."

"All right," I said; "let's go down to your office."

He grumbled at this.

"It would not do for me to be seen with you," he protested. "The society has eyes everywhere. If you come to Elizabeth street with me its spies will see and they will get suspicious. Then they will kill me as a warning for others to be careful."

"All right," said I. "When can I come to see you?"

"You want to see me in the office?"

"Yes, in your office."

"That is absolutely necessary?"

"Yes," I said, "it's necessary."

"All right, all right," he said. "Come tonight then, at ten. The street will be crowded so that you can slip in without being noticed."

I put on some old clothes that night and slouched through the crowds in Elizabeth street until I reached Leoni's store. I went in, pretending to have some business at the banking window, and when no one was looking I slipped back into the office.

"I want to take a look at your books first of all," I said.

He was puzzled, but he turned over to me his books. He had kept the signatures of his depositors in a single big book, and this was what I looked over most carefully.

I found what I had hoped to find. About a year before one "Ignacio Martina" had written his name and his address, "Whitefish, Wis.," in Leoni's signature book in the same fine Italian hand that had written the threatening letter. There was no mistaking it. The writing was too distinctive to be confused.

I was on the point of telling Leoni what I had found, but on second flash I reasoned: "Here is an excitable Italian, half crased with fear, and if I tell him what I think I have found he'll go up in the air, and if he doesn't plot to take his private vengeance he's almost sure to let someone know what he's been told." So I said nothing, but looked through the book without comment. After a short time I left Leoni, telling him I'd call him up in a day or two.

"Do you think you can catch them?" he asked.

"I don't know," I said. "It's pretty hard for an American to get onto the crooked ways of these fellows, but we've never failed on a case yet."

"Ah," he said. "But you never had a case like this?"

"No," said I; "that's true, too."

When I got back to the office the manager said: "Well, how do you like Black Handing as far as you've gone?"

"That's a funny looking case to me," I said. "It looks too easy to be true."

I told him what I had found, and what my theory shaped up like.

"Oh, drop it if you want to," he said. "I don't think we care to be mixed up in that sort of a mess. Do just as you please about it."

I had already made a start on the case and had discovered what I was inclined to believe was a striking clue. The attraction of the man-hunt had me, and I said:

"I'll go on with it for a while at least, if you don't mind."

Next day I went down to the Federal building and looked over the names of Italians who had applied for citizenship in this country. There I found "Ignacio Martina's" name again, and in the same hand-writing as the Black Hand letter that Leoni had received. I called up Leoni's bank on the phone. Leoni didn't happen to be in. If he had been this story probably would never have been told. His clerk was in and in answer to my question he looked up his books and found that Igacio Martina still was living in Whitefish, Wis., that he got his mail at the general delivery, and that he was a tall thin man with a thin face.

I left for Whitefish that day. Thirty hours later I was asking the postmistress of that little town if she had any mail for "Ignacio Martina." She had. Of course she knew that I wasn't Martina so she wouldn't hand over the letter, but I had a glimpse of it and saw that it was from New York.

I spotted Martina next day. He was a villainous, though intelligent looking fellow who lived in the Italian settlement of the town without any visible means of support. Now see how pure luck often makes a case for a detective with scarcely any effort of his own.

There was in Whitefish a private Italian banker operating much after the manner of Leoni in New York. The Italians who lived in the town were mostly men who worked on the railroad, and their families. They had begun to settle in the town a few years before, and one Frank Cantino, a white-headed old Calabrian, had taken upon himself the burdens of king of this Little Italy. He made himself political boss of his countrymen first; then he became their banker. He was much respected and liked by his countrymen and by Americans as well. I found this out on the third day of my visit to Whitefish because on the night of that day Cantino was murdered in the room in the rear of his little private bank.

The murder was a terrible shock to the peaceful little town. Nothing of the sort had ever happened in its history. The tragedy had occurred on Main stret, no later than ten o'clock, and was a crime of the boldest, and bloodiest sort. Cantino had been stabbed seven times, and any one of the cuts would have been fatal.

I reached Cantino's office a few minutes after the alarm had been given. There were no signs of a struggle and no disorder of any kind. Cantino apparently had been stabbed first in the neck as he was turning away from his assailant—stabbed by someone whom he did not fear—and after that the assassin had wrecked terrible vengeance on his victim. Investigation proved that the bank had not been robbed. The safe was locked and Cantino's papers and property were all in order.

The local authorities began to seek for the motive for such a strange crime, but I put it down as Black Hand work at once. I reasoned that Cantino had been threatened even as my friend Leoni in New York, that he had refused to yield to the blackmailers, and that he had been slain as promised in the threats.

With the permission of the sheriff I began to go through the old man's papers. I had not searched long before I found what I was looking for. He had received threatening letters just as I deduced. There were three of them. The last one had threatened him with death in two weeks if he did not turn over a certain sum of money to "the man who comes and asks you for it." Apparently he had not done this, and he was killed as a consequence.

I was disappointed in those letters. I had expected to see them in the hand-writing of Martina. But they weren't. They were in another and quite different hand, an educated Italian hand, but not Martina's.

However, I went at once down to the house where Martina had boarded. He was not in. He had gone back to the old country the night before. He had purchased his railroad and steamship ticket of old Cantino several days earlier, and last night he had gone, leaving the house at nine o'clock.

I went from there down to the station and found that Martina had taken the midnight train for Milwaukee. He would have had plenty of time to commit the murder.

At once I wired the New York office of the Burns Agency what had happened and to have them watch the boats of the Italian line on which Martina had bought tickets. After this I caught a train back to New York, taking with me the threatening letters received by Cantino. To while away the tedium of the long journey I took these letters out to re-read. Studying them more carefully now I as struck with the impression that I had seen that hand-writing somewhere before. I was sure of it. I had a piece of Leoni's writing in my possession. It was an address he had written for me in his office. I dug it up and carelessly compared it with the Cantino letters. Then I got a shock. The letters were positively in Leoni's hand-writing!

It took some time for the significance of this to sink in.

Martina had written Leoni in New York a practical duplicate of what Leoni had written Cantino in Whitefish, Wis. Leoni, the banker, who had come to us with a threatening letter, had written the same kind of a letter himself to a banker in Wisconsin. And Martina had left Whitefish the night that Cantino was murdered.

Meanwhile the New York office of our agency was watching the boats that sailed for Mediterranean ports. Every 200 miles or so I would get a wire advising me that such and such a boat had sailed and nobody answering the description of my man had come aboard. Every time I opened a wire I hoped to see the news that Martina had been arrested while trying to get out of the country, but nothing of the sort occurred.

When I reached New York city I didn't go to the office. I hailed a taxicab and had myself driven to within a couple of squares of Leoni's bank in Elizabeth street. Discharging the taxi man I walked down to the place, mingling with the crowd in a way to make myself inconspicuous. Leoni was back of the cashier's cage. I walked in.

"Hello, Mr. Leoni," I said. "Seen anything of Martina?"

Leoni was a good actor but not good enough.

"You haven't seen him, have you?" he said.

"Oh, yes," I said. "I saw him out in Whitefish. He killed a fellow by the name of Cantino out there the day before yesterday."

Leoni jumped up with a gun in his hand.

I never watched anybody closer in all my life than I did Leoni while I was telling him this. No Anglo-Saxon could have hidden what was going on in his mind the way that little Italian did. His expression was one of surprise, only surprise, that I should mention such a thing.

"How horrible!" he said. "How distressing!"

He did it so well that he fooled me. I said to myself: "You big —— fool! You guessed wrong, absolutely wrong."

I went back to the office and began to write up my reports, trying to find a flaw in the theory I had worked out. Since I had been up against Leoni and had played my big card and hadn't brought anything out I felt that my theory must be wrong. His expression absolutely had convinced me. But as I wrote and rewrote the record of my doings since Leoni had applied at the office for a man, I couldn't see where in the world I had fallen down. If I was any good at all then I had worked up a case that pointed straight to the end I had worked toward. If it didn't point that way—. But I hated to believe that I had failed so completely.

Cantino had sold Martina tickets over the old Italia-Mediterranean line. Our men had been watching the docks and boats of that company closer than any other. Nobody approaching Martina's description had sailed on it. The second day that I was in New York the report came that the line wouldn't have another boat for two weeks, and that no reservations on that boat had been made from Whitefish, Wisconsin. There had been no reservation from Whitefish for two months.

"Stung!" said the agency superintendent. "Your man got away on some other line. I told you that you'd better let that Black Hand stuff alone."

But I had my own private hunch, in spite of the innocent expression on Leoni's face. I made myself a mental bet that Martina hadn't left this country, and that I knew just where to find him—in time.

It took some time. To make a long story short, I went to the tenement directly opposite Leoni's office in Elizabeth street and rented the two front rooms on the third floor. I was dressed in the clothes of the average Italian laborer, and while I was a little too tall for a fair specimen, a pair of gold rings in my ears helped out the deception. I explained to the woman who rented the rooms that I was out of work and that I probably would be at home a lot during the daytime.

I was. Both daytime and night. There wasn't an hour in the twenty-four that I, or Cluffer, who came over to help me, didn't have an eye glued to the window that covered Leoni's front door. He had no back door or somebody would have covered that too.

It took just ten days to clear the thing up. It was about 2 in the morning. I was watching, and the street was empty. Along came a man in a mackintosh and knocked at Leoni's door. The door opened instantly and the man went inside. In about half an hour he came out, looked up and down the street, and hurried in the direction of Broadway, toward the subway. He thought he had hidden his tracks, but I rode up to Harlem in the subway with him just the same.

He got off at 125th street. I followed him, and under the light of the ticket seller's window I saw his face.

"Martina," I said, and he turned—with a gun in his hand.

I hadn't taken any chances, and I had him covered. I called an officer and turned Martina over to him. Then as fast as a taxi could carry me I went downtown to detective headquarters, and from there to Leoni's in Elizabeth street.

We broke in the door, and Leoni jumped up with a gun in his hand. One of the plain clothes men twisted it away from him and dragged him out to where I was waiting.

"Good morning, Leoni," I said. "I just pinched your pal, Martina, and he confessed."

We had hard work keeping him from killing himself.

"That dog," he screamed. "That dog!"

Had Martina confessed? Oh, no; but before morning we had the whole story. Martina told on Leoni, and Leoni on Martina. They had framed up a Black Hand conspiracy that was a study in cunning. Leoni was to find out when any Italian banker had any money, and Martina was to go out and scare him. Leoni had made Martina write him the Black Hand letter so that he, Leoni, could appear as a victim of that society, thus lessening the possibility of suspicion that he was a member of it. But for that they might have been operating yet. As it was, they hadn't pulled off a single job. Martina had killed Cantino as a warning to other bankers. And I had caught the pair of them because Leoni foolishly had let me see a sample of Martina's handwriting.

The Federal authorities took Leoni off our hands. He is doing twenty years. The Wisconsin people gave Martina life in prison.

CUSTOM IS DEEPLY ROOTED

Easy to Understand Why Authorities Find It Hard to Put Down Head Hunting.

In an article in Harper's on her recent journey among the Dyaks of Borneo, Mary Blair Beebe tells the origin of the practice of head hunting—a practice which still prevails among these savage people despite our efforts to put it down.

"I was told later than a Dyak is quite mad for days after taking a head. I realized the infinite tact and wisdom with which the two white rajahs of Sarawak—Sir James and Sir Charles Brooke—have striven to abolish the practice of head hunting, the greatest passion of the Dyak, having its roots in his courtship and in his ideas of immortality and filial affection.

"A Dyak legend tells that 'the daughter of their great ancestor, who resides in heaven near the evening star, refused to marry until her betrothed brought her a gift worthy her acceptance. The man went into the jungle and killed a deer, which he presented to her, but the fair lady turned away in disdain. He went away and returned with a mias (orangutan), the great monkey who haunts the forests, but this present was not more to her taste. Then in a fit of despair the lover went abroad and killed the first man he met, and throwing the victim's head at her feet, exclaimed at the cruelty she had made him guilty of, but to his surprise she smiled and said that now he had discovered the only gift worthy of herself.' And to this day a Dyak girl will often refuse to marry a man who has not taken at least one head. Still more binding upon the Dyak is the obligation to furnish a fresh head to attend the spirit of any dead member of his family. The feathers of the hornbill—the insignia of war—have come to be worn only by one who has taken a head, and the large circle of mother-of-pearl which holds in place the feather war-coat is emblematic of immortality, since it is of this material that the spirit must construct the boat that is to take it into the next world."

Handsome Footwear in Russia.

All Russians have a weakness for handsome footwear, and the result is that there are more showy boots worn in the czar's empire than anywhere else on earth. This preference extends to the women as well as the men.

Setting the Problem.

"Do you or your wife rule?"

"Neither."

"Have you made an amicable agreement for mutual concessions?"

"Don't have anything to do about it. The cook's boss."

FAREWELL AT THE STATION

Have you ever been met by an old friend at a railroad station where one can stop only a few moments? I have. She comes down for a glimpse of me; good of her, too! We have not met for years, and it will be years before we can meet again. It is almost like those fatal last moments of life. I stand on the car platform and wave, and she dashes out of the crowd. "Oh, there you are! Well—how are you? Come over here where we can talk.—Why,—you're looking well—yes, I am, too, only I've been having a horrid time with the dentist." (Pause.) "Are you having a pleasant journey?—Yes, of course, those vestibule trains are always hideously close. I've been in a hot car, too.—I thought I'd never get here, the cars were blocked—you know they're tearing up the streets again—they always are." (Pause.) "How's Alice?—That's nice.—And how's Egbert?—Yes, you wrote me about his eyes. What a good looking hat you have! I hated to come down in this old thing, but my new one didn't come home—she promised, too—and I just had to see you.—Do look at those two over there! How can people do such things on a public platform, do you see? I'll move around so you can look.—Why, it isn't time yet, is it? Oh, dear! And we haven't really begun to talk. Well, stand on the step and then you won't get left.—Yes, I'll write. So glad to have seen you.—Going to be gone all winter?—Oh, yes. I remember, you wrote me. Well, good-bye, good-bye!"—February Atlantic.

KAISER LOSES SUIT

Lessee, of Royal Estate Refuses to Have a House Built For Him

The Supreme Court at Leipzig, Germany, decided against the Emperor in a singular suit brought by His Majesty against Herr Sohst, who is the lessee of an estate formerly part of the Imperial property at Cadinen. The Emperor desired to build a suitable dwelling house for Herr Sohst on the estate.

Herr Sohst had originally demanded such a house for himself, and plans for the erection of the building costing $7,000 were prepared. But no definite agreement was reached, and finally the Emperor brought an action against Herr Sohst, who changed his standpoint and asserted he had the right to claim the house, but was not obliged to permit the Emperor to build one against his will.

The Emperor contended that Herr Sohst must have a house and must render certain assistance towards the building of it. The first trial of the case was decided in favor of the Emperor, but the Court of Appeal pronounced in favor of Herr Sohst, who has now carried his point in the Supreme Court.

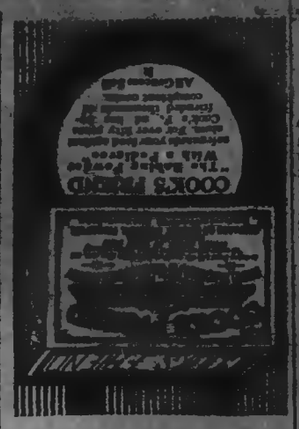
A HIGHLY PAID MAN

Only Kaiser Receives More Than Germany's Ambassador to London

Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, the new Ambassador of Germany at London, will receive a salary of $37,500 per year, which is a higher salary than is paid by the German Government outside of the compensation which the Kaiser receives. Baron Hans von Wagenheim, the German Minister at Athens, who has been raised to the rank of Ambassador, and who is going to Constantinople as Baron Marschall von Bieberstein's successor, was formerly the latter's right-hand man and Councillor of the Embassy in 1886. He was married to a daughter of Charles Ahrenfeldt, a German-American, at Paris, and was divorced in 1897 after a duel with Count Waldemar von Gyllenband, who divorced his wife a few months later. Baron von Wangenheim then married the Baroness Jeanna von Spitzenberg.

"Unsinkable Ship"

Captain A. C. Caines, of Swansea, Wales, has invented a safety vessel which he claims to be unsinkable. The model, which has taken him a year or more to construct, shows a kind of airtight belt round the hull of the craft. The belt, which brings out the hull in a curve, consists of a range of airtight compartments, along its whole length, and the inventor claims that if the ship was cut in two it could not sink.



TRIED TO EAT A WILL

Desperate Attempt of a Disappointed Cousin to Destroy Testament

A curious scene occurred in a lawyer's office at Castanet, near Toulouse, France. The lawyer was reading the will of a M. Sambres, a landowner who had died a few days before.

M. Sambres left nearly his whole estate to his widow, and this fact so infuriated a cousin named Vignardon that he suddenly jumped up, snatched the will from the lawyer's hands, tore it into fragments, and, cramming them into his mouth, tried to swallow them. He was seized by the throat and finally forced to disgorge the bits of paper, which were afterwards gummed together.

Vignardon was taken to the prison at Toulouse as the attempted destruction of a will is a very serious offence in France.

MOST EXTRAORDINARY ISLAND

White Island, which lies 30 miles to the north-east of New Zealand, is said to be the most extraordinary island in the world. The island is an enormous mass of rock, nearly three miles in circumference, rising 980 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds that are visible for nearly 100 miles. The island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small percentage of gypsum. In the interior is a lake fully 50 acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters, from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark clouds that envelop the island.

DO FISHES REMEMBER?

The fact that fishes will return time after time to bite at the hook by which they have been caught is often cited as proof that fish have no memories. But Yves Delage, the great French biologist, has been making some experiments which seem to prove the contrary. He says that fish return to bite the hook because their greediness is greater than the influence of their memory. If you place a bright red disk upon a hook the fishes will cease to take it after being caught seven or eight times. If you change the color of the disk the fish will return indefinitely. The red disk made an impression on the fish's memory—slowly, it is true—and when it recognised the danger signal it avoided it.

Oldest and Youngest Gaels

Mrs. Kitty Campbell, of Louth village, Ireland, who is 103 years of age, is the oldest Gaelic speaker in that country. She has a distinct recollection of the famous "Wild Goose Lodge" burning, which took place in 1817, within a few miles of her home. Her second eldest daughter, who is still living with her, is over seventy two. Her retention of the language is wonderful, as it has not been spoken in that district for over fifty or sixty years past. In the same village there is a six-year-old child who has already won several prizes in Irish singing and step-dancing.

Buckingham Palace Changes

The improvements in the interior arrangements of Buckingham Palace have been completed after two years of work.

The principal alterations have been a complete installation of the electric light throughout the buildings, even the famous chandeliers originally used for burning wax candles having been transformed into electroliers.

Passenger lifts for the use of Royalty and their visitors have also been erected in both the north and south wings.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the Court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner, "my lawyer took my last farthing."

The Man Who Gave All His Money Away

Dr. Daniel Kimball Pearsons, of Chicago, the man, who gave nearly $5,000,000 to education, and died practically penniless, was one of the most remarkable philanthropists of the age. His gifts were small in comparison with those of some other millionaires, but they were large in proportion to his means. They were veritably the "widow's mite," inasmuch as he gave all he had. His last days were spent in a sanitarium where he had lived for some years, having divested himself of all his fortune, and receiving $4,000 per annum by one of the colleges which he had founded. Out of this income Dr. Pearsons was able to save enough to continue his benefactions, and probably saved more than half of it in the course of a year. A few days before his death he celebrated his 92nd birthday, and to the newspaper men who interviewed him, he declared that he was perfectly happy, and that his only regret was that he hadn't been able to distribute $10,000,000 instead of $5,000,000. Dr. Pearsons' wife died in 1906. He had no children, and his immediate relatives are well-to-do. He felt that he could give away every dollar he owned without doing any wrong to those who had a better claim upon him, and in giving he found a delight that was not surpassed by the satisfaction of those to whom he gave.

The Alpine Eagle

Alpine eagles are not nearly as numerous as they used to be, and what number remain are to be protected by the Swiss Federal Government. It is stated that there are only four nesting places of the eagle still known to exist in the Alps. Watches have been told off to guard them and to repay the peasants in the valley for any damage the birds might do.

THE FIRST GREY HAIR SIGN OF AGE

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores grey hair to natural colour. The care of the hair, to prevent it from losing its colour and lustre, is just as important as to care for teeth to keep them from discolouring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion, and yet neglect your hair, when gray hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion? Of the two, it is easier to preserve the natural colour and beauty of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of common garden Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh hair, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After a few applications of this simple, harmless remedy, your hair will gradually be restored to its natural colour, in a short time the dandruff will be removed; and your hair will no longer come out but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it goes further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy this remedy at any drug store for fifty cents a bottle, and your druggist will give your money back if you are not satisfied after using. Purchase a bottle to-day. You will never regret it when you realize the difference it will make in your appearance.

Duke's Prizes for Gaelic

The Atholl family do a great deal to foster the Gaelic language, and for this purpose the Duke of Atholl offers annually valuable prizes. At the annual examination there was a large turnout of competitors from most of the districts on the Atholl estates. The examiners were the Rev. D. Lamont, of the parish church, and the Rev. H. MacCallum, of the United Free Church. Prizes were awarded to girls and boys after a pretty severe test in Gaelic reading, recitation, and translation.

"A Great Character"

When Wm. Burke, inmate of Loughlinstown Workhouse, was charged at Bray, Ireland, with drunkenness he pleaded leniency. "It's a pity," said he, "to see a man like myself behaving so. I've a great character." (Laughter.) "For sobriety?" ventured his worship. "Yes, sir," promptly replied the defendant, amid renewed laughter. He was dismissed with a nominal penalty.

WHO WAS "TOMMY ATKINS"

How the Soldiers of Great Britain's Army Came by the Name

Questions are sometimes asked as to the origin of the expression "Tommy" or "Tommy Atkins" as applied to a soldier in generic form. Mr. J. H. Leslie explains in Notes and Queries that its origin dates from the year 1815, when the "Soldier's Account Book" was called into use by a War Office circular letter of August 31, 1815. Sample forms of the book (for cavalry and infantry) accompanied the circular letter, and in every one of them the name "Thomas Atkins" is used as a specimen name. Atkins evidently could not write, as in the several places where this signature occurs it is given as "Thomas Atkins X his mark." This, Mr. Leslie adds, surely disproves that "Thomas Atkins" was suggested by the Duke of Wellington in 1843 as being the name of an especially brave soldier in his own regiment—the 33rd.

GOLD ALONG NEW LINE

Following a survey of the area along the T. & N. O. Railway trial line between Gowganda and Porcupine, the party of engineers submitted its report to the Ontario government. That the country is entirely unsuited to agricultural purposes, but may prove to be another Porcupine, may be inferred by the information given by the engineers.

The report says that the area is underlain by the oldest rocks, and small quartz veins occur in Keewatin schists in many parts. Veins of considerable size were struck, and gold was found in some of these. Their development was scarcely sufficient to determine whether gold was in paying quantities. "These rocks are receiving much attention on account of the Porcupine discoveries, and will probably repay careful prospecting," said the report. "The iron formation can scarcely be considered of economic importance."

A REAL NIAGARA IN TASMANIA

Power, to be Harnessed And Supply Energy to the Whole Colony

A big hydro-electric engineering scheme now being constructed in the middle of Tasmania will revolutionize the industrial life of that island. The area of Tasmania is little over 26,000 square miles, and its present population is 191,000. Tasmania has long been waiting for something to happen to it, and that something is about to happen now. Situated in the middle of the island, at an altitude of 3,400 feet, is the Great Lake, a storage reservoir provided by Nature herself. The area of this sheet of water is 41 square miles. The outlet of this lake is the river Shannon and at this outlet a new company is constructing a weir to regulate the flow. The water will then be diverted from the Shannon into a lagoon, from which steel pipes will be laid so as to create an effective fall of water for over 1,000 feet vertical. Nature's disposition in this region allows of the mechanical connivance of engineers in this manner both simply and cheaply. It is calculated that in the power-house to be erected at the foot of this fall electricity of the value of 85,000 horse power can be generated all the year round, sufficient to work the developing industries of the whole island. Hobart (the capital) in the south, and Launceston in the north will be supplied from it, and there will be ample power to work the important mineral fields of the west coast as well—the copper mines of Mount Lyell, the tin mines of Bischoff, and the silver mines of Zeehan.

FOR FIFTY YEARS THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

DR. RADWAY & CO., December 31, 1906
Dear Sirs—I write to let you know that I have used your remedies for the past forty (40) years. Have brought up a large family on them, and now my children (who are all married) use them, too. ENGLISH DANDIES.

Clothed and Perfumed Are These Splendid Creatures.

EXQUISITE IN THEIR ATTIRE.

The Varied Wardrobes of London's Twentieth Century Beaux Might Make Most Brides Blush For Their Trousseaux—Artificial Aids to Beauty.

More than a century has gone since the last of the Macaroni laid aside his coat of mixed silk, his pink satin waistcoat, white silk stockings with pink clocks and pink satin shoes with large paste buckles. The dandy of the twentieth century does not strut on red heeled shoes, with his gemmed cane dangling from his wrist, like the beau of the restoration, nor does he adorn his shirt bosom with fine muslin lace and leave a wake of perfume behind him as he swaggers along Pall Mall, like the "pretty fellow" of early Georgian days, says London Tit-Bits.

But, though he may cut a less resplendent figure than his predecessors in the world of dandyism, he is none the less a splendid creature, with a proper sense of his personal charms and their adornment.

His wardrobe is a thing for the ordinary man to quarrel at and in costliness and variety of fine raiment might make most brides blush for their trousseau. His shirts alone are a wonder in themselves in their stacked dozens, of the daintiest cambric and many hued as Joseph's coat—shirts of pink daintily patterned with white flowers, blue shirts, bag shirts, of olive green and, most beloved of all, of dark purple.

His handkerchiefs are of the most fragile and fine cambric, each bearing his cipher embroidered in the corner in exquisite stitchery or inlet in the form of guipure lace. His tie pins dazzle the eye with their pearls of pink and purple and black, each a flawless and costly gem. His vest buttons for evening wear, with studs and cuff links to match, are marvels of enamels, garnets or mother-of-pearl enshrining rare jewels.

He has watches for all times and seasons of wear—one for evening, another for town wear in the daytime, a third for shooting, a fourth for hunting, and so on. And his hats and suits in their infinite variety for every conceivable occasion would make many a lady of society green with envy.

And what shall we say of his corsets, which dower his figure with an elegant waist, or, if he is no longer young, of his array of wigs and toupees, eyebrows and eyelashes, which give to sixty or seventy the facial comeliness of the twenties.

He wears few jewels, but he has caskets full of them at home which would not shame a society belle at the height of her career of conquest. And he is a greater connoisseur of delicate perfumes than the dandy of Queen Anne's day, who before he promenaded in the park deluged himself from flowing peruke to gold clocked stockings, with musk, civet or orange flower.

Our modern dandy, however, is more discriminating and less prodigal. He affects sachets, carries a tiny phial of his favorite perfume in his waistcoat pocket and with a silver sprinkler sprays his lingerie before he puts it on.

Nor, we may be sure, is he any less careful of the beauty of face and hands. In his dressing room you will find such an array of toilet lotions and cosmetics as would excite envy in many a female breast. Nor is he by any means content with such home treatment as pomades and creams and toilet waters placed at his disposal. He has his own face specialist, to whom he pays periodical visits at so many guineas a time, for steaming, massaging and other mysterious processes for restoring the smooth texture and the complexion of youth.

If he has a tendency to baldness and the usual lotions fail to stimulate growth or if he is troubled by hair in undesirable places he has recourse to the beauty doctor, who, for a substantial fee, will remove the latter or induce a luxuriant growth of the former with the aid of electricity. The electric spark will equally remove any pimples with which too generous living has disfigured his face and (if massage fails) the wrinkles with which envious time threatens his youthfulness.

Our dandy must, of course, pay regular visits to his manicurist at a guinea or more a visit, for he may be prouder of his delicate hands and filbert nails than any debutante of her cream and roses. He must also devote part of every day to physical exercise under expert guidance in order to keep his too solid flesh in decorous subjection and to retain the supple and elegant figure of his younger days.

If he pours a few shillings' worth of perfume into his morning bath, who shall find fault with such an effeminate extravagance? He can well afford it, and, at any rate, cleanliness is a virtue we cannot cavil at. And if he crowns all this costly care of his precious person with an annual month at some foreign spa—well, he probably needs all the help he can get from it in order to keep his place in the ranks of masculine beauty.

Got Off Easy.

"The audience doesn't treat me right," growled the bad actor.

"No," replied the local manager. "I never knew it to be so tolerant."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Consolation.

"They say she is devoted to her husband and baby."

"Yes, poor thing! She hasn't taken a prize at a beach show for three years!"—Puck.

Bad men excuse their faults. Good men leave them.—Ben Jonson.

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

If There Is the Bright Side Sometimes We Use the Dark Side.

A gentleman remarked to us that the true theory of life was to get on the optimistic side and not on the cynical and disparatory side of life. We believe that is sensible, says the Ohio State Journal. "Look on the bright side and if there is no bright side burrow up the dark side" is a little gem of advice that we put in our notebook more than a score of years ago. It is good counsel. It is the doctrine of hope. Considering at everything in un-Christian. It will condemn a man as sure as profanity or lying.

The Bible says, "But let all those that put their trust in them rejoice." There is philosophy for this. A person cannot do any good in a bad spirit. If one hates a man he cannot reform him. Every good thing that a man does pulls some evil up by the roots. Good deeds grow by smiles as the wheat grows by the sunshine. Boost the good and the bad will have a poor chance.

It is right to curb the evil if one does not waste all his strength at it, so that he will have to sit down and lose heart. There is no final defeat in an honest, sincere effort, and that is the doctrine of the upward look and the bright side of life.

SHOE ODDITIES.

Two Pairs Are Sometimes Broken to Oblige Finicky Customers.

When a one legged man buys a shoe the dealer sends to the factory for a shoe to match the one left remaining. In these days of the use of machinery in every process of their manufacture shoes are made with the utmost exactness and precision, and it is easily possible to mate that remaining shoe with the greatest nicety in size, style, material and finish.

Few people have feet exactly alike. Commonly the left foot is larger than the right, so that one shoe may fit a little more snugly than the other. Commonly, however, people buy shoes in regularly matched pairs, the difference in their feet, if it is noticeable to them at all, not being enough to make any other course desirable.

But there are people who buy shoes of different sizes or widths, in which case the dealer breaks two pairs for them, giving them, to fit their feet, one shoe from each. In such cases the dealer matches up the two remaining shoes, one from each of two pairs, just as he would where he had broken one pair to sell one shoe to a one legged man.

Halcyon Days.

The seven days preceding and the seven days following the winter solstice were called by the ancients "halcyon days." This phrase is derived from a fable which sets forth that Halcyone, a princess who grieved so deeply for the loss at sea of her spouse, was sent thither in fairy in the form of a halcyon bird or kingfisher. According to the legend, the halcyon bird had during the time of breeding the power of lulling the waves, and it was believed at this time the sea was always calm and might be navigated in perfect security. Experience, of course, dispelled this fable; but, like many another old world story, it has left behind it a distorted meaning. In this case the connection between the old and the new significance is clear, for the term, once expressive of peace and calm upon the waters, is equally expressive of tranquillity upon the sea of life.

The Lump Fish.

Did you ever hear of the lump fish? Well, it's a peculiar species found in salt water. This strange fish possesses a sucker formed by two ventral fins, which are so shaped that when the fish reclines on a rock the fins act as suckers and hold it firmly. As soon as the eggs are deposited in shallow pits between stones, the female feeling that she has done her part, deserts them and the male at once assumes charge and guards the eggs until they hatch out and then the young until they are able to take care of themselves. In moving round he is closely followed by the numerous family which has given rise to the term "hen and chickens." At times they attach themselves to the sides of their parent by their sucking disks, thus presenting a singular appearance.

Elasticity of Conscience.

In the majority of cases conscience is an elastic and very flexible article, which will bear a deal of stretching and adapt itself to a great variety of circumstances. Some people, by prudent management and leaving it off piece by piece, like a flannel waistcoat in warm weather, even contrive in time to dispense with it altogether, but there be others who can assume the garment and throw it off at pleasure, and this, being the greatest and most convenient improvement, is the one most in vogue.—From Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop."

His Paying Powers.

Old Gotrox—I don't think much of that young Dudeleigh who poses as a parlor ornament around here occasionally. Pretty Daughter—Why, pa, he pays me the loveliest compliments. Old Gotrox—Yes, and that's all he was ever known to pay, so far as I can learn.—Exchange.

German Gleanings.

Berlin employs more than 100 storage battery driven electrical machines literally to scrub its well kept streets.

A Berlin newspaper's latest circulation scheme is the engagement of two physicians to attend gratuitously its yearly subscribers.

Two new flag officers are added to the German navy by the program of 1912, bringing the total to forty, which is made up of one grand admiral, five admirals, fourteen vice admirals and twenty rear admirals.

Heating a Home Properly is Something More Than Raising the Temperature. The air must be pure as well as warm. The health of your family demands it. An odor of gas is not only unpleasant but is a menace to the health. Fine coal dust floating in the air is just as bad.

¶ The HECLA Furnace is absolutely gas and dust proof. The Joints, which in other Furnaces are made with bolts and cement, are fused in the HECLA. This process welds the cast-iron and steel into a solid one-piece construction.

¶ Expansion and contraction cannot spread the fused joint. Even after 20 years of service, the joints in the HECLA will be found perfectly tight. The fumes from the fire cannot find an opening. The air in the living rooms is always pure and healthful.

HECLA FURNACE

Ribbed Fire-Pot

Saves one ton in Seven

This healthful heating costs less than ordinary warm air heating. The fire-pot of the HECLA is steel ribbed to radiate the heat rapidly. This, by actual test, makes a saving of 13⅓%, or one ton of coal in seven.

A Back Yard Garden.

Once more I take my trusty spade
And work begin.
I'll have to have a subsoil made
Of battered tin.

I'll mash a lot of rusty pans
Into a mass,
Top dress the same with empty cans
And broken glass.

Some ashes on the beds I'll dump
From time to time,
With now and then a handy lump
Of builder's lime.

And soon I'll have a garden fine
In my back yard
And sit beneath a spreading vine,
A happy bard.

Modern Beauty.

A young man the other day said to his best girl:

"I visited that fashionable Fifth avenue palmist this afternoon, and he told me I'd marry a blond."

The girl, who was very dark, said thoughtfully, "Did he say when the marriage would take place?"

"Yes; in three months."

"Well, I can easily be a blond by that time, dear," said the girl, with a shy smile.—Washington Star.

On Buying a Spring Suit.

Mistress Fancy, if you may
Picture me some April day
Promenading up and down
Yon and crossways through the town
In an ultra English suit
Loud enough perhaps to toot!

You refuse? Ah, well you know
How my tastes in suitings go.
I shall paw them over—all,
Checks and stripes both great and small,
Only to essay my splurge
Finally in the same old serge!

REPORTS GRATIFYING.

Year's Work In National Council of Women Has Been Good.

London, May 27.—Saturday's sessions of the National Council of Women were taken up with the reports of officers.

The report of the national secretary, Mrs. Cummings, contained a summary of work of the year. The encouragement given by the press and that of prominent men and women was acknowledged. It was hoped that a campaign would soon be begun for the purpose of establishing new councils wherever possible.

The announcement was made that Lady Taylor and Mrs. Boomer had been appointed international vice-presidents at the international council meeting in Sweden. The photo of the Countess Grey had been received by the council, together with the request to keep her posted in its work.

Among the matters laid before Parliament through the council were the question of universal penny postage, a request before the Minister of the Interior for the appointment of matrons on the Indian reserves for the purpose of teaching the Indian women the principles of sanitation and hygiene and other household arts.

The council had also joined the associated charities of Winnipeg and Toronto in a petition to the Minister of Justice for certain changes in the law regarding wife desertion and non-support and had joined the social and moral council in a petition for several needed changes in the criminal code. In every instance the Government promised earnest consideration.

The treasurer's report showing a balance of $1,356.72 was received with enthusiasm followed by a motion made to make Miss H. M. Hill, to whose efforts the balance was due, a life member of the council. The motion was carried.

HAS ALTERED ITS COURSE

Current of Arctic Stream Has Changed—Played a Part in Titanic's Sinking

CAPT. SMITH WAS MISLED

Halifax, N.S., May 27.—Captain P. C. Johnson, Dominion Government inspector of lighthouses, who was in charge of the expedition sent out on the Government steamer Montmagny in search of Titanic bodies, reports a remarkable discovery made at the scene of the Titanic wreck, which he believes accounts for the disaster.

This is a change in the Arctic current, which thereby formed a great pocket of cold water within the usual course of the gulf stream. This change was not known to Captain Smith and, Captain Johnson says, explains why he did not avoid ice of which he was warned. The apex of the cold water pocket, where warm water ordinarily is, was, he found, at latitude 41 n., longitude 50 w.

Captain Johnson, who had the charts before him as he spoke of the discovery, said:

"After making a careful examination of the currents, I am convinced that Captain Smith after receiving warning of the ice took precautions which ordinarily would have saved the ship, but that from this unusual phenomenon she was lost.

"The Arctic current from some unaccountable reason, possibly prevailing winds in the vicinity of the Titanic, was driven into the gulf stream for at least a hundred miles.

"In crossing into this cold water from the gulf stream Captain Smith would get a temperature of sixty at the stern and forty-eight at the bow of his ship. I believe from my observations that this pocket of cold water forced into the gulf stream by the Arctic current is responsible for Captain Smith allowing his ship to strike the iceberg. Instead of following westward on the steamship lane which is used unless there is some great reason for doing otherwise, he changed his course when he received the ice warnings, going to the south and at the time of the accident was thirty miles south of the usual track."

Captain Johnson is confident that it was this remarkable and unusual contact between the Arctic current and the gulf stream that is responsible for the accident.

U. S. FORCES PREPARING

Fleet And Army Ready to be Rushed to Cuba—Negroes Attack Plantations

U. S. WARNED OFF

Havana, May 27.—President Gomez yesterday sent a cablegram to President Taft, in which he protests in friendly but firm terms, against intervention by the United States.

"It is my duty to say that so serious a resolution alarms and hurts the feelings of a people who love and are jealous of their independence," he says, after reciting that he had received from U. S. Minister Beaupre, a note informing him that the Washington Government had ordered a gunboat to Nipe Bay, and a strong naval concentration at Key West, in anticipation of possible eventualities, and also, in the event that the Cuban Government was unable to protect American property, it was the intention to land forces for that purpose.

President Gomez says the Government is doing its utmost, having within four days sent 3,000 troops by land and sea to crush the rebels in Oriente and, in that short time, having restored order in all parts of the island with that exception. He also says that 9,000 rifles with ammunition, have been distributed to loyal citizens, and that the Government is prepared to flood the comparatively small disturbed section with regulars and volunteers.

"I appeal to you," he continues, "as a loyal friend of Cuba, respecting her rights, that you will be convinced that this Government is capable and sufficiently supported by the valor and patriotism of the Cuban people to deal promptly with a few unfortunate and misguided persons without reason or flag.

"If you understand these conditions, you will perceive that it is not the part of a friendly Government to contribute, under such circumstances, to the embarrassment of a Government and people such as those of Cuba, placed, it deserves, in unfortunate conditions, but not lacking in methods, patriotism and courage."

Up to a late hour last night President Gomez had received no reply to this message.

Preparing for Eventualities.

Washington, May 27.—Private despatches to the State Department during Friday night, all agreed that the negro revolutionary movement in Cuba was hourly growing more serious.

The Washington Government, it can be stated, is preparing for eventualities, but will wait another day or two before sending any more marines or troops to the island. The Cuban Government will be given adequate time to demonstrate its ability or inability to clear out at least a part of the revolution before the American forces now en route to Guantanamo are augmented.

The plans for increasing the armed forces of the United States in Cuba, it is carefully pointed out here, do not contemplate intervention. The troops would be used merely as a protective force.

Negroes Attack Plantations.

Santiago, Cuba, May 27.—A strong band of armed and mounted negroes Saturday morning attacked the plantation of Si Silo, about 15 miles from this city and carried off all the horses, provisions, etc.

The Government is despatching troops from here to Guantanamo. Steamers have been chartered for the purpose, on account of the complete interruption of the railroad.

Recruiting Being Rushed.

Havana, May 27.—Recruiting has continued throughout the morning with increased rapidity. It is noticeable that very few negroes are offering to enlist.

A column of volunteer veterans is about to depart for the Province of Oriento under the command of Gen. Emilio Nunes, president of the Veterans' Association, and it will probably number 1,000 men, who, however, will be materially strengthened by recruits on the way.

Secretary of the Interior Laredo Bru declared that the Government fully expected soon to receive most favorable reports from the front.

N. B. Elections Soon.

Fredericton, N.B., May 27.—The meeting of the Provincial Government closed Friday night about midnight, and Premier Fleming and most of the members of the Government left for their homes.

While nothing has been officially stated as yet, it would not be a surprise if announcement was made soon of the dissolution of the Legislature, and the calling of the elections for a date in the not distant future. June is the date suggested.

In fact, it is understood that the necessary machinery is now in operation for bringing on the elections, and that within practically a few hours the writs will be forwarded to the sheriffs all over the province. The Premier, when leaving here Saturday for his home in Hartland, declined to discuss the matter further than to say that he might have something to say within a day or two.

Brantford, May 27.—Announcement has been made here that bonds of the Lake Erie and Northern Railway Co. to the amount of $1,100,000 have been sold in Montreal on condition that $500,000 of the debenture stock is subscribed. Of this amount the directors of the company, Lloyd Harris, Henry Cockshutt, J. Muir, R. Thompson and J. A. Sanderson, have subscribed $275,000 and the municipalities which will be benefited by the line to Port Dover will be asked to subscribe the balance, Brantford's share being $125,000, and Port Dover, Simcoe, Galt and Paris $25,000 each.

Bylaws will be submitted in all of these places on the issue. Officials state that the success of the enterprise is assured. The new road will be an electric traction line.

WOULD AMEND IRISH BILL

Suggested Alterations Fill Twenty-eight Pages of Typewritten Matter

NOT ALL TO BE HEARD

London, May 27.—There have already been handed to the clerk of the House of Commons amendments to the home rule bill that fill 28 closely printed pages of the Parliamentary orders of the day. Most of them are in the names of Conservative members, and it would not take the passage of many of them to make the bill as useless as the paper it is printed on. The extreme radical members, on the other hand, aim at giving the Irish Parliament more power and making it more democratic, while some of their nonconformist colleagues would have clauses inserted to safeguard their fellow religionists of Ulster.

With the exception of Laurence Ginnell, a Nationalist with independent leanings, the Irish members have not yet tabled any amendments. Mr. Ginnell's amendments would enlarge the powers of the Irish Parliament, and, like those of the Radicals, make it more democratic.

While months will be spent on the committee stage of the bill, few of the amendments will receive a hearing. The chairman of the committee has the power to choose the amendments that will be considered, his decision being made generally after consulting with the leaders of all parties. Were all those already handed in discussed it would take more than one session of Parliament to dispose of them.

Judge Price of Kingston yesterday quietly celebrated the 35th anniversary of his ascension to the bench, of which he is the oldest occupant in point of service in the country.

An echo of the Quebec elections was heard Saturday in the police court when L. E. Benet of Beauport was ordered to pay a small fine for threatening a voter with a revolver on election day.

Queen Mary's birthday was celebrated quietly at Buckingham Palace yesterday, the only members of the royal family with the King and Queen being Princess Mary and little Prince John, the other sons being away.

Municipal ownership of utilities is proving a success in Edmonton. The city hall announces a surplus of $57,000, and the electric light department $5,000, telephone and street railway are also now showing good profit.

The Delaware and Hudson Montreal express train ran for nearly ten miles at full speed yesterday with the engineer, Daniel Ryan, unconscious in the cab. It is thought that Ryan struck his head against the side of a bridge spanning the barge canal at Waterford, N.Y. He died later.

Verdict For $20,000.

Kingston, May 27.—Mrs. Nellie Middleton, New York, visiting the city, the old home of her husband, the late Lewis Middleton, has been notified that the jury before Supreme Court Justice Gaveqan, has returned a verdict of $20,000 in a suit brought by Mrs. Middleton against the Third Avenue Railway Co., for the death of her husband. The street railway counsel regarded the plaintiff's case as weak that no defence was put in, and the verdict was a great surprise.

Middleton was a passenger on the car and was taken ill. The conductor thought he was drunk, but as he was of respectable appearance did not remove him, and plaintiff claimed negligence. The deceased suffered from apoplexy, and died next day. He was a brother of Miss Kate Middleton, who died a few days ago in Toronto.

Mill Falls Into River.

Milwood, Man., May 27.—The Cartwright flour mill, valued at $20,000, and just bought last week by the Big Four Milling Co. of Sheldon, Iowa, is a total wreck and its ruins are floating down the Assiniboine River as a result of the washout in the dam. The only thing left of the big mill property is a small power house on the dam and the elevator that stood east of the mill.

Three or four days ago the river started to overflow between the power house and mill. No one had arrived representing the new owners. At 8 o'clock Friday evening water began to undermine the mill in torrents, tearing away all the foundations, and at six o'clock Saturday morning the five-storey structure with its entire contents toppled over into the river, taking with it a two-storey brick building containing a boiler, engine and pump.

Rebels Destroy Bridges.

Bellano, Mexico, (At Gen. Hearts's Headquarters, Federal Troops), May 27.—Confronted once more by a series of burned railroad bridges, Gen. Huerta set his engineers at work Saturday to repair them, at the same time ordering a division of cavalry to pursue the rebels who fled northward after the battle here two days ago.

Every bridge between Bellano and Corralitos is destroyed and the rebels, continuing their flight to Jiminez, destroyed most of the railroad behind them.

Gen. Huerta Friday night said his men had found 300 rebels dead and wounded on the field. He estimated that of the 8,000 men under Gen. Orozco, 2,000 had deserted during the fight.

The federal commander said he took 200 prisoners. His own losses, he asserted, were only ten dead and thirty-eight wounded.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

HIGH STANDARD OF DIVINE JUSTICE

Two Pentecosts—One for the Church, the Other for the World.

Chicago, May 26.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here to-day. We report one of his addresses, on "Pentecostal Blessings," from the text, "The grace of God which bringeth salvation hath appeared for all men." (Titus ii, 11.) He said in part:

As Bible students we find it more and more necessary to study the Scriptures discriminatingly. Righteousness and Justice represent the Divine Law, the Law of the Universe. On the other hand, such words as Mercy and Grace recognise man's fall from righteousness and tell us of the Divine sympathetic provision being exercised toward mankind with a view to their deliverance from their unrighteous condition—the opening of a way for their return to perfection and harmony with God, and to eternal life privileges of righteousness.

Every suggestion and arrangement looking toward Divine mercy is Scripturally associated with our Lord Jesus—the world's Redeemer. His death provides the ransom-price for Adam and his race, while His Messianic Kingdom is provided as the means or channel by and through which the willing and obedient of the redeemed will be brought back to perfection and made able again to fulfill the requirements of Justice and enjoy its blessings.

Hence we find the Scriptures continually setting before us the high standard of Divine Justice, and also setting before us the fact that Divine Love has provided mercy for the sinner through the efficacy of the Redeemer's work. For centuries God exhibited the principles of Divine Justice, not only of his Law which He gave to Israel—the measure of a perfect man's ability—but also in the fact that Christ died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring us back into harmony with God and His righteousness.

Hitherto, however, God's people have unwittingly narrowed down the grace of God and minimised the work of Christ and the efficacy of His redemptive sacrifice by asserting that all of the blessings are for the Church and none for the world—that they are for the present Age, and that with its consummation all hope will expire, and the world, the non-elect, will suffer to all eternity without ever having tasted of the grace of God in Christ—without ever having come to even a knowledge of that provision for sinners.

A more careful study of the Bible is revealing to God's people all over the world the fact that He has for mankind two distinct salvations—one for the Church and the other for the world—and each of these salvations is introduced by a Pentecostal blessing. That the Church is merely a first-fruits unto God of His creatures is distinctly stated by St. James (i, 18), and this certainly implies that there will be after-fruits—the world in general.

Note the Apostle's statement respecting the meritorious value, the efficacy of Christ's sacrifice, both for the Church and for the world; he says: "He is a Propitiation for our sins (the Church), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (I. John ii, 2.) The Church is the elect "first-fruits," or as St. Paul declares, "The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven." Through this elect Church eventually the blessing of God is to be extended to all the willing and obedient of the non-elect.

This does not mean that all mankind will attain salvation, everlasting life, but it does mean that to all will come the opportunity for escape from the curse of sin and death which came upon all through Father Adam's sin. Neither does it signify that all who gain life will gain the same kind of salvation—that all will gain everlasting life on the same plane of glory. Quite to the contrary. The fact that the elect Church is called and tested in advance of the world implies that her salvation will be on a higher plane than that of the world, and this the Apostle clearly states when he assures us, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

The change of nature from earthly to heavenly, from the human to the divine, is a part of the superior blessing provided by the Lord for those who now walk by faith in the footsteps of the Redeemer. The blessings to the world, on the other hand, will not include a change of nature, but a restitution or restoration of the willing and obedient to human perfection, such as Adam enjoyed before he sinned, before he came under the curse. Restitution, therefore, is synonymous with the blotting out of the curse.

There can be no dispute respecting the Church's Pentecost, that it began on the fiftieth day after our Lord's resurrection—ten days after He ascended up on high, there to appear in the presence of God—as the Church's Advocate. But just what that Pentecostal blessing meant to the Church is perhaps not clearly seen by all—all who have experienced a share in its blessings. It marks the Divine acceptance of the Church—the Divine grace which acknowledged the merit of the Saviour as applied on her behalf, and acknowledged the Divine acceptance of the Church as a faithful band consecrated to walk in Jesus' footsteps.

There has been no need of a repetition of this Pentecostal blessing. It came at the beginning of the Church's experience, and represents God's acceptance of the entire foreordained company, for all of whom Jesus appeared as Advocate. Those blessed with that outpouring of the Holy Spirit had already accepted Jesus as their Redeemer, and had already consecrated their lives to be His footstep followers. All of the same class who have lived since—all who will eventually constitute the elect Church, were appeared for by Jesus at the same time. Hence we are not to expect fresh Pentecosts upon the Church, but merely to expect to enter into and enjoy our share of the one outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which, like the oil poured upon Aaron's head and which ran down to the skirts of his garment, will anoint us, the Church, down to the "feet," to the very last member of the Church.

Many of us had not noticed until recently that two Pentecostal blessings are mentioned by the Prophet. Our overlooking this was doubtless because it was not due time for it to be clearly understood. Now, as the time nears for the fulfilment of the second Pentecostal blessing, the force and meaning of the Scripture shines out. Another reason for its being overlooked is that by Divine arrangement the world's Pentecost was mentioned first, and that of the Church last. But even this is appropriate, because the Divine intention was primarily the world's salvation, and that of the Church comes incidentally. "God so love the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believed in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." But before making known the riches of His grace to the world, God has been pleased to foreordain the election of the Church, to be joint-heirs with Jesus in the glorious work of blessing earth's teeming millions.

"It shall come to pass, saith the Lord, at the end of those days, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh . . . and in those days I will pour out My Spirit upon My servants and upon My handmaidens."—Joel ii, 28, 29; Acts ii, 17.

St. Peter, in quoting the prophecy, properly applied only the portion which was due in his day, namely, that portion applicable to the servants and handmaidens of the Lord—the Church class. He left without comment the major portion of the promise, which relates to the world, and which cannot have fulfilment until the elect Church shall have been completed and glorified. The two features of the prophecy are distinctly marked, the one blessing to be upon God's servants and handmaidens only, the other to be upon all flesh. The one was to be "in those days," the other, "after those days."

How strange that this was previously overlooked, you say? We reply, It is not more strange than that the Jews and the Apostles themselves overlooked many statements of prophecy which indicated the ending of Jewish favor and the beginning of a glorious opportunity of joint-hairship with Christ to the Gentiles. That part of the prophecy was discerned only when the due time came, and so this feature of Joel's prophecy pertaining to the blessing of the world and the outpouring of God's Spirit upon them passed unnoticed until now, as the time nears for its fulfilment.

There can be no question that the Holy Spirit of God has not yet come upon all flesh, nor can it be questioned that it has come during this Age upon God's servants and handmaidens. The promise therefore is amongst the blessings that are to be accomplished after these days—after the the completion of the Church and her glorification.

The day of Pentecost was the grand Jubilee Day in which God's blessing was attained marking the forgiveness of sin and the acceptance by the heavenly Father. It was the 50th day (7 x 7 plus 1). Every Jewish Sabbath pointed directly to this Jubilee Day as the culmination of the Sabbath day system. It was thus the antitype toward which all Sabbath days pointed. The word "Sabbath," as is well known, signifies rest, and this culmination of the Sabbath days in a fiftieth day signified the ultimate or completeness of rest. Thus was symbolically taught in the Law the fact that full rest from sin and the Law was to be attained.

On Pentecost Day the living believers of that time entered into rest in a sense and degree never before enjoyed or even understood. The Pentecostal blessings of the Holy Spirit brought to them the full assurance of sins forgiven, through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and it also brought to them proof of their acceptance by the heavenly Father, as children of God, and "if children, then heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord." In this sense of the word Pentecost was the most notable day of the grace of God for the Church. And God's servants and handmaidens ever since, upon taking the steps required, have been admitted to this grace of forgiveness and adoption.

But it will be remembered that in the Law given to Israel there was not only a seven-day series of Sabbaths, but also a seven-year series of Sabbaths. Each seventh year was to be a Sabbath year, leading up to a Jubilee (7 x 7 plus 1), the fiftieth. As the day Sabbath reached a glorious culmination for the Church, so the year Sabbath will reach a glorious climax for the world. The fiftieth year was the Jubilee Year, in which the people obtained rest in a very full and complete sense. In that year all debts were canceled, and all who had been sold into slavery for debt went free. The whole people had a fresh start every Jubilee Year; they had rest from all their past errors and imperfections of conduct and judgment.

This pictured the coming blessings—the Day of Messiah—when He shall reign and when through the merit of His sacrifice all sin will be forgiven and all slavery to sin and death will be abolished. This is not a new thought. Long centuries ago Bible students discerned that the Jubilee of Israel's time was a feature of the Law foreshadowing a blessing world-wide. It was in the spirit of this knowledge that this beautiful hymn was written:

"Blow ye the trumpet, blow
The gladly solemn sound;
Let all the nations know,
To earth's remotest bound:
The Year of Jubilee has come,
Returning ransomed sinners home.

"Ye who were sold for naught,
Whose heritage was lost,
May have it back unbought,
A gift at Jesus' cost:
The Year of Jubilee is come,
Returning ransomed sinners home."

As the Church has been, for more than eighteen centuries, enjoying the blessings and privileges typified by the fiftieth, or Jubilee Day, so the world for a thousand years will enjoy the blessings and privileges typified by the Jubilee Year. But let us not be misunderstood; the Millennial blessings will not be forced upon all men. Rather they will be exhibited to all, and the eyes of the blind of the world will be opened and all will thus be privileged to know of, to appreciate and to enter into the enjoyment of the Jubilee blessings. But those desiring to share in the world's Pentecostal blessings will be required to take the necessary steps to attain them; but with the clear knowledge then granted the Bible declares that those steps will be.

Note the correspondency between the coming of the Pentecostal blessings to the Church and the world's attainment of its Pentecostal blessings. God did not pour out His Holy Spirit upon His servants and handmaidens all at once, but gradually throughout this Age. And each individual, in order to obtain his share in this Pentecostal blessing, has been obliged to take very definite steps of consecration, vows of obedience and loyalty. Just so the pouring out of the Divine blessing upon all flesh during the thousand years of Christ's reign will be gradual.

In order for the children of men to obtain that great blessing, it will be necessary for them first of all, to recognise the Redeemer, the Saviour, the great King of that time. Moreover, it will be necessary to fully surrender themselves to Him, and to come under the terms of His blessings. Only such will be fully liberated and be received of God as children upon the human plane. Thus it is written, "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son shall not see life."

The work of setting the world free from sin and death will be a gradual one. Collectively it will be gradual, because the resurrection of the dead is to be a gradual work; as the Apostle declares, all will come forth, but "every man in his own order." (I. Corinthians xv, 23.) It will be a gradual work because, although the Messianic Kingdom first offers satisfaction to Justice for all, at the very beginning of the Kingdom, nevertheless release will be granted only in proportion as loyalty is demonstrated to the principles of righteousness and truth.

Nevertheless their full attainment of the Heavenly benediction—their full acceptance of life eternal — will not come to them until the close of the thousand years. Then, after having been lifted up to perfection by the great Mediatorial King and Messiah, after having been taught of Him, after having enjoyed the full privilege secured by His Ransom sacrifice, they will still be required to stand a further test before receiving a Divine pronouncement respecting their worthiness of eternal life as sons in the flesh.

That testing is pictured to us in Revelation 20, in the statement that "Satan shall be loosed for a little season" at the end of the thousand years, that the loyalty or disloyalty of heart of all the human family then brought back to human perfection may be tried, tested, proved, demonstrated. Such as shall prove themselves loyal to God at heart will stand in that hour of temptation, and all who prove disloyal will be but showing that if they had opportunity they would resume the life of sin and disloyalty to God; and such—we know not the proportion—will be destroyed in the Second Death.

The testings of the faithful, both in this age and in the next, are designed of the Lord to be so crucial, to so thoroughly demonstrate the thoughts and intents of the heart, that Divine Wisdom is able to guarantee that those who will pass these tests will be forever loyal. Hence the prediction of the Scriptures respecting the eternal future—that there shall be no more dying, no more crying, no more sighing, because all the former things of sin and death will have passed away. Then every creature in heaven and on earth will loyally acclaim honor to Him that sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb, forever.

Convincing.

The late Wilhelm Jordan used to be very much annoyed because of the constant tearing up of the streets in Frankfurt. One day he said to one of the men at work, "Why are you digging up the pavement again?" "Because a new water pipe is to be put in." "But the old one was still good." "So was the old Nibelungenlied, yet you wrote a new one, herr doctor," retorted the laborer, with a laugh, in which Jordan joined.

The First Thimble.

There is a tradition that a Dutch silversmith pondered over a certain notion which he had cherished long and silently in the slow working senses which he deemed his brain—a notion for a trinket, a fallal, for a dignified lady of Holland. It must be a useful trinket, albeit a costly one, meet for so good a sempstress as Dame Alixe Van Rensselaer. When the notion took definite shape, the thing was quickly wrought in precious metal by fingers as deft as the brain was slow, and the industrious housewife proudly wore not only her first thimble, but the first thimble possessed by any Dutch frau.

The Worm Turned.

"William," said Mrs. Peckem sternly, "did you ever stop to think that some one might steal me when you were away?"

"Well," responded the poor husband with a faraway look, "I was a little alarmed when a horse thief was prowling through these parts last week."

Mrs. Peckem stiffened up haughtily. "A horse thief, eh?"

"Yes. I heard that he carried off two or three nags from this district."

And then Peckem made a bee line for the club.

The Thrifty Dutch.

The thrift of the Dutch has brought to Holland a fame of wealth that is richly deserved. Yet in spite of the wealth, taken as a whole, the Netherlands do not contain many great fortunes as fortunes are gauged in Canada. A feature of Dutch business is the number of small establishment or the great corporations in which shares are held by many people. Much of the money which the countries lends abroad is the savings of the masses.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

Summer cooking with comfort

NO need to stew your life out over a coal range during the hot weather. Gas is a much cheaper cooking fuel than coal, and far more convenient in the summer time. Why fatigue yourself and make the house uncomfortable for the whole family when you can save money by cooking with gas. Any "McClary" Gas Range will pay for itself in a very short time by the actual cash it saves, not to say anything about its handiness.

The Model shown in the cut is a handsome Gas Range — "McClary's" 1912 Model—and considered the biggest range value on the market. You will see at a glance that the convenience and comfort of the housekeeper has been considered by the designers and makers. The Ovens are elevated—just conveniently high—so that there is no "stooping or bending" when cooking with this range.

This Model like other McClary Ranges has the bright black enamel finish—white enamelled broiler and drip pan—Ovens just the right size with proper flue construction. Also Anti-Rust linings and plain smooth nickelled finish.

Better see the McClary dealer and ask him to tell you the reasons why you should buy a McClary gas range. He will explain the exclusive features of the range suitable for your kitchen without placing you under any obligation to buy. All we want you to do is to make perfectly certain that the Gas Range you buy will pay for itself very quickly. 505

CURIOUS USES FOR PAPER.

Some of Them Are Bullets and Boats, Houses and Even Stoves.

Paper can be made from nearly anything, and nearly anything can be made from paper.

With compressed paper are made wheels, rails, cannon, horseshoes, polishers for gems, bicycles and asphalted tubes for gas or electric wires.

With wood pulp and zinc sulphate there has been an attempt in Berlin to make artificial bricks for paving. After subjecting them to a pressure of 2,000 tons per cubic centimeter they are baked for forty-eight hours. In similar fashion are made roofing tiles and water pipes. Telegraph poles made of rolled sheets of paper are hollow, lighter than wood and resist weather well.

In Japan they make of paper clothing, window frames, lanterns, umbrellas, handkerchiefs, artificial leather, etc. In the United States and even in Germany are made paper coffins. In Germany they make paper barrels, vases and milk bottles.

Straw hats may now be bought into which enters not an atom of straw. They are made of narrow paper strips dyed yellow. Artificial sponges are made of cellulose or paper pulp. One man has taken out a patent for paper thread to be used in sewing shoes, and a brand of artificial silk is made on a basis of paper pulp.

The use of paper in industry may be indefinitely extended. It is employed to make imitation porcelain, for bullets, shoes, billiard table cloth, sails for boats, boards for building, impermeable bags for cement and powdered substances, boats and vessels for water. There has even been made a paper stove which is said to have stood the fire well. Cellulose may be used to prepare a waterproof coating that may be applied like paint. Whole houses have been built of paper. In Norway there is a church holding 1,000 persons built entirely of it, even to the belfry.—London Tit Bits.

WHEN SPAIN GAVE UP CUBA.

The Drama That Began With Columbus Ended in Sorrow.

Arriving in Havana on the afternoon of Dec. 31, 1898, the day before Spain surrendered the island, I presented to Major General Ludlow a letter of introduction from the son of one of his friends and asked for a pass which would enable Mrs. Thayer and myself to see the next day's ceremonies at the palace. The pass was presently forthcoming.

It was five minutes to 12 next day. At that instant rose the solemn strains of the Spanish anthem. As it ceased there was a moment's silence. Then up through the casements came the "Star Spangled Banner," and the procession which had formed below wound its way through the great portal and up into the room where we were. Major General Brooke and the officers under his command, their dress uniforms and yellow sashes a bright note of color, entered first. Then came the swarthy Cuban leaders, their uniforms less splendid, but their dignity beyond question, and last of all, General Castellanos and his staff.

The scene was too painful to prolong. A moment of formalities and it was over, and the defeated said farewell. It was an ordeal for a man of Castellanos' temperament. Tears came to his eyes.

"I have been in many battles," he faltered, "many trying situations, but never in a position like this." Then, as we watched, the little handful of Spanish troops, headed only by fife and drum, set their faces toward Spain. The drama which began with Columbus was finished.—John Adams Thayer's "Out of the Rut."

He Was Engaged.

"I suppose you want a job?" said the employer brusquely, looking up quickly from his desk.

"I came to ask for a place to work, but if it's only a job I'll go farther," the caller replied. And from that minute he was on the payroll.—Buffalo Express.

LOUIS FURNITURE.

How to Distinguish Different Periods of the French Style.

AMERICAN EMPIRE DESIGNS.

Napoleon's Conquest of Egypt Influenced the Shape and Carvings of the Furniture of His Reign—Ways of the English Schools.

At present the American people are mostly interested in the French, English and Dutch schools of furniture. Of the French schools the most widely used are the Louis XV. (Quinze), the Louis XVI. (Seize), the Louis XIV. (Quartorze), the Louis XIII. (Treize), the empire and that of the time of Henry II. and Francis I.

In the Louis XIV. period the furniture and decorations were of a solid, substantial and dignified type. Construction lines were straight. Plenty of ornament was allowed, and slender and graceful lines were used, but not at the expense of dignity and strength.

In the Louis XV. period the straight constructive lines gave way to curves and sweeps. The rococo ornamentation was in vogue, and the shell and scroll were everywhere in evidence.

The Louis XVI. period reverted to the more sedate and sober designs of an earlier day. The excessive ornamentation was dropped, and clean cut lines and graceful garlands were substituted.

In the period known as Henry II. and Francis I. the furniture is of a kind suited to the dining room or large hall and has heavy lines and bold carvings on dark woods.

In the empire period the furniture was made to tell of Napoleon's conquests in Egypt by its shapes and carvings. The pillar was a feature of this exquisite style, and elaborately designed wreaths in brass and bronze appear frequently as ornaments, especially on the pieces known as French empire, for there was also a style known as English and American empire.

Of the English schools of furniture the popular periods are the Sheraton, Chippendale, Adam, Hepplewhite, Colonial or Georgian, Queen Anne, English renaissance and Jacobean, the last two being heavy and ponderous and needing a wainscoted room for their proper setting.

It is in the French period that the handsomest drawing rooms are done, the white and gold or delicate tints and gold giving such a harmonious background for costly gowns and flashing jewels. While there are a number of American drawing rooms that have been furnished in antique furniture of the French periods, some of it from the famous palaces and chateaux, there are many more such apartments rooms in which the furniture of whatever popular periods is of modern make, as American skill has been equal to reproducing from the finest of the old models pieces of such excellence and beauty that only a trained expert could tell them from their foreign prototypes.

The gate legged table seen in the illustration is a reproduction of an old English design that is especially to be recommended for small interiors where space is at a premium. This table may be opened out to a size large enough for a dinner or luncheon party of four, or it may be folded and pushed against the wall as a serving table.

KITCHENETTES.

By turning a cauliflower head downward it cooks more quickly and improves in flavor.

An easy way to crumb bread is to put it into a muslin bag, an empty salt sack, for instance, and then, unless it is too hard and dry, it can be squeezed between the fingers and quickly crumbled without any waste.

Meat that is to be grilled should not be salted. This hardens the fibers of the meat and tends to extract the juices. Salt on the platter just before sending to the table. No meat should be salted uncooked, but after the surface has been seared and the meat partly cooked.

Earthenware, glass or other useful crockery that has become cracked can be cemented together by mixing a little white lead and spreading this upon a strip of old linen rag. This should be neatly laid over the damaged part and allowed to dry. A few bands of stout twine should also be securely tied around the article to make the repair more secure.

Wise Decision.

"When I was abroad I was constantly taken for a certain crown prince whom I believe I resemble."

"I suppose you had to shell out some large tips."

"No. I let the prince get the reputation of being a piker."—Washington Herald.

Useless Denials.

John A. Henneberry, the whirlwind campaigner, does not believe in making denials of things that are printed in the newspapers. When somebody told him the other day that the Wilson bureau was sending out seventy-five telegrams to daily papers to disseminate Wilson's denial of the statement that he had not voted for Bryan in 1908 Mr. Henneberry said:

"Shucks! What makes 'em deny things in the papers? If the morning papers said that I set fire to Trinity church, that I stole Charley Ross and that I was the original dynamiter I'd say, 'Go to it!'

"What's the use of denying it? Three hundred people will see the denial where only thirty saw the first story."—New York Post.

A Toast.

Not to the girl with the dimpling cheeks,
Not to the maid who my homage seeks,
Not to my wife, though she's without flaw—
This is a toast to the mother-in-law.

She who's the butt of the oldest jest,
Told by the biped who robbed her nest—
Here is his chance for a hoarse guffaw—
This is a toast to the mother-in-law.

She knows what's best when all things go wrong.
She soothes your tads with some old time song.
When wifey's mad she causes the thaw—
This is a toast to the mother-in-law.

Your wife's her flesh, but down in your heart
You know that she always takes your part.
I'm proud to call the old lady "Maw"—
This is a toast to the mother-in-law.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Business Victim.

"Does you 'member dat dawg I used to have?" asked Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"Yes," replied Uncle Rasberry. "You means dat mixed dog."

"He was kind o' mixed. He was what I calls a black-an'-tan-dale terrier. Well, suh, dat dawg ain' brought me nuffin but bad luck. I sold 'im to a man foh $2, an' de $2 he slipped me was counterfeit."

"What you ginster do?"

"What kin I do? If I shows 'im any way to prove de transaction wus unlegal he's ginster make me take de dawg back."—Washington Star.

To the Antisuffragist.

You say you do not want it forced upon you;
That suffrage is a bother and a bore.
You say you have enough to worry over
Without adding extra burdens to your score.

Well, it doesn't matter much that you don't want it.
You're going to get it just as sure as fate.
So why not help to get it—get the power
To vote it off again before too late?

Can't you see the flaw in your position?
Can't you see the glaring paradox?
You wouldn't have things rudely thrust upon you
If only you could use the ballot box!
—Judge.

His Offense.

"Exceeding the limit?" cried Dawson. "Why, judge, your roads around here are so rotten a man couldn't go faster than ten miles an hour without endangering his life."

"That's the p'int," said the justice of the peace. "You was exceedin' the limit o' safety, and we find ye guilty of attempted suicide. Ten dollars, if you please."—Harper's Weekly.

Speaking of Food.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous rash.
He went into a boarding house
And ate a plate of hash.

There was a girl in our town
Whose appetite was fickle.
Her favorite repast, they say,
Was ice cream and a pickle.

FAMOUS TRAGEDIES that BALKED SOLUTION

The Sensational Killing of Miss Nellie E. Sturtevant, Daughter of a Prominent Banker, on the Steps of Her Home at Medford, Mass.—Shock of Tragedy Caused Death of Her Mother and Now Her Father Has Become Insane—State Police Still at Work on Nine Year Mystery

MASSACHUSETTS has never had a murder case that excited more interest than the killing of Miss Nellie A. Sturtevant, daughter of Mr. James S. Sturtevant, a banker, on the steps of her home, in Chester avenue, Medford, on the night of May 5, 1908. She was shot as she, her father and mother were about to enter the door of their home, and from then until now, although the State police have doggedly pursued hundreds of clews and run down countless theories, they are as far from a solution of the mystery as they were an hour after they were called into the case.

One man was arrested, Tomasso Lombardi, an Italian, a few days after the murder, but he was easily able to prove that he was in the north end of Boston when it was committed, and he was released. Suspicions were directed toward a burglar who had been operating extensively in Medford and Somerville, but [illegible] never able to show that he had at any time been in the vicinity of the Sturtevant home.

The death of Miss Sturtevant was followed by the death of her mother from grief, and a short time ago her father became insane and is guarded day and night by attendants in his Medford home.

Hour after hour he raves about the shooting of his daughter. Grief shattered his reason, but insanity did not mercifully take from him the memories of the night he saw his daughter's life blotted out, and the horror of that night, physicians say, will remain with him until death relieves him of his sufferings.

Death of Mrs. Sturtevant.

His wife died with the image of the murderer engraved on her brain.

"I can see him every moment," she told those who gathered about her bedside when she passed away, "but I fear that he never will be arrested, never will be punished for killing my Nellie."

Were an arrest to be made now, with Mrs. Sturtevant dead and Mr. Sturtevant a mental wreck, there would not be a conviction. They were the only witnesses of the crime.

In the minds of some of the police officials who have been trying to track down the murderer there has always been the thought that the night Miss Sturtevant was killed her father was not as keen mentally as his business associates and friends believed him to be.

Inquiries made at the Medford Co-operative Bank, of which he was treasurer, after the murder showed that there had been periods during months that preceded the tragedy when he was forgetful and easily irritated.

For days following the murder the police were unable to get a connected story from him. His wife had taken to her bed an hour after the shooting and for days it was feared that she would die.

Mr. Sturtevant, never a physically strong man, almost gave way under the strain caused by the murder and his wife's illness, and until after Miss Sturtevant had been laid away in the churchyard only police officials were permitted to see him.

But finally Mr. Sturtevant gave signs of returning strength and health, and one day when the police least expected the summons he sent for them and told them his story of the murder.

With tears flowing down his cheeks he told them all that he could remember that happened in front of his home. The interview lasted almost an entire day and when it was over Mr. Sturtevant was so weak that he had to go to bed.

The next day he was more cheerful and was able to talk with reporters, and to them he told practically the same story that he had related to the police.

"With my daughter I left the bank at twenty minutes past ten o'clock," he told them, "and we rode in a carriage to the home of Mr. Gray, in Marshall street, where Mrs. Sturtevant was waiting for us. Marshall street is, as you all know, but a short distance from our home. We all remained talking with Mr. Gray and his family a few minutes, and at ten minutes or a quarter past eleven o'clock my daughter, my wife and I started to walk home. We saw no one and heard nothing until we had turned from Winthrop street into Chester avenue. I was walking next to the fence on the side of the street our home is on. Mrs. Sturtevant was in the middle and my daughter was outside. We were talking pleasantly of Mr. Gray and his family. I carried an imitation alligator bag in my right hand and an enamel portfolio under my left arm. When we reached a tree about two hundred feet from my home I noticed a bicycle leaning against a tree guard. I remember saying to my wife, 'It's funny to see a bicycle there. There must be some one around.' We looked but could not see anybody, and the only sound on the street was the slight swaying of the elm trees. I guess we had all forgotten about the bicycle before we reached the steps, up which I went first. As I reached the door I handed the portfolio to my daughter. She was standing in the middle of the steps and my wife was near a post on the piazza. Just as I got my hands on my keys I heard a voice say 'Throw up your hands!' I looked around quickly and heard my daughter say, 'What for? You get away from here.' She raised her umbrella and struck at the man. I think she struck him on the head. I was trying to think what it all meant. I thought first it was some friend of ours playing a joke to frighten us, but when I heard the order 'Throw up your hands!' repeated I looked down the steps and saw a man crouching at the bottom of them. In his right hand he held a revolver, which seemed to be pointing directly at me. Before I could say a word he fired, and the moment I heard the report I started down the steps. With the first report my daughter fell. Although I was unarmed, I ran at the man and tried to grapple with him. I had the leather bag in my hand, but in the excitement forgot about it. When the man saw me coming at him he fired a shot at me, perhaps two or three, grabbed my bag and ran down Chester avenue. I was for a minute like a man in a trance. I remember chasing the man down the street and watching for the bicycle. If he jumped on the wheel, I said to myself, I will trip him up and break his neck. I used to be a fine bicycle rider myself and I remember that I figured out in my mind just how a man would try to mount one when he was running. I had perhaps run fifty yards when I heard my wife yelling "Murder!" and as I turned she called, "For God's sake come back here quick.' I did not know at that time that my daughter had been wounded, and when I got back to the steps I almost fell over her body. My wife and I began shouting; neighbors soon came, and we carried the body of my daughter into the house. Hours afterward it came back to me, that the man who had yelled 'Throw up your hands!' spoke very good English, that he was about five feet seven inches tall, weighed about 165 pounds, wore dark clothes and had a soft hat.

Disagree As to Time.

"Could I recognize him again? Maybe, I am not sure. I saw his face, but in the excitement following the firing of the shots and my chase after him my recollection of his features seems to have passed away.

"I do not believe that the man intended to shoot my daughter. I am confident that he thought I was carrying home money from the bank and that his idea was to shoot me and seize the money."

"Did you ever see a man who reminded you of the murderer in the bank?" one of the policemen asked.

"No, I am quite sure that I never did," Mr. Sturtevant replied. "Had he ever been to the bank I believe I would have recognized him."

As to the time of the murder Mr. Sturtevant and a policeman named Pierce disagree. Mr. Sturtevant says he is almost certain that he, Mrs. Sturtevant and Miss Sturtevant left Mr. Gray's home between ten and fifteen minutes after eleven o'clock. The policeman says, and records at the police station corroborate him, that the "rang in" a box at the corner of Chester that they would not even search his house.

Partial substantiation of the story of the mysterious bicyclist was furnished by Mrs. Lilla Paul and Fred Dearborn, who lived a short distance from the Sturtevant home. Mrs. Paul said about the time of the murder she heard sounds such as would be made by a bicycle being ridden rapidly over hard earth and heard men running along Chester avenue. Mr. Dearborn said he saw a man wheeling a bicycle through a vacant lot near the Sturtevant home about half-past ten o'clock the night of the murder and wondered why he was doing it, but did not were not long in proving beyond a doubt that Lombardi could not have had any connection with the murder.

When it had been shown that he was in Boston when Miss Sturtevant was killed, Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant were taken to the jail in which he was confined and Lombardi was stood in a row with a dozen prisoners.

"Thank God, he is not among those men," Mrs. Sturtevant said, when she had closely examined all of the men in the line."

"Are you confident that you could pick him out if he were?" Mrs. Sturtevant was asked.

"Confident; yes, I am positive," she replied. "I can't explain to you how the murderer looked, but I should recognize him if I met him. I can see him every second I live. You may be sure that I will recognize him if you ever get him."

Mrs. Sturtevant stood up bravely under the ordeal at the jail, but once back in her home she collapsed, and from then until she died she mourned night and day for the daughter who had been snatched from her.

Efforts were made in the early stages of the police investigation to connect a suitor for Miss Sturtevant's hand with the crime, but it was quickly demonstrated that there was no basis for such suspicions. Miss Sturtevant, although close to forty years old when she was killed, had never been engaged to marry. She was a very quiet woman, who loved her parents and her home, and most of the time when she was not at the bank with her father, where she held a position as a clerk, she was at home with her mother.

"I do not believe that I will ever marry," she told a friend a short time before her death. "Father and mother are getting old and I will always stay with them."

She was interested in church work and did much for the poor of Medford. When she was buried hundreds of weeping children gathered about her coffin and many of them followed it to the grave.

Months after her burial an anonymous letter, received by the police, said that the name of the murderer would be sent to them within a week, but the promise has never been kept and the murder of Miss Sturtevant will go down into history as one of the most sensational of Massachusetts' unsolved mysteries.

Expects a Confession.

Rewards for information that will lead to the arrest of the murderer were offered by the city of Medford and the State and never have been withdrawn. Members of the State police still have under surveillance persons who have been mentioned in connection with the crime, but they are satisfied that they will never be able to make an arrest.

"It was the most puzzling case I ever worked on," Chief Whitney, of the State police, said to a reporter for this paper. "Except for a few hours after we arrested Lombardi there was never even a clew that looked really promising. I have always suspected the burglar who operated so extensively in Somerville, Medford and vicinity, but have never been able to find a thing to corroborate my suspicions. I talked with the man, and he told me a story which investigation did not substantiate, but efforts of most of the men of the State force to place him in the vicinity of the Sturtevant home the night of the murder failed. It has been hinted that a certain relative of Miss Sturtevant killed her, but I am satisfied that he had nothing to do with it. We eliminated that person a day or two after the murder. With Mrs. Sturtevant dead and Mr. Sturtevant insane as would have a hard job to convict the murderer were we to arrest him now. I have had an idea for several years that some day we will get a confession, and it is for that reason that we have kept in touch with the movements of one or two persons whose names were mentioned soon after Miss Sturtevant was killed. I am convinced that the motive of the murderer was robbery, because it was generally believed in Medford that Mr. Sturtevant took home with him every night a large sum of money from the bank. As a matter of fact, he never did. The bag he carried the night his daughter was shot contained only an itemized account of payments to shareholders of the bank, amounting to about $12,000, and some checks which were signed by only one official of the bank and which could not be cashed. Had they been signed the murderer, I believe, would have tried to cash them and an arrest would have followed. Banks all over the country were requested to notify us if any of the checks appeared, but the murderer probably learned from the newspapers that they were valueless, as they were, and destroyed them.

Police circulars which were sent all over the world give this description of the murderer:—

H ight, 5 feet 8 inches; weight, 150 pounds; slender, has stooped shoulders, is pale, has black moustache, is twenty-six years old, has dark eyes and wore dark clothing."

The description was obtained from Mrs. Sturtevant after she had repeatedly declared that she could see the man every hour of the day, but could no. describe him.

"It does not picture the man who is always in my mind," she told the police, "but I cannot do any better. Perhaps some day I will be able to describe the face that haunts me."

But she never did. The secret of the face engraved on her brain went to the grave with her.

Spices as Antiseptics--By J. J. Walsh, M. D., Lit. D.

IT came to be the custom apparently about a generation ago to think that most of the things that human beings like were either bad for them, or at least not as good for them as many other things for which they had no taste. Fortunately, the first crude knowledge of chemistry that led us into such false notions is now being replaced by broader, deeper knowledge that makes us realize that taste is a precious adjuvant for health, and especially for the arrangement of the individual diet in such a way as to preserve health. The last of the food materials to yield their secret in this regard are the spices.

It was not uncommon to hear a few years ago that spice materials were very indigestible and that spices themselves were rather irritant than healthy stimulants of digestion. Human nature liked them, but in that, presumably as in many other instances, it made a mistake.

Our grandmothers, the old fashioned housewives of two and three generations ago, used a good deal of spices, but we gradually came to abandon them to a great extent, mainly under the influence of the physiological chemists, who about the middle of the nineteenth century were sure that they knew all there was to know and felt that they were in a position to dictate diet lists to the universe.

The more we learn about the science of nutrition the more we come to realize how precious a faculty is taste and how well it is arranged so as to be helpful for health and to tempt us to eat such things as are especially good for us. As a rule tasty things—that is, food materials that we care for—are healthful. We may eat too much of them and then, of course, they are harmful; but excess is always likely to prove injurious. There are exceptions. Some people cannot take strawberries or shellfish and other dainties, but they are rare. The contrary is also true. The things that we do not care for, unless our distaste has been acquired through some accidental circumstance or is due to caprice or suggestion, are likely not to be good for us. Things that have no taste and that are indifferent to us usually are not valuable as food materials, though sometimes we have been strongly tempted to think that they were.

We have had some extremely interesting experiences in this matter, and some significant scientific disillusions. For instance, when gelatin was discovered it was thought that we surely possessed in this substance the secret of concentrated nutrition. It contains all the chemical elements that go to make up the great bulk of the human body, and it was thought that all that would be necessary for nutrition would be to consume a certain amount of gelatin every day and thus support nature very well. Gelatin was not particularly tasty and a steady diet of it was likely to be rather disgusting than otherwise, but certain other less indifferent materials, sugar and flavoring substances, could be put with it to give it a taste and facilitate its consumption. After a while it was found, however, in spite of the hopes raised by chemistry, that gelatin itself was absolutely useless so far as nutrition is concerned.

Such incidents are not uncommon in the history of physiological or biological chemistry. Nearly the same experience came, for instance, with regard to mushrooms when the first determination of their value as food was attempted.

For most people mushrooms are an acquired taste. Even at best their taste is mainly that of the dressing with which they are prepared. A French cook can make them taste heavenly, but of themselves they are rather favorless. Further investigation showed that while they contained a large amount of nitrogenous material in proportion to their weight very little of this could be made available for human nutrition. Like gelatine, it proves to be a substance that cannot be digested so as to be prepared for absorption.

The more the physiological chemists investigate the more confirmations do they find of the fact that taste is a very precious guide even to nutrition values of food, and now they are even going further in finding that taste is an excellent guide as regards the safety of materials to be eaten and even in what concerns the taking of certain materials that would help to protect us against bacterial invasions. Hoffman and Evans studying the preservative action of spices demonstrated that such spices as cinnamon, cloves and mustard are valuable food preservatives, while nutmeg and allspice delay microbic growth of most kinds and thus help in the preservation of all foods with which they are mixed. We have got away from nutmeg to a great extent, though it is used as a sedative in German medicine, replaces sleeping powders and would seem to be especially valuable for a restless, ever irritable people, such as our climate makes us.

The active antiseptic agents in these spices are their aromatic, or, as they are sometimes called, essential, oils. The essential oil of mustard is particularly active as an antiseptic. Cinnamon yields not only an essential oil, but also cinnamic aldehyde, which belongs to the same group of chemical substances as formaldehyde, the antiseptic action of which has made it very precious in recent years. The government investigators declare that cinnamic aldehyde possesses a preservative action superior to that of benzoic acid, over the use of which there has rightly been so much discussion. Foods prepared with it keep much longer from spoiling than those to which no condiment is added. The experiments were made on apple sauce, and it is possible to preserve specimens of this for long periods, even when exposed to the air, provided only abundant quantities of cinnamon are used in it. Evidently there is no need of our preserve manufacturers using the artificial antiseptics

These spices are not used so commonly now as was formerly the case. The grandmothers of the present generation employed them partly because of their tastiness, but there seems to be no doubt that it had been noticed that pastries and preserves of various kinds to which certain quantities of cinnamon and cloves were added kept better and were more tasty for longer periods when they had no arrangements for preserving food so elaborate as we have at the present time. Benzoic acid is cheap, but is probably not without a certain element of danger. There is no danger in cinnamon and cloves, but on the contrary they are healthful, and then, besides, they are tasty and tempting to the appetite. Nature does many of these things very well.

It has often been a problem why men in warm countries like mustard and various other forms of rather hot spices. It would usually be thought that such additions to the diet were scarcely appropriate in the tropics, where the external heat would seem to be quite enough without any internal heating. It is in the hot countries, however, that food is particularly likely to spoil, and the use of mustard with it tends to neutralise such effects and save the consumer from many dangers.

What is curious, however, about these advances in science is to find that physiology and physiological chemistry are only just catching up with taste as a guide to the value of food materials. Hoffman and Evans speak of it as a lucky coincidence, but there seems to be something much more than that, and surely we have here an example of how all things work together for good according to some preordained plan.

arrive at twenty-nine minutes after eleven o'clock and that when he was ringing it in he saw the Sturtevants pass into Chester avenue.

"It may be that Pierce is right," Mr. Sturtevant said when the policeman's statement was told to him, "but my impression is that we left Mr. Gray's when I said."

Painters at work on the Sturtevant house several days after the murder made a discovery that has greatly puzzled the police. Mr. Sturtevant and his wife agreed that the murderer fired most of his shots when standing at the eastern end of the steps. The painters found a bullet embedded in the clapboard that had been fired from the opposite direction.

Never Doubted Story.

Mr. Sturtevant was questioned, but he could not remember the firing of a shot that could have lodged in the board in the way it was found by the painters. The day after his talk with the police, armed with a revolver, he demonstrated to reporters just how the murder had been done, and during that demonstration he did not account for the bullet that must have come from the direction from which he was certain no shots had been fired. The only explanation offered concerning this bullet is that it was fired after Mr. Sturtevant had jumped at the murderer and when Mr. Sturtevant was so excited that he really did not know what was happening.

The police have never for a moment doubted the story told by Mr. Sturtevant, and so great was their confidence in him question him or watch where he went. William Broderick described a man he says he saw loitering about the Sturtevant home about the time Dearborn saw the one wheeling the bicycle through the vacant lot, but his description rather fitted Lombardi, the Italian, who was arrested, than the man described by Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant.

For two weeks the police were besieged by men and women who had seen mysterious bicyclists riding furiously from Medford, but none of them furnished a shred of information that was of the least value to the police. When Lombardi was arrested the police of Medford and Jophanus H. Whitney, who was then a State detective and is now chief of the State police, were confident that the murderer had been captured. Lombardi had a bicycle, he had been seen riding through Medford, he was in need of money and the police asserted that he knew of Mr. Sturtevant's connection with the Medford Co-operative Bank.

Lombardi's Alibi.

Lombardi insisted that he had never heard of the Sturtevants and had not been in Medford, but the police, troubled, as police often are, with overconfidence in themselves, rushed him off to jail and prepared to arraign him in court on a charge of murder. Lombardi was believed to be a friendless Italian and no efforts were made by the police to aid him in establishing an alibi. But he had powerful friends among the wealthier Italians in the north end, and they, with the assistance of newspaper reporters,

English Dock Strike Threatens to Be Serious.

London, May 27.—Dock strikers to the number of 15,000 marched in procession through London streets yesterday. They held a demonstration in Trafalgar Square, and, after speeches by all the labor leaders, they adopted resolutions pledging themselves not to return to work until every grievance was satisfactorily adjusted. Some of the speakers hinted at the probability of a national strike, owing to the fact that vessels might be diverted from the Thames to other ports, and Harry Gosling, the leader of the men, announced that the electricians of the port of London are considering the advisability of joining in the strike. At present, however, there is no actual extension of the strike movement.

A strong feeling exists among the strikers at the employment of clerks to help in the unloading of ships, and at a conference of the National Union of Clerks Saturday, a resolution was adopted against the clerks acting as "blacklegs." No disorders of any kind are reported as yet.

The court of enquiry into the causes of the London strike, under the presidency of Sir Edward Clarke, terminated Saturday evening with a dramatic offer by Harry Gosling, the men's leader, on behalf of the strikers, which may possibly lead to a peace conference.

WATER CLAIMS TWO.

Toronto Lads Are Drowned at Burlington Bay.

Hamilton, May 27.—Burlington Bay claimed its first victims this season on Saturday shortly after noon, when Eric and Murray Simmonds, aged respectively 13 and 8 years, were drowned at the beach in ten feet of water, about 75 yards from shore, on the lake side of the sand strings.

The boys were sons of Mr. and Mrs. Carney Simmonds, who until a month ago lived at 67 Waverley road, Toronto. Mr. Simmonds is employed as foreman of the printing department of the Petrie Manufacturing Co. in this city, and removed from Toronto to the Beach about a month ago.

The boys were paddling a canoe and sailing a toy boat in the bay when a few minutes before 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon they were called by their mother for the midday meal. In their haste to recover the toy boat from the water and proceed to the shore, they overturned the canoe, and before help could reach them both sank to the bottom of the bay.

The bodies were both recovered Saturday afternoon by James Hazel, son of Chief Hazel of the Beach, and Charles Homewood, another young man who resides at the Beach.

The remains were taken to Green Bros.' undertaking establishment in the city, and will be shipped to Toronto to-day for burial. The funeral services will be held at St. John's Church, Norway, Monday afternoon.

NEW GRAND MASTER.

Gordon Black of Toronto Chosen by Orange Young Britons.

By a unanimous standing vote the grand lodge expressed its opposition to the Irish home rule bill, by the adoption of the following resolution:

"That the Grnad Lodge of Orange Young Britons is strongly opposed to the Irish home rule bill, at present in the British Parliament, and we do hereby extend to the brethren of Ireland our sympathy and assure them of our united support in their struggle to maintain the position under the British flag that our forefathers fought and died for at Derry, Enniskillen and the Boyne."

Strong addresses on the subject were delivered by Past Grand Master Geo. Morrison and Alex. Hall of Toronto, and Rev. F. Dealtry Woodcock, Brockville.

The following officers for 1912-13 were elected and installed: Grand master, Gordon Black, Toronto; deputy grand master, J. W. Lowrie, Russell; junior deputy grand master, Samuel Moffatt, Toronto; grand chaplain, John J. Young, Hamilton; grand secretary, Shelton Hornshaw, Toronto; grand treasurer, T. A. Carscadden, Russell; grand director of ceremonies, A. J. Kissick, Ottawa; grand lecturer, J. A. Dickson, Dundas; deputy grand chaplain, B. Wing, Brockville; deputy grand secretary, T. Ashmore Kidd, Burwitt's Rapids; deputy grand treasurer, John Noddle, Todmorden; deputy grand lecturer, S. W. M. Prosser, Kemptville, and G. S. Leach, South Gower; grand auditors, Alex. Hall, Toronto, and Thomas Patterson, Hamilton.

Kemptville beat out Toronto and Ottawa for the next place of meeting.

Clams That Drown Men.

Those of us whose acquaintance with clams embraces only the Little Neck variety are slow to think evil of any members of so delightful a family, but the inoffensive Little Neck has some big brothers who vigorously resent any attempt to pry into their personal affairs. Men have accidentally stepped into the open jaws of these huge clams at low tide, and the clams, closing their jaws, have held them fast until the tide rose, when the men were drowned. Other men have reached for a lure in the form of a luminous spot. The instant they touched it the shells of a clam closed on their arms, and in a few minutes the men were drowned. Some of these clams that trap men are founded imbedded in the coral reefs of the Pacific and Indian oceans, and the men captured are pearl divers. The flesh of one of these huge clams sometimes weighs twenty pounds, and added to that is the 500 pounds or more of shell. The shell is sometimes five feet long by two and three-quarters wide.—New York Herald.

The Smart Lads.

Ottawa, May 27.—Dr. Roddick, medical inspector of immigration, stated, Saturday in connection to the case of leprosy at Montreal, that immediate steps were being taken to deport the victim, and that there was no possible danger of the affected man being brought to Ottawa, as was stated in a Montreal despatch.

It is likely that an investigation will be held in the department to ascertain how the leper passed the immigration inspectors.

Saloniki, May 27.—In an attack by Albanians on a Turkish detachment in the village of Novosheh, near the Montenegrin frontier seventeen of the Turks were killed.

Doesn't Need New Jersey.

Newark, N.J., May 27.—"I have more than 570 delegates instructed or pledged," shouted President Taft in a speech at Kearney near here, Saturday. "New Jersey is not necessary to my success, but I would be glad to add it. Whether I do or not, I have 570 delegates and there is a Republican National Committee that will do justice and Mr. Roosevelt's nomination is impossible."

David Goldie's Body Found.

Brantford, May 27.—After a search in which two hundred people participated from an early hour yesterday morning, the body of David Goldie, who was drowned in Smith's Creek, above Paris, was found yesterday afternoon in the Grand River, two miles below the town. A reward of $50 had been offered for the recovery of the body.

"Long Live the King."

The expression "The king is dead, long live the king," indicates the automatic succession of ruling sovereigns—that the moment a king dies his successor becomes king without any further formality. It is believed to have had its origin at the death of Louis XIV. of France. In Pardoe's "Life of Louis XIV." is the following account of the announcement of the death of that monarch:

"The death of Louis XIV. was announced by the captain of the bodyguard from a window of the state apartment. Raising his truncheon above his head, he broke it in the center and, throwing the pieces among the crowd, exclaimed in a loud voice, 'Le roi est mort!' (the king is dead). Then, seizing another staff, he flourished it in the air as he shouted, 'Vive le roi!' (Long live the king)."—New York Times.

Primitive Screws.

Screws are still made in India just as they were made originally, by winding two soft wires together around a mandrel. The wires are then carefully separated, and one of them is soldered into a tube or nut, while the other is soldered to a short rod. All the silversmiths make their screws in this way, and they are all left handed, for they are wound over and over by the right hand. Screw bolts and screw presses were introduced by Europeans, and for many years all the cotton exported from India was compressed by a massive screw of wood, turned round by cattle yoked to a long lever. This screw may still be found in remote districts. It is cut entirely by hand and is set out by winding two ropes around the hand dressed beam to give the pitch.—Eastern Engineering.

POLICE RAID THE PREMISES OF A GEORGE STREET CHINAMAN. NINE INMATES ARRESTED

Gambling Paraphernalia, Chinese Grog And Opium Pipes Were Seized by The Police---A Charge of Gambling Preferred Against Inmates Who Were Admitted to Bail Until Wednesday.

CHARGED WITH BEING KEEPERS OF GAMING HOUSE.

Lee Fue, Lee Hong, Lee Sing.

CHARGED WITH BEING FREQUENTERS.

John Hung, Lung Lee, Wong Jun, Tom Hong, Lee Jim, Lee Yim.

Time of raid—Between 11 and 12 o'clock Sunday night.

Police who participated in the raid—Detective Newhall, P. C. Kidd, P. C. Meagher, P. C. Meharry, P. C. Kane. Scene of raid—464 George street.

A large, gilt-lettered sign board attached to a building directly opposite the Bethany Tabernacle on George St., cuts lose the information that Sing Lung conducts a laundry business there.

Last evening between the hours of eleven and twelve o'clock, the police abruptly broke into the premises and laid hold of eight Celestials. They were escorted to the police station in corporal guard style when, needless to say, they passed a very restless night.

It wasn't much of a beauty chorus that faced Acting Magistrate Armstrong this morning and heard the allegation read, in which three of them were charged with being keepers of a common gaming house, and the remaining six with being frequenters. The ninth member of the party was arrested in a downtown restaurant a short time after the raid.

Allowed Out on Bail.

Crown Attorney Wood acted in the interests of the Crown, and Mr. G. N. Gordon was on hand to champion the cause of the Chinamen. Tom Him played the double role of interpreter and bondsman.

Mr. Gordon applied for bail on behalf of his clients and in this Crown Attorney Wood acquiesced, demanding the sum of $100 each in the case of the keepers and $50 each for the frequenters. As Tom Him was unable to produce the necessary $600 on so short a notice, a compromise was effected upon the basis of $50 each for the frequenters and $250 for the three keepers, making a total of $550. They will have to appear on Wednesday next Armed With a Teapot.

The transition of the Celestials from the police station to the court room attracted a large number of idle curiosity seekers. They swarmed up the stairs and threatened the Chief of Police's office with invasion, but were repulsed at the door by P. C. McGinty, who held the office as inside guard. One of the offenders was armed with an overgrown teapot and a couple of cups. He had evidently been dealing out liquid refreshments to his companions during the night. He kept a strangle hold on the teapot and maintained a stoical attitude throughout the entire proceedings.

A couple of opium pipes and a bottle of Chinese grog and the usual gaming house paraphernalia, such as cards, dice, etc., were seized by the police.

QUAKE AT TORONTO

Building Shook and Dishes Rattled The Disturbance Lasting for Five or Ten Seconds at 8 O'clock To-Day

NOBODY WAS HURT

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, May 27. — This city, together with Hamilton, and towns and villages along the shores of Lake Ontario, experienced a real local earthquake about eight o'clock, when the buildings shook and the dishes rattled more or less for ten seconds or so. In some of the hospitals of the city there was real alarm among the patients and nurses, but nobody was hurt. The authorities at the observatory admitted that the shock was recorded on the seismograph but stated that it was not of much importance. Their insruments are built to register shocks many miles away with more precision than at home, where shocks of this kind are not expected. It is re-sva-etchauf-fwhIIo.Gba ES E E777 many years since an earthquake of any account was experienced here. In Hamilton the dishes tumbled off the shelves and the tables and many pitchers of milk were turned over by the shock. It was felt for miles around the city, and many of the farmers used long distance telephones in an endeavour to ascertain the cause.

KILLED IN RUNAWAY

Mr. Alfred Johns, of 13 Cluxton Avenue, Loses His Life in a Plucky Attempt to Stop a Runaway Horse on Barnardo Ave., on Saturday Evening

A PATHETIC STORY

In attempting to stop a runaway on Barnardo avenue on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Alfred John, of Cluxton avenue, was knocked unconscious, sustaining broken ribs and cuts about the face, and after lying in the Nicholls Hospital for the space of about twenty-six hours, passed away at seven o'clock last evening.

The horse in question was a young one belonging to Mr. E. Walsh, who resides nearby. His son Harold, was preparing to hitch the colt to a vehicle, when the animal escaped from the stable, with only a halter attached, and bolted at full speed west on Barnardo avenue.

Mr. John made a plucky attempt at stopping the runaway, which, however, continued its mad career, striking him with a sickening thud. He fell to the ground motionless. Simultaneously, Mr. George Finnie of Barnardo avenue, who had been acquainted of the runaway by his niece, came from his residence, and with the assistance of Mr. Gibbs, the caretaker of the Normal school, and several others, carried the injured man to his home. Dr. Frederick was immediately sent for and later the patient was removed to the Nicholls Hospital in the Dan Spence ambulance. Meanwhile, the horse had been recaptured and returned to its owner.

The injured man passed a bad night and on enquiry on Sunday morning it was learned that he had not yet recovered consciousness. Another enquiry at 7 o'clock in the evening, revealed the fact that he was dead.

The accident is rendered more regrettable in the fact that Mr. Johns who has only recently taken up residence in that vicinity, leaves a wife and four smal lchildren, two boys and two girls.

The deceased, who was forty years of age, was a native of Birmingham, Eng., but had been a citizen of this country for a number of years, coming to Peterborough from a spot a short distance north of Lindsay. He had made many friends during his stay in this city and his tragic end is regretted by not a few. He was a valued member of the Free Methodist church.

The funeral will leave the family residence, 13 Cluxton avenue at 1.30 tomorrow and proceed to the Free Methodist church, Aylmer street and from thence to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

PETERBORO SUMMER FAIR OPENS TO-NIGHT

Colonel, The Hon. Sam Hughes Will Be Present---Grand March, Band Concert and all the Various Departments Will be Ready---High Tea Every Evening Begins at 5 O'clock---Armouries Will be a Scene of Beauty

Unless you have seen the great drill hall at the Armouries under its present setting for the Peterborough Summer Fair, you cannot form an idea of the extent of the transformation that has been effected. The work that has been accomplished is wonderful, and apart from every other feature, the ensemble effect is pleasing in the extreme. The effects of the lights, the colouring and the music on the eye are alone worth more than the small admission charge. The Summer Fair is undoubtedly the biggest affair of its kind ever attempted in Peterborough, and there is every indication that it is going to be an unqualified success.

The Fair will be opened at eight o'clock with the Grand March. Colonel, the Hon. Sam Hughes will be present, and will formally open the Fair, although it is stated that there will be but little formality to the opening. The 57th Regimental Band will present one of their best programmes, and it might be said at this stage that the visitors may expect a treat from Mr. Gliddon and his musicians. This will be the first public appearance since the winter practices and the band is in splendid form.

High tea will be served every evening, commencing at five o'clock. This will be the only department of the Fair that will be open this evening before eight o'clock. The attention of the citizens is directed toward the Tea, which promises to be a treat in itself.

The most that can be said about the Fair thus far is that every feature promises to have its own attractiveness and nothing has been overlooked in all the various booths and special departments.

A telephone has been installed in the Rebecca-at-the-Well booth, and at this booth a poem written by a prominent citizen will be sold.

All theme authors who intend to exhibit their babies in the Baby Show are asked to register with Mrs. J. C. Davidson at St. John's rectory, or with Mrs. Harry Lush, Brock street, not later than Wednesday.

It may be said that the ladies have left nothing undone to secure a touch of beauty to the various booths. The roof of the Armouries has been hidden with green streamers and festoon and the balconies at each end have also been adorned.

On every hand there is the feminine touch that has secured a distinct touch of beauty and wealth of detail. While the purposes of the Fair are philanthropic, and citizens may feel that they are contributing to that end, the ladies know that they are presenting a programme that is far and above the price of admission. And inside every article possesses merit. Visitors may expect full value for their money, if there exists any doubt in that regard.

It is stated that cigarettes will not be sold at the Fair.

ODDFELLOWS ATTENTION

ARGUMENT OF MARRIAGE BILL BEGINS TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MAY 27.—There was a great array of legal talent this morning before the Supreme Court on the occasion of the long expected argument as to the right of the Dominion Parliament to pass a marriage bill as subnitted in the Commons last session by E. A. Lancaster, M.P. The trial of this case is virtually an enquiry of the legality of the Ne Temere decree. Mr. Justice Brodeur, who was a member of the Government when the Minister of Justice, Sir Allan Aylesworth, gave the opinion that the Parliament could not pass such legislation was absent from the bench to-day when the case came up. He considered himself disqualified to sit, having completely concurred in Aylesworth's opinion at that time. The court room was better filled than for many years, thus indicating the general interest involved in the enforcement of the Ne Temere decree in Canada. The courtroom was also graced by the presence of a number of ladies who took an evident interest in the argument. It was noticed that the Court was composed of three Protestants, Justices Idington, Davies and Duff, and two Roman Catholics, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Anglin.

Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., for the promoters of the Lancaster bill, said this measure was simply to declare that no matter who were participants in the marriage ceremony the Dominion Government had control of the marriage ceremony. Solemnization, said Nesbitt, merely implied the presence of others at the marriage ceremony. From the questions plied by their Lordships, it was evident that they would give considerable consideration to the arguments of Quebec, which is, of course, on the negative

NOW KILL THE CATERPILLARS

Are the authorities aware that the city is beginning to crawl—be alive—with the tent caterpillar. They are beginning to "get in their work" in earnest. In some parts of the city, where there are shrubs and trees, they are literally white with the tents of the caterpillars, which are devouring the foliage on the trees where they were hatched and will then spread and crawl over everything. It will not be long, unless something general is done, till the caterpillar will be invading our houses. Unless some organized and authoritative effort to kill the caterpillar is made, we shall be devoured. Complaints come from every quarter of the city and suburbs of abundance of the caterpillar pest. Who will wake up the City Council to do something before it is too late?

HOW ABOUT THE WATERING CARTS?

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—One would suppose that after the copious supply of rain by Jupitar Pluvius, the watering cart man would at least fill in the few intermissions between the showers by doing his duty. Visitors here on Saturday were almost stifled with the dust, as well as ourselves, and complaints were heard on all sides; and again yesterday, it was even worse, when people had their Sunday clothes on. We pay for the services of the water cart man for every day, while he has scarcely served an hour per day on an average.

Yours, etc.,
Ratepayer.

CROOKS IN TAXICABS

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 27. — The number of crooks and convicts working as chauffeurs on taxi cabs in the city, has caused the police department to organize a taxi cab squad to put a check on crimes of violence in which taxi cab drivers play a part. The police have found that there are about 200 men here with either prison or police records who have obtained chauffeur's licenses from the state. In some cases police have found that certain garages are owned by men who have police reputations.

DOUGLAS WAS WANTED HERE

High County Constable Cochrane Held a Warrant for Arrest of Notorious Swindler--His Arrest Was Precluded However by Stiff Gaol Sentence

Roland G. M. Douglas was sentenced this morning to two years and six months in Kingston Penitentiary by Judge Roger of Cobourg.

As published exclusively in Saturday's issue of the Examiner, Douglas was mentioned as the man who is alleged to have operated through this district some time ago. It has since been learned that High County Constable Cochrane held a warrant for the arrest of Douglas on the allegation that he swindled a number of business people.

He was first arrested in Ottawa, after an information had been laid by Walter Cruise, a farmer residing near Port Hope. The case was heard in Cobourg this week before Judge Roger, who deferred sentence until to-day. Douglas claims to be a doctor.

FARMER'S BANK INVESTIGATION

Before Sir William Meredith as Commissioner—Mr. Stratton's Evidence Had Absolutely Nothing to do With Obtaining The Certificate or Charter

Hon. J. R. Stratton of Peterborough gave evidence in the matter of the Farmers' Bank investigation, before the Commission of Investigation on Friday afternoon.

In answer to a question, Mr. Stratton stated that he had nothing whatever to do with the Farmers' Bank obtaining a certificate from the Government.

"Did you see any member of the Government?" asked Mr. Hodgins.

"No." "I want it to be distinctly understood that I assisted in no way. I saw no member of the Government, no member of Parliament, no officer, or clerk of any department; I wrote no letters; I did not communicate with the Government or anybody else in connection with the Farmers' Bank obtaining a certificate from the Government."

Mr. Hodgins — "Absolutely nothing?"

Mr. Stratton — "Yes, absolutely nothing in the broadest sense of the term."

Mr. Stratton further stated that after the formation of the Farmers' Bank, he had been consulted with regard to certain loans made to the Bank from The Trusts & Guarantee Company, of which he was President, that when Mr. Travers came to Peterborough to see him and The Trusts Company advanced the $100,000 in July, 1910, he understood that there was a run on the Bank in Lindsay, and that there had been some trouble in one or two places, and that the money was needed to tide over the difficulties. He further stated "that he had nothing whatever to do with the security given; that that matter was arranged by the Manager of The Trusts & Guarantee Company; that he only had to do with the principle of loaning that large sum, and to see that proper security was provided."

Mr. Stratton further stated that Mr. Stockdale, on behalf of The Trusts Company, accepted a bonus of $25,000 of Keeley Mine Stock, as a profit for the loan. Later on, when he (Mr. Stratton) went to Toronto, Mr. Stockdale was not satisfied with the bonus that Mr. Travers had given him, as he did not value the stock of the Keeley Mine at more than merely nominal value, and he and Mr. Travers came to him, as President of the Trusts Company, and stated that he valued the stock of the Keeley Mine as being worth considerable, and that he thought The Trusts Company was given sufficient bonus for the loan, but he stated, "I will give you in trust $50,000 more stock, you to hold this stock in trust for the Bank, conditional that if the loan of The Trusts Company is paid off, the stock will be the property of the Bank." If the loan was not paid off, the stock would be collateral security to the loan.

"Personally," Mr. Stratton said, "I had nothing whatever to do with The Farmers' Bank in regard to obtaining its charter. All I or The Trusts Company had to do with The Farmers' Bank was to help them in their difficulties, and my share was confined to being consulted after the loan had been practically negotiated."

"Did you ever tell any person in Peterborough that you had made $25,000 out of the Company's deal with The Farmers' Bank?" asked Mr. Hodgins.

"No, I never did," replied Mr. Stratton.

CROWN ORDERS MINDEN MURDER CASE REOPENED

Attorney-General Holds that Magistrate W. Fielding Erred When He Acted, as is Claimed, as Testimony Adduced Before Coroner

NO EVIDENCE AT HEARING

TORONTO, MAY 27.—The Department of the Attorney-General has had under advisement the case of Arthur A. Ellis, now in Lindsay Jail, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Lewis D. Porter, and has decided that there must be another preliminary investigation held before the prisoner can be legally tried at the Fall asizes. A new information will have to be laid against Ellis and the whole machinery of the law set in motion again, according to the decision reached by the Deputy Attorney-General and the Department of Provincial Police.

The new preliminary hearing will take place this week at Lindsay, according to a despatch from Lindsay received in Toronto last night. It was stated in the message that County Crown Attorney A. P. Devin of Lindsay had been instructed to arrange for the new preiminary hearing and that Magistrate F. D. Moore of Lindsay would preside.

The decision to order a new preliminary hearing was made after it became known that no evidence had been taken by the committing Magistrate, William Fielding, of Minden, who, it is claimed, acted solely upon the disclosures before Coroner D. A. Pogue.

As no evidence was taken, the Crown officers have decided that the Magistrate did not legally send the prisoner up for trial. They say that In ordre to commit under the law, his Worship should have satisfied himself that from the evidence adduced there was sufficient to place Ellis on trial.

Magistrate Moore, when asked last night when the new investigation would be held, said he was awaiting a conference with Provincial Inspector Reburn and Crown Attorney Devlin. The Magistrate was expected at Lindsay this week.

THE STREETS AND THE YOUNG.

A Dr. Curtis is visiting Canada in the interests of the play-grounds for children movement. He has done much to promote the desideratum of play grounds for children in cities, both in England and on this continent. We do not take sufficiently into account the requirements of the children for play. To amuse adults we have theatres, amusement parks, athletic grounds and public halls of pretentious character; but nothing is done systematically to provide amusementamusement places for the children. As the city becomes more congested—more closely built—this becomes all the more necessary.

In default of places of play—for children—the streets have to be used; and the streets are not a good place. Children have a great capacity for making themselves little nuisances, of being always in the way. The use of the streets for playgrounds interferes with their comfortable use by adults, and is a source of danger to children. The danger is not merely bodily—of being run down by drays, autos, and butcher-boy carts—but the danger is moral. It has often been said by the Examiner that the streets are the devil's school, where children learn little that is good and much that is bad—bad manners, bad language, bad habits. It has been noticed on a certain street in this city—and the case is typical—that at a certain age children are turned out to play in the streets. In one particular instance a stirring and sturdy little boy made his entry into street life form a home where he was well bred, polite, refined in manner. But he soon lost this in the street. He became coarse, rude, disrespectful, and even "cheeky," anything but what a proud mother had made him before he was subjected to street contamination. Mothers who have not enough time to give special care to their children, think they are saving themselves trouble by letting the youngsters play outside. But they are disappointed; they have more trouble with their children at home from the exercise in the home of the bad habits they learn on the streets. This, for the moment, not counting the bad influence that may extend into after life and give the mother many a heart ache—many a sleepless night. Instead of saving themselves trouble, mothers sometimes only breed trouble by permitting, as they are forced to do, by allowing their children to roam the streets without care or supervision.

Children must play. It is part of the plan of nature to develop their muscles and strengthen their physical powers by romp and rush and run. There is no room in the house, no room in the small grounds, and they are driven to the streets with all the disadvantages suggested, and many others that suggest themselves to the thinking mind. Hence the advisability and necessity of conveniently distributed play-grounds, where children can congregate and play, under some general supervision. A boy that has legitimate opportunities of play will not be under so much temptation to indulge in the mischevious impulses of his nature; a chance to play will be better for the boy and much better for the adult.

While on the subject of the streets as a devil's school, there is another danger that needs watching. Mothers are accustomed to say that they would rather have girls than boys, because they know where their girls are at nights. But, in thousands of cases in this very city, do they know? When we see in all the streets of the city young girls at the critical age—when womanhood and childhood meet—and even at younger ages; when we see hundreds of girls in the streets without any responsible escort or guardianship, there is danger all around. We see them in company with boys and young men; or we see them in twos and threes together, strolling aimlessly about the streets, sometimes looking for a "young man" and always in danger of being rudely accosted. We see them in company with young men in by streets and dark places, and we, who know the ways of the world and the wickedness of mankind shudder for the consequences, which, in thousands of cases, are as inevitable as fate. Surely there are hundreds of mothers who do not know where their girls are at night. Any mother knows that young girls, given free run of the streets at night, are in danger of the worst form of destruction that can come to a woman. Is it nothing to those who see these things that our young girls, by being allowed to frequent the streets without proper escort or protection, are in danger of drifting into "ways that lay hold on hell—exposed to a contagion worse than leprosy—a moral contagion ruinous to the soul and involving the loss of character, and involving bodily destruction?

BECOMING A HABIT.

The disturbing feature of these English labour troubles is that it now seems the easy and natural thing to secure joint and prompt action by bodies numbering anywhere from a hundred thousand to a million men. When a demand is to be made, as in these cases of the coal workers and the dock workers, the whole labouring body concerned simply quits. They have all quit at the London docks, and probably nobody doubts that a single stroke of the pen would be enough in present conditions to make good the threat of a shut down in all the other ports if the need arose. Of course labour has reached this stage by long and slow approach. Great masses move together because it has been learned in the past that smaller bodies have less chance of success. Beyond doubt there will be organized one of these days, opposition on as large a scale, and a decisive conflict will come over some issue in regard to which not even numbers will be sufficient to prevail, for the first essential of success, be the number ever so great, is the active sympathy of the public, and that the striking bodies will some time fail to command. Meantime, it is no joke to grapple with such a problem as is presented by this evident ability to influence so many workmen with a common purpose. It is a new development arising out of the over concentration of population. Observers of social conditions in England are becoming frankly frightened by the frequency of such happenings, and it is hard to blame them.—Montreal Herald.

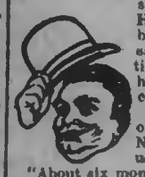
MR. BORDEN'S DILEMMA.

The Right Hon. Winston Churchill and the Hon. Richard McBride are bosom friends. They form a mutual admiration society of two members. Last year, Mr. Churchill, speaking at a dinner in honour of Mr. McBride, remarked that "high destiny" had set her seal on the handsome visage of the premier of British Columbia. Mr. McBride could not reply in kind, the first Lord of the Admiralty being no Adonis, but during his recent visit to England he took occasion to felicitate the British Empire upon having a genius like Mr. Churchill at the head of the naval administration. By their own confessions Mr. McBride has the beauty and Mr. Churchill the brains, an appraisal which agrees with public opinion.

Mr. McBride has just returned to Canada after consultation with Mr. Churchill on the naval question. The recent declaration of naval policy by the First Lord undoubtedly bore some relation to the interivew. Mr. McMride advocates a Canadian-built navy and wants a sea unit on the Pacific coast. Mr. Churchill also declares for the creation of naval forces by the daughter states. The First Lord's pronouncement comes at a psychological moment. It has reinforced the demand for a Pacific squadron, which Mr. McBride is hurrying to Ottawa to press on Mr. Borden. The latter is in a quandary. He is urged by his most powerful provincial lieutenant, Mr. McBride, to follow in Laurier's footsteps, and go even further. By the Montreal Star, the self-constituted organ of the utra-Imperial wing of his party, he is told that the only place for Canadian ships is in the North Sea on the firing line. By his Nationalist allies he is warned that either course would be political suicide. The intimation in the Conservative press that the proposed trip of Mr. Borden and Mr. Hazen to England—a visit heralded by Mr. Churchill—has been postponed, is significant but not surprising—London Advertiser.

GRAY HAIRS AND BALD HEADS

Men and women are realizing that they can accomplish this so easily by simply using HAY'S HAIR HEALTH—the best and only really satisfactory preparation for restoring Gray hair to its natural colour.



Mrs. Fred Gompart, of 233 W. 149th St., New York City, writes us:

"About six months ago I had a bald spot on the very top of my head as big as the palm of your hand. In about seven weeks' time, using HAY'S HAIR HEALTH continuously, new hairs started to grow. They are getting just as long and are the colour as the rest of my hair. I shall never give up using it."

THE BANKS IN RELATION TO THE MATTTER OF LAND INVESTMENTS

Mr. Wilke, of the Imperial Bank, is much disturbed at learning that the soberest of business men are joining in the exciting business of land speculation in the cities. Probably it is a bad sign. The merchant is generally thought to be discharging his function when he is showing, by the earnings of his business, how much it is safe to add to the rental he pays and how much, on the basis of the higher rental, the sale value of the premises he uses can be enhanced, always to the profit of some reserving but quite unobtrusive property owner. If business men have suddenly taken a notion to get a share of the profits arising from the increasing values of land it is very rude of them, and no doubt it will disturb many calculations. But there is always something of the kind afoot. Now it is gold mines, again it is industrial stocks. Whatever the passion of the moment is, good hard headed business men abandon all the precepts of sound judgment and divert to uses that have something of the gamble in them resources which would normally be used to pay off their creditors. The causes of failures and defalcations are always more or less obscure, and many of them can be accounted for in this way. Even bankers, good business men that they are, have not always been able to act wisely in face of what seemed to be sure and easy opportunities to make large gains. They have never clearly foreseen or sufficiently prepared for any of the financial crises of past years. There are some wiser than others, but as a class they have not shown up any too well.

Besides, while it may be overdue, there is good substantial basis for the activity in city real estate. The life of the Dominion centres in them, and into the Dominion literally hundreds of millions of productive capital are being poured. The area under crop increases by millions of acres each year. So far from being at the end of their spending, the railways seem unlikely to be unable to build fast enough to handle the commodities that offer. The cities grow with great rapidity. What so wonderful about it if business men get a more intimate conception of what it means to them as well as to others? The banks, which sometimes do not show all the consideration for consequences they might in presence of pernicious stock exchange operations, and which, at times, are capable of financing operations which depend for their profit upon bare-faced usurpation of popular rights and the degredation of representative institutions, have always kept a tight rein on money that is meant for use in real estate. It is well they should. It is even well that a general alarm should be sounded now and again to enforce the moral of personal admonitions. But for all that there are plenty worse uses to make of one's savings than in getting prudent possession of a bit of land where it is, or even where it will be, subject to the influence of a rapidly growing and normally prosperous community.

Caustic Comments on Some Selected Sentences.

A line by W. J. Locke runs, "He talked incessantly all the time." Oh, Willyum!

Writes Arnold Bennett, "She won 15,000 francs in as many minutes." Pretty long session that!

Another novelist says, "Her eyes filled with silent tears." Generally they boom like billows, you know.

According to another, the hero "brushed her hair with his lips"—scarcely an improvement on the old method, we think.

Another writer remarks, "Charlotte von Stern was, when Goethe first met her, several years older than himself." But later, of course, 'twas otherwise.

"He rested his feet on the back of a chair and blew smoke rings with half closed eyes." We've seen it done with the mouth.

"Marjorie would often take her eyes from the desk and cast them far out to sea." As a caster old Ike Walton had nothing on Margie, believe us!

"Speechless with horror and loathing, I cottered a helpless jelly against the jamb." We believe that the mess was cleaned up in the next chapter.—Boston Transcript.

Their Ancient Feud.

Willie Collier sat regarding Lillian Russell and De Wolf Hopper sadly one day. The two were chatting together with animation. Hopper was apparently in his merriest mood. Miss Russell was blooming and blossoming in her luxuriant beauty.

"Strange," said Mr. Collier, shaking his head. "'Tis passing strange."

"What's strange?" asked a friend.

"Incredible!" said Collier. "Had I not seen it with my own eyes I would never have believed that Mr. Hopper and Miss Russell had patched up their long standing feud."

"Never knew they had one," said the other. "What was it all about?"

"You never heard?" asked Collier in accents of exquisite melancholy. "Remarkable! They have hated each other for years. You see, neither one of them has ever invited the other to a single one of their marriages."

A Troublesome Problem.

This was the note which was handed to one of the grade teachers the other day:

Dear Mum—Please excuse Johnny today. He will not be at school. He is acting as timekeeper for his father. Last night you gave him this 'zimple, if a field is 4 miles square how long will it take a man walking 3 miles an hour to walk 2½ times around it? Johnny ain't no man, so we had to send his daddy. They left early this morning, and my husband said they ought to be back late tonight, the it would be hard going. Dear mum, please make the nixt problem about ladies, as my husband can't afford to lose the day's work. I don't have no time to leaf, but I can spare a day off occasionally better than my husband can. Resp'y yrs.

Courage Among the Clergy.

He was the small son of a bishop, and his mother was teaching him the meaning of courage.

"Supposing," she said, "there were twelve boys in one bedroom and eleven got into bed at once, while the other knelt down to say his prayers, that boy would show true courage."

"Oh," said the young hopeful, "I know something that would be more courageous than that. Suppoing there were twelve bishops in one bedroom and one got into bed without saying his prayers!"—Truth Seeker.

The poet does the dreaming,

A Retreat.

A drummer boy once asked a maid
To be his bride next summer.
Quoth she: "My father always said
Never to trust a 'drummer.'
So do not press your suit, my lad.
With spurn I'll have to treat it."
At which the drummer, passing sad,
Took up his drum and "beat" it."

Good Advice.

"Have you proposed yet to that north side girl?"

"I can't seem to get a chance."

"Can't get a chance, eh? Better turn your attention elsewhere then. If your girl wished it you would get a chance all right enough."—Pittsburgh Post.

NEW BAPTIST CHURCH FORMALLY OPENED

The First Sermon

In New Church Preached by Grandson of First Baptist Minister in Peterboro

LARGE ATTENDANCES

Sunday, May 26th, 1912, marks the beginning of a new epoch in the history of the Murray Street Baptist church. The splendid, modern, edifice erected by the congregation was used for the first time as a place of worship, and every available seat was occupied at both the morning and evening services. It was the occasion of the first use of the church for divine worship, and for the time being, the pastor, the officers and the congregation became makers of history. Although the new church is more commodious than the old building, it was found necessary to augment the seating accommodation by providing additional provision for the overflow attendance. This is mentioned as an evident indication of the success of the inaugural services. At the same time it is possibly a reason for any elation which the congregation may feel upon the conditions of the first Sunday in their new place of worship. It may also be considered a happy augury and promise for the future.

It was most appropriate that the first sermon in the new church should be delivered by Rev. Dr. J. L. Gilmour of Toronto, grandson of the Rev. John Gilmour, the first pastor of the Baptist church in Peterborough.

Grandson of First Pastor.

Rev. Dr. Gilmour preached an eloquent sermon at both the morning and evening services. His text for his sermon in the evening was taken from St. Paul to the Ephesians, 1st chapter, verses 22 and 23: "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."

Sixty-six years ago, Dr. Gilmour said, there was opened in Peterborough the first Baptist church. Peterborough was then only twenty years old. The same conditions of Spring existed then as on the occasion of the opening of this church. "To-day we are giving our thanks for the faith and labours of that little band who so well and truly laid the foundation of the first Baptist church in this city."

Rev. Dr. Gilmour, referring to his text said there were three thoughts which he wished to emphasize. One was that we should not think too narrowly of Christ. Quoting the words: "And hath put all things under his feet," he stated that the claims of Christ are enormous and that very few persons get a grasp of all they mean. A man may attend church on Sunday and perform the various duties connected with that day, but in his business he seems to think that Christ occupies an inferior place. The engineer who builds a great dam, which is used to obtain water power is going into the sphere in which Christ is supreme. He is working with forces that are under the control of Christ, for all things have been put at His feet. Dr. Gilmour pointed out that the same applied to professional and business men. Let any man proceed to master his task he will find Christ far beyond him still.

Another thought arising from the text was that all great resources of the world were at the disposal of the church and those churches which were seeking to do the will of God. But the church has not yet learned that they are at her disposal. The resources of this country, during the time of the Indians, were just as many as they are to-day. But the Indians did not know how to till the soil, nor how to secure the iron from the bowels of the earth. The great resources were planned to be at the disposal of the church to carry out the work of God.

Proceeding to refer to His body, mentioned in the text, Dr. Gilmour said that the purpose of the body was to obey the will of man's mind. The body of Christ is His people. We do not see Christ, but we see the people who do his work. The paralyzed man, however, gives a command mentally to his left hand, for instance, but it does not move. In the same manner Jesus Christ gives commands, but they may not be obeyed. Some member of His body—the church—seems paralyzed. This emphasizes the fact that with all our short comings he needs a service such as we can give. The body of Christ, as represented by His people should realize their responsibility and perform its work each day.

Baptist History

Sketch of The Early Struggles of Rev. John Gilmour First Baptist Minister in Peterboro

The opening dedication services at the new Murary street Baptist church draw attention to the history of the Baptist people in Peterborough. The souvenir programme contains the following historical sketch that will be of interest to readers:

REV. J. R. WEBB,
Pastor of the Murray Street Baptist Church

When the Rev. John Gilmour, in the autumn of 1837, came to Peterborough, after a pastorate in Montreal, it was to take, on behalf of the New England Company, the supervision of the Indians at Chemong and Rice Lakes. About forty years before that, Baptist work had been begun in Haldimand Township, not far from Grafton and Colborne, but in and around Peterborough there were no Baptists. Mr. Gilmour, whose duties for the New England Company gave him much liberty on Sundays, preached to the Indians and also, as occasion offered, to the substantial white settlers around Chemong Lake and elsewhere. The preaching was not at first attended with any outward marks of success, but the preacher was in due time cheered by the response of Mr. James Mann, whose character and solid worth counted for much. Others also made application for baptism, so that in 1838 four were baptized on profession of faith, and the little band immediately undertook to erect a place of worship in the Township of Smith, and the preaching of the Gospel has been maintained there ever since. The following extract from a letter written in 1841 by Mrs. Gilmour to a friend in Scotland is worth preserving because it brings in its own way a forest-scented breath from those days which now seem so far off.

"You will likely have heard from Mr. Watt of our little church and chapel in the wilds of Canada. Yesterday (Sabbath) three more were baptized in the Chemong Lake. Mr. Gilmour previously preached in an adjoining school house, standing on the threshhold that his audience without as well as within might hear. When he closed, all adjourned to the place of baptizing. The scene was picturesque and impressive, the afternoon beautiful. Here and there was seen an opening formed by the hand of industry in the dark, deep forest, and about five miles further, on the other side, as if peeping over the lake, the Indian Village. As the number on the beach was too great for all to witness, many went into canoes, and lay outside the spot, yet all was still and serious, the water calm and transparent, and the hymn of praise and prayer of faith arose from the spot where not long since, no holier sound was heard than the orgies of superstition or the fearful war-whoop. On the countenances of the baptized there was a touching solemnity, and altogether the emotions produced were such as led one to say, 'It is good to be here.'"

By the year 1846 there were in Peterborough enough Baptists to warrant the formation of a Baptist church, and the little band opened a house of worship on the 17th of May in that year. Peterborough was then just twenty years old, it contained two thousand people, and is described in Smith's Canadian Gazetteer" of that date "at present very flourishing." The same authority says that "the jail and court house is a handsome stone building, erected on rising ground in the rear of the town. Churches and chapels: seven, viz., Episcopal, (stone), Presbyterian, ((stone), Catholic, (stone), Baptist (brick), British Wesleyan, Canadian Wesleyan, and Christian. There is in Peterborough a fire company with one engine. Two newspapers are published here weekly—the Peterborough Gazette and Peterborough Chronicle. Post office, and post every day. Principal taverns, the Albert House and the Union Hotel. One bank agency—'Montreal.'"

These few touches will serve to show something of the nature of the community which the Baptist church of Peterborough at its organization sought to serve, and will also indicate how far what has now become a city has advanced since those days, and why it is needful to open a new building for the new needs.

Pastors.

Rev. John Gilmour, Rev. Edward Roberts, Rev. Thomas Stock, Rev. Thomas Dovell, Rev. Chas. Carroll, Rev. Daniel Mulhern, Rev. W. H. Walker, Rev. A. H. Munro, Rev. P. Clifton Parker, Rev. John Trotter, Rev. A. T. Dykeman, Rev. Jonathan Bastow, Rev. F. J. Scott, Rev. J. R. Webb.

This is a brief record of the early Baptist church in Peterborough. There is now not only the large congregation at the Murray street church, but there is the new Park street church as evidences that the seeds first sown have not been neglected.

SPLENDID SINGING

Marked The Services of First Sunday in The New Church

The choir of the Murray Street Baptist Church has grown with every other advance in the congregation, and includes in its members some of the best known singers in the city. The choir loft is admirably arranged, and presents a splendid effect from the body of the church with the flutings of the organ arising above. The organ itself is an exceptionally fine one. The music at the new church will be of the same high standard that is apparent in the general scheme.

Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name".

Anthem, "Te Deum Laudamus," Tours.

Duet—"Peace to this Dwelling"—Smith—Miss Didd, Mr. Pollard.

Solo, "Awake My Soul," Wiegand—Mrs. G. B. Miller.

Evening Service—

Anthem, "I Will Worship Towards Thy Holy Temple," Sullivan.

Solo—Mr. D. Ferguson.

Solo—"Forevermore"—Miss Kidd.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from infantile eczema and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Plantard, Man. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

NO BURDENSOME DEBT REMAINS

The congregation of the Murray Street Baptist Church come into occupation of their new church home under the happiest auspices. It represents great religious enterprise, and no little self sacrifice, the basic idea of the Christian religion. It is a church building of which both Peterborough and the congregation that worship in it have great reason to be grateful for, if not proud of; and it is a source of satisfaction that though a debt rests upon it, it is not a burdensome one. In this regard it is not an exception. There are comparatively few churches in city or country that are not furnished with incentives to Christian liberality in the form of a more or less respectable debt.

Modern Church

Complete Description of The Equipment And Furnishings of the Murray St. Church.

LIST OF CONTRACTORS

In designing this church, the aim of the architects was to get away from the stereotyped, barn-like proportions seen in so many churches, even those in the larger cities. The demand for maximum accommodation at a minimum cost, necessitating galleries, is responsible for many ill proportioned structures, with high walls and nondescript roofs, while frequently its proportions are further distorted by a high basement impossible of artistic treatment.

THE SECOND BUILDING 1884
Built on Murray St. It was in this Church that rapid growth was experienced.

The angle formed by the two principal structures thus permits the placing of minor rooms and offices in convenient relation to both buildings.

Exterior an Indication.

Endeavour has also been made to so treat the building externally as to indicate the internal features, and thus produce a logical whole. The central feature of the auditorium cannot be mistaken, as housing the entrance and vestibule, with generous lighting to the end gallery above, while the general bulk indicates a modest tower, not needed for bells, but sufficient to stop and mask the ridge and slopes of the auditorium roof. The flanking features with east and west gables carried high above the main eaves, indicate their use in accommodating the gallery stairs, while they also joint with the tower in stopping the main roof.

The low walls of the auditorium, and a portion of the school building indicate the absence of galleries in places, while the higher walls over the school entrance, indicate unmistakably, a second storey devoted to gallery and class rooms.

Stone of Soft Grey Tone.

The adoption of stone of a soft, warm grey tint made it possible to omit all elaboration in the exterior treatment, dependence being placed upon grouping, composition and colour, for architectural effect. The result speaks for itself; there is nothing to offend or tire the eye, and as time goes on, the effect of its pure

The interest created by our first announcement has been growing greater and greater every day. Already we've had many inquiries people can hardly wait for the date the sale is scheduled to commence. Judging from the enthusiasm already aroused throughout this section there will surely be a big crowd Wednesday Morning waiting for our doors to open.

We cannot advise you too strongly to wait for and attend this event, for no sale ever held in Peterborough by any store can compare with this Great 24 Day Sale in its magnitude, in the vast quantities of reliable, fashionable and seasonable merchandise involved and in its unprecedented value-giving.

The values will be simply wonderful for we have been preparing for this Sale for months, making lavish purchases and securing many thousand dollars worth of wanted merchandise at 'way below regular prices.

Here's a bit of advice: It will pay you to anticipate every one of your requirements in the next few months and supply them in this Sale; for another such money-saving opportunity will not present itself for a long, long time to come.

ing will be to soften and blend any hardness of line inevitable with brand new work, and each passing decade should add some of the charm which comes to a structure such as this.

Two Memorial Windows.

The auditorium is reached by a broad flight of steps from the street, through a double pair of doors, into a vestibule having triple doors. The auditorium is about one-fourth longer than its width, and is covered with a high-pitched roof, having bold timber trusses, undressed and stained a dark tone. The walls, which are comparatively low, are pierced with mullioned windows, filled with leaded and tinted glass. Two of the windows are memorial—one to the Gilmour family, and one to James Stratton.

In seating the auditorium, the curved pews of the past generation have been omitted, and good sensible, straight pews adopted, giving the air of quiet dignity, so necessary to harmonize with the other features of the structure.

Gallery on North End.

The gallery extends across the north end, and is reached by two staircases starting from the auditorium, and not screened off from it, thus bringing the occupants of the gallery into closer touch with those on the floor below, and avoiding that isolation so often felt where the galleries empty into the lobbies.

At the south end of the auditorium is placed the pulpit platform, backed by the choir, partially in a recess occupied by the organ and baptistry.

The baptistry is placed behind and above the choir and below the organ chamber. It is in an arched open recess, and is reached from an upper floor, in which are located the robing and dressing rooms for the baptismal candidates.

To the rear of the auditorium are located the Board Room and Secretary's room.

Sunday School Section.

The school building is located to the south east of the church, and overlaps one bay, fitted with folding doors, which when opened, permits of easy communication. It is believed that the school is modern in every feature; class rooms are separate, but all can be thrown into one by means of collapsible and folding doors. A narrow gallery is around the main room, where the primary department will gather for the opening exercises, afterwards going to their own quarters, from where they can be dismissed without disturbing the school proper. In this building is situated the Pastor's study immediately to the left of the entrance; it contains a gas grate, of which there are five in the several rooms.

The Basement.

The basement under the school is devoted to the Boys' reading room, banquet hall, kitchen, committee rooms, lavatories, etc., while under the church proper is the steam heating and ventilating plant.

This article would not be complete without mentioning the architect, and builders, who have worked together to give such splendid results. Mr. Edmund Burke, of Burke, Horwood and White, Toronto, designed the structure, Mr. F. Bartlett being the local architect. The several contractors were: Rees and Hawkin, stonework and brickwork; McIntyre Bros., woodwork and carpentering; Adam Hall, Ltd., heating and plumbing; Alexander & Miller, electric wiring and fixtures; Wm. Saxby, plastering; F. G. Roberts & Co., painting and glazing; H. Shurter, concrete.

SLEEPS WELL AT NIGHT

If you want to know how a man feels who has allowed his health to break down, and then finds a way of regaining it, just read this letter from Joseph J. Fagan, of New York City.

"Nearly all last winter I was in poor health owing to a general run-down condition. I had very little appetite and did not sleep well.

"In March I began to take your delicious cod liver and iron preparation Vinol, and soon noticed a great improvement in my health. My appetite returned, and I can now enjoy my meals and get good rest at night.

"I have not felt better for years than I have since taking Vinol." Mr. Fagan did not risk a cent to get well for his money would have been paid back if Vinol had not helped him.

We don't see how any person in poor health, weak, pale, nervous or unable to sleep can hesitate a moment about beginning the use of Vinol. We have known Vinol to make so many people healthy and strong again, that we recommend it to you with the greatest confidence. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

MR. ALLAN ACCEPTS OFFER.

Mr. John Allan, formerly one of the leading church organists in Montreal, has written to accept the offer made by St. Paul's church. St. Paul's church is to be congratulated on securing the services of so talented a musician. Mr. Allan's execution and technique are beyond criticism. The future organist of St. Paul's has a daughter who is leading soprano in one of the largest churches in Montreal.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested, and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

Husband's Hair

How About It Madam, Is It Falling Out or Growing Thin?

Don't Lose It

Most husbands are careless regarding their hair—many are skeptical regarding hair tonics, restorers and the like.

It is only when their hair comes out in combs full that they really sit up and take notice.

If your husband's hair is falling; if he has dandruff or scalp itch, don't let it make a baldhead of him, get a 50-cent bottle of PARISIAN SAGE today, rub it on his hair every night until dandruff goes, hair stops falling and the new growth appears. Then use it every other night until the hair is thick and abundant. PARISIAN SAGE is a delightful, refreshing hair dressing for men, women and children. It will do as advertised, or your money back. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton and bottle. Sold by Wm. Madill and dealers everywhere.

S. O. E. Attend Divine Worship

Were Addressed by Rev. I. Couch —Commended For Their Zeal And Loyalty

LARGE NUMBER TURNED OUT

The Sons of England were represented by about seventy-five members at their annual church service, which was conducted by Rev. I. Couch at George street Methodist church Sunday evening.

The members met at the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter street, shortly after six o'clock, and headed by the officers of the society, marched in double column to the church. The main body of the church had been especially reserved for them. There was also a large representation of adherents.

Welcomed the Order.

In his opening remarks, Rev. I. Couch welcomed the Order, and eulogistically commended them for the patriotism which they displayed towards the Union Jack.

"There is no emblem like the grand old flag of England," said the speaker, "and in educating the people to more and more respect the flag, you are doing a noble work that will not only deepen the loyalty that we possess as Canadians, but will stronger cement the bond of friendship toward the Mother country."

Taking for his text the 30th chapter 24th verse, of the first book of Samuel, "For who will hearken unto you in this matter? But as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff; they shall part alike," the speaker said in part.

A False Impression.

There is a common impression abroad that rewards come only to those who have been martyrs, philanthropists or heroes in some form or other. This text teaches us that those who have remained at home and lived an unostentatious life, are to receive the same reward as the one who, for some act he may have done, has his name blazoned on the walls of fame. Those who do garrison duty and are ever on guard, perform as glorious and noble service to the Master, as he who goes to the forefront of the battle. Some people are wont to bemoan the fact that they are not given the opportunity to gain fame and notoriety in this life, while others are satisfied to remain at home and attend to the duties which God has given them to perform.

Rewards are not offered according to the amount of noise which you may make in this world, but according, as you live up to your full capacity and faithfully dispose of the task which God has placed upon you.

On the 15th day of April the greatest catastrophe in marine history was recorded, when the great and noble Titanic went to the bottom of the sea. Among those who were lost, was Charles M. Hays, late President of the Grand Trunk Railway. He was known as a great man in the industrial world, but in God's kingdom he will receive no greater reward than the humblest stoker or engineer who were swept into eternity on that fateful day.

"I would say to you as individuals, to cheer up. God will reward you, and in Him alone we must commit our services," concluded the speaker.

S. A. BAND IN HAMILTON.

Peterborough S. A. Band on Extensive Visit to Hamilton.

The Peterborough Salvation Army silver band was in the city Friday, and will remain here until Sunday evening. The band comprises thirty-five pieces, and is under the leadership of Bandmaster Perryer. Ensign and Mrs. Merritt, formerly stationed in this city, are with the Band. It was officially welcomed by Brigadier Adsby, the divisional commander. At 10.15 o'clock the new band-room for Hamilton No. 1 silver band, which cost $600 to fit out, was officially opened by the Peterborough corps, after which the visitors gave two open-air concerts near the Gore park. They concluded with one near the city hall. In the evening the band gave a musical festival in the citadel. Two open-air concerts were given at the Gore park Saturday, while the band held meetings in Association hall on Sunday afternoon and evening.—Hamilton Herald.

Good going May 31st, June 1st 2nd and 3rd, valid returning June 5th 1912. Full particulars and tickets from any Grand Trunk Agent.

Great satisfaction with the development with the work was expressed by Mr. F. J. Chamberlain, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, in a recent Fort William interview, after inspecting the terminal improvements in progress there.

"There is the making here of the future largest city in America," he is reported to have remarked, "and, if the people here and elsewhere only recognise their opportunity it will be made so. It is not the work of a generation or two, but it is possible within a wonderfully short time". Mr. Chamberlain expressed surprise at the attitude of property owners on Empire Ave., which was holding back all the company's efforts to open up a passenger service into the city, particularly as the entry of the road into the Union Station would result in a material increase in adjoining land values. No other method of making an entrance had been considered but as soon as a satisfactory decision was reached the tracks to the station would be laid with all possible speed. On the Mission River, itself, a big work was to be done. Eleven tracks were being laid side by side with the main line and two very commodious bunk houses had been erected near the elevator that would quarter 150 men employed in and around it.

The office of the Division Freight Agen and also of the city Freight Department has been moved from the Grand Trunk General Offices on McGill street to Room 414 of the Canadian Express Building, directly opposite.

The first of the Grand Trunk's Muskoka Express trains left Toronto at 10.15 last Saturday morning, and arrived at Muskoka wharf at 1.40 p.m., connecting with the Lake steamers. This inaugurates the summer service to this popular resort.

A gang of workmen are at present engaged in making improvements along the Belleville Junction line of the G. T. R., old ties being replaced and heavier rails laid down.

Following on the announcement of the Grand Trunk Pacific that a first-class daily train service between Winnipeg and Regina would shortly be inaugurated an effort is being made by authorities of the latter city to arrange an excursion of business men from all the towns between Regina and Yorkton to Regina upon the first train; while a monster banquet in the Saskatchewan Capitol is also planned to crown the event.

Superintendent W. R. Davidson of the Grand Trunk, whose headquarters are in London, met with a painful injury in Hamilton recently when a heavy steal rail dropped upon his foot. Medical assistance fortunately showed that no serious harm would result from the experience.

ARE ASHES GARBAGE?

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The city had better take up with the contractor whether the removal of garbage is being satisfactorily done or not. So far as I am concerned, it is not, and when the contractor is spoken to with regard to the matter he readily admits that instead of the contract being for two thousand and some odd dollars, that it should be for $8,000 or $10,000—that the work cannot be done for the amount of money contracted for and do what is required of him on the part of the citizens.

For instance, why should the contractor be expected to cart all the coal ashes from the leading hotels in the centr of the city, that they should dispose of themselves? Why should he be expected to do a lot of work that I see him doing?

To my mind, garbage consists of something that if left on premises, will decay, or cause insalutary conditions. Coal ashes don't—old bottles don't; discarded stove pipes don't. All this sort of things are being put on the contractor to remove from premises, within the By-law.

Mr. Scriver seems to be anxious to do all that he can do, but he readily admits that it is impossible to carry out the conditions of the by-law. He might be able to do so if the City Council would issue a dictionary and define clearly what real garbage is—that would be taking up the question in a business way. A man would then know what is required of him, and the citizens would not impose upon him.

As a ratepayer, my impression is that it is all very well for the citizens to have some one to look after the drawing away of the refuse from all premises in the Spring of the year, but to have one man do so weekly, semi-weekly or tri-weekly is an impossibility, as long as such a broad definition of garbage is entertained by the citizens.

Yours truly,

Ratepayer.

A Great 5 Day Clean-Up Sale of Housefurnishings

Clean-up of Draperies at 12c

We have prepared a table of Drapery Materials at a ridiculously low price. All are odd lines and include values which formerly sold as high as 50c yard, included one will find Curtain Nets, Scrims, Muslins, Madras, etc., in an almost unlimited array of colours and patterns, marked for a quick, sharp clean-up at only, yard..... 12½c

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday

A Complete Clean-Up of all Odd Lines and Broken Lots is the object of this great event. After a season of unusually strenuous selling we find ourselves with numberless Odd Lines which we are desirous of clearing quickly. Included one finds Lace Curtains, Tapestry Curtains, Curtain Nets, Muslins, Scrims, Linoleums, Rugs, for the bedroom, parlour or dining-room ; Wall Papers, etc. In short scarcely a line of housefurnishings, but has become depleted to such an extent that we deem it a matter of business policy to clear the entire lot at a fractional price.

Added vim and snap are also injected into this great event by the securing of several "Overmake" lines from the manufacturers who, like ourselves, desired a complete clean-up.

Another important feature is the introduction of many lines of furnishings for the summer home and verandah.

Altogether this event is most worthy of your very careful attention. Look critically over the furnishings in your own home and see if they cannot be improved by adding new rugs, curtains, etc. Come to-morrow for best choice. Read carefully the items enumerated below. Watch the Show Windows for the big leaders.

Housefurnishing Department entire Third Floor.

Furnishings for the Verandah and Summer Home

During this 5 Days' Sale we are making a special feature of summer furnishings for the cottage and verandah. It will be decidedly to your advantage to buy Japanese Matting, Japanese Mats, Hammocks, Awning Dishes, Camp Beds, etc., while Housefurnishing Sale Prices hold sway.

SOME THINGS AND OTHERS

The Summer Fair begins in a fighting mood—it will be formally opened this evening by the Minister of War—a minister who is also a fighter. If the ladies take their cue from him, the public wil lbe carried by assault. The Summer Fair is fighting a foe more insidious and hard to defeat than a host of foreign legions. Good luck go with their campaign!

The nine Chinese arrested on Sunday—caught in the act of gambling—all claimed to be members of Christian churches in the city. The veneer of Christianity must be very thin, that permits the vice of gambling to break through so easily. But if "bridge," why not fan tan ?

Complaints of the presence of caterpillars come from every quarter. No part of the city is free from the scourge. Every owner of property where a caterpillar appears should destroy it by fire or crushing.

The new potato disease—the canker—is worse than the rot. It should be. The scientific name of potato rot is peronospera infestans. The scientific name of the canker is worse; it is chrysophlyctis endobiotica.

Visitors to the Lift Lock have a guard of honour of caterpillars; they appear in millions on wayside shrubs and scrubs. The city should destroy these.

A south-end resident complains that he was kept awake last night and early this morning by three separate causes—a peacock on one side, a crowing cock on another, and a howling dog in another quarter. Should he, in a spirit of brotherly love, suffer in silence, or should his neighbours who maintain sleep-wrecking nuisances, show the brotherly love?

There are 15,796 manufacturing establishments in Canada, employing 846 millions of capital and paying out yearly in wages to 372,000 workers, the sum of 718 million dollars. This was in 1906, when the latest statistics were compiled.

Disease Germs Everywhere

The death rate is higher in spring than at any other time of the year. For this there are two reasons: the air is laden with disease germs, the human system is in a run-down condition and not able to fight off disease.

Pure, rich blood is the greatest of germicides. This fact is now generally conceded by medical experts. Get the blood rich and you afford to the body the most certain means known of fighting off disease.

Many people have reason to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for making their blood pure and rich and enabling them to ward off the ills and weaknesses of spring.

It is truly wonderful the benefit obtained by a few weeks' treatment with this great food cure. The nerves are better able to perform their natural functions and the system is benefitted in every way.

SUPPORT THE SUMMER FAIR

At St. John's church yesterday, Rev. Canon Davidson urged his congregation to take a general interest in the Peterborough Summer Fair, as a pleasurable opportunity of associating with their fellow Christians throughout the city. It was, he said, in line with the definite work of religion. The Lord had come to heal the body as well as to save the soul, and both were worthy objects of the church.

Labour Report For Past Month

Shows Advancing in Every Direction

The Labour Gazette has the following report from Peterborough on May conditions:

Most lines of industry showed activity, and there was a marked improvement in general business. Prospects are bright for a busy season in the building trades, a number of large contracts being in sight. The largest contracts this year so far as known will be the erection of the new Canadian General Electric Company storehouse, the contract for which has been awarded to the H. Gay and Sons Company of Oshawa, Ont. Tenders are eing called for two new schools to be built this year. J. J. Turner and Sons are building an addition to their factory, and a good number of dwellings have been started. The city has passed a by-law for the establishing, maintaining and regulating of a system for the collection and disposal of ashes, refuse, and garbage. They will purchase a piece of land outside of the city for a dumping ground for the garbage. A sanitary inspector has also been appointed at a salary of $700 per year. The Great North Western Telegraph Company have agreed to remove their poles from George street, the city paying them $350, which will be the actual cost of making the change. The Peterborough Radial Railway Company are making an extension of their road in the south end of the city; they are also putting on pay-as-you-enter cars and making a number of other improvements.

UNITED STATES NOT TO INTERFERE

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., MAY 27. President Taft to-day sent a message assuring President Gomez that the United States had no intention of interfering in the trouble of the Cuban government with the negroes. Warships had been sent to Havana, he says, only as a measure of protection to United States subjects. The reply to Gomez's request gave rise to various complications.

Studebaker

FLANDERS TWENTY

E-M-F THIRTY

Over 67,000 Owners Commend Studebaker Cars

Did you ever consider how much the testimony of 67,000 owners means? Suppose four-fifths of all the inhabitants of Quebec should come to you one by one and say "I know these Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars, because I own one. They are all right, the biggest values you can buy."

It would take over two weeks, at ten hours a day, for 67,000 Studebaker-E-M-F "30" and Studebaker-Flanders "20" owners to tell you this about their cars, and when you realize that for every car in service at least five people know exactly how good it is, you could say that there are more E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" boosters than there are inhabitants in Quebec, Winnipeg, Hamilton, St. John and Calgary put together.

The tremendous weight of such approval is overwhelming. There isn't any use to which you could possibly put a car which these thousands of Studebaker owners haven't experienced before you. 67,000 owners have proved that Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars are just as good as we say.

Every Studebaker owner will tell you his car is faster than anything near its size which he meets on the road. Studebaker cars are light, they will go over heavy roads where other cars cannot go, because the light car doesn't sink in. You will ride anywhere comfortably and safely. You can be sure, too, that wherever you go, you will always get back.

The car isn't built that has in it any better material or is more skillfully manufactured than are Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars.

In our Walkerville factories these cars are constructed with the utmost care. Our resources are enormous, and our immense production which, counting sales in all parts of the world, will aggregate close to 50,000 cars this year, enables us to build wonderfully good cars at low prices. We are now employing, altogether, between 8,000 and 10,000 men with a monthly pay-roll of about $550,000. 180 cars per day are leaving our different plants, requiring over 60 special freight cars to transport them.

Competing cars of higher price cost more only because so few of them are built. Any $2,000 or $2,500 car would cost much less if even 10,000 were built annually. Not what a car costs but what it is worth, should be your standard.

We could manufacture any competing car on the market and in the quantities in which we sell Studebaker E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars, sell the other car for less money than you are asked by other manufacturers to-day.

In an E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20" you not only buy extraordinarily good cars but, dollar for dollar, you get more for your money than in any other car whatsoever.

A GREAT COAL BIN.

Cardiff Is One of the Strangest Towns In the World.

Cardiff is a great coal cellar which is always being filled and always being emptied. It is filled by the men of the Welsh hills, who all day and all night—in times of peace—are filling up the trucks, which are brought down the valleys to the docks. It is emptied by men of the sea, who every day—in times of peace—bring ships from all the great ports of the world to carry away black cargoes.

Cardiff has no other importance and no other interest. It lives by coal, it grows rich by coal, and its streets are filled with men who are the masters and the slaves of coal. Even the shops, the restaurants, the theatres, the picture palaces, and the pawnbrokers exist only on the wages earned by coal, and the money which they take has been blackened by its dust.

Cardiff is the meeting place of the men of the hills and the men of the sea; yet, though they rub shoulders in the streets, and sit close together in the music halls, and stare into the windows of the same shops, there is no comradeship between them, and they do not know each other's woes. After an evening in the city the miners go back, shouting songs, to their small towns which straggle along the valleys to the coalfields, ready for the first cage down to the pits, and the seamen tramp back to the streets about the docks (running in at the public-house for one more drink), and wait for the next ship outward-bound with a cargo of coal.

Down Bute street and round Tiger Bay there are always seamen waiting for ships. They are paid off in Cardiff when they come from other ports with light freight and in Tiger Bay they take their pleasure and their ... against ... when they ... their advance ... for a little ready money with ... which to redeem debts is the lodging houses and their pledges in the pawnshops, and say "So long" to Cardiff in many different tongues.

This street which leads down to Tiger Bay is the most cosmopolitan highway in the world, and here are lodging houses for every race, and eating houses for every foreign appetite. Over many shop-fronts are Chinese names and characters, and little yellow men lounge in the doorways blinking out upon the passer-by.

They have washed themselves clean of the coaldust with which they came, black as devils, from their ships. In little rooms down long passages they sit close together in a hot atmosphere damp with the steam of wash tubs, where white women's clothes are being soaped and rinsed by Celestial laundrymen. In other rooms they lie about, dreaming and smiling, as they puff at small pipes burning with a strange odor.

Some of the yellow men have white wives here, and whitish-yellow children, and they all seem mixed up altogether in these rooms, with rumpled bedclothes and frying-pans and stew-pots and fancy ornaments, so that they have to move warily and with a cat-like tread.

A few doors down is a Spanish lodging house, where swarthy fellows, with gold earrings, are playing strange card games, and swearing strange oaths when they lose. They are such men as Francis Drake met on the Spanish Main when he boarded their galleons and cut their throats in his merry way. Close by is a "Neederlandish" lodging house, full of fair-haired giants, whose blue eyes have stared across many grey seas and into the darkness of many storms.

Dutchmen and Swedes, Frenchmen and Italians, Greeks, Turks, and sea... ... British ... know Bute street as one of the highways of life's adventure, and have their lodging houses here, so built with alleys and narrow passages, and side doors and back doors, that when the police are hunting for a man it is a game of hide-and-seek, with long odds on the man.

For Cat Owners.

We cautioned cat owners recently, says The Animals' Friend, against handing over their animals to be killed by irresponsible people. In the train the other day we overheard a lady telling her companion how she had given a man 60 cents, with another 60 cents for himself, to get her cat mercifully put to sleep, as she was going abroad for a long time, and did not know where to find him a good home. Two years afterwards, when she had returned home, she was surprised to see the cat walk in still quite alive. The man had presumably pocketed the $1.20 and possibly sold the cat or turned him adrift, and who knows what adventures he may have gone through before finding his way home again.

The Honey Bird.

This bird is found in the Transvaal and derives its name from its great liking for honey. So fond is it of honey that it will guide persons—and, I believe, certain animals—to a wild bees' nest. It usually perches in a tree over the person or animal, and makes its call, "Zet-lood!" People knowing the bird follow it; the bird, flying a few yards ahead, almost always unseen, perches in a tree and continues calling.

When it arrives over or near the nest of bees, it ceases calling, and waits until the bees have been robbed, expecting to get the honey left for itself. It is said by old people that these birds have been known to lead persons to where a dangerous snake was lying.

Cedar Is Going.

The cedar will practically be exterminated in Canada in a few years. It requires from 170 to 200 years to produce the average cedar pole, which, if not chemically treated, will decay and become useless in fourteen years. Up to the present time poles used in Canada receive no protection against decay in that portion coming into contact with the soil, and as a consequence the poles are useless in a few years.

Oblivion is the flower that grows best on graves.—George Sand.

The Point of Surprise.

"Did you notice the man over there who took off his hat to the lady he met and begged pardon so politely for stepping on her dress?"

"Why, what is so remarkable about such ordinary politeness?"

"But, man alive, she's his wife!"—Baltimore American.

His Friendship.

He—I know how this catastrophe had crippled you, and as one of your oldest friends I should like to help you. I will buy your furniture for 200 francs. She—You're very kind, but I've just sold it for 325 francs. He—What? You allowed yourself to be robbed like that?—Pele Mele.

COSTLY ERRORS LOST SATURDAY'S BALL GAME

Big Bill Schaeffer Earned a Victory Over The Guelph Leafs But a Muff And Several Bad Throws Handed The Game Over to Needham's Outfit—Schuman Pounded Out a Home Run.

Mr. G. Needham and his bunch of Guelph Maple Leafs left Peterborough with regret on Saturday, taking with them four straight wins from the White Caps. They came here on Thursday in second last place and departed on Saturday third in the race, which explains Mr. Needham's regret at leaving our fair city. The talented leader of the Royal City figured that if his band could linger a few days longer in Peterborough, they would be at the top of the heap.

Let Mr. Needham gloat; we're going to get him and get him hard before the Canadian League procession moves on much further.

The local pastimers handed Saturday's engagement over to the Leafs. Mr. Needham, to make a straight sweep of the series, introduced his mammoth pitcher, Mr. Hank Schuman, who floats around the diamond with airy grace considering that he has to pack over 230 pounds with him. Mr. Shuman looks too big for the salary limit in the League. Associated with him in the battery work was Chief Hemlock, late of Carlisle, and this Hebrew-Indian combination proved a winner. Mr. Templin sent his biggest artilleryman in to work against the Guelph giant in the person of Mr. W. Schaeffer, and before going any further in this harrowing narrative, it may be mentioned that Mr. Schaeffer delivered one extra fine sample of pitching. In fact he had a shade on this Schuman person and should have been awarded the decision had it not been for the generosity of Mr. Dolan, the Celt, who first bases for us. Mr. Dolan offset Mr. Schaeffer's fine pitching by kicking in with one muff and two assorted bad throws, the net result being three runs for the visitors, who won the game by 5 to 2.

The Leafs could collect but five hits from the varied assortment of benders that Mr. Schaeffer handed out, while he gave free tickets to three. Mr. Schuman was a trifle more generous in his passes, allowing six of the homesters to parade. All things considered, Mr. Schaeffer earned a victory.

Some seven hundred fans and fanettes crossed the Otonabee to be present at the doings and they saw the best game of the season. Our Messrs. Tully and Hartman were strongly in the limelight. The youthful Mr. Hartman chased over to the new grand stand and clutched a foul ball firmly in his gloved hand in clever fashion. Not content with that he soon after knocked down a vicious liner with one hand, and Mr. Tully completed a remarkable play by picking up the pill and nailing the runner by a perfect peg. A little later on in the affray Mr. Tully cashed in with the classiest bit of fielding that has been seen in the local yard for many a day. There were two of the enemy on the hassocks with two out, when the batter hit a vicious grounder close to second base. It looked good to score both runners, but Mr. Tully shot across the diamond at full speed and grabbed the ball with his gloved hand. There did not seem a chance in the world to make the play at first, but he made good with a magnificent throw from an awkward position, getting the runner by inches and cutting off two runs.

In addition to the game the audience had the opportunity of hearing several splendid debates between Mr. Needham, commander of the visitors and Mr. Johnston, the umpire.

Not a man on either side reached first stopping place in the first three innings, going out one, two three.

In the fourth for Guelph, Swartzmier walked and was sacrificed to second by Needham. Fryer was safe on Tully's fumble of his grounder. Swartzmier going to third. Isaac lifted one to Dolan and Brady grounded to Schaeffer.

Peterborough got one in their half. Schwartz singled to left centre. Derr sacrificed. Beard singled to centre, sending Schwartz to third. A successful "squeeze" was pulled off, Templin laying the ball down neatly. Dolan was walked, but Tully ended the scoring with a fly to Fryer.

In the Petes' half, Hartman was walked and Trout sacrificed, but the next two were easy.

Guelph got two on in the sixth, but did not score. Needham was walked to start with. Schwartz made a pretty catch of Fryer's fly to left. Isaac was safe on Derr's miss of a drive to right, but Brady grounded to Hartman and Tully made a sensational stop of Foersch's hot grounder, getting the runner at first.

In their half, the Petes evened up. Derr was walked. Beard was out for bunting the third strike foul. Templin hit to Needham who tagged Derr. Dolan hit over Foersch's head for two bases, scoring Templin and was out trying to make third on the play.

Guelph took the lead in the eighth. Needham started with a single to left and Fryer sacrificed. Isaac was walked. Schaeffer threw to first to catch Isaac and Needham beat it for third, scoring on Dolan's bad throw to Hartman. Brady grounded to Hartman. Behan, who replaced Foersch in left field the innings before, hit to Tully, but Dolan dropped his perfect peg and Isaac scored. Behan was out stealing, Trout to Tully.

With two gone in the Petes' half, Beard doubled to centre, but the next went out.

Guelph increased their lead in the ninth. O'Connor singled, Hemlock hit to Hartman who threw him out at first. O'Connor kept right on to third and scored when Dolan threw the ball to the fence. Swartzmier ended it with a fly to Derr.

Tully was walked, but was forced by Trout. Hartman flew out to Swartzmier, Brode batting for Schaeffer was walked, but Schwartz wound up the game by striking out.

BOWLING

The annual match between the President and Vice-President of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, will be held to-morrow afternoon and evening, the teams to be chosen from the players on hand. The greens are in splendid condition now and the lights will be ready to-night. A full attendance of players is expected.

NEW PLAYERS COMING TO PETERBORO TEAM

It will be welcome news to local fans this week will see an invasion of Peterborough by half a dozen or more players to strengthen the White Caps and give them a team that will speedily climb out of the cellar. Pitcher Osborne of Buffalo, should be here to-day and Outfielder Walter Jayes will arrive to-night. Pitcher John Ridgeay of the Columbia team of the Carolina League, who pitched against the Torontos on their spring training trip this year, leaves the South this afternoon for Peterborough, and will arrive on Thursday. He is in the best of shape, having won a 1 to 0 fifteen-innings battle last week, and will be ready to take his turn on the slab as soon as he arrives. Word has been received from Bryan Nork, the Dickenson College Captain and star twirler that he will report on Saturday. Catcher Mooney has wired that he will be back with the team on Wednesday. Lines are out for several more players and by the end of the week there will be an unfamiliar look about the Peterborough team and also about their standing in the League race.

OTTAWA TEAM ARE HERE TO-DAY

League Leaders Will Play a Three Game Series in Peterboro

The Ottawa Baseball Club, in charge of Manager Louie Cook, arrived in Peterborough on the early C. P. R. express this morning, and are registered at the Oriental. The Senators have been playing great ball, winning their last seven games, and are out in front in the Canadian League race. They meet the White Caps in the first of a three-game series at 3.45 o'clock at Riverside Park, this afternoon, and the locals will make a desperate effort to stop their own losing streak and the visitors' string of wins at the same time.

"It's too bad you got such a poor start, here," remarked Manager Cook to the Examiner this morning. "We have been pulling for you to get started. We don't want you to begin on us, however," he added with a smile.

The Ottawa leader had not decided what pitcher he would use against Peterborough this afternoon, but it will likely be Kubat, while Derr will work for Peterborough. The Ottawa line-up will be as follows:

Burke, l.f.
Schwind, s.s.
Blake, r.f.
Callahan, m.
Robertson, 3b.
Cook, 2b.
Champene, 1b.
Hooper, c.
Rowe, c.
Kubat, p.

White Cap Notes

Umpire Wm. Pearson of Toronto, who was to have umpired to-day's game between Ottawa and Peterborough, missed his train and will not be here until to-morrow. Two players, one from each team are to do the umpiring. Pitcher Bill Schaeffer, is the Peterborough selection.

Local fans will remember Outfielder Walter Jayes, who joins the White Caps to-night. He played one game with the Peterborough team several years ago when he was here on his vacation. He has been playing with several fast minor league teams and will add speed to the team as he can move some on the base paths. His home is in Buffalo, N.Y.

MARKED DECLINE IN THE SALE OF REVOLVERS

Chief of Police Thompson Reports That he Has Had Only One Application For Permit Since The Beginning of The Year

A marked decline in the retail sale of revolvers has been the most noticeable effect of the Act proclaimed about a year ago restricting the transfer of offensive weapons. The formality and red tape which has been tied about the purchase of a revolver, dirk, dagger, stiletto and other dangerous weapons has proven such a barrier to the intending purchaser that he apparently decided to brave the dangers of a big city without a gun.

Chief of Police Thompson states that since the opening of the year, there has been only one application for a permit to carry a revolver. The party pressing the petition gave as his reason, that he desired to go trapping, and opined that a revolver would be a necessary adjunct to a trapper's outfit. Failing to produce satisfactory references as to his identity, the applicant was refused a permit until such time as he was able to establish sufficient justification for possessing one of the offensive weapons. The man did not return to press the application.

Owners of Gun Liable.

So far, practically the only people who have had arguments strong enough in favour of a personal armament are the banks.

Having once convinced the Chief that the desire is a legitimate one, the purchaser's name is recorded in a register, he gets a number, the same as the one marked on the weapon, and from that time forth he becomes liable for the deeds of that particular gun. If he resells and doesn't notify the police, he is still liable, such notification being the only way to remove his name from the books. The point is that in case a numbered revolver is found to have figured in a shooting, the authorities can put their fingers on the owner's identity in a minute.

Secret Sale Goes On.

At the same time the authorities do not contend that they have stopped the illegal sale of fire arms and knives. The bill also makes it an offence to expose such goods for sale, and empowers the officials to raid such premises as they supect and make the necessary seizures. With one or two exceptions a year ago, the warning was a strong enough hint to the shopkeepers to take the weapons out of their windows and showcases, and no prosecutions have followed. Occasionally a person, generally a foreigner, is caught by the police carrying a weapon, and this is promptly confiscated but it is known that the sale still goes on in a secret way. While store windows are cleared, there is no way of knowing how many sales go on among the holders, or in an illegal way among the second-hand shops. The Banishment of all but the numbered weapons is necessarily a slow matter, but the authorities hope that in time by a careful inspection of all unnumbered weapons they find, there will come a time when a weapon cannot poke its nose in sight without being so plainly labeled as to furnish a first clut, if its a clue that's being looked for.

The law further provides that everyone who sells such weapons, without keping a record of the sale, serial number of the revolver, pistol or air gun, and the name and address and occupation of the purchaser, or who offers for sale revolvers which do not bear the number, and the maker's name, shall be guilty of an offence liable on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding $200, or less than $25, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, or both penalties, and the weapons shall be confiscated.

"Cured the Piles, That I Know"

There is no lack of evidence to prove that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for piles. It is not pleasant to think of the dreadful suffering caused by this wretched disease, but it is satisfactory to know that there is a cure, for all who will avail themselves of it, in Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Dan Stewart, Gabarouse Lake, N.S., writes:—"For about two years I had itching piles. Last summer I was working in a lobster factory, but had to give up and go home because the suffering from piles was so great I was two weeks in bed, and my doctors could help me very little. One night I suffered such agony that I did not know what to do. Next day I wrote for a sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I ordered a large box, and was entirely cured by its use. That was six months ago, and there has been no return of the trouble. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a sure cure for piles. That I know."

WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

The work on the new Separate school in Otonabee is progressing rapidly. The frame work has been erected and it is anticipated that the roof will be put on this week. Last Friday no less than seventy-two members of the T.A.S. of St. Peters and the Sacred Heart paid a visit to the school and aided materially in the work. During the day a two-acre lot was fenced, the frame was prepared for the roof, the structure was sheeted inside and out, and a considerable amount of painting and cleaning up was done. The first thing done was the hoisting of the Union Jack.

Meals were provided for the men by the ladies of the "Bee."

ATTENDED MASS IN A BODY

The Sacred Heart T.A.S. attended mass and Holy Communion in the Sacred Heart church at 7.30 yesterday morning. There was a large representation present, and during the mass the dual pledge, namely, abstinence from liquor and profanity, was renewed. The quartette, "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung by Messrs. C. Henshawe, J. Cairns, J. New and A. New. Mass was sung by the Rev. Fr. McCauley.

HOW TO KEEP COOL AT THE SUMMER FAIR

When hot, tired, and weary come into the Summer Garden. There, amidst climbing roses, cherry blossoms and tulips, enjoy a cooling ice cream, a refreshing ice cream soda, or a Teddy Bear, David Harum, or Cherry Ripe; all dispensed by a bevy of lovely flower girls.

An adjunct of the Summer Garden is a Peanut and Banana cart, supervised by four charming maids from Italy's sunny clime, specially imported for this occasion.

The Summer Garden is in charge of Mrs. Lottie M. Hayes and Mrs. F. P. McNulty. 3d-124
